Preface

Gospel myteries or further light and knowledge nfo has very sensitive materials. Do not share these files with anti-mormons or non-mormons. Be very selective with those whom you might share these files with. I have made this infobase to share with selected personal friends and not for the general church population. These files are not made for sensationalizing or to take out of context and reporting it to go against the church and not for publication. These files are for those that are serious about studying the gospel in depth, and to help strengthen our testimonies with hope and encouragement.

*Mary Bell and Melissa Bennett were sealed to Allen Weeks on 7 Feb 1846; they may not have been adopted to Lee with Weeks. The covenant between Lee and Weeks with his three wives was cancelled by Brigham Young in 1848; see entries at end of this record.

Note: This entry is not in the "Nauvoo Sealings and Adoptions, 1846-1857," but is compiled from the journals of John D. Lee and George Laub and other records. The former volume records the cancellation of the adoptions of Levi North and his wife, and Allen Weeks and his three wives to Lee. Names of some of the wives and ages are computed from the Nauvoo Temple Endowment Register. It should also be noted that Juanita Brooks in editing J.D. Lee's journals claimed that Samuel Gully and his Ovanda Gully were adopted to Lee, but the "Nauvoo Sealings and Adoptions, 1846-1857" has Gully adopted to Brigham Young. This entry may not be totally accurate or complete.

*Mary Bell and Melissa Bennett were sealed to Allen Weeks on 7 Feb 1846; they may not have been adopted to Lee with Weeks. The covenant between Lee and Weeks with his three wives was cancelled by Brigham Young in 1848.

Note: This entry is not in the "Nauvoo Sealings and Adoptions, 1846-1857," but is compiled from the journals of John D. Lee and George Laub and other records. The former volume records the cancellation of the adoptions of Levi North and his wife, and Allen Weeks and his three wives to Lee. Names of some of the wives and ages are computed from the Nauvoo Temple Endowment Register. It should also be noted that Juanita Brooks in editing J.D. Lee's journals claimed that Samuel Gully and his Ovanda Gully were adopted to Lee, but the "Nauvoo Sealings and Adoptions, 1846-1857" has Gully adopted to Brigham Young. This entry may not be totally accurate or complete.

ABRAHAMIC COVENANT
Bible Dictionary

Abraham first received the gospel by baptism (which is the covenant of salvation). Then he had conferred upon him the higher priesthood, and he entered into celestial marriage (which is the covenant of exaltation), gaining assurance thereby that he would have eternal increase. Finally he received a promise that all of these blessings would be offered to all of his mortal posterity:

Abraham received all things, whatsoever he received, by revelation and commandment, by my word, saith the Lord, and hath entered into his exaltation and sitteth upon his throne.

Abraham received promises concerning his seed, and of the fruit of his loins--from whose loins ye are, namely, my servant Joseph--which were to continue so long as they were in the world; and as touching Abraham and his seed, out of the world they should continue; both in the world and out of the world should they continue as innumerable as the stars; or, if ye were to count the sand upon the seashore ye could not number them.

This promise is yours also, because ye are of Abraham, and the promise was made unto Abraham; and by this law is the continuation of the works of my Father, wherein he glorifieth himself.

Go ye, therefore, and do the works of Abraham; enter ye into my law and ye shall be saved.

But if ye enter not into my law ye cannot receive the promise of my Father, which he made unto Abraham.

God commanded Abraham, and Sarah gave Hagar to Abraham to wife. And why did she do it? Because this was the law; and from Hagar sprang many people. This, therefore, was fulfilling, among other things, the promises.

Was Abraham, therefore, under condemnation? Verily I say unto you, Nay; for I, the Lord, commanded it.

Abraham was commanded to offer his son Isaac; nevertheless, it was written: Thou shalt not kill. Abraham, however, did not refuse, and it was accounted unto him for righteousness.

Abraham received concubines, and they bore him children; and it was accounted unto him for righteousness, because they were given unto him, and he abode in my law; as Isaac also and Jacob did none other things than that which they were commanded; and because they did none other things than that which they were commanded, they have entered into their exaltation, according to the promises, and sit upon thrones, and are not angels but are gods.

David also received many wives and concubines, and also Solomon and Moses my servants, as also many others of my servants, from the beginning of creation until this time; and in nothing did they sin save in those things which they received not of me.

David's wives and concubines were given unto him of me, by the hand of Nathan, my servant, and others of the prophets who had the keys of this power; and in none of these things did he sin against me save in the case of Uriah and his wife; and, therefore he hath fallen from his exaltation, and received his portion; and he shall not inherit them out of the world, for I gave them unto another, saith the Lord.

I am the Lord thy God, and I gave unto thee, my servant Joseph, an appointment, and restore all things. Ask what ye will, and it shall be given unto you according to my word.

And as ye have asked concerning adultery, verily, verily, I say unto you, if a man receiveth a wife in the new and everlasting covenant, and if she be with another man, and I have not appointed unto her by the holy anointing, she hath committed adultery and shall be destroyed.

If she be not in the new and everlasting covenant, and she be with another man, she has committed adultery.

And if her husband be with another woman, and he was under a vow, he hath broken his vow and hath committed adultery.

And if she hath not committed adultery, but is innocent and hath not broken her vow, and she knoweth it, and I reveal it unto you, my servant Joseph, then shall you have power, by the power of my Holy Priesthood, to take her and give her unto him that hath not committed adultery but hath been faithful; for he shall be made ruler over many.

For I have conferred upon you the keys and power of the priesthood, wherein I restore all things, and make known unto you all things in due time.

And verily, verily, I say unto you, that whatsoever you seal on earth shall be sealed in heaven; and whatsoever you bind on earth, in my name and by my word, saith the Lord, it shall be eternally bound in the heavens; and whosesoever sins you remit on earth shall be remitted eternally in the heavens; and whosesoever sins you retain on earth shall be retained in heaven.

And again, verily I say, whomsoever you bless I will bless, and whomsoever you curse I will curse, saith the Lord; for I, the Lord, am thy God.

And again, verily I say unto you, my servant Joseph, that whatsoever you give on earth, and to whomsoever you give any one on earth, by my word and according to my law, it shall be visited with blessings and not cursing's, and with my power, saith the Lord, and shall be without condemnation on earth and in heaven.

For I am the Lord thy God, and will be with thee even unto the end of the world, and through all eternity; for verily I seal upon you your exaltation, and prepare a throne for you in the kingdom of my Father, with Abraham your father.

Behold, I have seen your sacrifices, and will forgive all your sins; I have seen your sacrifices in obedience to that which I have told you. Go, therefore, and I make a way for your escape, as I accepted the offering of Abraham of his son Isaac.

(D&C: Section 132:29-50)

But I, Abraham, and Lot, my brother's son, prayed unto the Lord, and the Lord appeared unto me, and said unto me: Arise, and take Lot with thee; for I have purposed to take thee away out of Haran, and to make of thee a minister to bear my name in a strange land which I will give unto thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession, when they hearken to my voice.
For I am the Lord thy God; I dwell in heaven; the earth is my footstool; I stretch my hand over the sea, and it obeys my voice; I cause the wind and the fire to be my chariot; I say to the mountains--Depart hence--and behold, they are taken away by a whirlwind, in an instant, suddenly.

My name is Jehovah, and I know the end from the beginning; therefore my hand shall be over thee.

And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee above measure, and make thy name great among all nations, and thou shalt be a blessing unto thy seed after thee, that in their hands they shall bear this ministry and Priesthood unto all nations;

And I will bless them through thy name; for as many as receive this Gospel shall be called after thy name, and shall be accounted thy seed, and shall rise up and bless thee, as their father;

And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse them that curse thee; and in thee (that is, in thy Priesthood) and in thy seed (that is, thy Priesthood), for I give unto thee a promise that this right shall continue in thee, and in thy seed after thee (that is to say, the literal seed, or the seed of the body) shall all the families of the earth be blessed, even with the blessings of the Gospel, which are the blessings of salvation, even of life eternal.

(PoGP:Abraham 2:6-11)

Included in the divine promises to Abraham were the assurances that (1) Christ would come through his lineage, and that (2) Abraham's posterity would receive certain lands as an eternal inheritance (Gen. 17;22: 15-18; Gal. 3; Abr. 2). These promises taken together are called the Abrahamic covenant. It was renewed with Isaac (Gen. 26: 1-4, 24) and again with Jacob (Gen. 28; 35: 9-13; 48: 3-4).

The portions of the covenant that pertain to personal salvation and eternal increase are renewed with each individual who receives the ordinance of celestial marriage (see D&C 132:29-33 [and Abr. Facsimile No. 2, Fig. 3.])

Those of non-Israelite lineage, commonly known as gentiles, are adopted into the house of Israel, and become heirs of the covenant and the seed of Abraham, through the ordinances of the gospel

For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.

There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.

And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.

(NewT:Galatians 3:26-29)

MORMON DOCTRINE

By the law of adoption those who receive the gospel and obey its laws, no matter what their literal blood lineage may have been, are adopted into the lineage of Abraham. (Abra. 2:9-11.) "The effect of the Holy Ghost upon a Gentile," the Prophet says, "is to purge out the old blood, and make him actually of the seed of Abraham." Such a person has "a new creation by the Holy Ghost." (Teachings,pp.149-150.) Those who magnify their callings in the Melchizedek Priesthood are promised that they will be "sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies. They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham." (D. & C. 84:33-34.)

Indeed, the faithful are adopted into the family of Christ; they become "the children of christ, his sons, and his daughters"; they are "spiritually begotten," for their "hearts are changed through faith on his name," thus being "born of him," becoming "his sons and his daughters." (Mosiah 5:7.) Paul explained the doctrine of adoption by saying, "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God," because they receive "the Spirit of adoption," being or becoming Israelites, "to whom pertaineth the adoption." (Rom. 8:14-24; 9:4; gal. 4:5; Eph. 1:5.)

And as I said unto Abraham concerning the kindred's of the earth, even so I say unto my servant Joseph: In thee and in thy seed shall the kindred of the earth be blessed. (D&C: Section 124:58)

Visions manifested to Joseph Smith the Prophet and Oliver Cowdery in the temple at Kirtland, Ohio, April 3, 1836. HC 2:435-436. The occasion was that of a Sabbath day meeting. The Prophet prefaces his record of the manifestations with these words: "In the afternoon, I assisted the other Presidents in distributing the Lord's Supper to the Church, receiving it from the Twelve, whose privilege it was to officiate at the sacred desk this day. After having performed this service to my brethren, I retired to the pulpit, the veils being dropped, and bowed myself, with Oliver Cowdery, in solemn and silent prayer. After rising from Prayer, the following vision was opened to both of us."

1-10, The Lord Jehovah appears in glory and accepts the Kirtland Temple as his house;

11-12, Moses and Elias each appear and commit their keys and dispensations;

13-16, Elijah returns and commits the keys of his dispensation as promised by Malachi.

The veil was taken from our minds, and the eyes of our understanding were opened.

We saw the Lord standing upon the breastwork of the pulpit, before us; and under his feet was a paved work of pure gold, in color like amber.

His eyes were as a flame of fire; the hair of his head was white like the pure snow; his countenance shone above the brightness of the sun; and his voice was as the sound of the rushing of great waters, even the voice of Jehovah, saying:

I am the first and the last; I am he who liveth, I am he who was slain; I am your advocate with the Father.

Behold, your sins are forgiven you; you are clean before me; therefore, lift up your heads and rejoice.

Let the hearts of your brethren rejoice, and let the hearts of all my people rejoice, who have, with their might, built this house to my name.

For behold, I have accepted this house, and my name shall be here; and I will manifest myself to my people in mercy in this house.

Yea, I will appear unto my servants, and speak unto them with mine own voice, if my people will keep my commandments, and do not pollute this holy house.

Yea the hearts of thousands and tens of thousands shall greatly rejoice in consequence of the blessings which shall be poured out, and the endowment with which my servants have been endowed in this house.

And the fame of this house shall spread to foreign lands; and this is the beginning of the blessing which shall be poured out upon the heads of my people. Even so. Amen.

After this vision closed, the heavens were again opened unto us; and Moses appeared before us, and committed unto us the keys of the gathering of Israel from the four parts of the earth, and the leading of the ten tribes from the land of the north.

After this, Elias appeared, and committed the dispensation of the gospel of Abraham, saying that in us and our seed all generations after us should be blessed.

After this vision had closed, another great and glorious vision burst upon us; for Elijah the prophet, who was taken to heaven without tasting death, stood before us, and said:

Behold, the time has fully come, which was spoken of by the mouth of Malachi--testifying that he [Elijah] should be sent, before the great and dreadful day of the Lord come--

To turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the children to the fathers, lest the whole earth be smitten with a curse--

Therefore, the keys of this dispensation are committed into your hands; and by this ye may know that the great and dreadful day of the Lord is near, even at the doors. (D&C: Section 110:Heading-16)

For I am the Lord thy God, and will be with thee even unto the end of the world, and through all eternity; for verily I seal upon you your exaltation, and prepare a throne for you in the kingdom of my Father, with Abraham your father. (D&C: Section 132:49)

For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.

There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus.
And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. (NewT:Galatians 3:26-29)

For this Melchizedek, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him;

Noah, who gave warning of the flood; Shem, the great high priest; Abraham, the father of the faithful; Isaac, Jacob, and Moses, the great law-giver of Israel; (D&C: Section 138:41)

The 2nd Priesthood is Patriarchal authority. Go to an d finish the temple, and God will fill it with power, and you will then receive more knowledge concerning this priesthood.

The 3rd is what is called the Levitical Priesthood, consisting of priests to administer in outward ordinances, made without an oath; but the Priesthood of

Melchizedek is by an oath and covenant. (DHC. p.554-556)

The Patriarchal Order:

We find that after the days of Noah an order was introduced called the patriarchal order, in which every man managed his own family affairs. And prominent men among them were kings and priests unto God, and officiated in what is known among us as the priesthood of the Son of God, or the priesthood after the order of Melchizedek. Man began again to multiply on the face of the earth, and the heads of families became their kings and priests, that is, the fathers of their own people. And they were more or less under the influence and guidance of the Almighty. We read, for instance, in our revelations pertaining to these matters, of a man called Melchizedek, who was a great high priest. We are told that there were a great many high priests in his day, and before him and after; and these men had communication with God, and were taught of him in relation to their general proceedings, and acknowledged the hand of God in all things with which the were associated. (JD, 17:207, October 7, 1874; The Gospel Kingdom, John Taylor, p. 139.)

[Note: Here Christ is a King of kings and Lord of lords and instruction each family patriarch as needed.]

The Office of Patriarch to The Church:

In regard to the office of patriarch, William Smith has been ordained patriarch to the church; but he is not the only patriarch, but would act as a senior patriarch, holding the keys of that priesthood; and his labors would be more especially connected with the church in Zion; and he would take the lead, priority, or presidency of the patriarchal office in this place; and in this capacity, if there should be a council of patriarchs, he as a matter of course would preside by right of office. But every legally ordained patriarch has the same right to bless that he has, and their administrations are just as legal as his are. Every ordinance that is administered by a legal administrator, is legal. A priest has just as much right to baptize a person for the remission of sins as an elder, a high priest, or an apostle; but he cannot lay on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, because he does not possess that authority to do it; but an elder does, and an elder's administration would be just as legal as the administration of any of the before mentioned persons, or as that of the president of the church.

Rights of Fathers to Act as Patriarchs:

Every father, after he has received his patriarchal blessing, is a patriarch to his own family, and has the right to confer patriarchal blessings upon his family; which blessings will be just as legal as those conferred by any patriarch of the church: in fact it is his right; and a patriarch is blessing his children, can only bless as his mouthpiece.

A patriarch to the church is appointed to bless those who are orphans, or have no father in the Church to bless them. Not as stated inadvertently, in the editorial above alluded to "to bless all, and such as have not a father to do it," for this he could not do, where the church is so extensive; the burden would be too onerous; hence other patriarchs have been ordained, both in this country, and in England, to assist the patriarch to the church, and hence the provision made in the Doctrine and Covenants: "It is the duty of the Twelve, in all large branches of the church, to ordain evangelical ministers, [patriarchs] as they shall be designated unto them by revelation." (D. & C. 107:39.) And should any of those patriarchs remove here, they have just as much right to administer in their patriarchal office under the direction of the patriarch to the church, as an elder or priest would, who should remove from one of the branches to this place, under the direction of the presidency. Brother William Smith, however "holds the keys of the patriarchal blessings upon the heads of all my people," and would of necessity have the seniority, and of course the priority and presidency; yet it would be left for those who wished to be administered to, to make their choice; just as much as it would for a candidate for baptism to choose who should administer to him.

The above is the true doctrine of the church in regard to this matter, and we speak of it for the information of the brethren at large, lest those who may have received their patriarchal blessings from other sources, or from their fathers, might be tempted to think they were of no avail, and to set at rest this agitated question.

The Patriarch Does Not Preside Over the Priesthood or the Church:

We now proceed to answer some of the remarks which we have heard:

We have been asked, "Does not patriarch over the whole church" place Brother William Smith at the head of the whole church as president?

Answer. No. Brother William is not patriarch over the whole church, but patriarch to the church, and as such he was Ordained. The expression "over the whole church," is a mistake made by W. W. Phelps. He is patriarch to the church to Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The twelve are commanded to ordain evangelical ministers in all large branches of the church abroad, and who has charge over them? The patriarch? No. Those who ordained them. And to who is committed the power and authority to regulate all the affairs of the churches abroad? And who has the charge of the whole priesthood here? Answer. The presidency of the church, and not the patriarch.

But does not the Doctrine and Covenants say:

"First, I give unto you Hyrum Smith to be a patriarch unto you to hold the sealing blessings of my church, even the Holy Spirit of promise, whereby ye are sealed up unto the day of redemption, that ye may not fall notwithstanding the hour of temptation that may come upon you." (D. & C. 124:124.)

Yes, but that is in regard to seniority not in regard to authority in priesthood, for it immediately follows, "I give unto my servant Joseph to be a presiding elder over all my church, to be a translator, a revelator, a seer, and prophet." (D. & C. 124:125.) In the Doctrine and Covenants we read "the duty of President of the office of the high priesthood is to preside over the whole church, and to be like unto Moses." (D. & C. 107:91.) And from this is evident that the president of the church, not the patriarch, is appointed by God to preside.

But does not the patriarch stand in the same relationship to the church as Adam did to his family, and as Abraham and Jacob did to theirs? No. This is another mistake which is made by our junior, and one that may be very easily made inadvertently. Adam was the natural father of his posterity, who were his family and over whom he presided as patriarch, prophet, priest and king. Both Abraham and Jacob stood in the same relationship to their families. But not so with Father Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith, or William Smith. they were not the natural fathers of the church, and could not stand in the same capacity as Adam, Abraham, or Jacob [or Lehi]; but inasmuch as there had been none to bless for generations past, according to the ancient order, they were ordained and set apart for the purpose of conferring patriarchal blessings, to hold the keys of this priesthood, and unlock the door, that had long been closed upon the human family: that blessings might be conferred according to the ancient order, and those who were orphans, or had no father to bless them [As Abraham was an Orphan, his fathers leaving the priesthood sought his blessings from the fathers who had not left the priesthood], might receive it through a patriarch who should act as proxy for their father, (Abraham and Joseph Smith act as proxy for our true fathers,) and that fathers might again be enabled to act as patriarchs to their families, and bless [and seal] their children [with the holy spirit of Promise]. For like the other ordinances in the church, this had been neglected and must needs be restored. But Father Joseph Smith was not president of the church, nor the president's counsel. Nor was Hyrum Smith either president or president's counsel. He was one counsel, but when he was ordained patriarch he gave it up and another was ordained in his stead, [William Law] and in all probability if Brother William magnifies his calling, he will not be able henceforth to attend to the duties of an apostle; but officiate in the same capacity in regard to blessing as his brother Hyrum did--not as president of the church, but as patriarch to it.

The president of the church presides over all patriarchs, presidents, and councils of the church; and this presidency does not depend so much upon genealogy as upon calling, order, and seniority. James and Joseph were the brothers of Jesus, and John was his beloved disciple, yet Peter held the keys and presided over all the church. Brother William was in the quorum of the twelve yet he was not president of the twelve during his brother's lifetime, nor since; and if being ordained a patriarch would make him president of the church, it would have made Father Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith presidents over the church instead of Joseph.

Brother William understands the matter, and were it not for the folly of some men there would be no necessity for these remarks.

A patriarch is what is termed in scripture an evangelist, and Brother William acts in that capacity, and God placed in the church "first apostles,' not first evangelists, but the president stands in the same relationship to the church as Moses did to the children of Israel, according to the revelations.

Again, who ordained Father Smith to the office of patriarch? His son Joseph, and Father Smith ordained Hyrum, and the twelve (of whom Brother William is one) ordained him. Who are appointed to ordain evangelical ministers? It is the duty of the Twelve, in all large branches of the church, to ordain evangelical ministers, as they shall be designated unto them by revelation. (D. & C. 107:39.) Can a stream rise higher than its fountain? No....

We think that everyone will see that Brother William Smith's patriarchal office will not exalt him higher in regard to priesthood than he was before, as one of the twelve; but will rather change the nature of his office.

But will it take any thing from his priesthood? it may be asked. No. You cannot take any man's priesthood away without transgression. Brother William will still retain the same power, priesthood, and authority that he did before, and yet will hold in connection with that the patriarchal office and the keys of that priesthood, and as one of the twelve must maintain his dignity as one of the presidents of the church [This occurred during the apostolic interregnum of 1844–1847 when the twelve, Brigham Young at their head, were sustained as "presidents of the Church"], of whom President Brigham Young is the president and head, and presides over all patriarchs, presidents, and councils of the church. (Times and Seasons, 6:921–922, June 1, 1845; The Gospel Kingdom, John Taylor, p. 146–149.)

Abraham seeks the blessings of the patriarchal order:

In the land of the Chaldeans, at the residence of my fathers, I, Abraham, saw that it was needful for me to obtain another place of residence;

And, finding there was greater happiness and peace and rest for me, I sought for the blessings of the fathers, and the right whereunto I should be ordained to administer the same; having been myself a follower of righteousness, desiring also to be one who possessed great knowledge, and to be a greater follower of righteousness, and to possess a greater knowledge, and to be a father of many nations, a prince of peace, and desiring to receive instructions, and to keep the commandments of God, I became a rightful heir, a High Priest, holding the right belonging to the fathers.

It was conferred upon me from the fathers; it came down from the fathers, from the beginning of time, yea, even from the beginning, or before the foundation of the earth to the present time, even the right of the firstborn, on the first man, who is Adam, or first father, through the fathers unto me.

I sought for mine appointment unto the Priesthood according to the appointment of God unto the fathers concerning the seed.
(PoGP:Abraham Heading & 1:1–4)

Abraham had to receive these blessings proxy from one holding the office of presidency because his fathers turned away from the priesthood.

My fathers having turned from their righteousness, and form the holy commandments which the Lord their God had given unto them, unto the worshiping of the gods of the heathen, utterly refused to harken to my voice; (Abraham 1:5)

[Note: Here we learn that the Patriarch:

1. Holds the keys of sealing, even the holy Spirit of Promise, [which is the spirit of Elijah or the fullness of the priesthood, concerning the seed].

2. We learn that the patriarch is standing as proxy for the fathers or Kings and priests as Abraham:

3. We can conclude as Abraham stated he sought for:

A. The right of the priesthood [the fullness of the priesthood–to be made a king and a priest over his posterity and

B. He sought for the right to bestow the same blessings on his seed.

4. Therefore it is obvious why the keys of sealing, even the holy Spirit of Promise [resides in the patriarch] because as Abraham the King and Priest over his family, has the right to administer the same unto his family and transmit the same keys to his children.

5. This is why you see Lehi of the Book of mormon probably as a Patriarch, Prophet, Priest, and King over his seed had the right when separated from the first presidency, became the first presidency over his family and Held the keys to administer the same unto his seed. ie., He married his sons and daughters, made them kings and priests unto the Most High God, and anointed their wives Queens and Priestess unto their husbands which is the holy spirit of promise, sealing them up to eternal life. He also bestowed the Fullness of the Priesthood on His children and transmitted the same Keys to them so that they Could Build Temples and bestow the same sealing keys upon their posterity unto the latest generation. This is why Moroni was see by John Proclaiming the Everlasting Gospel. Because he understood the fullness of the priesthood and outlined it four times to the Prophet Joseph Smith and as a symbol he stands upon the top of the Capstone of the Temple symbolizing that he is proclaiming the fullness of the priesthood starting with the introductory steps all the way up to the capstone of the temple of man when they are made Kings and Priests unto the Most high God and Queens and Priestesses unto their husbands and reign equally with him over their seed and hold the right to bestow the same upon their posterity as Abraham and as Lehi and as God, And all other affiliations stand in proxy of the Father or fathers. The Prophet stands as the proxy King and Priest and his wife the queen and priestess in and over the Kingdom of God of the Earth. Transmitting these keys to each head of each family to stand in their own capacity eventually attaining unto the Godhead themselves.....

Here we see the full order of the Church as described time and time again:

Christ said in his great prophetic Prayer "Thy Kingdom come thine will be done on earth which is done in heaven:

1. In order to establish what the Christ had prayed for in his prophetic prayer; the Lord Set up the First Presidency which represents the Godhead and is Proxy Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Which priesthood is without father and mother-or in other words holds all the Keys of the Fullness of the Priesthood independent of the Patriarchal order.

2. He then made Joseph to stand in his place as his is a Patriarchal order and made him Proxy King of Kings and Lord of Lords, which keys will be delivered back to Christ at the start of the Millennium and then the Christ will deliver these keys to His Father and Our Father at the end of the Millennium.

3. The Lord through Joseph Smith then established the order of the Church to restore the Patriarchal order which had been lost.
He:

1. Set up the first presidency to preside over the Fullness of the priesthood. (D&C 124:125.)

2. Established the Patriarchal Computer Book: C:\SCRIPT\LDS-ENGL.BYB

Abraham, Covenant of.

Abraham [and Sarah] first received the gospel by baptism (which is the covenant of salvation). Then he had conferred upon him the higher priesthood, and he entered into celestial marriage (which is the covenant [and seal by the priesthood and by the Holy Ghost] of exaltation) [according to our faithfulness], gaining assurance thereby that he [and his wives jointly] would have eternal increase. Finally he received a promise that all of these blessings would be offered to all of his mortal posterity [including the crowning ordinance of the new and everlasting covenant of marriage that of being anointed and sealed kings and queens, priests and priestesses to the most God, to rule and reign in the house of Israel forever. (D&C 132:29-50; Abr. 2:6-11). (Abraham, Covenant of.; Bible Dictionary p. 602)

...This covenant was renewed with Isaac (Gen. 24:60; 26:1-4, 24) and again with Jacob. (Gen. 28; 35:9-13; 48:3-4.) Those portions of it which pertain to personal exaltation and eternal increase are renewed with each member who enters to order of celestial marriage; through that order the participating parties become inheritors of all the blessings of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. (D & C 132; Rom. 9:4; Gal. 3; 4.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 13)

Adam-God Theory:

All exalted beings become joint heirs with Christ and inherit the fullness of the Father's kingdom. Having entered in at the gate of celestial marriage, and having pressed forward in righteousness, overcoming all things, they pass by the angels and the gods "to their exaltation and glory in all things.

...Then shall they be gods, because they have no end; therefore shall they be from everlasting to everlasting, because they continue; then shall they be above all, because all things are subject unto them. Then shall they be gods, because they have all power, and the angels are subject unto them." (D. & C. 132:19-20.) Of all these Adam is the chief, presiding (under Christ and the Father) in the patriarchal order over all the rest. There is no mystery about this doctrine except that which persons ignorant of the great principles of exaltation and unfriendly to the cause of righteousness have attempted to make. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 19) [This is to help explain exaltation as the picture of Orson Hyde drew, also each one of us falls under this chart. Also, this is important to show that the patriarchal order is sealed upon us in the New and everlasting covenant of marriage to fall in this order.]

Adoption:

...Those who magnify their callings in the Melchizedek Priesthood are promised that they will be "sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies. They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed to Abraham." (D. & C. 84:33-34.)

Indeed, the faithful are adopted into the family of Christ; they become "the children of Christ, his sons, and his daughters"; they are "spiritually begotten,: for their "hearts are changed through faith on his name," thus being "born of him," becoming "his sons and his daughters. (Mosiah 5:7.) Paul explained the doctrine of adoption by saying, "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God," because they receive "the Spirit of adoption," being or becoming Israelites, "to whom pertaineth the adoption." (Rom. 8:14-24; 9:4; Gal. 4:5; Eph. 1:5.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 23)

Equality

1. Under conditions of full gospel equality, perfect fairness and equity would prevail in every sphere of life. All persons similarly situated would be treated exactly the same as all other such persons; all would enjoy and possess the same things. Perfect impartiality would reign, for "there should be an equality among all men." (Mosiah 27:3; Alma 1:26.) By way of illustration, the gospel message itself is and should be freely available to all men. (Third Article of Faith.) The Lord "inviteth them all [this is a prophetic statement for the black race] to come unto him and partake of his goodness; and he denieth none that come unto him, black and white, bond and free, male and female; and he remembereth the heathen; and all are alike unto God, both Jew and Gentile." (2 Ne. 26:33.)

Gospel Mysteries

Perfect equality does not now prevail, either in the world or in the Church. But when life is perfected among the saints and when the highest gospel law is lived, then both temporal and spiritual equality will prevail. Temporal adjustments under the principles of consecration will make "every man qual according to his circumstances and his wants and needs." (D. & C. 51:3; 82:17.) "In your temporal things you shall be qual, and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld." (E. & C. 70:14.) "For if ye are not equal in earthly things ye cannot be equal in obtaining heavenly things." (D. & C. 70:14.) "For if ye are not equal in earthly things ye cannot be equal in obtaining heavenly things." (D. & C. 78:3-7.)

2. Exalted beings will enjoy eternal equality in their high celestial status. "And he makes them equal in power, and in might, and in dominion." (D. & C. 76:95.) [This takes place in the Fullness of the Melchizedek Priesthood in the New and Everlasting Covenant of Celestial Marriage.] "And then shall the angels be crowned with the glory of his might, and the saints shall be filled with his glory, and receive their inheritances and be made equal with him." (D. & C. 88:107.) [How can a married person be made equal with a person who is not. We are give the blessings of the fullness of the New and Everlasting Covenant of Marriage to be made equal with God and His Christ...] In other words, they all enjoy exaltation; all live the same kind of life; all exercise the same power, the power of God; all are possessed of the same Spirit, the Spirit of truth; all are gods and have eternal increase; all are joint-heirs with Christ [again if we all have eternal increase and are made brought up the standard of God and Joint-heirs with Christ it must mean that he is living the same law that he has brought us up to live] possessing all things with him, and being inheritors of all that the Father hath. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 231.) Patriarchal Chain.

Those who shall here after rule and reign in eternity as exalted beings will form a patriarchal chain which will begin with Father Adam and spread out until every exalted person is linked in. Exaltation consists in the continuation of the family unit in eternity, and every family which so continuation of the family unit in eternity, and every family which so continues will find its proper place in the eternal organizational framework which the Almighty has ordained. None [of the worthy] will be forgotten. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 558)

Patriarchal Order

...Those married in the temple in the new and everlasting covenant of marriage become inheritors of all the blessings of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob and all the patriarchs and thereby enter into the patriarchal order. [When do they enter into this order? When they are married in the temple.] If the participating parties abide in the eternal marriage covenant, they shall reap the full blessings of patriarchal heirship in eternity where the patriarchal order will be the order of government and rule. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 559.)

Hebrews 6:10-20

He swear by himself] "By himself have I sworn, saith the Lord," was the language used by Deity in giving the promise of eternal life "unto Abraham." (Gen 22:15-16.) That is, God swore with an oath in his won name that Abraham would be saved, which divine assertation absolutely guaranteed the eventuality. Abraham's calling and election was thus made sure.

14. The Lord's oath to Abraham was: "In blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore.... And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." (Gen. 22:17-18.) By way of interpretation, the Lord said to Joseph Smith: "Abraham received promises concerning his seed, and of the fruit of his loins--from whose loins ye are, namely, my servant Joseph--which were to continue so long as they were in the world; and as touching Abraham and his seed, out of the world they should continue; both in the world and out of the world would they continue as innumerable as the stars; or, if ye were to count the sand upon the seashore ye could not number them." (D. & C. 132:30.)

15. He obtained the promise] Abraham's seed, the house of Israel, the children of the prophets, those who are natural inheritors of the promises made to Abraham. (3 Ne. 20:25-26.) These heirs have the "right" to the priesthood. Speaking of this the Lord said to Abraham concerning his seed: "I give unto thee a promise that this right shall continue in thee, and in thy seed after thee (that is to say, the literal seed, or the seed of the body) shall all the families of the earth be blessed, even with the blessings of the Gospel, which are the blessings of salvation, even of life eternal." (Abra. 2:11.)

From Joseph Smith's Inspired Translation of the Bible, we read that the fullness of the Priesthood comes "not by man, nor the will of man; neither by father nor mother; neither by beginning of days nor end of years; but of God." (Gen. 14:28) Willard Richards wrote in the Joseph Smith Diary that is Priesthood is for those who are--

...called, elected and made were without father, etc.; a priesthood which holds the priesthood by right from the Eternal Gods--and not by descent from father and mother. (words of Joseph Smith, p 244)

And again, speaking of Hebrews 7:
Paul is here treating of three different priesthood's, namely the priesthood of Aaron <Levitical>, Abraham <patriarchal>, and Melchizedek. Abraham's priesthood was of greater power than Levi's, and Melchizedek's was of greater power than that of Abraham. (Words of Joseph Smith, p.245-246)

The Prophet Joseph stated that, "those holding the fullness of the Melchizedek Priesthood are kings and priests of the Most High God,..." (TPJS, p. 322) He further explained this Priesthood order as--

That of Melchizedek who had still greater power even power of an endless life of which was our Lord Jesus Christ which also Abraham obtained by the offering of his son Isaac which was not the power of a Prophet nor apostle nor Patriarch only but of King & Priest to God to open the windows of Heaven and pour out the peace & law of endless life to man, & no man can attain to the joint heirship with Jesus Christ without being administered to by one having the same power & authority of Melchizedek. (Words of JS, p. 245)

In another instance, Joseph emphasized that the spirit of "Messiah is above the spirit and power of Elijah" (TPJS, p. 340), for--

... this greater priesthood administereth the gospel and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God. For without this no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live. (D. & C. 84:19 & 22)

In conclusion then, the Prophet stated that "the spirit of Elias is first, Elijah second, and Messiah last." (TPJS, p. 340) This highest power and authority of Priesthood was the kingly Priesthood which Peter referred to as the "Royal Priesthood" (I Peter 2:9), confirmed by the King of Kings-the Messiah Himself.

Those with the highest Priesthood may enjoy the following powers and privileges:

Those holding the fullness of the Melchizedek Priesthood are kings and priests of the Most High God, holding the keys of power and blessings. In fact, that Priesthood is a perfect law of theocracy, and stands as God to give laws to the people, administering endless lives to the sons and daughters of Adam. (TPJS, p. 322)

All men who become heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ will have to receive the fullness of the ordinances of his kingdom; and those who will not receive all the ordinances will come short of the fullness of that glory, if they do not lose the whole. (DHC 5:424)

The power and authority of the highest, or Melchizedek Priesthood, is to hold the keys of all the spiritual blessings of the church--to have the privilege of receiving the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, to have the heavens opened unto them, to commune with the general assembly and church of the Firstborn, and to enjoy the communion and presence of God the Father, and Jesus the mediator of the new covenant. (D. & C. 107:18-19)

The object of every man should be to obtain the Priesthood and magnify his calling in that Priesthood until he proves himself worthy of the fullness of the ordinances of God's kingdom. Only then can he possess the power to have the heavens opened to him and commune with God the Father and His Son.

In our dispensation, the Lord has said: "every man might speak in the name of God that Lord, even the Savior of the world." (D. & C. 1:20) The prophet Jeremiah prophesied: Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord: But this shall be the covenant that i will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more." (Jer. 31:31-34)

The Lord stated further:

...I say unto you that mine eyes are upon you. I am in your midst and ye cannot see me; but the day soon cometh that ye shall see me, and know that I am; for the veil of darkness shall soon be rent, and he that is not purified shall not abide the day. Wherefore, gird up your loins and be prepared. (D. & C. 38:7-9)

And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it.
And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.
And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it.
And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there.
And they shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it.
And there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life. (NewT:Revelation 21:22-27)

If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the LORD, honorable; and shalt honor him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words: (OldT:Isaiah 58:13)

A son honoureth his father, and a servant his master: if then I be a father, where is mine honor? and if I be a master, where is my fear? saith the LORD of hosts unto you, O priests, that despise my name. And ye say, Wherein have we despised thy name? (OldT:Malachi 1:6)

For God commanded, saying, Honor thy father and mother: and, He that curseth father or mother, let him die the death. (NewT:Matthew 15:4)

And honor not his father or his mother, he shall be free. Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition. (NewT:Matthew 15:6) This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me. (NewT:Matthew 15:8)

Honor thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. (NewT:Matthew 19:19)

He answered and said unto them, Well hath Esaias prophesied of you hypocrites, as it is written, This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. (NewT:Mark 7:6)

For Moses said, Honor thy father and thy mother; and, Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death: (NewT:Mark 7:10)

Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honor thy father and mother. (NewT:Mark 10:19)

Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Honor thy father and thy mother. (NewT:Luke 18:20)

That all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoureth not the Son honoureth not the Father which hath sent him. (NewT:John 5:23)

Jesus answered, I have not a devil; but I honor my Father, and ye do dishonor me. (NewT:John 8:49)

To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life: (NewT:Romans 2:7) But glory, honor, and peace, to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile: (NewT:Romans 2:10)

Honor thy father and mother; (which is the first commandment with promise;) (NewT:Ephesians 6:2)

Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory for ever and ever. Amen. (NewT:1 Timothy 1:17)

Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and doctrine. (NewT:1 Timothy 5:17)

For he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. (NewT:2 Peter 1:17)

And when those beasts give glory and honor and thanks to him that sat on the throne, who liveth for ever and ever, (NewT:Revelation 4:9)

Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created. (NewT:Revelation 4:11)

Saying with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing. (NewT:Revelation 5:12)

And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever. (NewT:Revelation 5:13)

Saying, Amen: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen. (NewT:Revelation 7:12)

And after these things I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, saying, Alleluia; Salvation, and glory, and honor, and power, unto the Lord our God: (NewT:Revelation 19:1)

And now, they said: We know of a surety that the Lord is with thee, for we know that it is the power of the Lord that has shaken us. And they fell down before me, and were about to worship me, but I would not suffer them, saying: I am thy brother, yea, even thy younger brother; wherefore, worship the Lord thy God, and honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God shall give thee. (BM:1 Nephi 17:55)

Forasmuch as this people draw near unto me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their hearts far from me, and their fear towards me is taught by the precepts of men-- (BofM:2 Nephi 27:25)

Forasmuch as this people draw near unto me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their hearts far from me, and their fear towards me is taught by the precepts of men-- (BofM:2 Nephi 27:25)

Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee. (BofM:Mosiah 13:20)

And the Lord God has spoken it; and honor, power and glory be rendered to his holy name, both now and ever. Amen. (D&C: Section 20:36) And thus, if ye are faithful ye shall be laden with many sheaves, and crowned with honor, and glory, and immortality, and eternal life. (D&C: Section 75:5)

And to God and the Lamb be glory, and honor, and dominion forever and ever. Amen. (D&C: Section 76:119)

Prayer offered at the dedication of the temple at Kirtland, Ohio, March 27, 1836. HC 2:420-426. According to the Prophet's written statement, this prayer was given to him by revelation.

Gospel Mysteries

1- 5, Kirtland Temple built as a place for the Son of Man to visit;
6-21, It is to be a house of prayer, fasting, faith, learning, glory, and order, and a house of God;
22-33, May the unrepentant who oppose the Lord's people be confounded;
34-42, May the saints go forth in power to gather the righteous to Zion;
43-53, May the saints be delivered from the terrible things to be poured out upon the wicked in the last days;
54-58, May nations and peoples and churches be prepared for the gospel;
59-67, May the Jews, the Lamanites, and all Israel be redeemed;
68-80, May the saints be crowned with glory and honor and gain eternal salvation. (D&C: Section 109:Heading)

And again, I say unto you that it is my will that my servant Lyman Wight should continue in preaching for Zion, in the spirit of meekness, confessing me before the world; and I will bear him up as on eagles' wings; and he shall beget glory and honor to himself and unto my name.
(D&C: Section 124:18)

And again, verily I say unto you, I command you again to build a house to my name, even in this place, that you may prove yourselves unto me that ye are faithful in all things whatsoever I command you, that I may bless you, and crown you with honor, immortality, and eternal life. (D&C: Section 124:55)

Herein is glory and honor, and immortality and eternal life--The ordinance of baptism by water, to be immersed therein in order to answer to the likeness of the dead, that one principle might accord with the other; to be immersed in the water and come forth out of the water is in the likeness of the resurrection of the dead in coming forth out of their graves; hence, this ordinance was instituted to form a relationship with the ordinance of baptism for the dead, being in likeness of the dead. (D&C: Section 128:12)

Let the mountains shout for joy, and all ye valleys cry aloud; and all ye seas and dry lands tell the wonders of your Eternal King! And ye rivers, and brooks, and rills, flow down with gladness. Let the woods and all the trees of the field praise the Lord; and ye solid rocks weep for joy! And let the sun, moon, and the morning stars sing together, and let all the sons of God shout for joy! And let the eternal creations declare his name forever and ever! And again I say, how glorious is the voice we hear from heaven, proclaiming in our ears, glory, and salvation, and honor, and immortality, and eternal life; kingdoms, principalities, and powers!

I was answered that I must join none of them, for they were all wrong; and the Personage who addressed me said that all their creeds were an abomination in his sight; that those professors were all corrupt; that: "They draw near to me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me, they teach for doctrines the commandments of men, having a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof." For behold, thus saith the Lord, I will liken thee, O house of Israel, like unto a tame olive-tree, which a man took and nourished in his vineyard; and it grew, and waxed old, and began to decay. (BofM:Jacob 5:3)

Behold, mine house is a house of order, saith the Lord God, and not a house of confusion. (D&C: Section 132:8)

pp. 787-800 List of persons to be adopted to Brigham Young, 1846-1854

pp. 803-804 Divorces [only records the cancellation of one marriage and two adoptions]

Description of the Record:

This book is a copy made about 1870 from the original manuscript records kept by the recorders at the Nauvoo Temple, as well as at Winter Quarters and Salt Lake City prior to the opening of the Endowment House in 1855. The bulk of the book is in the same handwriting. Some notes of cancellations of sealings were made in the 1890's by George Reynolds. Some marks were made by indexers, probably at a later time. An index to adoptions, arranged both by fathers and by persons adopted precedes the book on film. An index to sealings of couples appear on GS serial no. 25163, pt 3.

In making the copy of the record the scribe placed all names beginning with the letter "A" together, etc., leaving many blank pages between those actually written upon. Sealing pages are headed "sealings in the Temple at Nauvoo Illinois, Hancock county, Illinois," for the living couples or "Proxy Sealings" where one member of the couple was dead. Generally the wife was the one who had died, but there are some cases where wives were sealed to dead husbands.

Adoptions pages are entitled "Adoptions and Sealings in the Temple at Nauvoo, Hancock County, Illinois." Adoptions pages following the sealing of couples pages assigned to the same letter of the alphabet.

August, 1953

This thesis by Rodney Turner is accepted in its present form by the Division of Religion of Brigham Young University as satisfying the thesis requirement for the degree of Master of Arts.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am especially indebted to certain members of the faculty of the Division of Religion, Brigham Young University, for their critical examination of the manuscript. I thank them in the name of Dr. Sidney B. Sperry, director of the division, and chairman of my thesis committee.

I also wish to express my gratitude to my wife for her willing efforts in transcribing my notes, and for sustaining me throughout the venture. And I greatly appreciate the invaluable assistance given my by the staff of the Brigham Young University library and of the Church Historian's office in locating the many sources from which the material used in this study was obtained, and for the use of their microfilms.

There are others who here go unnamed, but who have every right to feel that they have had a real, though invisible hand, in the accomplishment of this work.

INTRODUCTION

The Problem and It's Justification

The purpose of this study is to determine, in so far as is possible, the views held by various leaders of the Latter-day Saints relative to Adam; and more especially, the official doctrine of the Church as to his place in it's theology.

The problem is based, in part, on the divergent, and oft times bitter, claims and counter-claims of members, ex-members, and non-members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints over "Mormon" teachings concerning Adam in the light of a certain address given by President Brigham Young in 1852. Indeed, this address, and the man who gave it, remain the focal point of much discussion to this day.

From time to time, articles, anti-Mormon in spirit and purpose, appear attacking the Latter-day Saints and citing the Gospel Mysteries aforementioned address as irrefutable evidence of the "blasphemous beliefs" of Mormonism in general, and its concept of God and man's relationship to him in particular. It is hoped that this study will prove of some value in establishing the actual doctrines of the Church, thus revealing the truth--whatever that truth may be. It is in that spirit that this thesis has been written; the writer trusts that it will be received in a like one.

The Basic Questions Involved

There are eight basic questions for which this thesis seeks answers. Because of the almost universal prominence given his views, and because he is the "focal point" of the over-all problem, four of these questions relate to the teachings of Brigham Young. The eight questions are:

1. Were Brigham Young's remarks relative to Adam misinterpreted?
2. Were his remarks misquoted in official church publications?
3. Where did he obtain his views concerning Adam?
4. What were his views concerning Adam?
5. What have been the views of other church authorities?
6. What did Joseph Smith teach?
7. What do the "standard works" reveal concerning Adam's identity?
8. What is the official doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints today?

The Method of Study

The nature of the problem demands that the writer divorce himself from any doctrinal expressions or opinions; he has limited himself to the evaluation and analysis of the Gospel Mysteries quoted material alone. The doctrinal correctness of any given view or interpretation--in terms of ultimate truth--is something which could not enter into any objective study of this kind. The writer does not pretend to know of any means for ascertaining such theological truth in keeping with the prescribed methodology of thesis research. The business of this study is the collection and correlation of manifest fact, not the substantiation of theological doctrine.

The writer has relied heavily upon the direct statements of those concerned as much as possible. This will decrease the likelihood of errors in analysis on the writer's part, and dubiety on the reader's. It will also permit the quotes to be introduced directly into the body of the thesis rather than have them relegated to the oft unfingered isolation of an appendix.

Much of the material is presented in its chronological sequence. For example, the remarks of President Young appear in essentially the same order in which he uttered them.

The writer has attempted to select those statements which are the most pertinent, the least ambiguous, and, therefore, best able to stand alone and unsullied by needless commentary. The following arbitrary rules of procedure have guided the actual writing of this study:

1. Be objective.
2. Select those statements which most clearly and completely reveal a given person's views.
3. Avoid the use of isolated, ambiguous references.
4. Accept all statements literally, unless they are obviously meant to be understood otherwise.

5. In general, base all conclusions on what is actually said; not on what is supposedly left unsaid.

6. Look for an overall pattern of thought in a given person's pronouncements.

7. Differentiate between a principle and a fact.

8. Be honest in the use of the material, and in your conclusions.

Limitations of the Study

This study does not pretend to include all facets of Latter-day Saint doctrine as it relates to Adam. Such areas as Adam's pre-existent life, his "fall," mortal life, etc., comprise another study in themselves; to have introduced them herein would have been to pass beyond the outermost limits which define, and confine, a thesis. Therefore, this study is limited to an examination of certain material relevant to Adam's identity and accepted position in Latter-day Saint theology.

CHAPTER II

THE DISCOURSE OF APRIL 9, 1852

Background of the discourse.--The old tabernacle was filled to overflowing as President Young arose to address the evening session of conference. He spoke of the "mysteries" and said that many of the "Elders of Israel" desired to know of them; but he warned his listeners that:

> Here is the place for you to teach great mysteries to your brethren, because here are those who can correct you. This fault the Elders of Israel do not fall into in this Tabernacle, although they may in private house [sic] and neighborhoods. When a man is capable of > correcting you, and of giving you light, and true doctrine, do not get up an altercation, but submit to be taught like little children, and strive with all your might to understand. The privileges of those who dwell here are greater than the privileges of those who dwell abroad. When your duties call you into foreign lands, and you there exhaust your stock of knowledge and wisdom, and you are not in possession of the keys to obtain that instruction which you desire, it is because you are far from the right fountain--far from the body, where all the members are in lively operation--. . . . When your face is turned from the body, let mysteries alone, for this is the only place for you to be corrected if wrong.(1)

Following this admonition to the membership, President Young briefly discussed amusements and tithing after which he said:

"I will close this sermon, as I intend to preach another before I present the subject I more particularly wish to speak upon." These words introduced Brigham Young's controversial so-called "Adam-God" address, now quoted in its entirety.

The Discourse Itself

My next sermon will be to both Saint and sinner. One thing has remained a mystery in this kingdom up to this day. It is in regard to the character of the well-beloved Son of God, upon which subject the Elders of Israel have conflicting views. Our God and Father in heaven, is a being of tabernacle, or, in other words, He has a body, with parts the same as you and I have; and is capable of showing forth His works to organized beings, as, for instance, in the world in which we live, it is the result of the knowledge and infinite wisdom that swell in His organized body. His son Jesus Christ has become a personage of tabernacle, and has a body like his father. The Holy Ghost is the Spirit of the Lord, and issues forth from Himself, and may properly be called God's minister to execute His will in immensity; being called to govern by His influence and power; but He is not a person of tabernacle as we are, and as our Father in Heaven and Jesus Christ are. The question has been, and is often asked, who it was that begot the Son of the Virgin Mary. The infidel world has concluded that if what the Apostles wrote about his father and mother be true, and the present marriage discipline acknowledged by Christendom be correct, then Christians must believe that God is the father of an illegitimate son, in the person of Jesus Christ! The infidel fraternity teach that to their disciples. I will tell you how it is. Our Father in Heaven begot all the spirits that ever were, or ever will be, upon this earth; and they were born spirits in the eternal world. then the Lord by His power and wisdom organized the mortal tabernacle of man. We were made first spiritual, and afterwards temporal.

Now hear it, O inhabitants of the earth, Jew and Gentile, Saint and sinner! When our father Adam came into the garden of Eden, he came into it with a celestial body, and brought Eve, one of his wives, with him. He helped to make and organize this world. He is MICHAEL, the Archangel, the ANCIENT OF DAYS! about whom holy men have written and spoken--He is our Father and our God, and the only God with whom WE have to do. Every man upon the earth, professing Christians and non professing, must hear it, and will know it sooner or later. They came here, organized the raw material, and arranged in their order the herbs of the field, the trees, the apple, the peach, the plum, the pear, and every other fruit that is desirable and good for man; the seed was brought from another sphere, and planted in this earth. The thistle, the thorn, the briar, and the obnoxious weed did not appear until after the earth was cursed. When Adam and Eve had eaten of the forbidden fruit, their bodies became mortal from its effects, and therefore their offspring were mortal. When the Virgin Mary conceived the child Jesus the Father had begotten him in his own likeness. He was not begotten by the Holy Ghost. And who is the Father? He is the first of the human family; and when he took a tabernacle, it was begotten by his Father in heaven, after the same manner as the tabernacles of Cain, Abel, and the rest of the sons and daughters of Adam and Eve; from the fruits of the earth, the first earthly tabernacles were originated by the father, and so on in succession. I could tell you much more about this; but were I to tell you the whole truth, blasphemy would be nothing to it, in the estimation of the superstitious and overrighteous of mankind. However I have told you the truth as far as I have gone. I have heard men preach upon the divinity of Christ, and exhaust all the wisdom they possessed. All Scripturalists, and approved theologians who were considered exemplary for piety and education, have undertaken to expound on this subject, in every age of the Christian era; and after they have done all, they are obliged to conclude by exclaiming "great is the mystery of godliness," and tell nothing.

It is true that the earth was organized by three distinct characters, namely, Eloheim, Yahovah, and Michael, these three forming a quorum, as in all heavenly bodies, and in organizing element, perfectly represented in the Deity, as Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

Again, they will try to tell how the divinity of Jesus is joined to his humanity, and exhaust all their mental faculties, and wind up with this profound language, as describing the soul of man, "it is an immaterial substance!" What a learned idea! Jesus, our elder brother, was begotten in the flesh by the same character that was in the garden of Eden, and who is our Father in Heaven. Now, let all who may hear these doctrines, pause before they make light of them, or treat them with indifference, for they will prove their salvation or damnation.

I have given you a few leading items upon this subject but a great deal more remains to be told. Now, remember from this time forth, and for ever, that Jesus Christ was not begotten by the Holy Ghost. I will repeat a little anecdote. I was in conversation with a certain learned professor upon this subject, when I replied, to this idea-- "if the Son was begotten by the Holy Ghost, it would be very dangerous to baptize and confirm females, and give the Holy Ghost to them, lest he should ()beget children, to be palmed upon the Elders by the people, bring the Elders into great difficulties."

Treasure up these things in your hearts. In the Bible you have read the things I have told you to-night; but you have not known what you did read. I have told you no more than you are conversant with; but what do the people in Christendom, with the Bible in their hands, know about this subject? Comparatively nothing.(1)

Analysis of the Discourse

President Young begins by stating that the "character" or nature of Christ has been a "mystery" among the saints and a source of "conflicting views" among the "Elders of Israel" to that time. He then briefly describes the individuals in the godhead saying that "our God and Father in heaven" and His son, Jesus Christ, were personages of tabernacle comparable to mortal men, but that the Holy Ghost was not so endowed.

He then states that the question as to the identity of the actual father of Christ's mortal body is "often asked," and that some people would brand Christ "an illegitimate son" of God if the account by the apostles is true concerning Jesus' parentage. With this introduction Brigham Young gives his views of the matter briefly as follows:

1. God the Father begot the spirits of all those born on this earth.

2. God then "organized" man's physical body.

3. Adam entered Eden with a "celestial" body.

4. Eve, "one of" Adam's wives came with him.

5. Adam assisted in the organization of this earth.

6. Adam is Michael, the Archangel, the Ancient of Days.

7. Adam is "our Father and our God, and the only God with whom WE have to do."

8. Seed for earth's vegetation was "brought from another sphere."

9. The mortality of Adam and Eve resulted from eating

(1) Ibid., pp. 50,51.

10. Christ is the literal son of the Father, not of the Holy Ghost.

11. God the Father is "the first of the human family."

12. God the Father's body was begotten in turn by his Father.

13. God the Father "originated" the first earthly bodies on this planet from the "fruits of the earth."

14. This process of origination has continued "on in succession."

15. The earth was organized by three distinct persons, Eloheim, Yahovah, and Michael.

16. The physical body of Christ was begotten "by the same character that was in the garden of Eden, and who is our father in Heaven."

A mystery has been spoken of.--It is evident that Brigham Young felt he had revealed something of a mystery; something that was possibly new and shocking to at least a portion of his audience. That it was new would appear from his statement that Christ's character "has remained a mystery in this kingdom up to this day." That it was possibly shocking is seen in such expressions as: "were I to tell you the whole truth, blasphemy would be nothing to it, in the estimation of the superstitious and overrighteous of mankind." and "let all who may hear these doctrines, pause before the make light of them, or treat them with indifference, for they will prove their salvation or damnation."

Why it was spoken of.--It is not known for certain why President Young discussed the subject at all; he himself never said. Earlier that night he had stated: "here is the place for you to teach great mysteries to your brethren"; that may have had something to do with prompting his line of thought; that, and a desire to put an end to the "conflicting views" of the elders. Then too, it should be recalled that the Saints had been in Utah something less than five years. They numbered but a few thousand there; and in that period before the railroad spanned the continent, they enjoyed a rather isolated condition. This tended to draw them together; thus permitting a public exchange of ideas and expressions that many came to consider indiscreet and ill-advised under later circumstances.

The question.--The parentage of Christ is the problem which commanded the attention of President Young. But in his explanation of it, he created a new, and more enduring controversy in regards to Adam's identity. Although we have listed eight questions with which we are concerned in our overall study, there is in reality but one fundamental, all-embracing question in connection with Brigham Young: what did he believe the relationship to be between Adam and God the Father, the Father of all those born upon this earth? This question must not be lost sight of in the mass of material with which we will now deal.

Early Reactions to the Discourse, 1852-56

The Deseret News.--One looks in vain in America for any published reaction to the discourse. This, however, is understandable in view of the times, the isolated condition of the Saints, and the fact that the only newspaper in the territory in 1852 confined its comments on the conference sermons to brief resumes'. Those which were printed, were published without any editorializing, unless it involved civic matters, on the newspapers part. The particular session of the 1852 conference with which we are concerned was reported as follows:

> The elders and brethren assembled in the tabernacle which was completely crowded. After the usual introductory exercises, Pres. Young preached several sermons on various subjects, (the Holy Ghost resting upon him in great power, while he revealed some of the precious things of the kingdom.)(1)

The Millenial Star.--In November, 1853, the Millenial Star, organ of the British Mission of the Church, published the full text of Brigham Young's sermon. In doing so, it stated:

> Our Father, Adam.--The extract from the Journal of Discourses may startle some of our readers, but we would wish them to recollect that in this last dispensation God will send forth, by His servants, things new as well as old, until man is perfected in the truth.(2)

It may be well to mention here that the accounts of the address in the Journal of Discourses and in the Millenial Star are identical. In December, 1853, an unsigned article(3) entitled Gospel Mysteries

"Adam, the Father and God of the Human Family" appeared in the Millenial Star giving a lengthy treatment to the subject. It said in part:

> The above sentiment appeared in Star No. 48, a little to the surprise of some of its readers; and while the sentiment may have appeared blasphemous to the ignorant, it has no doubt given rise to some serious reflections with the more candid and comprehensive mind....
> Then Adam is really God! And why not? If there are Lords many and Gods may, as the Scriptures inform us, why > should not our Father Adam be one of them? Did he not prove himself as worthy of that high appellation as any other being that ever lived upon the Earth? Certainly he did, so far as history informs us, unless we can except the Son of God.(1)

(3)S. W. Richards was president of the British Mission at the time; he may well have been the unknown author.

Although the article acknowledges Adam as a god in the patriarchal sense, nowhere does it actually affirm that he is also the spiritual begetter of mankind. The tone and direction of the writing is well expressed in this excerpt:

> In the Patriarchal order of government, each and every ruler is independent in his sphere, his rule extending to those below, and not to those above him, in the same order. While the God of unnumbered worlds is acknowledged to be his God and Father, Adam still maintains his exalted position at the head of all those who are saved from among the whole family of man; and he will be God over all those who are made Gods from among men.... As the great Ehoheim is supreme and Almighty over all His children and kingdoms, so is Adam as great a ruler, or God, in his sphere, over his children, and the kingdom which they possess. The earth and all things upon it were created for Adam, and it was given to him of his Father to have dominion over it.(2) put upon Brigham Young's remarks concerning Adam, it is apparent that the doctrine was upsetting the theological equilibrium of some of the membership in England; that it was having a similar effect in America is also true. Under the caption, "Fear Bringeth Torment," the "Star" again made reference to Adam a week after the previous reference was published:

> It has been said that Adam is the God and Father of the human family, and persons are perhaps in fear and great trouble of mind, lest they have to acknowledge him as such in some future day. For our part we would much rather acknowledge Adam to be our Father, than hunt for another, and take up with the devil. . . . If these things have power to > disturb the pure mind, we apprehend that even greater troubles than these may arise before mankind learn all the particulars of Christ's incarnation--how and by whom he was begotten; the character of the relationships formed by that act; the number of wives and children he had, and all other circumstances with which he was connected, and by which he was tried and tempted in all things like unto man. Whatever may prove to be the facts in the case, it certainly would exhibit a great degree of weakness on the part of any one to indulge in fears and anxieties about that which he has no power to control. Facts still remain facts, whether kept or revealed.(1)

The true meaning of President Young's discourse was an unsettled question; nothing that may be taken as official was forthcoming from one of the general authorities of the Church until some six months later when Franklin D. Richards, a member of the quorum of the twelve apostles, arrived in England to assume leadership of the British Mission.

The London general conference.--In June, 1854, a special conference was held in London attended by most of those involved in the missionary labors of the Church in Great Britain. The primary purpose of the conference was apparently to introduce the new mission president to those with whom he would be working, and to bid the retiring president, S. W. Richards, farewell. In the course of the conference, various missionaries were called upon to report the status of their individual "conference districts." Three of the reports made reference to Adam:

> The [the members of his conference district] are lacking faith on one principle--the last "cat that was let out of the bag." Polygamy has been got over pretty well, that cloud has vanished away, but they are troubled about Adam being our Father and God. There is a very intelligent person investigating our principles, and who has been a great help to the Saints; he has all the works, and can get along very well with everything else but the last 'cat,"

(1) Ibid., (Dec. 17, 1853), pp. 824-26 > and as soon as he can see that clearly, he will become a "Mormon." I instructed him to write to Liverpool upon it.(1)

> Relative to the principles recently revealed, we have not the slightest difficulty. If Adam's being our Father and God cannot be proved by the Bible, it is all right.(2)
> I believe in the principle of obedience; and if * am told that Adam is our Father and our God, I just believe it.(3)

In a memorial to S. W. Richards, who had been president of the British Mission from May, 1852 to June, 1854, the missionaries paid him tribute, saying in part:

> It has fallen to your lot to preside over the British Saints at a time and under circumstances unparalleled in the history of the work in this country. The introduction of the law of Celestial Marriage, which, in its operations, will revolutionize all our political, religious, and domestic arrangements; and the announcement of the position which Adam, our great progenitor, occupies among the Gods; have marked your Presidency as a special epoch in the history of the British Mission.(4)

Apostle Franklin D. Richards, who was presiding over this special three day conference, took up the question of Adam before the assembled missionaries. He told them that they should not let the new doctrine trouble them, and he released them from "all obligation to prove this from the old Scriptures, for you cannot, if you try.":

> If, as Elder Caffall remarked, there are those who are waiting at the door of the Church for this objection to be removed, tell such the Prophet and Apostle Brigham has declared it, and that it is the word of the Lord. That is vastly stronger proof than christendom can give for much that they profess to believe. Tell the Saints that if this > stone does not seem to fit into the great building of their faith just now, to roll it aside. You can help them to roll it aside out of their way, so that they will not stumble against it while at their daily duties, and it will be but a very short time till they will find a place in their building where no other stone will fit, then it will be on hand all right, and will come into its place in the building without the sound of hammer or chisel.(1)

The foregoing comment by Franklin D. Richards indicates his loyalty to President Young, and his acceptance of the doctrine taught by him. But again, in just what sense he accepted or understood the doctrine he does not say. However, the failure on the part of F. D. Richards and the missionaries to qualify their acceptance of Adam as "our Father and God," in some way, is noteworthy.

Less than a year later, the Millenial Star carried an article entitled, "priesthood from Adam to Joseph." It was unsigned but since Franklin D. Richards was the editor of the "Star" at the time, it is quite likely that he wrote or at least approved it for publication. It said in part:

> If the Lord God has ever withdrawn from Father Adam the authority here bestowed upon him [Genesis 1:28], He has not seen fit to make it known to the world. While there is nothing to refute, the whole tenor of revelation substantiates, the supposition, that Adam has continued to bear rule over the earth, and control the destinies of his never-ending posterity. From the time he received his commission in the Garden of Eden, he has been labouring diligently to fulfill the instructions there given him by The Lord God concerning his dominions, and to bring them under subjection to his will. This will be fully accomplished when every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess that he is the God of the whole earth. Then will the words of the Prophet Brigham, when speaking of Adam, be fully realized--"He is our Father and our God, and the only God with whom WE have to do." Having now observed how Adam the first man became a God, we inquire why may not millions of his children receive the same Godlike knowledge

> Thus we have a succession of Gods from Adam down to Christ and his Apostles at least. All men being in the image of their father Adam, even as he is in the image of his father, and possessing a similar knowledge of good and evil, when they receive the keys and powers of the same Priesthood, and by their works attain to its blessings, they will, like Adam, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, bear rule and dominion over their own posterity, and have power to redeem, purify, and exalt them, also, to like power and glory.(1)

In 1856 there appeared in a Latter-day Saint hymnal, published in England, a new song written by John Jaques, an English convert to the Church. The hymn was entitled, "We Believe In Our God." The first two stanzas are as follows:

> We believe in our God, the great Prince of His race,
> The Archangel Michael, the Ancient of Days,
> Our own Father Adam, earth's Lord, as is plain,
> Who'll counsel and fight for his children again.
> We believe in His Son, Jesus Christ, who, in love
> To his brethren and sisters, came down from above
> To die to redeem them from death, and to teach
> To mortals and spirits the Gospel we preach.(2)

It was not included in later editions of the hymnal in England. Nor was the writer able to find it in any hymnal published by the Church in America. Franklin D. Richards must have approved it for publication, since he edited the particular edition in which it is found.

There is a lapse of a number of years between the earliest available reactions to Brigham Young's April, 1852, address and those which next appear. Seemingly, nothing more, dealing specifically with it, was published until after President Young's death in 1877.

CHAPTER III

THE LATER TEACHINGS OF BRIGHAM YOUNG

As was stated in the introduction, the views of Brigham Young concerning the identity of Adam will be treated almost entirely in the chronological order in which he expressed them.

In discussing the process by which men gain their exaltation, President Young said in part:

> But I expect, if I am faithful with yourselves, that I shall see the time with yourselves that we shall know how to prepare to organize an earth like this--know how to people that earth, how to redeem it, how to sanctify it, and how to glorify it, with those who live upon it who hearken to our counsels.

The Father and the Son have attained to this point already; I am on the way, and so are you, and every faithful servant of God.

After men have got their exaltation and their crowns--have become Gods, even the sons of God--are made Kings of kings and Lords of lords, they have the power then of propagating their species in spirit; and that is the first of their operations with regard to organizing a world. Power is then given to them to organize the elements, and then commence the organization of tabernacles. How can they do it? Have they to go to that earth? Yes, an Adam will have to go there, and he cannot do without Eve; he must have Eve to commence the work of generation, and they will go into the garden, and continue to eat and drink of the fruits of the corporeal world, until this grosser matter is diffused sufficiently through their celestial bodies to enable them, according to established laws, to produce mortal tabernacles for their spiritual children.

This is a key for you. The faithful will become Gods, even the Sons of God; but this does not overthrow the idea that we have a father. Adam is my father; (this I will explain to you at some future time;) but it does not prove that he is not my father, if I become a god: it does not prove that I have not a father.(1)

These remarks, and those made by him in his April address, are quite alike. In April he had stated that Adam and Eve became mortal by partaking of the forbidden fruit "and therefore their offspring were mortal." This parallels the above quote to the effect that those exalted become "an Adam" or "Eve" to a new world whereon they partake of "corporeal" food until "their celestial bodies" can produce "mortal tabernacles for their spiritual children." His qualification that godhood does not obviate the fact that he has a father and that "Adam is my father" bears comparison with his earlier reference to Adam as "our Father and our God." Also of interest in his use of the expression "celestial bodies." He had used the same term in April in stating that Adam and Eve entered the garden with "celestial bodies." Twenty-four years later, in 1876, he is quoted as saying that the "spirits were begotten, born and educated in the celestial world, and were brought forth by celestial bodies."(2)

In advancing the celestial body concept for Adam and Eve, Brigham Young was obliged to reject the "dust of the earth" account of Adam's creation as given in Genesis. This he did as follows:

You believe Adam was made of the dust of this earth. This

(2)J. of D., XVIII (Oct., 1876), 258.

> I do not believe though it is supposed that it is so written in the Bible; but it is not, to my understanding. You can write that information to the States, if you please --that I have publicly declared that I do not believe that portion of the Bible as the Christian world do. I never did, and I never want to. What is the reason I do not? Because I have come to understanding, and banished from my mind all the baby stories my mother taught me when I was a child.(1)

In describing Adam as the "chief Manager" in the creation of this earth he said:

> He was the person who brought the animals and the seed from other planets to this world, and brought a wife with him and stayed here. You may read and believe what you please as to what is found written in the Bible. Adam was made from the dust of an earth, but not from the dust of this earth. He was made as you and I are made, and no person was ever made upon any other principle.(2)

Apparently President Young means that Adam was provided with a physical body through the normal pattern of conception, embryonic development, and birth, since that is method by which "you and I are made."

God the Father of Our Spirits and Bodies.--This was the caption of one of the most far-reaching sermons in implication ever given by Brigham Young. Speaking of the "Father of our spirits" he says:

> He has been earthly, and is of precisely the same species of being that we are. Whether Adam is the personage that we should consider our heavenly Father, or not, is considerable of a mystery to a good many. I do not care for one moment how that is; it is no matter whether we are to consider Him our God, or whether his Father, or His Grandfather,(3) for in either case we are one species--of one family--and Jesus Christ is also of our species.

> Now to the facts in the case; all the difference between Jesus Christ and any other man that ever lived on the earth, from the days of Adam until now, is simply this, the Father, after he had once been in the flesh, and lived as we live, obtained His exaltation, attained to thrones, gained the ascendancy over principalities and powers, and had the knowledge and power to create--to bring forth and organize the elements upon natural principles. This He did after His ascension, or His glory, or His eternity, and was actually classed with the Gods, with the beings who create, with those who have kept the celestial law while in the flesh, and again obtained their bodies. Then He was prepared to commence the work of creation, as the Scriptures teach--It is all here in the Bible; I am not telling you a word but what is contained in that book.
> Things were first created spiritually; the Father actually begat the spirits, and they were brought forth and lived with Him. Then He commenced the work of creating earthly tabernacles, precisely as He had been created in this flesh Himself, by partaking of the course [sic] material that was organized and composed this earth, until His system was charged with it, consequently the tabernacles of His children were organized from the coarse materials of this earth.
> When the time came that His first-born, the Saviour, should come into the world and take a tabernacle, the Father came Himself and favoured that spirit with a tabernacle instead of letting any other man do it. The Saviour was begotten by the Father of His Spirit, by the same being who is the Father of our spirits, and that is all the organic difference between Jesus Christ and you and me.

Whether you receive these things or not, I tell you them in simplicity. I lay them before you like a child, because the are perfectly simple. If you see and understand these things, it will be by the Spirit of God; you will receive them by no other spirit, no matter whether they are told to you like the thunderings of the Almighty, or by simple conversation; if you enjoy the spirit of the Lord, it will tell you whether they are right or not.(1)

Heber C. Kimball, a counselor to President Young in the first presidency, made direct reference to the above address the same day it was given:

(1)Ibid., IV (Feb., 1857), 217.

Brother Brigham has talked here to-day so plain a little child cannot misunderstand it. He spoke about our Father and our God; I believe what he has said; in fact I know it. Often when I have been in the presence of brother Brigham, we would feel such a buoyant spirit that when we began to talk we could not express our feelings, and so, "Hallelujah," says Brigham, "Glory to God," say I. I feel it and I say it.

Some of the brethren kind of turn their noses on one side at me when I make such expressions, but they would not do it if they knew God. Such ones do not even know brothers Brigham and Heber; if they did they would not turn a wry face at us.(1)

Heber C. Kimball's remarks are not only indicative of his own views concerning God, but they also reveal something of a division of opinion, or at least of attitude, among the membership. That Brigham Young was also aware of this division will be shown further along in this study.

One month later to the day, President Young remarked: "Suppose that one of us had been Adam, and had peopled and filled the world with our children, they, although they might be great grandchildren & c. still, I say, had I been Adam, they would be my flesh, blood, and bones, and have the same kind of a spirit put into them that is in me."(2) He then goes on to say that "pertaining to the flesh" they would all be his children and be required to give an account of their lives to him. He repeats the thought that God "has had a body and been on an earth" saying that this would be necessary if God was to "judge men righteously." He suggests that, "If I can pass brother Joseph, I shall stand a good chance of passing Peter, Jesus, the Prophets, Moses, Abraham, and all back to Father Adam, and be pretty sure of receiving his approbation.(3)

A reaffirmation of his belief that Adam was "our God" was expressed by President Young in October of that year:

> Some have grumbled because I believe our God so near to us as Father Adam. There are many who know that doctrine to be true. Where was Michael in the creation of this earth? Did he have a mission to the earth? He did. Where was he? In the Grand Council, and performed the mission assigned him there. Now, if it should happen that we have to pay tribute to Father Adam, what a humiliating circumstance it would be! Just wait till you pass Joseph Smith; and after Joseph lets you pass him, you will find Peter; and after you pass the Apostles and many of the Prophets, you will find Abraham, and he will say, "I have the keys, and except you do thus and so, you cannot pass," and after awhile you come to Jesus; and when you at length meet Father Adam, how strange it will appear to your present notions. If we can pass Joseph and have him say, "Here, you have been faithful, good boys; I hold the keys of this dispensation; I will let you pass"; then we shall be very glad to see the white locks of Father Adam. But those are ideas which do not concern us at present, although it is written in the Bible-- "This is eternal life, to know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."(1)

We have already seen that Brigham Young believed that life was "transplanted" to this earth from other worlds and that man was the result of natural procreation. This thought is repeated by him:

> Here let me state to all philosophers of every class upon the earth, when [sic] you tell me that father Adam was made as we make adobies from the earth, you tell me what I deem an idle tale. When you tell me that the beasts of the field were produced in that manner, you are speaking idle words devoid of meaning. There is no such thing in all the eternities where the Gods dwell. Mankind are here because they are the offspring of parents who were first brought here from another planet, and power was given them to propagate their species, and they were commanded to multiply and replenish the earth.(2)

Further along in the course of this same address Brigham Young said: "Adam and Eve are the parents of all pertaining to the flesh and I would not say that they are not also the parents

President Young made this remark in addressing some words of consolation to the childless women of the Church:

> You will see the time when you will have millions of children around you. If you are faithful to your covenants, you will be mothers of nations. You will become Eves to earths like this; and when you have assisted in peopling one earth, there are millions of earths still in the course of creation.(2)

If he is using the term "Eve" in the same sense that he used it in his April, 1852, discourse, then these childless women would be resurrected "Eves" when becomming "Eves to earths like this." Therefore, their husbands would be resurrected "Adams" to those "millions of earths." Such an Adam could hardly be mortal; for the "Adam" of this earth fell for precisely the fact that his wife had become mortal, thus necessitating his own "fall."(3)

President Young made this statement in discussing the dissemination of the theological truth:

> How has it transpired that theological truth is thus so widely disseminated? It is because God was once known on the earth among his children of mankind, as we know one another.
> Adam was as conversant with his Father who placed him upon this earth as we are conversant with our earthly parents. The Father frequent came to visit his son Adam, and talked and walked with him; and the children of Adam were more or less acquainted with their Grandfather, and their children were more or less acquainted with their Great Grandfather; and the things that pertain to God and to heaven were as familiar among mankind, in the first ages of their existence on the earth, as these mountains are to our mountain boys. ...(4)

(3)2 Nephi 2:22-25. (4)ibid., IX (Jan., 1862), 148. Supra p. 20.

Here Brigham Young implicitly identifies Adam as the spiritual progenitor of his mortal offspring. More than that, he implies that Adam, like Christ, was spiritually and physically begotten by one Father, one God. For in describing that God as the "Grandfather" and "Great Grandfather" of Adam's children and grandchildren respectively, he must intend a physical relationship between that personage and his son Adam as well.(1) Latter-day Saint doctrine affirms that spirits do not beget offspring; therefore, Adam's Father could not be the spiritual "Great Grandfather" of Adam's progeny; but physically, he would be the "Great Grandfather" of Adam's mortal grandchildren. A purely spiritual interpretation would make the president's use of the terms "Grandfather" and "Great Grandfather" meaningless and misleading. The statement is an apparent allusion to his earlier remark: "Adam and Eve are the parents of all pertaining to the flesh, and I would not say that they are not also the parents of our spirits."

On January 8, 1865, President Young told an audience that should God appear without glory, they would not recognize him from any other man. And yet: "He is the Father of all, is above all, through all, and in you all; He knoweth all things pertaining to this earth, and he knows all things pertaining to millions of earths like this."(2) Likewise, if Christ should "veil His glory" he would appear as any other man. The President then asked his audience if they would accept Christ should he declare himself to them under those conditions. Continuing this line of thought Brigham Young again asked:

> And if you believed His words, would you not wonder exceedingly to hear that our Father and God is an organized being after the fashion of man's organization in every respect? Such, however, is the case.
> One of the prophets describes the Father of us all, saying, "I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool; his throne was like the fiery flame," etc. The prophet further says "thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him," etc. Again; "and, behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him." Now, who is this Ancient of days? You may answer this question at your pleasure, I have already told the people. But the Saviour would answer the question as to the appearance of the Father of us all, by saying, "Look at me, for I am the very express image of my Father."(1)

In citing both Daniel's vision of the Ancient of days,(2) and Jesus' characterization of his Father, as being descriptions of the "Father of us all," no other conclusion seems possible but that President Young has identified the Father and the Ancient of days as one and the same person. There is absolutely nothing in the way of a change in the continuity of thought or of subject matter anywhere in the entire address to give one a valid reason to believe otherwise. In Latter-day Saint theology the Ancient of days and Adam are but two names or titles for the same individual.(3) If Brigham Young did not intend for such an identification to be assumed, what possible reason did he have for using a well-know description of Adam, as he is to appear in the latter-days, to describe God the Father? If his actual meaning was devious and complex, the writer is unable to understand why, at a later point in the same discourse he remarked:

> It is easy to understand these principles when the mind is opened by the Spirit of the Almighty, as it is to understand one of the simple lessons in the child's first reader.
> Here are some of the twelve Apostles listening to what I have to say; they have heard me speak at length upon these doctrines, and they have been taught from time to time for years past. The speaker this morning possessed a sweet, loving spirit, and gave us a lovely discourse, but did not think of these things which have been told him time and time again. I would ehort my brethren to read the Scriptures, and seek earnestly for the Spirit of the Almighty to understand them; and this great subject, at which I have merely glanced, will appear to them in all its simplicity and grandeur.(1)

Another statement, not unlike the preceeding one, was made by President Young two years later on February 10, 1867, when, in speaking of the final gathering of Israel, he said:

> They will come up tribe by tribe, and the Ancient of Days, He who led Abraham, and talked to Noah, Enoch, Isaac, and Jacob, that very Being will come and judge the twelve tribes of Israel. He will say, "You rebelled, and you have been left to the mercies of the wicked."(2)

Just when the Ancient of days, Adam, is supposed to have "led Abraham and talked to...Isaac and Jacob" is not revealed by the speaker. There is no scriptural account of Adam having done so at any time. President Young's use of Daniel 7:9-14 as being descriptive of God the Father would provide a solution as to his meaning, since it would establish the Ancient of days, or Adam, as the one who "led Abraham," etc.(3)

There are two discourses in this period, both given in 1873, worthy of especial reference. The first of these is undoubtedly one of the most specific, plain spoken sermons on the identity of Adam ever given by President Young. It is the more important because it came in the twilight of his life. Speaking of the reticence of the membership of the Church to accept new truth he said:

> How pleased we would be to place these things before the people if they would receive them! How much unbelief exists in the minds of the Latter-Day Saints in regard to one particular doctrine which I revealed unto them, and which God revealed to me--namely that Adam is our father and God--I do not know, I do not inquire, I care nothing about it. Our Father Adam helped to make this earth, it was created expressly for him, and after it was made he and his companions came here. He brought one of his wives with him, and she was called Eve, because she was the first woman upon the earth. Our Father Adam is the man who stands at the gate and holds the keys of everlasting life and salvation to all his children who have or whoever will come upon the earth. I have been found fault with by the ministers of religion because I have said that they were ignorant. But I could not find any man on the earth who could tell me this, although it is one of the simplest things in the world, until I met and talked with Joseph Smith.(1)

In clarifying certain remarks made by his brother, Joseph Young, the President said:

My brother said that God is as we are. He did not mean those words to be literally understood. He meant simply, that in our organization we have all the properties in embryo in our bodies that our Father has in his, and that literally, morally, socially, by the spirit and by the flesh we are his children. Do you think that God, who holds the eternities in his hands and can do all things at his pleasure, is not capable of sending forth his own children, and forming this flesh for his own offspring? Where is the mystery in this? We say that Father Adam came here and helped to make the earth. Who is he? He is Michael, a great Prince, and it was said to him by Elohim, "Go ye and make an earth." What is the great mystery about it? He came and formed the earth. Geologists tell us that it was here millions of years ago. How do they know? They know nothing about it. But suppose it was here, what of it? Adam found it in a state of chaos, unorganized and incomplete.... Adam came here and got it up in shape that would suit him to commence business. What is the great mystery about it? None that I have seen. The mystery in this, as with miracles, or anything else, is only to those who are ignorant. Father Adam came here, and then they brought his wife. "Well," says one, "why was Adam called Adam?" He was the first man on the earth, and its framer and maker. he, with the help of his brethren, brought it into existence. Then he said, "I want my children who are in the spirit world to come and live here. I once dwelt upon an earth something like this, in a mortal state. I was faithful, I received my crown and exaltation. I have the privilege of extending my work, and to its increase there will be no end. I want my children that were born to me in the spirit world to come here and take tabernacles of flesh that their spirits may have a house, a tabernacle or a dwelling place as mine has, and where is the mystery?

Now for mother Eve. The evil principle always has and always will exist. Well, a certain character came along, and said to Mother Eve, "The Lord has told you that you must not do so and so, for if you do you shall surely die. But I tell you that if you do not do this you will never know good from evil, your eyes will never be opened, and you may live on the earth forever and ever, and you will never know what the Gods know." The devil told the truth, what is the mystery about it? He is doing it today. He is telling one or two truths and mixing them with a thousand errors to get the people to swallow them. I do not blame Mother Eve, I would not have had her miss eating the forbidden fruit for anything in the world. I would not give a groat if I could not understand light from darkness.(1)

President Young adds that man must know good and evil as the Gods have learned it, and he speaks of the reluctance of many people to accept the Gospel because of a prejudice which "debars them of that liberty I have in my heart." Of the sources of his knowledge he says:

I do not want to be found fault with, but if I am it is

(1) Ibid.

All the same to me. There is no mystery to me in what God has revealed to me, or in what I have learned, whether it has been through Joseph, an angel, the voice of the Spirit, the Holy Ghost or the Spirit of the Lord; no matter how I have learned a thing, if I understand it perfectly it is no mystery to me.(1)

This address has been quoted at length to establish the complete context of his remarks, and to better reveal the over-all pattern of Brigham Young's thinking, not only in relationship to Adam as a god, but also in regards to the fall of Adam from that divine status. In the mind of President Young, there was apparently nothing contradictory nor "mysterious" in his claim that two heavenly beings, endowed with the glory of the Gods, could, under certain circumstances, and for a pre-arranged purpose, assume an inferior, and in the eyes of many, and almost degraded position. It's as though he looked upon them as players in some great, and infinitely vital, stage production. Players who had assumed major "roles" for a time; roles which naturally cloaked their identities, but which in no way altered, or deprived them of those identities. Yet these roles, unlike those assumed in an actual play, were not sheer make-believe; they involved a definite sacrifice, a sacrifice made in behalf of those who had been "born" to Adam and Eve in the "spirit world." For President Young, it was perfectly simple; there was no "mystery" about it.

The second of the two discourses was given about three months later. In it is the suggestion of a plurality of wives for Adam, just as there was in President Young's discourse of April, 1852, in which he spoke of Eve as "one of his wives."(1):

> When Father Adam came to assist in organizing the earth out of the crude material that was found, an earth was made upon which the children of men could live. After the > earth was prepared Father Adam came and stayed here, and there was a woman brought to him. Now I am telling you something that many of you know, it has been told you, and the brethren and sisters should understand it. There was a certain woman brought to Father Adam whose name was Eve, because she was the first woman, and she was given to him to be his wife; I am not disposed to give any further knowledge concerning her at present. There is no doubt but that he left many companions. The great and glorious doctrine that pertains to this I have not time to dwell upon; neither should I at present if I had time. He understood this whole machinery or system before he came to this earth; and I hope my brethren and sisters will profit by what I have told them.(2)

It was in 1877 that President Brigham Young died. Although there is nothing pertinent in his public remarks of that year, there is one noteworthy reference to be found in the private journal of one of the members of the Church living at the time. His name is L. John Nuttall, and his account is in connection with the dedication of the St. George temple, the first temple to be completed by the Church subsequent to the expulsion of the saints from Nauvoo, Illinois in 1846. Nuttall speaks of meeting with President Young and other leaders of the Church in the President's winter home in St. George, Utah. The new temple, and the work performed therein, being uppermost in the minds of the assembled men, President Young narrated certain facts in connection with the introduction of the endowment ordinance by the Prophet Joseph Smith. Brigham

Young then went on to say:

In the creation the Gods entered into an agreement about forming this earth putting Michael or Adam upon it. these [sic] things of which I have been speaking are what are termed the mysteries of godliness but they will enable you to understand the expression of Jesus made while in Jerusalem. This is life eternal that they might know thee the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou has sent. We were once acquainted with the Gods & lived with them but we had the privilege of taking upon us flesh that the spirit might have a house to dwell in. We did so and forgot all and came into the world not recollecting anything of which we had previously learned. We have heard a great deal about Adam and Eve. how [sic] they were formed & c some think he was made like an adobie and the Lord breathed into him the breath of life. for we read "from dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return" [sic] Well he was made of the dust of the earth but not of this earth. he was made just the same way you and I are made but on another earth. Adam was an immortal being when he came. on this earth he had lived on an earth similar to ours [sic] he had received the Priesthood and the Keys thereof. and had been faithful in all things and gained his resurrection and his exaltation and was crowned with glory immortality and eternal lives and was numbered with the Gods for such he became through his faithfulness. and he had begotten all the spirits that was [sic] to come to this earth. and Eve our common Mother who is the mother of all living bore those spirits in the celestial world. and when this earth was organized by Elohim. Jehovah [sic] & Michael who is Adam our common Father. [sic] Adam & Eve had the privilege to continue the work of progression. consequently came to this earth and commenced the great work of forming tabernacles for those spirits to dwell in. and when Adam and those that assisted him had completed this Kingdom our earth he came to it. and slept and forgot all and became like an infant child. it is said by Moses the historian that the Lord caused a deep sleep to come upon Adam and took from his side a rib and formed the woman that Adam called Eve--this should be interpreted that the Man Adam like all other Men had the seed within him to propagate his species. but not the Woman. she conceives the seed but she does not produce it. consequently she was taken from the side or bowels of her father. this explains the mystery of Mose's dark saying in regard to Adam and Eve. Adam & Eve when placed on this earth were immortal beings with flesh. bones and sinues [sic]. but upon partaking of the fruits of the earth while in the garden and cultivating the ground their bodies became changed from immortal to mortal beings with blood coursing through their veins as the action of life. Adam was not under transgression until after he partook of the forbidden fruit this was necessary that they might be together that man might be. the woman > was found in transgression not the Man--[sic] Now in the law of Sacrifice we have the promise of a Savior and man had the privilege and showed for his obedience by offering of the first fruits of the earth and the firstlings of the flocks--this as showing that Jesus would come and shed his blood. [Four lines with nothing written on them]. Father Adam's oldest son (Jesus the Saviour) who is the heir of the family is Father Adam's first begotten in the spirit world. who [sic] according to the flesh is the only begotten as it is written. In his divinity he having gone back into the spirit World. and come in the spirit to Mary and she conceived for when Adam and Eve got through with their Work in this earth. they did not lay their bodies down in the dust, but returned to the spirit World from whence they came.

> I felt myself much blessed in being pereitted [sic] [permitted] to Associate with such men and hear such instructions as they savored of life to me.(1)

There is no legitimate reason to question the general accuracy of this account of Brigham Young's remarks as it appears in the Nuttall journal. The journal itself is a small one showing the wear of many years. The failure of Nuttall to properly punctuate, etc., may be due to an understandable haste on his part in making the entry at the time President Young was speaking. Yet, it is quite possible that the entry was made later, possibly from notes. Nuttall's personal comment at the conclusion of the entry seems to support this latter possibility since it appears to be an afterthought, or an impression entered in retrospect. As for Nuttall's integrity, the writer can think of no reasonable motive why he would deliberately write something in his private diary, one that has but recently come to public light, which was untrue! For morally, there doesn't seem to be the slightest blemish on Nuttall's character. He held the offices of bishop, stake president, and temple recorder. He acted as private secretary to President John Taylor (1879-1887) and President Wilford Woodruff (1887-1892). Andrew Jenson, an assistant Church Historian, wrote of him: "Elder Nuttall is one of the busiest men in the Church, and has discharged every duty imposed upon him with that zeal and fidelity which characterizes God's faithful servants."(1) Nuttall also held numerous public offices, including chief clerk of the state legislature, city recorder, etc. He occasionally acted as a clerk in the general conferences of the Church;(2) and in taking of formal notes was considered "extremely reliable." In fact, he was acting as a special secretary to President Young at the time the journal entry in question was made.

Then too, Nuttall quotes nothing as coming from Brigham Young that is contrary to what he had already publicly said. In comparing the Nuttall entry with the June, 1873, discourse, we are obliged to admit a definite similarity. The private remarks of President Young to other Church authorities, as Nuttall has recorded them, are, to be sure, somewhat in advance, as to particulars, of his public statements, but they are not out of harmony with them.

There is one thought expressed in the Nuttall journal which merits analysis. It is the explanation of how Adam, who in a state of mortality had many direct offspring, could still be the Father of Christ, who is spoken of as the "Only Begotten" Son of God. Brigham Young implies that Christ is the "only begotten" of Adam "in his divinity." In other words, when Adam begat physical offspring, he did so in a fallen state of mortality which precluded the transfer of "divinity" or immortality to that offspring. But in the case of the Savior, such a transfer of divinity could take place because Adam and Eve, without actually suffering a physical death, had "returned to the spirit world from whence the came" and reassumed their former glory and divinity.(1) Thus, Adam, having regained his divinity and immortality, could, in begetting Christ, declare him to be the "Only Begotten Son" of it.

Some two years later, under the dateline of Thursday, March 6, 1879, Nuttall made another reference to Brigham Young's teachings:

> Attended fast day Meeting [sic]. serveral [sic] spoke and the question as to Adam being our Father & God was presented. I explained this matter as I got it from Prest B [sic] Young and as I understand it--this question has been on the minds of serveral of the brethren since Bro. Wandel Mace spoke on it about a Month [sic] ago and gave a wrong impression [sic] I spoke to correct him & set the people right--which correction he accepted sic

A Few Conclusions

Having come to the end of the less ambiguous statements by Brigham Young concerning Adam, we now turn to the always dangerous, and equally thankless task of summarizing the evidence and drawing a few conclusions. This, before going on to Gospel Mysteries the views of Joseph Smith and other prominent leaders of the Church. At this point we are concerned only with the four basic questions relative to President Young's views.

Were Brigham Young's Remarks Misinterpreted?

The answer to this question would, of course, depend upon what he actually meant to say. Undoubtedly they have been misinterpreted by some persons; the very fact that there exists differences of opinion as to his meaning proves that, for certainly not all of these conflicting interpretations are correct. It is true that the original discourse of April 9, 1852, could be taken in more than one way; and if he had never mentioned the subject again his actual meaning would be a moot point. However, he did mention the subject again, many times. Therefore, the liklihood of misunderstanding him, in view of his subsequent statements through the years, becomes more remote. This is borne out in the comments of others, friends and enemies alike, giving expression to President Young's opinions, as, for instance, Nuttall did. The writer was unable to find any reprimand forthcoming from Brigham Young for ascribing such opinions to himself; the significance of this will be manifest presently.

But perhaps it was not so much a matter of misinterpretation as it was of opposition; sometimes opposition assumes the guise of misunderstanding. The concern expressed by the English missionaries in their special conference of 1853, the reassurances of Franklin D. Richards, and the editorials and articles in the Millenial Star defending the doctrine--all these indicate the recognition of an opposition of sorts. The members were puzzled, even alarmed by this shocking new concept. It was contrary to much that they had accepted as truth all their lives. And it was for that very reason that F. D. Richards had counseled the missionaries to help the membership "roll it aside" until it could be incorporated into their faith "without the sound of hammer of chisel."

That Brigham Young was aware of a certain amount of opposition to his ideas among the saints in Utah can be seen from such remarks as: "Some have grumbled because I believe our God so near to us as Father Adam."(1) On other occasions he is quoted as saying:

> I am hated for teaching the people the way of life and salvation--for teaching them principles that pertain to eternity, by which the Gods were and are, and by which they gain influence and power.(2)

> President Kimball remarked that he had been told that some did not believe all that he said, or all that I say. I care not one groat whether they believe all that I say or not,...if they believe what the Almighty says, [and build up the kingdom] that will content me....(3)

> How much unbelief exists in the mind of the Latter-Day Saints in regard to one particular doctrine which I revealed unto them, and which God revealed to me--namely that Adam is our father and God--I do not know, I do not inquire, I care nothing about it.(4)

Like Brigham Young, we "do not know" how much opposition his views met with indirectly or otherwise. Being president of the Church, it is doubtful that he had much, if any, given him publicly by the members themselves; nor would there be much liklihood of negative expressions finding there way into any of the Church publications. To be sure there was opposition to President Young and the Church as such by non-Mormons and bitter apostates; but this was of a rather general nature--an opposition to everything "Mormon."

However, according to T. B. H. Stenhouse(1) in his book, The Rocky Mountain Saints, there was one man who did publicly oppose Brigham Young in his views. That man was Orson Pratt, one of the more brilliant and erudite members of the quorum of the Twelve Apostles. Of him Stenhouse writes: "The mass of the Mormon people do not believe in the Adam-deity, but of them all, one only, Orson Pratt, has dared to make public protest against that doctrine."(2) Stenhouse goes on to say:

> Orson Pratt, for presuming to teach a deity contrary to Brigham's Adam, was for years upon the point of being severed from the Church; at last, ten years ago, he was tried for rebellion. On that occasion--the Author well remembers it--Orson Pratt showed a manliness and Christian determination of every soul that dared to think and love the God-given liberty of an untrammeled mind.... As the apostle stood in Brigham's little office, surrounded by the other apostles of his quorum, not a voice was heard in his support, not a word was whispered either to encourage him or relieve his racked and harrowed soul as he keenly realized the fact that he risked his apostleship and fellowship with the Church.

When he had expressed his thorough comprehension of the responsibility of his position, he told, in words of unmistakable earnestness, that when the teachings of the Bible, together with the revelations of the Prophet Joseph, came into collision with the teachings of Brigham Young, it was the decision of his soul that, whatever the cost might be, he "would cling to the former."(1)

(1)Stenhouse became involved with the apostate "godbeite" movement of 1868 and was excommunicated from the Church in the latter part of 1869. Both before and after his excommunication, he was a bitter enemy of B. Young. B. H. Roberts, A Comprehensive Historh of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, (Salt Lake City: Deseret News Press, 1930), V, 259-268.

In reply to this President Young is supposed to have "branded him with natural stubbornness and told him that he had always been ungovernable, and had given trouble to Joseph in his day." Finally, some thirty-six hours later, Pratt, to protect his family, and to avoid the stigma of an apostate, publicly confessed his error in opposing Brigham Young. Stenhouse adds:

Orson's submission was painful to his friends, but the thoughtful hoped for the growth and development of his soul outside the iron cast of infallible priesthood. From the hour of that trial he was silently accounted an "Apostate," and for years there was considered to be no temerity in "digging" at him from the pulpit. He was sent to Europe on mission, and treated with marked neglect by the ruling authorities--men far beneath him in moral and intellectual qualities. He bore it all in silence, and returned to Utah determined to stand by his convictions of truth against the Adam deity. His associate apostles tried to shake him out of their Quorum, and in their councils they did everything to bring his "stubbornness" to the point of disfellowship. After two weeks of nightly councils--while Brigham and his twelve were journeying through the norther settlements in > 1868--the point was reached. Orson would not, however, recant, even before the threat of disfellowship, but Brigham, at the last moment, entered the council, and arrested the final action. Brigham needs Orson's sermons on the Book of Mormon, Polygamy, and the prophecies, and he fears his influence with the people.(2)

The writer has been unable to verify the Stenhouse account to any appreciable degree, especially in the particulars which are probably very much colored by the prejudices of Stenhouse himself. And in view of the fact that Stenhouse had been excommunicated from the Church some four years prior to the publishing of The Rocky Mountain Saints, and that he was an open and admitted enemy of Brigham Young, his narrative must be viewed with dubiety.

In his thesis, "Orson Pratt, Early Mormon Leader," T. Edgar Lyon expresses the opinion that the "Adam-God" theory of Brigham Young probably played but a minor part in the controversy cited by Stenhouse:

> Pratt's stand was robbing the supreme God, not Adam, of Glory and Omnipotence. Most of the parts which he was persuaded to repudiate have not any bearing whatever upon God, but deal with pre-existence doctrines of men, plants and animals.(1)

His point is well taken; and in view of his more detailed study of Orson Pratt's life and teachings, the writer is inclined to accept it. Still, there were some views of Orson Pratt which, to be maintained, necessitated the rejection of Brigham young's explanation of the pre-existent character of Adam, and the Gospel Mysteries manner of origination of his physical body. This will be shown hereafter.

The Stenhouse reference to an interview between Orson Pratt and Brigham Young in the latter's "little office" is apparently based on fact. According to S. B. Richards, former president of the British Mission, such a meeting did take place on at least one occasion. However, the Richard's statement gives the year as 1856, and not 1863 as Stenhouse indicates. Possibly more than one such meeting took place; in which event there is no real conflict between the two accounts. In the diary of Samuel Whitney Richards we read:

> Tues. March 11, 1856
> Evening with the Regency in the Upper Room of the President's Office, examing [sic] the spelling for the New Books in the D. Alphabet. A very serious conversation took place between Prest. b. young and Orson Pratt upon doctrine. O. P. was directly opposed to the Prest views and very freely expressed his entire disbelief in them after being told by the President that things were so and so in the name of the Lord. He was firm in the Position that the Prest's word in the name of the Lord, was not the word of the lord to him. The Prest did not believe that Orson would ever be Adam, to learn by experience the facts discussed, but every other person in the room would if they lived faithful. J. W. Grant, Amasa Lyman, W. Woodruff, Albert Carrington, Elias Smith, & Robt L. Campbell were present.(1)

The context of the above entry gives us good reason to believe that doctrine in some way concerning Adam was the cause of the disagreement between President Young and Orson Pratt. The president's remark that he did not believe "that Orson would ever be Adam," obviously "an Adam," would indicate this.

President Young's public comments on the views of Pratt would indicate that more than one "very serious conversation" was held between the two men. In 1857, Brigham Young denounced the view of "our philosopher brother" to the effect that God's "fountain of spirit" fills universal space, and that "every particle of it is a Holy Spirit, and that that Spirit is all powerful and all wise, full of intelligence and possessing all the attributes of all the Gods in eternity".(2) President Young added that Orson Hyde had advanced much the same theory to Joseph Smith and that the Prophet had told him: "it is not true." The president then went on to reprimand the absent Pratt rather severely:

> With all the knowledge and wisdom that are combined in the person of brother Orson Pratt, still he does not yet know enough to keep his foot out of it, but drowns himself in his own philosophy, everytime that he undertakes to treat upon the principles that he does not understand. When he was about to leave here for his present mission [Pratt had been sent to Washington D. C. to publish The Seer], he made a solemn promise that he would not meddle with principles which he did not fully understand, but would confine himself to the first principles of the doctrine of salvation, such as were preached by brother Joseph Smith and the Apostles. But the first thing that we see in his writings, he is dabbling with things that he does not understand; his vain philosophy is no criterion or guide for the Saints in doctrine.(1)

In this same discourse, President young spoke of the future time when the Saints would "have the privilege of commencing the work that Adam commenced on this earth" and of being 'an Adam on earth."

In 1860, Orson Pratt did make a public recantation of certain of his views. This quote is from an account revised by him and the "council":

> At the time I expressed these views, I did most sincerely believe that they were in accordance with the word of God. I did most sincerely suppose that I was justifying the truth. But I have since learned from my brethren, that some of the doctrines I had advanced in the "Seer," at Washington were incorrect. Naturally being of a stubborn disposition and having a kind of self will about me; and moreover supposing really and sincerely that I did understand what true doctrine was in relation to those points, I did not feel to yield to the judgement of my brethren, but believed they were in error.(2)

He further says that none have the right to go contrary to the views of the "living oracles," and that God requires the Saints to sustain all of the authorities in their various callings. Pratt's closing thought reveals something of the tremdous effort his renunciation had required:

> I do not know that I shall be able to carry out these views; but these are my present determinations. I pray that I may have the grace and strength to perform this. I feel exceedingly weak in regard to these matters.(1)

Under the published account of Orson Pratt' recantation is a statement by the First Presidency in which they cite some of Pratt's ideas considered by them to be false or questionable. Among those delineated we find:

> With regard to the quotations and comments in the Seer as to Adam's having been formed "out of the ground," and "from the dust of the ground," & c., it is deemed wisest to let that subject remain without further explanation at present, for it is written that we are to receive "line upon line," according to our faith and capacities, and the circumstances attending our progress.(2)

Why the First Presidency made the above statement appears obvious in the light of President Young's belief that God "created man, as we create our children; for there is no other process of creation in heaven, on the earth, in the earth, or under the earth, or in all the eternities, that is, that were, or that ever will be."(3)

Five years later, Orson Pratt was again under fire from the president of the Church:

> We have persons in this Church who have preached and published doctrines on the subject of Deity which are not true. Elder Orson Pratt has written extensively on the doctrines. of this church, and upon this particular doctrine. When he writes and speaks upon subjects with which he is acquainted and understands, he is a very sound reasoner; but when he > has written upon matters of which he knows nothing--his own philosophy, which I call vain philosophy--he is wild, uncertain and contradictory. In all my public ministration as a minister of truth, I have never yet been under the necessity of preaching, believing or practicing doctrines that are not fully and clearly set forth in the Old and New Testaments, Book of Doctrine and Covenants and the Book of Mormon.(1)

The same issue of the Deseret News from which the above quotation was taken also carried a lengthy statement, signed by the First Presidency and the quorum of the twelve apostles, reproving Orson Pratt for, among other things, publishing a book, Joseph Smith the Prophet, in England. They declared it to be full of errors, saying that Pratt had not informed them of his intentions before publishing it. They then quoted from various other writings of Pratt branding them undoctrinal. Among the many things which they said, we find this:

> We do not wish incorrect and unsound doctrines to be handed down to posterity under the sanctions of great names, to be received and valued by future generations as authentic and reliable, creating labor and difficulties for our successors to perform and contend with, which we ought not to transmit to them. The interests of posterity are, to a certain extent, in our hands. Errors in history and in doctrine, if left uncorrected by us who are conversant with the events, and who are in a position to judge of the truth or falsity of the doctrines, would go to our children as though we had sanctioned and endorsed them. such a construction could very easily be put upon our silence respecting them, and would tend to perplex and mislead posterity, and make the labor of correction an exceedingly difficulty one for them. We know what sanctity there is always attached to the writings of men who have passed away, expecially to the writings of Apostles, when none of their contemporaries are left, and we, therefore, feel the necessity of being watchful upon these points. Personal feelings and friendships and associations ought to sink into comparitive insignificance, and have no weight in view of consequences so momentus to the people and kingdom of God as these.(2)

The article requoted the statement of the First Presidency in regards to Adam being made of "the dust of the earth" exactly as it had appeared in the Deseret News five years peviously.(1) The Seer, the "Great First Cause," and certain articles by Orson Pratt on the Holy Spirit were disowned by the Church. All doctrinal ideas were to be submitted to the First Presidency before being published, or the loss of Priesthood might possibly follow; for only one man was authorized to receive revelation for the Church--Brigham Young. Orson Pratt accepted the decision of the authorities and asked the people to destroy his question-aboe writings as suggested by the First Presidency.(2)

Was Brigham Young Misquoted?

It is the writer's opinion that the answer to this question is a categorical no. There is not the slightest evidence from Brigham Young, or any other source, that either his original remarks on April 9, 1852, or any of his subsequent statements were ever misquoted in the official publications of the Church.

The Orson Pratt affair makes it eminently clear that President Young was very much concerned that nothing which he considered to be incorrect doctrine should be promulgated by any of the Church authorities. Nor was Orson Pratt the only one whose "errors" were attacked; there were others also:

> We have foolish Elders, and I have had to contend, time after time, against their foolish doctrines. One of our > most intelligent Apostles in one of his discourses left the people entirely in the dark with regard to Jacob and Esau, and he never understood the difference between fore-knowledge and fore-ordination. Fore-knowledge and fore-ordination are two distince principles. And again, I have had to > contend against what is called the "baby resurrection" doctrine, which, as has been taught and indulged by some, is one of the most absurd doctrines that can be thought of. Having had these foolish doctrines to combat, I am not willing that the idea should possess your minds that the body is neither here nor there, and that the work of salvation is entirely spiritual.(1)

In the light of Brigham Young's attitude toward the errors of others, and in view of the division created by his remarks concerning Adam, it would be stretching one's credulity to the breaking point to believe that he would have remained silent had he been misquoted. To the contrary, we could expect him to be rather watchful of the manner in which his addresses were published in the official organs of the Church. That he was, may be gleaned from these comments by him concerning his discourses:

> I say now, when they are copied and approved by me they are as good Scripture as is couched in this Bible, and if you want to read revelation, read the sayings of him who knows the mind of God, without any special command to one man to go here, and to another to go yonder, or to do this or that, or to go an settle here or there.(2)

> I have never yet preached a sermon and sent it out to the children of man, that they may not call it scripture. Let me have the privilege of correcting a sermon, and it is as good as they deserve. The people have the oracles of God continually.... Let this go to the people with "Thus saith the Lord", and if they do not obey it, you will see the chastening hand of the Lord upon them.(3)

President Young did not hesitate to cite what he considered to be the false ideas of Orson Pratt by chapter and to the misquoting of his addresses, Brigham Young would surely have referred to those misquotations at sometime or other--he never did. The attitude of the president and his associates concerning doctrinal errors has been previously quoted.(1) Briefly, they affirmed that they "did not wish incorrect and unsound doctrines to be handed down to posterity under the sanction of great names.... Errors in history and in doctrine, if left uncorrected by us...would go to our children as though we had sanctioned and endorsed them. Such a construction could very easily be put upon our silence respecting them...we, therefore, feel the necessity of being watchful upon these points." The complete absence of any real evidence to the contrary obliges the writer to conclude that Brigham Young has not been misquoted in the official publications of the Church.

What Was the Source of Brigham Young's Views?

The two quotations on page forty-six, along with others, make it evident from his own remarks that President Young sincerely believed that he was receiving revelation for the Church:

> If we do not speak to you by the Spirit of revelation and the power of God, we do not magnify our calling. I think that I tell you the words of the Lord Almighty every-time I rise here to speak to you. I may blunder in the use of the English language; but suppose I should use language that would grate on the ears of some of the learned, what of that? God can understand it, and so could you, if you had the Spirit of the Lord.... If I do not speak here by the power of God, if it is not revelation to you everytime I speak to you here, I do not magnify my calling.(2)

(1) Supra, p. 45

(2) J. of D., op. cit., IX, 140-41.

> I wish to ask you a question: Do this people know whether they have received any revelation since the death of Joseph, as a people? I can tell you that you receive them continually.
> If it was necessary to write them, we would write all the time. We would rather the people, however, would live so as to have revelations for themselves, and then do the work we are called to do: that is enough for us. Can any of you think of any revelations you have received that are not written? You can.(1)
> It has been observed that the people want revelation. This is a revelation; and were it written, it would then be a written revelation, as truly as the revelations which are contained in the book of Doctrine and Covenants. I could give you a revelation upon the subject of paying your tithing and building a temple to the name of the Lord; for the light is in me.(2)

In a sense, there were two sources for the revelations which Brigham Young claimed to receive; one of these was the Prophet Joseph Smith, the martyred first president of the Church. The year Brigham Young died he said:

> From the first time I saw the Prophet Joseph I never lost a word that came from him concerning the kingdom. And this is the key of knowledge that I have to-day, that I did hearken to the words of Joseph, and treasured them up in my heart, laid them away, asking my Father in the name of his Son Jesus to bring them to my mind when needed. I treasured up the things of God, and this is the key that I hold to-day. I was anxious to learn from Joseph and the spirit of God.(3)

On the same occasion he said that he had taught many things not found in any of the standard works of the Church but that when he had spoken "by the power of God and the Holy Ghost, it is truth, it is scripture, and I have no fears but that it will agree with all that has been revealed in every particular." Twenty years earlier, President Young told an audience: "What I have received from the Lord, I have received by Joseph Smith: he was the instrument made use of. If I drop him, I must drop these principles: they have not been revealed, declared, or explained by any other man since the days of the Apostles."(1)

The second source of Brigham Young's revelations is, of course, God himself. That is likewise manifest in the foregoing quotations from his addresses. In so far as the source of his views on Adam are concerned, it might be argued that these also came from the same two sources: Joseph Smith, and God. At least it was to these sources that Brigham Young ascribed his knowledge of the subject. And that he felt that he had revealed more than had previously been known, information that went beyond what was then understood regarding Adam, can also be gathered from various statements on his part of which the following is an example:

> And I will say, as I have said before, if guilt before my God and my brethren rests upon me in the least, it is in this one thing, that I have revealed too much concerning God and his Kingdom, and the designs of our Father in heaven. If my skirts are stained in the least with wrong, it is because I have been too free in telling who God is, how he lives, the nature of his providences and designs in creating the work, in bringing the human family on the earth, his designs concerning them, etc. If I had, like Paul, said--"But if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant," perhaps it would have been better for the people.(2)

In spite of the above sentiment by him in 1860, he continued to discuss "who God is" from time to time for the rest of his life.

(1)J. of D., VI, 279. The "principles" to which he referred to are those involved in the doctrine of eternal marriage.

(2)Deseret News, June 27, 1860.

Perhaps the one best statement by Brigham Young indicating the dual source of his views was made by him in 1873. It has been previously quoted at length in this thesis.(1) In it he says: "How much unbelief exists in the minds of the Latter-Day Saints in regard to one particular doctrine which I revealed unto them and which God revealed to me--namely that Adam is our father and God--I do not know, I do not inquire, I care nothing about it." He goes on to speak of Adam coming to this earth with "one of his wives" and of Adam's pre-eminence over his children, etc., after which he says: "I could not find any man on the earth who could tell me this, although it is one of the simplest things in the world, until I met and talked with Joseph Smith." It is doubtful if we could prove objectively and conclusively, to the satisfaction of all, where Brigham Young obtained his views regarding Adam. T. B. H. Stenhouse said that he got them from Heber C. Kimball, an extremely questionable, and in some respects, even ludicrous suggestion. Others have offered other possibilities, equally lacking verification. The writer does not pretend to know. All that can be said is that Brigham Young claims Joseph Smith and God, as his revelators. If one is inclined to accept the word of President Young, then the problem is solved. If, on the other hand, one is inclined to doubt his claims, a search for an answer to the problem must be made elsewhere. The results will probably be disappointing.

What Did Brigham Young Believe?

Before summarizing the beliefs of Brigham Young, as the writer sees them, it will be well to cover a few preliminary, but important details. First, it should be recognized that the innermost workings of a man's mind are, to a degree, sacrosanct; being so, they are largely hidden from the probing eyes (and theses) of others unless the man himself chooses to reveal them. Because of this, we must assume, though sometimes erroneously, that a man believes what he most clearly and most often says. The writer has done this in the case of Brigham Young. Not because it is the simplest way to handle the matter, but because the writer believes that it is the only way to do so. To attempt to deal with President Young's statements subjectively, using a certain amount of long-distance psychoanalysis in an effort to discover what he really meant to say, would not only be foolhardy for one who is sometimes none too certain what he himself means to say, but would be a violation of the accepted procedures involved in a study of this kind. The more subjective one becomes, the more precarious and indefensible are the conclusions arrived at. The writer has attempted to be as objective as possible.

In an effort to gain the immediate proximity of the truth, certain arbitrary rules of procedure were set up to guide the writing of this thesis.(1) They should be referred to again at this time, since the conclusions arrived at by the writer are based upon their application.

In the introduction, the writer said that he had attempted to select that material which was the most pertinent and the least ambiguous, this has been done. However, it may be argued that many so-called "ambiguous statements" are not as ambiguous as the writer has claimed; and that, consequently, only one side of the story has been told. Therefore, it is deemed proper to quote a few representative remarks by Brigham Young illustrative of the ambiguity which has made their value, in so far as this study is concerned, debatable. For example; "we should do all we can to reclaim the lost sons and daughters of Adam and Eve, and bring them back to be saved in the presence of our father and God."(1) So far as identities are concerned, the statement reveals nothing conclusively. Another example:

> Do you not all know that you are the sons and daughters of the Almighty? If you do not I will inform you this morning that there is not a man or woman on the earth that is not a son or daughter of Adam and Eve. We all belong to the races which have sprung from father Adam and mother Eve; and every son and daughter of Adam and Eve is a son > and daughter of that God we serve, who organized this earth and millions of others, and who holds them in existence by law.(2)

Brigham Young does not actually say that Adam and the "Almighty" are one and the same, but neither does he say they are not; we are left in doubt. The following is an example of many of Brigham Young's statements which tell us what God did, but not who he is:

(1)J. of D., op. cit., VIII, 175 (2)Ibid., XIV, 111.

> He is our Father; he is our God, the Father of our spirits; he is the framer of our bodies, and set the machine in successful operation to bring forth these tabernacles....(1)

In what sense is God 'the framer of our bodies'? How did He 'set the machine in successful operation'? Herewith is an example of the type of statement which can lead to fruitless controversy over the meaning of terms:

> God notices this world. He organized it, and brought forth the inhabitants upon it. We are his children, literally, spiritually, naturally, and in every respect.(2)

What does he mean by "literally, spiritually, naturally"? The failure to relate them to something more concrete leaves them open to as many definitions as there are people to define them.

Another confusing practice sometimes indulged in by Brigham Young and others is that of using names and titles in a rather loose fashion, as in this quotation: "We obey the Lord, Him who is called Jehovah, the Great I Am, I am a man of war, Eloheim, etc. We are under many obligations to obey Him."(3)

And again: "He is the Father, God, Savior, Maker, Preserver, and Redeemer of man."(4) Both statements refer to God the Father, as the overall context of the sermon shows, and yet if taken literally, they might be interpreted as speaking of Christ; since such titles as Jehova, Savior, Redeemer, I Am, etc., are usually associated with him in Latter-day Saint writings. The writer feels that this seemingly indiscriminate use of the names, titles, and epithets ascribed to various divine beings

(1) Ibid., XIII, 250. (2) Ibid., XIV, 136.
(3) Ibid., XII, 99. (4) Ibid., III, 259-60.

is a major cause of the differences of opinion as to Brigham Young's true beliefs concerning Adam. President Young always makes it clear that he is speaking of God as such; but we do not always know with certainty which particular God, if any, he has in mind; hence, the confusion over identities. For unless a definite distinction is made between what may be termed the principle of Godhood (which seemingly includes not only the laws and powers by which godhood is gained and maintained, but also the aggregate of those individuals abiding that principle) and the particular being who has become associated with that principle through the acquisition of Godhood, the identification of any given personality becomes virtually impossible. A differentiation between one particular God, and all the other Gods who combine with him to make up the "one God" in principle, is essential.

Gospel Mysteries

There are many instances where Brigham Young speaks of Adam on the one hand, and God on the other; as, for instance, when he said: "We believe that he made Adam after his own image and likeness, as Moses testifies....our God possesses a body and parts, and was heard by Adam and Eve 'walking in the garden in the cool of the day.'"(1) And:

> The world may in vain ask the question, "Who are we?" But the Gospel tells us that we are the sons and daughters of that God whom we serve. Some say, "We are the children of Adam and Eve." So we are, and they are the children of our Heavenly Father. We are all the children of Adam and Eve, and they and we are the offspring of Him who dwells in the heavens, the highest Intelligence that dwells anywhere that we have knowledge of.(2)

(1)Ibid., X, 230-231. (2)Ibid., XIII, 311.

These quotations bring us to grips with the apparent contradiction in his statements; for how can he claim that Adam is "our Father and our God, and the only God with whom We have to do" at one time, and yet assert that Adam and Eve heard "our God" walking in the garden, and that they are the "children of our Heavenly Father," at other times? We must either assume that he has contradicted himself, or that he has not. If he has, then one or the other, if not both, of his statements must be discarded as being false. If, however, he as not contradicted himself, then we are faced with the task of harmonizing seemingly opposing views. Basing the decision on an application of the rules of procedure previously set up, the writer has accepted the second hypothesis as being the more likely-- the contradiction is more apparent than real. The general concept of Latter-day Saint cosmology, seems to support this decision.

Brigham Young, like the church today, was polytheistic in his beliefs. He recognized not only three Gods pertaining to this earth(1)--the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost--but an endless line of Gods pertaining to other worlds and universes as well:

> Refuse evil, choose good, hate iniquity, love truth. all this our fathers have done before us; I do not particularly mean father Adam, or his father; I do not particularly mean Abraham, or Moses, the prophets, or apostles, but I mean our fathers who have been exalted for millions of years previous to Adam's time. They have all > passed through the same ordeals we are now passing through, and have searched all things, even to the depths of hell.(1)

He also believed that these Gods were of one patriarchal lineage, or "species", as he expresses it here: "Whether Adam is the personage that we should consider our heavenly Father, or not, is considerable of a mystery to a good many. I do not care for one moment how that is; it is no matter whether we are to consider Him our God, or whether His Father, or His Grandfather, for in either case we are one species--of one family--and Jesus Christ is also of our species."(2) Thus Brigham Young implies that to recognize one, is to recognize all; but even so, he makes it clear in other statements that Gospel Mysteries there is but "one God to us,"(3) and he is "our Father who made us; for he is the only wise God, and to him we owe allegiance; to him we owe our lives. He has brought us forth and taught us all we know. We are not indebted to any other power or God for all our great blessings."(4)

An article in the Millenial Star. probably written by S. W. Richards, the British Mission president at the time, gives a rather lucid picture of the relationship of the gods to one another and to their own offspring(5); it merits comparison with these statements by Brigham Young on the same topic:

> Then will they become gods, even the sons of God; then will they become eternal fathers, eternal mothers, eternal sons and eternal daughters; being eternal in their organization, they go from glory to glory, from power to

> The kingdoms he possesses and rules over are his own progeny. Every man who is faithful and gets a salvation and glory, and becomes a King of kings and Lord of lords, or a Father of fathers, it will be by the increase of his own progeny. Our Father and God rules over his own children. Wherever there is a God in all the eternities possessing a kingdom and glory and power it is by means of his own progeny.(2)

These statements should also be compared with Brigham Young's concept of the modus operandi of godhood as expressed by him and quoted on page eighteen.

Therefore, when Brigham Young says that both Adam and Eve, and all the rest of mankind, are the children of the "highest Intelligence that dwells anywhere that we have knowledge of," it is the writer's opinion that he is speaking in terms of an ultimate God, or an ultimate source, to which 'our fathers who have been exalted for millions of years" owe their rule and existence; and by which the present race of man on this earth has also come into being as children--by virtue of the patriarchal relationship of the "species"--of that "highest Intelligence."(4) Again, this differentiation between the principle of godhood and the individual personages comprising and subscribing to that principle will, the writer feels, resolve the seeming conflict in President Young's pronouncements concerning Adam.

A careful, detached study of his available statements, as found in the official publications of the Church, will admit of no other conclusion than that the identification of Adam with God the Father by President Brigham Young is an irrefutable fact. While there are a great many of his expressions which may appear to contradict this, they fail to reveal his views on this particular subject with the clarity, objectivity, and absence of equivocation which would permit them equal weight with his other pronouncements. At best, it may be said that they becloud his more direct statements; but in all honesty, it must be admitted that they fail to actually deny them. We cannot ignore or subvert those of his ideas which were expressed in undeniably specific terms, in order to justify and sustain uncertain interpretations of his intent in general ones. The evidence upon which the writer has based his conclusions is twofold: external and internal. This division is for convenience in presenting the material, and is admittedly an arbitrary one.

1. The complete absence of denials, retractions, or corrected versions by Brigham Young of the April 9, 1852, address, as well as of his subsequent discourses on the subject, in the light of his expressed attitude toward the dissemination of incorrect doctrine.

2. The absence of evidence, from Brigham Young or any other source, to support the possibility of his having been misquoted in the official Church organs.

3. The absence of any statement on the part of Brigham young suggesting that he had been misunderstood in his views, in light of his remarks to the effect that he had been doubted and disbelieved in them.

4. President Young's specific statements which he apparently intended to be taken literally, since he failed to modify them, or to indicate that they should be understood any other way.

5. The statements of others, both before and after his death, indicating that he was taken literally by friends and enemies alike.

6. The consistent pattern of his views, not only in regards to Adam, but in the acquisition and nature of godhood in general.

The internal evidence deals exclusively with the comments of Brigham Young relative to Adam and man's ultimate possible destiny. In indicating what he felt Adam did, President Young revealed whom he thought Adam was; the activities of Adam and the identity of Adam being inseparably connected. A comparison of the April 9, 1852, sermon, or its summation on page eight, with the following summation of Brigham Young's major ideas as expressed in subsequent discourses is invited.(1)

Internal evidences.--

1. After the faithful have become gods, they will prepare both spiritual and physical bodies for their offspring; the latter being done by having them go to an earth and eat of "corporeal" food until it is "diffused sufficiently through their celestial bodies to enable them...to produce mortal tabernacles for their spiritual children.(2)

2. God the Father, after gaining his godhood and begetting his spiritual children, "commenced the work of creating earthly tabernacles..." by partaking of the earth's coarse material "until his system was charged with it;" thus His children's physical bodies were made of the earth's materials.(3)

3. Adam was a resurrected man who had obtained his exaltation, and who desired that those "children that were born to me in the spirit world" should have the opportunity to obtain physical bodies.(1)

4. Brigham Young's use of Daniel's description of the Ancient of days to describe "the Father of us all."(2)

5. Brigham Young's statement to the effect that "Some have grumbled because I believe our God to be so near to us as Father Adam."(3)

6. Adam was born as any other person is born, but on another world.(4)

7. Eve was one of Adam's wives.(5)

8. Brigham Young's claim that God had revealed to him that "Adam is our father and God."(6)

CHAPTER IV

THE VIEWS OF OTHERS

With the passing of Brigham Young, the subject of Adam's identity, beyond that revealed in the standard works of the church, was seldom discussed. To be sure, there were some who commented upon it; but for the most part their remarks tended to skirt the matter, only indirectly supporting or challenging the views of President Young. Indeed, it had been much the same before his death with both his opponents and supporters largely remaining silent, at least publicly. So silent were they, that with the exception of Heber C. Kimball, Orson Pratt, and a few others among the authorities, we are uncertain of their true convictions. However, with the turn of the century, the Church came under fire from various protestant ministers and "Mormon haters" for, among other things, its belief in the "Adam deity" of Brigham Young. It is then that we find such leaders as Charles W. Penrose speaking forth in defense of the official doctrine of the Church. With this much said, the views of others, who spoke with sufficient directness pro and con, will be considered. Again as in the case of Brigham Young, effort has been made to avoid the use of debatable and inconclusive material.

Heber C. Kimball.--Heber C. Kimball was a counselor to Brigham Young in the First Presidency and seems to have been very close to him, both in spirit and viewpoint.(1) In his book, The Rocky Mountain Saints, Stenhouse goes so far as to suggest that Kimball was the source of Brigham Young's ideas concerning Adam:

> Brother Heber had considerable pride in relating to his intimate friends that he was the source of Brigham's revelation on the "adam-deity." In a moment of reverie Heber said: "Brother Brigham, I have an idea that Adam is not only our father, but our God." That was enough: Brigham snapped at the novelty, and announced it with all the flourish of a new made revelation.(2)

Stenhouse could safely make such a claim; Heber C. Kimball was dead, and, therefore, unable refute what the writer believes to be a completely false accusation.

In 1852, Heber C. Kimball was quoted as saying:

> When we escape from this earth, we suppose we are going to heaven? Do you suppose that you are going to the earth that Adam came from? that Eloheim came from? where Jehovah the Lord came from? No. When you have learned to become obedient to the Father that dwells upon this earth, to the Father and God of the earth, and obedient to the messengers he sends--when you have done all that, remember you are not going to leave this earth. You will never leave it until you become qualified, and capable, and capacitated to become a father in an earth yourselves.(3)

Here again, is revealed the concept of a patriarchal lineage of gods presiding over the many worlds and universes of eternity.

(1) Supra, p. 22 Cf. J. of D., op. cit., V, 32.

(2) Stenhouse, op. cit., n. 561.

(3) J. of D., op. cit., I, 36.

The following statement by Heber C. Kimball provides another example of the confusion which can result from the loose application of the names, titles, and epithets ascribed to the Gods:

> We have been taught that our Father and God, from whom we spring, called and appointed his servants to go and organize an earth, and among the rest, he said to Adam, "You go along also and help all you can, you are going to inhabit it when it is organized, therefore go and assist in the good work." It reads in the Scriptures that the Lord did it, but the true rendering is, that the Almighty sent Jehovah and Michael to do the work.
> God the Father made Adam the Lord of this creation in the beginning.(1)

One might conclude from this that "our Father and God," the "Lord," the "Almighty," and "God the Father" are all one and the same; and yet he hasn't actually said so. President Kimball speaks of the people having been "taught" thus and so, adding that the "true rendering" is otherwise. Certainly "God the Father" and "Adam" are not meant to be synonymous in this comment, for two distinct beings are referred to. Yet from other remarks made by him, it is apparent that he did not always use the terms "our Father and God" and "God the Father" synonymously either. Speaking on one occasion he said: "we often sing, 'This earth was once a garden place'(2) where God our Father dwelt, and took possession and a stand that mankind will take who attain to that honor."(3) Here he implies the identification of Adam with "God our Father," but not necessarily with "God the Father." This identification is also manifest in these statements by him:

> I have learned by experience that there is but one God that pertains to this people, and he is the God that pertains to this earth--the first man. That first man sent His own Son to redeem the world, to redeem His brethren; his life was taken, his blood shed, that our sins might be remitted. That Son called twelve men and ordained them to be Apostles, and when he departed, the keys of the kingdom were deposited with three of those Twelve, viz. Peter, James, and John.(1)

The following year, November 8, 1857, he said:

> Now, brethren, you have got a spirit in you, and that spirit was created and organized--was born and begotten by our Father and God before we ever took these bodies; and these bodies were formed by Him, and through Him, and of Him, just as much as the spirit was; for I will tell you He commenced that work, He commenced and brought forth tabernacles for those spirits to dwell in. I came through Him, both spirit and body. God made the elements that they are made of, just as much as he made anything.(2)

Such were the views of Heber c. Kimball as to Adam's identity; their similarity to those of President Young is manifest.

W. W. Phelps.--This early Church leader said nothing conclusive in any public addresses of which the writer is aware. However, the following extract from a poem entitled "The Spirit," which he wrote and recited at the thirty-fifth semi-annual conference of the Church in 1865, may be indicative of his views:

> O may the Saints be perfect
> As God our Father was,

When he got back to Eden
By her celestial laws.(3)

(3)Deseret News, Oct. 12, 1865. Infra, p. 91.

Eliza R. Snow.--Another who used the poetic medium to give expression to her feelings and beliefs was Eliza R. Snow, an outstanding early Mormon writer, and one of Joseph Smith's plural wives. There are two poems written by her which are of particular interest since they reveal her concept of Adam's position, and strongly suggest that she shared the views of President Young. Herewith is an extract from the first of these entitled, "To Mrs.--"

Adam, our father--Eve, our mother,
And Jesus Christ, our elder brother,
Are to my understanding shown:
My heart responds, they are my own.(1)

The second, "the Ultimatum of Human Life," reads:

Adam, your God, like you on earth, has been Subject to sorrow in a world of sin:
Through long gradation he arose to be Cloth'd with the Godhead's might and majesty.
And what to him in his probative sphere,
Whether a Bishop, Deacon, Priest, or Seer?
Whate'er his offices and callings were,
He magnified them with assiduous care:
By his obedience he obtain'd the place
Of God and Father of this human race.

Obedience will the same bright garland weave,
As it has done for your great Mother, Eve,
For all her daughters on the earth, who will
All my requirements sacredly fulfill.
And what to Eve, though in her mortal life,
She'd been the first, the tenth, or fortieth wife?
What did she care, when in her lowest state,
Whether by fools, consider'd small, or great?
'Twas all the same with her--she prov'd her worth--

She's now the Goddess and the Queen of Earth.

"Life's ultimatum, unto those that live
As saints of God, and all my pow'rs receive;
Is still the onward, upward course to tread--

To stand as Adam and as Eve, the head
Of an inheritance, a new-form'd earth,
And to their spirit-race, give mortal birth--
Give them experience in a world like this;
Then lead them forth to everlasting bliss,
Crown'd with salvation and eternal joy
Where full perfection dwells without alloy."(1)

The inference that the poetess regarded Adam and Eve as resurrected beings who had gained their exaltation and parented offspring prior to coming to this earth and "falling" is quite unmistakable. She will be referred to again.

Orson Pratt.-- The writings of Orson Pratt do not fully support the poetic claims of Eliza R. Snow, nor the expressions of Brigham Young and Heber C. Kimball. Pratt's difficulties with President young and others of the authorities have been previously discussed. Yet, it should be understood that Orson Pratt and Brigham Young were in agreement on many doctrinal items. Pratt, like President Young, believed that there have always been divine Fathers and Sons;(2) that there are countless millions of persons who will gain godhood, "each one being a personal God, as much so as the God of this creation,"(3) and that God was once mortal.(4) They were also united in the commonly accepted doctrine that spirits do not marry or beget children;(5) that those who gain exaltation will beget spiritual offspring and send them to other "mortal" worlds;(6) and that Adam and Eve were immortal beings having bodies of flesh and bones, prior to their fall.(1) As for Adam, who is identified as Michael, the Archangel in the Doctrine and Covenants, being a God, Pratt agrees that he now is, explaining: "Some angels are Gods, and still possess the lower office called angels. Adam is called an Archangel, yet he is a God."(2)

But there did exist definite differences of opinion between the two leaders, as we have seen,(3) which led to a doctrinal parting of the ways in certain areas. There were opinions expressed by Pratt which were incompatible with Brigham Young's views on Adam. For example, Pratt's belief, affirmed both before and after President Young's death that Adam was not "our God," but a pre-existent spirit child of that God;(4) that Adam was made literally from the dust of the ground;(5) and that Adam and Eve died, and were resurrected following the resurrection of Christ.(6) One idea which is apparently unique with Pratt regarding Adam and Eve, is his belief that they had the power to beget immortal offspring prior to their fall.(7)() In what sense he meant this is not made clear by him.

Miscellaneous comments.--Brigham Young's successor, John Taylor, has left no clear cut evidence as to his views one way or the other. He did refer to God as "our Father, and the organizer of these bodies,"(8) but in what sense He is the "organizer,"

President Taylor did not say. There are but a few comments on the subject to be found in the publications of the Church in the late 1870's and 1880's. Elder Erastus Snow, an apostle, spoke to the effect that Adam was born a son of God and not literally created as a thing apart from God.(1) This same viewpoint was expressed in a public lecture by Elder John H. Kelson some eight years later in England.(2) The Contributor, the forerunner of The Improvement Era, carried two articles of interest in this period. One, entitled "Our Father and God," by a J. F. Gibbs, expressed the idea that those who become gods are the ones "most entitled to furnish mortal bodies for their spiritual offspring."(3) The other, written by a Thomas W. Brookbank, commented: "Before Adam fell he was a resurrected man, that is, his physical body had been disorganized and then reorganized."(4) The Deseret News printed the full text of a lecture given by

Joseph E. Taylor in the Logan Temple in June, 1888. In this address, Taylor also affirmed that Adam was a resurrected man, and the Father of Christ. He used the april 9, 1852, discourse of Brigham Young, and the so-called "King Follett" funeral sermon given by Joseph Smith in April, 1844, in support of his contentions.(5) It is apparent from these and other sources that the problem of the origin of the immortal body of Adam continued to be a matter of much speculation. Later references will further substantiate this condition.

George Q. Cannon.--Apostle Cannon was editor of the Millennial Star in 1861 when it published a front page article entitled the "Origin of Man." The article quoted a series of statements by President Young, including some from his April 9, 1852 address, and a subsequent one given in August of that year.(1) It then went on to say:

> President Young, in the foregoing passages, while substantiating the fact of the union of man's preexisting spirit with a bodily product of the "dust of the ground," enters more particularly into the modus operandi of that union. He unmistakably declares man's origin to be altogether of a celestial character--that not only is his spirit of heavenly descent, but his organization too,--that the latter is not taken from the lower animals, but from the originally celestial body of the great Father of humanity.... Look on this picture--Man, the offspring of an ape! And on this--Man, the image of God, his Father!(2) Some twenty-eight years later, he told a general conference audience that: "There are two personages, the Father and the Son. God is the being who walked in the Garden of Eden, and who talked with the prophets. This revelation came to us in certainty."(3) With the passage of the years Elder Cannon tended to more or less avoid the issue, as is indicated by this comment before the first Sunday school convention of the Church:

> I was stopped yesterday afternoon by a young man, who wanted to know whether Adam was the Father of our Lord and Savior--whether he was the being we worshipped, etc. Now, we can get ourselves very easily puzzled, if we choose to do so, by speculating upon doctrines and principles of this > character. The Lord has said through His Prophet that there are two personages in the Godhead. That ought to be sufficient for us at the present time.... Concerning the doctrine in regard to Adam and the Savior, the Prophet Brigham young taught some things concerning that; but the First Presidency and the twelve do not think it wise to advocate these matters. It is sufficient to know we have a Father--God the eternal Father, who reveals Himself by His Holy Spirit unto those who seek Him; and that Jesus Christ is His Son, our Redeemer, the Savior of the world.(1)

Wilford Woodruff.--The fourth president of the Church, Wilford Woodruff, gave similar advice to the membership when he spoke before the general conference of April, 1895. Judging from the preceding statement of George Q. Cannon, made three years later, not everyone heeded this admonition of President Woodruff:

> How much longer I shall talk to this people I do not know; but I want to say this to all Israel: Cease troubling yourselves about who God is; who Adam is, who Christ is, who Jehovah is. For heaven's sake, let these things alone. Why trouble yourselves about these things? God has revealed Himself, and when the 121st section of the Doctrine and Covenants is fulfilled, whether there be one God or many gods they will be revealed to the children of men....God is God. Christ is Christ. The Holy Ghost is the Holy Ghost. That should be enough for you and me to know. If we want to know anymore, wait till we get where God is in person. I say this because we are troubled every little while with inquiries from Elders anxious to know who God is, who Christ is, who Adam is. I say to the Elders of Israel, stop this....We have had letter after letter from Elders abroad wanting to know concerning these things. Adam is the first man. He was placed in the garden of Eden, and is our great progenitor. God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, are the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. That should be sufficient for us to know.(2)

Neither the Cannon statement, nor that made by President Woodruff is an actual refutation of anyone's opinions as to Adam's identity; both are primarily concerned with putting and end to further speculation on the matter. In that regards, what was not said appears to be perhaps more significant than what was said; later statements by certain Church leaders are far more definite as to what is and what is not doctrinal.

"Lucifer's Lantern."--In a notoriously anti-Mormon publication, Zion-Lucifer's Lantern, edited by A. T. Schroeder, there appeared an attack on the Church typical of that period:

finds further manifestations in it conception of heaven. If I can get any intelligent idea of the after life of mormons by this study of their inane sermons it is something like this: There are two resurrection one of the spirit, the other of the flesh [This is an error, for the Church teaches that the spirit never dies]. after the second resurrection the spirit and the body are united and transplanted to some place in the universe where they gather up enough raw planetary material out of which to "organize a world."

To this world the resurrected man now hies himself and by virtue of the "sealing power" of the Mormon priesthood all the women who have been "sealed" to him for eternity are attracted or transplanted to this same planet. here they setup housekeeping as Adam did in the Garden of Eden, and they will live eternal lives unless some walking or talking snake should put up a job on them as it did on Eve.

To this world of his own creation the man will be the God, even as Adam in Mormon theology is the God of this world. he is the King and his wives queens. Their kingdom will consist of their own "eternal progeny." Hence polygamy is essential because the extent and glory of every man's kingdom in the hereafter must depend on the number of wives sealed to him for eternity.

Such a conception of heaven is debasing because its highest pleasure consists only in the voluptuousness furnished by the Grecian hetaera, its only rewards are sensual, and the greatest means of exaltation is a fecundity that would make a jack-rabbit envious.(1)

Ministerial views.--There were those of the clergy who also found occasion to attack "Mormonism" for some of its tenets which they considered incompatible with the truth as they saw it. The Rev. W. W. Paden of the Presbyterian church was such a one. Under the caption, "Presbyterians and Mormon God," the Deseret News carried a front page account of an address by him in which he said:

> ...I have not looked into the Adam God idea very much and there is more in the writings of Apostle F. D. Richards on the matter than in any of the others I have seen, but I think the church is ashamed of the idea. I find nothing about it in Dr. Talmage's book, or in any of B. H. Roberts' later writings. He whom we worship is no magnified man and we who worship are not minimized Gods.(1)

The next day the Deseret News published a long editorial defending the Church's doctrine on God. The remarks of Rev. Paden were also referred to by B. H. Roberts, of the first council of Seventy, when he spoke before the Mutual Improvement Association conference a few days later.(2)

In 1907, the ministerial association prepared a review of a general statement of doctrine which the Church had published as a "Mormon Address to the World." The Salt Lake Herald quoted their review as follows:

> As to the doctrines of Deity, the "Address" declares: "We believe in the God-head, comprising the three individ> ual personages, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost." As this declaration stands here, it will not perhaps suggest Tritheism or Materialism to Christians unfamiliar with Mormon theological terms. But when the full doctrine of the Deity, as taught in Mormon congregations is known, it will at once be seen that no Christian can accept it. In fact, the Mormon Church teaches: that God the Father has a material body of flesh and bones; that Adam is the God of the human race; that this Adam-God was physically begotten by another God; that the Gods were once as we are > now; that there is a great multiplicity of Gods; that Jesus Christ was physically begotten by the Heavenly Father of Mary, His wife; that, as we have a Heavenly Father, so also we have a Heavenly Mother; that Jesus Himself was married, and was probably a polygamist--at least so it has been printed in their publications and taught among their people; and that the Holy Spirit is of material substance, capable of actual transmission from one person to another.(1)

The ministerial association went on to quote from various Church works and sermons, among them the "Adam-God" sermon of Brigham Young, The Seer, etc. B. H. Roberts, again speaking in the annual M. I. A. conference of that year, denied their assertions relative to the identity of God, Christ's marriage, etc., stating that such were the views of individual men and not the official doctrines of the Church.

As late as 1929, Paden was still concerning himself with Adam and the Mormon church. Under a sub-heading entitled "Father Adam" he wrote:

> It was one of Brigham Young's teachings that "Adam is our father and our God, the only God with whom we have to do." For years I have imagined that the Mormon authorities were ashamed of this doctrine or, at least, were inclined to consider it as an outburst of Brighamism rather than an inspired tenet of Mormonism. I was, therefore, surprised to find the old hymn to Adam and Eve in the new hymnal. It is under the title Sons of Michael. If you knew the secrets of the Mormon temple you would know that at a certain point of [sic] the Mormon endowment service temple workers or officials representing Elohim and Jehovah enter the Creation Room with the Archangel Michael, and that, Michael being put to sleep, Elohim makes passes over him, > breathes upon him, and he wakens up as Adam. A little later a woman is made for him whom he calls Eve. In case your credentials will not get you through the temple, as is more than likely, you will find the light needed as regards the identification of Adam as Michael, in section 27 of the Doctrine and covenants, where Joseph the Seer declares that "Michael is Adam, the father of all, the prince of all, the Ancient of Days." Here are three stanzas from the Mormon hymn of praise and loyalty to Adam and Eve. Remember that Joseph the Prophet says, "Michael is Adam."

Sons of Michael, He approaches!
Rise; the Ancient Father greet;
Bow, ye thousands, low before Him;
Minister before His feet.

Mother of our generations,
Glorious by great Michael's side,
Take thy children's adoration;
Endless with thy Lord preside.

Raise a chorus, sons of Michael,
Like old Oceans' roaring swell,
Till the mighty acclamation
Thro' resounding space doth tell That the Ancient One doth reign
In His paradise again! (Hymn 334)(1)

This particular hymn is still to be found in the latest hymn books used by the Church. However, the writer does not recall hearing it; in fact, he was unaware of its existence until Paden referred to it. Paden concludes his article on "Mormonism" by predicting: "The church will shed or cease to magnify its polytheistic teachings and its peculiar conceptions of personality, and it will unload old Adam, whom it has accepted in times past as the God of the human race."(2)

B. H. Roberts.--Like Orson Pratt, B. H. Roberts was a proliffic writer and a brilliant thinker. His views on the identity and nature of the Gods are perhaps nowhere better expressed than in his book, Mormon Doctrine of Deity, a writing which came out of the Roberts-Van Der Donct discussions of 1902. In so far as Adam himself is concerned, Roberts has little, if anything, to say beyond that which is generally taught and understood in the Church. In his aforementioned book he does quote one of the most advanced of all of Brigham Young's sermons(1) with apparent tacit approval of its doctrines, although without comment.(2) He also acknowledges Adam as the "Grand Patriarch of our race" and the one who will eventually attain to the "goveronship" of this earth. Referring to Paden's idea that the Church was "ashamed" of Brigham Young's teachings he says:

> Some of the sectarian ministers are saying that we "Mormons" are ashamed of the doctrine announced by President Brigham Young to the effect that Adam will thus be the God of this world. No, friends, it is not that we are ashamed of that doctrine. If you see any change come over our countenances when this doctrine is named, it is surprise, astonishment, that any one at all capable of grasping the largeness and extent of the universe--the grandeur of existence and the possibilities in man for growth, for progress, should be so lean of intellect, should have such a paucity of understanding, as to call it in question at all. That is what our change of countenance means--not shame for the doctrine Brigham Young taught.(3)

More miscellaneous views.--The improvement Era carried the views of two Church writers who gave it as their opinion, based upon logic, that Adam was born of parents and not created in some independent manner. One of these writers was John Attenwall Wootton,(1) and the other, William Halls.(2) Thus the matter continued to provoke debate, prompting this reply from the editors of the Improvement Era to a question concerning it:

Priesthood Quorum's Table

> Origin of Man.--"In just what manner did the mortal bodies of Adam and Eve come into existence on this earth?" This question comes from several High Priest's quorums. Of course all are familiar with the statements in Genesis 1:26, 27; 2:7; also in the Book of Moses, Pearl of Great Price, 2:27; and in the Book of Abraham 5:7....
> These are the authentic statements of the scriptures, ancient and modern, and it is best to rest with these, until the Lord shall see fit to give more light on the subject. Whether the mortal bodies of man evolved in natural processes to present perfection, through the direction and power of God; whether the first parents of our generations, Adam and Eve, were transplanted from another sphere, with immortal tabernacles, which became corrupted through sin and the partaking of natural foods, in the process of time; whether they were born here in mortality, as other mortals have been, are questions not fully answered in the revealed word of God.(3)

Orson F. Whitney.--Another of the poets of the Church was Apostle Orson Fergusen Whitney. In his work Elias, An Epic of the Ages, which saw its first edition in 1904, he writes of the glory of Adam and speaks of those who are called to be the "Eve and Adam of some world":

> One are the human twain, as sheath and sword--
> Woman and man, the lady and the lord;
> Each pair the Eve and Adam of some world
> Perchance unborn, or into space unhurled.
> . . . . . .

Charles W. Penrose.--Prior to becoming an apostle in 1904, Charles W. Penrose was editor of the Deseret News. In that capacity he wrote an editorial, entitled "A Piece of Impertinence," dealing with the "unwarranted liberty" taken by the Lamoni Herald(2) in publishing a private letter he had written to a Mr. Anderson in reply to a query from him regarding Brigham Young's teachings as to Adam.(3) The editor then quoted the aforementioned letter as follows:

Salt Lake City, Utah
Feb. 17, 1900

"Mr. Quincy Anderson, Ozark, Mo.:

"Dear Sir--In reply to your letter of inquiry. I have to say that President Brigham Young, in the discourse of which you speak, did not say that 'the Virgin Mary was not overshadowed by the Holy Ghost.' He did not say that it was 'Adam.' He did not say that 'Adam was our only God.' What he did say, on this subject, was that Jesus was not 'begotten' by the Holy Ghost. He taught that Jesus was the 'first-begotten' of God in the spirit, and the 'only begotten' of God in the flesh. As to Adam, he taught that he was God in the sense of being at the head of the human family. That he was Michael, the Ancient of Days, and in the resurrection would be at the head. In that way the whole human family will be related to him as his children, and in the Patriarchal order he will be the personage with whom they will have to do, and the only one in that capacity. President young taught faith in that Eternal Being to whom Adam and all of his race should bow in humble reverence, who is our Eternal Father and the Father of our elder brother, Jesus

> "Editor, News."(1)

The editor's letter to Anderson is followed by a statement which says in part:

> Anyone who has carefully read the discourse...will perceive that our brief statement of its purport is correct, that there is nothing in one that is in conflict with the other; that we have neither "apologized for" nor disputed anything contained in that one sermon, which has been so much misunderstood and perverted by the enemies of our late venerable president. We are familiar with the doctrine he taught, and which he did not attempt fully to explain in the discourse which as been published. and it should be understood that the views entertained by that great leader and inspired servant of the Lord, were not expressed as principles to be accepted by mankind as essential to salvation. Like the Prophet Joseph Smith, his mind was enlightened as to many things which were beyond a common understanding, and the declaration which would bring upon him the opposition of the ignorant.
> ...There are men in the church who entertain ideas of a more advanced nature, some of which, although the may be expressed in public...are not put forth as binding upon any person....
> That which President Young put forth in the discourse referred to, is not preached either to the Latter-day Saints or to the world as part of the creed of the Church. In answering the letter of our correspondent we simply explained in private that which was asked in private, so that he might understand the tenor of President Young's views, and not with any intention of advocating or denying his doctrine, or of controverting anything that may have been said upon the subject by opponents of his utterances.(2)

There is a seeming inconsistency between the explanation of the "purport" of the discourse and the editor's assertion that what

Brigham Young was supposedly saying "is not preached either to the Latter-day Saints or to the world." If the Penrose analysis is correct, there is no reason why it should not be "preached," since it is no more than is accepted throughout the Church today and since the time of Joseph Smith. However, it is true that the accepted doctrine on Adam is not a part of the "creed" of the Church, for, formally speaking, it has none. This may well be what the editor had in mind.

(1) Ibid. (2) Ibid.

Two years later, in a lengthy article entitled "Our Father Adam," Penrose took up the question of Adam's identity because it had been "discussed in many circles recently." He wrote that the sermon in question had, through additions, mis-interpretations, etc., led to confusion and misunderstanding, and that: "The views then expressed were uttered in a single sermon, which created so much comment that the speaker did not afterwards enter into further details or explanations."(1) He explained the sermon this way:

> The substance of President Young's declaration was, that the person who was placed in the Garden of Eden and became the great progenitor of the human race, is "our Father and our God." He said further, "and is the only God with whom we have to do." Careful reading of the entire address will show that President Young comprehended much more on this subject than he then made known, and that he regarded our Father Adam as the being who will stand, in eternity, at the head of the human family as the great Patriarch and ruler over all his posterity, and the Parent with whom they will have personal association and inter-course, as the representation and embodiment to them of all that constitutes the individuality of the Godhead.(2)

gel, the Ancient of days, and to say that his "body was fashioned out of the earth," that he died, was resurrected, and is subject to "the great Elohim, the Eternal Father of us all." Why President Young said Adam was "our God" is explained by C. W. Penrose:

> It was on the principle of the patriarchal order, in which the father is the priest and chief of the family, and will hold that place to all eternity that President Young proclaimed the supremacy of that person who is our father and our God, because of our person relationship to him.... President young so taught the church.(1)

He cites statements by Brigham Young on the greatness of God which show that he "believed in a supreme...deity" who is to be obeyed by Adam and his posterity; the Church "honors Adam in his station, but it worships God the Eternal Father." [This is the fundamental attitude of the Church in 1953 also.] The editor speaks of "opponents" of the Church who are "very fond of quoting isolated passages" from the discourse in question, while ignoring the "hundreds of allusions" to that "Supreme Being" by President Young on other occasions. All this for the purpose of "ridiculing our religion" and "representing to the world that we worship a human being for God...." "The Church ...has never formulated or adopted any theory concerning the subject treated upon by President Young as to Adam." After becoming a member of the First Presidency in 1911, President

Penrose reaffirmed the inferiority in station of Adam to Jesus Christ, adding, "we do not worship Adam" but the Father.(2)

the very next year he again addressed himself to the subject, saying: "There still remains, I can tell by the letters I have alluded to, an idea among some of the people that Adam was and is the Almighty and Eternal God."(1) Once more he discussed the patriarchal rule of Adam over his earthly posterity, remarking; "Now because of that and some other little matters that might be mentioned, the notion has taken hold of some of our brethren that Adam is the being that we should worship."(2)

The problem of the identification of Elohim (the Father), Jehovah (Christ), and Michael (Adam), is taken up by President Penrose in order to "draw a clear distinction between these individuals."(3) In doing so, he emphatically declares Adam to be Michael only, not God the Father, the begettor of Jesus Christ. The address should be studied in its entirety since it gives an excellent statement of the present doctrine of the Church. It should suffice to say that this was not the last time President Penrose was obliged to discuss Adam's identity.

The First Presidency.--In the course of answering an inquiry about the origin of man--one which, like many others, was probably a reflection of the debate on so-called "Darwinism," then beginning to gain momentum--the then First Presidency, comprising President Joseph F. Smith and two counselors, John R. Winder and Anthon H. Lund, wrote what may be termed an official expression of the position which the Church took as to Adam:

> Adam, our great progenitor, "the first man," was, like Christ, a pre-existent spirit, and like Christ he took upon him an appropriate body, the body of a man, and so became a "living soul."(1)

Subsequently, the successor to Joseph F. Smith, Heber J. Grant, reiterated the same doctrine in 1925 when he had a portion of his predecessor's statement, including the above quote, printed verbatim in the Improvement Era over the signature of himself and his two counselors.(2)

President Smith and his counselors issued another official statement in 1912:

> Speculations as to the career of Adam before he came to the earth are of no real value. We learn by revelation that he was Michael, the Archangel, and that he stands at the head of his posterity on earth. (Doctrine and Covenants, Sect. 107:53-56). Dogmatic assertions do not take the place of revelation, and we should be satisfied with that which is accepted as doctrine, and not discuss matters that, after all disputes, are merely matters of theory.(3)

The above may well have been prompted by a letter written to the First Presidency by one of the Mission Presidents,

Samuel O. Bennion, inquiring for information relative to Brigham Young's "Adam-God" discourse. Because of the obvious importance of the First Presidency's reply in establishing official Church views, it is quoted in full:

> your question concerning Adam has not been answered before because of a pressure of important business. We now respond briefly, but, we hope, plainly. You speak of "the assertion made by Brigham Young that Jesus was begotten of the Father in the flesh by our father Adam, and that Adam is the father of Jesus Christ and not the Holy Ghost," and you say that "elders are challenged by certain

> If you will carefully examine the sermon to which you refer, in the Journal of Discourses, Vol. I, you will discover that, while President Young denied that Jesus was "begotten by the Holy Ghost," he did not affirm, in so many words, that "Adam is the father of Jesus Christ in the flesh." He said, "Jesus, our elder brother, was begotten in the flesh by the same character that was in the garden of Eden and who is our father in Heaven." Who is "our Father in Heaven"? Here is what President Young said about Him: "Our Father in heaven begat all the spirits that ever were or ever will be upon this earth and they were born spirits in the eternal world. Then the Lord by His power and wisdom organized the mortal tabernacles of man." Was He in the garden of Eden? Surely. He gave commandments to Adam and Eve; He was their Father in Heaven; they worshipped Him and taught their children after the fall to worship and obey Him in the name of the Son who was to come.
> But President Young went on to show that our father Adam --that is, our earthly father,--the progenitor of the race of man, stands at our head, being "Michael the archangel, the Ancient of Days," and that he was not fashioned from the earth like an adobe, but begotten by His Father in Heaven.
> Adam is called in the Bible "the son of God" (Luke 3: 38). It was our Father in Heaven who begat the spirit of Him who was the "Firstborn" of all the spirits that came to this earth and who was also His Father by the Virgin Mary, making Him "the Only Begotten in the flesh." Read Luke 1:26-35. Where is Jesus called the Only Begotten of the Holy Ghost? He is always singled out as "the Only Begotten of the Father." (John 14:3, 16, 18 etc.) The Holy Ghost came upon Mary, and her conception was under that influence, even the spirit of life; our Father in Heaven was the Father of the Son of Mary, to whom the Savior prayed, as did our earthly father Adam.

When President Young asked, "Who is the Father?", he was speaking of Adam as the father of our earthly bodies, who is at our head, as revealed in Doctrine and Covenants, Section 107, verses 53-56. In that sense he is one of the Gods referred to in numerous scriptures, and particularly by Christ (John 10:34-36). He is the great Patriarch, the Ancient of Days, who will stand in his place as "a prince over us forever", and with Whom we shall "have to do", as each family will have to do with its head, according to the Holy Patriarchal order. Our father Adam, perfected and glorified as a God, will be a being who will carry out the behest of the great Eloheim in relation to his posterity.

While, as Paul puts it, "There be Gods many and Lords many (whether in Heaven or in earth) to us there is but one God the Father, of whom are all things, and one Lord Jesus Christ by whom are all things." The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints worship Him and Him alone, who is the Father of Jesus Christ, whom he worshipped, whom Adam worshipped, and who is God the eternal Father of us all.(1)

The actual writing of the letter may have been done by C.W. Penrose, since it is very similar in tone, content, and style to his previously quoted statements. In 1916, the First Presidency and the quorum of the twelve apostles issued an official treatise on the Father and the Son which further clarifies the teachings of the Church regarding their identities.(2)

Seminary lectures.--In 1921, a series of lectures, given by various prominent speakers in the Church, were held at the Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. One of the topics, the fall of man, was discussed by John W. Witaker who advanced the opinion that Adam was a resurrected man:

> ...I am going to assume responsibility for making this statement, that man came here, was placed here as an immortal, glorified, resurrected being. I want to make myself clear, because these lectures are going to the brethren, and if they want to correct them they can.
> . . . . . .
> I believe it was that fruit that changed and modified Adam's resurrected body, and again made it subject to death. Is that clear? At least, I want you to get my idea....and may I say the Church does not teach this as doctrine. Many of the authorities do. Others teach that a body was prepared in some way for Adam and Eve.(1) Although Whitaker believed Adam to be a resurrected man, he admitted that Adam was not worshipped by the Church, nor presumably by himself, as God the Father. Apostle Melvin J. Ballard, who also spoke the same day, seemingly agreed with Whitaker, for he said: "what Brother Whitaker has said I agree with, with reference to his fall and man's coming here."(2) Ballard then suggested that Adam had two ways of regaining his lost immortality, one was by partaking of the fruit of the tree of life and so recovering "from the mortal condition apparently," and the other was through the atonement of Jesus Christ:

> Well, man has fallen. How can he get back? What is the antidote? The antidote was the tree of life, but he was driven out from it. Now what else? The antidote was the death of a God, and Jesus Christ was a God before he came into this world....(3)

Joseph Fielding Smith.--Perhaps no other living leader of the Church is so highly respected for his knowledge and understanding of its principles and doctrines as is Joseph Fielding Smith, president of the quorum of the twelve apostles, and a son of former President Joseph F. Smith. He does not subscribe to the views just quoted as to Adam being a resurrected man, nor to the modern concepts of biological evolution:

> Even in the Church there are a scattered few who are now advocating and contending that this earth was peopled with a race--perhaps many races--long before the days of Adam.(4) These men desire, of course, to square the teachings > in the Bible with the teachings of modern science and philosophy in regard to the age of the earth and life upon it. If you hear anyone talking this way, you may answer them by saing that the doctrine of "pre-Adamites" is not a doctrine of the Church, and is not advocated or countenanced in the Church. There is no warrant in the scripture, not an authentic word, to sustain it. But the revelations of the Lord reveal Adam as the "Ancient of days," Michael, the Archangel who is appointed to have jurisdiction through all time and eternity on this earth and to preside over it, under the direction of Jesus Christ. He is called by the Lord, the "first man of ALL men" upon the earth, and the Prophet Joseph Smith has said: "Commencing with Adam, who was the first man, who is spoken of in Daniel as being the 'Ancient of Days,' or in other words, the first and oldest of all." This is the doctrine which has been taught by authority in the Church regarding Adam.

> The Lord has not seen fit to tell us definitely just how Adam came for we are not ready to receive that truth. He did not come here a resurrected being to die again for we are taught most clearly that those who pass through the resurrection receive eternal life, and can die no more.... The time will come when we shall be informed all about Adam and the manner of creation for the Lord has promised that when he comes he will make all things known.(1)

John A. Widtsoe.--The subject of Adam's identity has received attention at least three times within the last eighteen years in Church publications. The first of these was an article in the Church Section of the Deseret News entitled, "Adam, Our Patriarchal Father"(2) by S. D. Moore, Jr. The second, "What Are The Facts Concerning The So-Called Adam-God Theory?" by Apostle John A. Widtsoe, was first published in the Improvement Era in 1938, under the general heading "Evidences and Reconciliations."(3)

(3)The third article is considered in Chapter Five.

Elder Widtsoe labels the idea that Adam is God the Father, the parent of Jesus Christ, the "well-worn Adam-God myth," from which a "long series of absurd and false deductions have been made." Citing the April 9, 1852, discourse he says:

> Certain statements there made are confusing if read superficially, but very clear if read with their context. Enemies of President Brigham Young and of the Church have taken advantage of the opportunity and have used these statements repeatedly and widely to do injury to the reputation of > President Young and the Mormon people. An honest reading of this sermon and of other reported discourses of President Brigham Young proves that the great second President of the Church held no such views as have been put into his mouth in the form of the Adam-God myth.(1)

Elder Widtsoe explains that it was in the sense of patriarchal leadership over his own earthly progeny that Adam was declared to be "our Father and our God, and the only God with whom we have to do" by Brigham Young. "Nowhere is it suggested that Adam is God, the Father, whose child Adam himself was." As proof of this contention, the fact that the sermon itself makes a clear distinction between Elohim, Jehovah, and Michael is cited. Elder Widtsoe further points out that in another discourse, Adam is identified as a "son" of the Lord and thus: "Clearly President Young here distinguishes between God, the Father, and Adam, the first man." In refuting the notion that Adam was the father of Christ, he says:

> This deduction cannot be made fairly, in view of the context or of his other published utterances on the subject. Adam and Eve were not the only persons in the Garden of Eden, for "they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day" (Genesis 3:8). President Young undoubtedly had that person in mind, for he did not say Adam, but "our Father in heaven."

(1)John A. Widtsoe, Evidences and Reconciliations (Salt Lake City: Bookcraft, 1943), pp. 287-290.

> In many discourses, President Young refers to Jesus as the Only Begotten of the Father, which would not have been true, had Adam been the earthly father of Jesus.... It seems unnecessary to offer more evidence that Brigham Young held the accepted doctrine of the Church, that God, the Father, and not Adam, is the earthly Father of Jesus.
> In all this, President Young merely followed the established doctrine of the Church.(1)

> The perspective of years brings out the remarkable fact, that, though the enemies of the Latter-day Saints have had access, in printed form, to the hundreds of discourses of Brigham Young, only half a dozen statements have been useful to the calumniators of the founder of Utah. Of these, the sermon of April 9, 1852, which has been quoted most frequently, presents no errors of fact or doctrine, if read understandingly and honestly.(2)

With the words of John A. Widtsoe, we come to an end of the views of others from 1852 to the present time, as they have appeared in various Church and non-Church publications. There have been claims and counter-claims, theories, facts, and fictions, according to the position one assumes relative to the matter. There are, however, two points which emerge as irrefutable facts. The first is that the assertion made by some that the Church secretly acknowledges Adam as God the Father, the parent of Christ, is without any foundation in truth. This "myth" has been repeatedly exploded by one authority after another in the last fifty years.

The second, concomitant with the first, is that the actual doctrines of the Church regarding Adam have been set forth in equal clarity. He is identified as Michael, the Archangel, a spirit child of God who was "fore-ordained" to come to this earth and enter into a body of immortal flesh and bone which was, in some manner, prepared for him. He, together with his wife, Eve, fell into a mortal state. Thereafter they begat mortal children, obeyed the "Gospel laws" taught them by heavenly beings, and eventually died a physical death. Following the resurrection of christ, they were themselves resurrected as "celestial beings" and are now enthroned with all the majesty and honor due them as progenitors of the race on earth. In the future, Adam will return to the earth as the "Ancient of days," primarily to return all of the "keys" of authority held by God's servants in the different dispensations of this world to Jesus Christ, his superior. Upon the completion of his mission pertaining to this earth, Christ will, in turn, give an accounting of his "stewardship," and surrender all authority, to his Father and God. This is the substance of official Church doctrine regarding Adam.(1)

JOSEPH SMITH AND THE STANDARD WORKS

To complete the circle of this study, it will be necessary and desirable to review the beginnings of Latter-day Saint theology relative to Adam. This requires a consideration of the teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and of his associates prior to 1852, and a brief appraisal of the "standard works" of the Church: the Bible, the Book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants, and the Pearl of Great Price. There are three questions stemming from the early period of the Church for which answers are sought in this chapter: (1) what is to be found in the earliest publications of the Church concerning Adam's identity? (2) what did Joseph Smith teach? (3) what do the standard works as such reveal?

Early Publications of the Church

It was only about five months after the Church was organized on April 6, 1830, that the Prophet Joseph Smith received a revelation from God identifying Adam as Michael, the Archangel, the Ancient of days.(1) The passing years saw other revelations reiterate this doctrine, and it has never been challenged by any Church authority since the original announcement was made. The first newspaper published by the Church, the Evening and Morning Star, spoke of Adam as "the first member of the church of Christ on earth, and the first high priest after the order of the Son of God."(1) of the passing of Adam from this world it said: "Adam fell asleep in the Lord only fifty-seven years before Zion, even the city of Enoch, was taken up to the bosom of God...."(2) Later, when the Evening and Morning Star was published by Oliver Cowdery in Kirtland, Ohio, it asked: "who could the Ancient of days be but our father Adam? surely none other...."(3)

(1) Doctrine and Covenants (Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: Salt Lake City, 1928), sect. 27:11.

W. W. Phelps, who edited the paper in Missouri in 1832-1833, wrote two poems dealing with the fall of man and the lost glories of Eden and Adam-ondi-Ahman, the place where Adam met with his righteous posterity before his death. In the poem,() "Adam-ondi-Ahman," he implicitly identifies Christ as Jehovah, God's Old Testament name, in writing that prior to the spread of evil "men did live a holy race, and worship Jesus face to face, in Adam-ondi-Ahaman."(4) It might be well to compare this expression from Phelps with the previously quoted stanza from his later poem, "The Spirit."(5) The second of his two early poems, "O Adam," while perhaps indicating a certain interest in that first dispensation, possibly as a result of the publication of the writings of Moses and later, of Abraham, has no especial significance for this study.(1)

The Times and Seasons, then edited by Don Carlos Smith, suggests a literal interpretation of the "dust of the earth" origin of Adam's physical body in saying: "No language need by plainer than this, that is, that God before he framed this world, had laid the scheme of life and salvation, and before he ormed [sic] Adam's dust into man; he had predestined that the human family should be made children to himself, through Jesus Christ...."(2)

In an account of a series of lectures given in New York City by a "Mr. Adams" [probably George J.], a Mormon missionary, we read:

> On Sunday Mr. Adams lectured on the second coming of Christ, and gave much light on that subject, showing that it would take place before this present generation shall pass away. He proved also, if the Bible is true, that the second advent must take place before 1880. In the course of the lecture he threw much light() on the subject of the Ancient of Days," showing him not to be the Lord Jesus Christ, nor God the Father, but that he is old Father Adam, who shall sit as a great patriarch at the head of the whole family; when the second Adam, the Lord from heaven, the Son of Man shall come with the clouds, and come to the Ancient of Days, and the saints should take the kingdom, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, according to Daniel vii.(3)

This resume' was sent to the Times and Seasons as a letter to the editor by "A Lover of Truth." It is an important item since it is one of the few the writer found that definitely states who Adam was not, as well as who he was. It is also of interest because it implies that the idea of Adam being the Father or the Son may have even then been a matter of speculation.

Another positive assertion that Adam was not God was made by Orson Pratt when speaking before a conference of the church, attended by the Prophet Joseph, in 1843:

> But who is this Ancient of Days that is to act this glorious and conspicuous part in the grand councils of the last days, and finally deliver up the kingdom organized and prepared, into the hands of the Great King? It cannot be the Son of God, for he afterwards comes to the Ancient of Days. It cannot be the Father, for if the Saints were prepared to meet the Father and set [sic] in council with him, they would also be prepared to meet the Son, for the glory of the Father is equal to that of the Son....The Ancient of Days then, is ADAM--the great progenitor of the human race.(1)

This belief, expressed by Orson Pratt in his younger years, never changed, he taught this same doctrine all his life.

In 1841, Benjamin Winchester edited a short-lived periodical for the Church in Philadelphia called The Gospel Reflector. In an article on the future millennium, later reprinted in the Times and Seasons, he wrote: "Our first parents were placed in the metropolis of this lower creation" where they could "converse with God face to face as we converse with our friends," and where "the seraphs of heaven" were their companions. In answering this question: "how could Adam's fall affect the whole of creation?" he says that "Adam was placed in the garden or capital [sic] of the whole earth, and power was given unto him to sway his sceptre over all things upon earth; therefore, when he fell from the presence of the Lord, the whole of his dominions fell also."(1)

Parley Parker Pratt, the brother of Orson Pratt, was like his brother, an apostle. In 1845, he was acting editor of The Prophet, another Church periodical, published in New York City. As will be seen from his remarks in connection with the nature of family organization in the "celestial" kingdom, he shared his brother's views:

> His most gracious and venerable majesty, King Adam, with his royal consort, Queen Eve, will appear at the head of the whole great family of the redeemed, and will be crowned in their midst as a king and priest forever after the Son of God. They will then be arrayed in garments white as snow and will take their seats on the throne, in the midst of the paradise of God on the earth, to reign forever and ever....
> This venerable patriarch and sovereign will hold lawful jurisdiction over Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac,... Saints of all ages and dispensations, who will all reverence and obey him as their venerable father and lawful sovereign. ...Adam and all the patriarchs, kings, and prophets will be subject unto Christ, because he was in the eternal world, the first born of every creature, and the beginning of the creation of God. Hence in the patriarchal order, He rules by right of birth.(2)

With the Pratt item, we come to an end of the available, pertinent material to be found in the earliest publications of the Church. In view of the abundant later references to Adam, we might have expected more. And yet, there would be no valid reason for this; Adam was not then a subject of particular interest to the membership; then, as now, he was accepted as Michael, the Archangel, the Ancient of days, the "great progenitor of the human race," nothing more. Then too, even a cursory glance at the early history of Mormonism will reveal the simple fact that the Church was far too busy getting born, catching its breath, and struggling for survival in an alien world, to be much concerned with anything so admittedly academic as the identity of Adam.

What Did Joseph Smith Teach?

Aside from the standard works, the most fruitful sources of Joseph Smith's teachings are his own journal record known as the History of the Church, and the Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, edited by Joseph Fielding Smith. These combine to give a fairly complete account of his doctrines.

In describing a vision of the celestial kingdom given him in January, 1836, the Prophet told of "the blazing throne of God, whereon was seated the Father and the Son." "I saw Fathers Adam and Abraham, and my father and mother...."(1) Stenhouse renders the Prophet's vision somewhat differently:

"I saw father Adam, and Abraham, and Michael, and my father and mother, my brother Alvin, etc. etc."(2) The writer is unable to explain the disparagement between the two versions. But in a cynical comment on the vision, Stenhouse wrote:

> Joseph does not state how he came in possession of these names. He makes some blunder here or somewhere else, for > he evidently makes Adam and Michael two distinct persons, while in other revelations he sets forth that Adam is Michael. Such confusion does not tend to increase faith.(1)

Vilate M. Kimball, the wife of Heber C. Kimball, writes of another supposed vision given Joseph Smith in March, 1836, which the writer has been unable to substantiate. It is possible that she is confused on her date and is actually alluding to the January, 1836, vision. However, she tells of the Prophet being shown the twelve apostles arriving at "the gate of the celestial city":

> There Father Adam stood and opened the gate to them, and as they entered he embraced them one by one, and kissed them. He then led them to the throne of God, and then the Saviour embraced each of them in the presence of God. he saw that they all had beautiful heads of hair and all looked alike. The impression this vision left on Brother Joseph's mind was of so acute a nature, that he never could refrain from weeping while rehearsing it.(2)

In July, 1839, in response to numerous inquiries, the Prophet dealt with the subject of Priesthood. In doing so, he declared that the Priesthood was first given to Adam prior to this earth's creation, and that when the keys of the priesthood are "revealed from heaven, it is by Adam's authority."(3) The Prophet continues:

> Daniel in his seventh chapter speaks of the Ancient of Days; he means the oldest man, our Father Adam, Michael, he will call his children together and hold a council with them to prepare them for the coming of the Son of Man. He (Adam) is the father of the human family, and presides over the spirits of all men, and all that have had the keys must stand before him in this grand council. This may take > place before some of us leave this stage of action. The Son of Man stands before him, and there is given him glory and dominion. Adam delivers up his stewardship to Christ, that which was delivered to him as holding the keys of the universe, but retains his standing as head of the human family.

> ...Our Saviour speaks of children and says, Their angels always stand before my Father. The Father called all spirits before him at the creation of man, and organized them. he (Adam) is the head, and was told to multiply. The keys were first given to him, and by him to others. He will have to give an account of his stewardship, and they to him.
> . . . . . .
> Christ is the Great High Priest; Adam is next.(1)

In referring to the authorship of this doctrine, B. H. Roberts said:

> It is generally supposed that Brigham Young was the author of the doctrine which places Adam as the patriarchal head of the human race, and ascribes to him the dignity of future presidency over this earth and its inhabitants, when the work of redemption shall have been completed. Those who read the Prophet's treatise on the Priesthood in the text above will have their opinions corrected upon this subject; for clearly it is the word of the Lord through the Prophet Joseph Smith which established that doctrine. The utterances of President Brigham Young but repeat and expound the doctrine which the Prophet here sets forth.(2)

The Roberts statement is supported by Helen Mar Whitney, one of the Prophet's plural wives and a daughter of Vilate and Heber C. Kimball. In refuting the accusation of Joseph Smith III, the Prophet's son and the first president of the Reorganized Church, that Brigham Young was the author of the idea that "Adam is our Father and our God" she wrote:

> Brigham Young did not happen to be the author of this doctrine, and to prove the truth of my assertion, I will produce some of the Prophet's teachings, given May 16, 1841. These were written, together with other things, by his clerk, William Clayton, as they were spoken, and as I had the privilege of reading them when quite a young woman, I took the liberty of copying them. The copy I have retained....(1)

She then quotes the instructions of Joseph Smith on the Priesthood as found in the History of the Church under the date of July, 1839; her date, May 16, 1841, is apparently an error.(2) Commenting on Joseph Smith's teachings she writes:

> When the Saints first heard this doctrine advanced it looked strange and unnatural to them; it was strong meat and required a little time before it could be digested; but this was owing to the narrow, contracted ideas which had been handed down from generation to generation by our forefathers. We were like babes and had always been fed upon mild; but, as Jesus said, we have to be taught "here a little and there a little." When I was able to comprehend it, it appeared quite consistent. There is something in this doctrine that is very home like, grand and beautiful to reflect upon, and it is very simple and comprehensive. It teaches us that we are all the children of the same parent, whose love was so great that He gave His beloved Son, our Elder Brother, Jesus Christ, to redeem us from the fall. ...It teaches us that our Father was once mortal, and that if we remain faithful we will finally become as He is--immortal even if we must first pay the penalty for the transgression of our first parents.(3)

Helen Whitney also refers to other teachings by the Prophet, including his famous "King Follett" sermon of April, 1844, and his address on the plurality of the Gods given in June of that year. She denies that Brigham Young was the first to teach the plurality of the Gods and that the Father has a Father, etc. She quotes Joseph Smith, III, as saying: "Ponder it well. Are not those who teach and those who endorse Brigham Young's Adam God doctrine guilty of damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that brought them?" Her reply is:

"Now if he feels that it is his duty to proclaim against this people and deny the doctrines which his father felt authorized of God to teach as revelation from on high, I shall only regret it for his own and his father's sake."(1)

Joseph Smith composed another treatise on Priesthood which was read to the October, 1840, conference of the Church. In it he reiterates that Adam was "the first and father of all, not only by progeny, but the first to hold the spiritual blessings, to whom was made known the plan of ordinances for the salvation of his posterity unto the end, and to whom Christ was first revealed...."(2) In carrying out his work, God appointed

Adam to watch over the ordinances of salvation and to "reveal them from heaven to man, or to send angels to reveal them." The Prophet adds: "These [ministering] angels are under the direction of Michael or Adam, who acts under the direction of the Lord."(3) That there are those above Adam is further indicated by the Prophet's statements that: "God called Adam by His own voice," that Adam was given commandments by God, that it was Jehovah who endowed Adam with the powers and blessings which he enjoyed in the beginning, etc.(4)

King Follett discourse.--It is generally conceded that one of the greatest addresses, content-wise, ever given publicly by the Prophet Joseph Smith was the King Follett funeral sermon of April 7, 1844. Of it Elder John A. Widtsoe once said:

(3)Ibid., p. 208. (4)Ibid., pp. 208-210.

> That conference was remarkable in many ways. The Prophet's mind seemed to sweep, as it were, the horizons of eternity. He touched upon the things that are far beyond--the things of eternity. This sermon is known in our history as the "King Follett Sermon," a most remarkable document. I am glad that Elder Joseph Fielding Smith included it in his Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith.
> He taught revealing doctrines never clearly told before, since Christ, or perhaps since Adam, of the nature of God, our Heavenly Father, and of the destiny of man. The doctrine as there taught has been incorporated into our thinking and writing, in our books and sermons, without knowing exactly when or how it was first stated.(1)

It will not be possible to more than summarize a few of the Prophet's views therein as they relate, in a more or less general way, to this study. The Prophet said that: "God himself was once as we are now, and is an exalted man, and sits enthroned in yonder heavens"; and that "Adam was created in the very fashion, image and likeness of God, and received instruction from, and walked and talked and conversed with him, as one man talks and communes with another."(2) The Prophet denied that God was always God for "he was once a man like us; yea that God himself, the Father of us all, dwelt on an earth, the same as Jesus Christ did; and I will show it from the Bible."(3) Joseph Smith went on to say that God the Father once laid down his life and took it up again as Christ did, and that those who seek Godhood must learn how to do so "the same as all Gods have done before you." The Prophet relates the patriarchal concept of growing dominions through one's progeny to the Father and Son in these words:

(2) Teachings of Joseph Smith, op. cit., p. 345.

(3) Ibid., pp. 345-46.

> What did Jesus do? Why; I do the things I saw my Father do when worlds came rolling into existence. My Father worked out his kingdom with fear and trembling, and I must do the same; and when I get my kingdom, I shall present it to my Father, so that he may obtain kingdom upon kingdom, and it will exalt him in glory. He will then take a higher exaltation, and I will take his place, and thereby become exalted myself. So that Jesus treads in the tracks of his Father, and inherits what God did before; and God is thus glorified and exalted in the salvation and exaltation of all his children.(1)

Referring to the creation of this earth, he said: "The head

God called together the Gods and sat in grand council to bring forth the world. The grand councilors sat at the head in yonder heavens and contemplated the creation of the worlds which were created at the time."(2) And thus, "In the beginning, the head of the Gods called a council of the Gods; and they came together and concocted a plan to create the world and people it."(3)

Plurality of the Gods.--One of the Prophet's remarks in the King Follett sermon was: "Would to God that I had forty days and nights in which to tell you all! I would let you know that I am not a 'fallen prophet.'"(4) Although he probably did not tell "all," he did tell more in regards to the Gods in another great discourse given a scant eleven days before his death. In a sense, it was a continuation of his earlier April sermon, for the theme is essentially the same. Joseph Smith reaffirms the plurality of the Gods, "but to us there is but one God--that is pertaining to us; and he is in all and through all."(1) The Prophet explained that: "In the beginning the heads of the Gods organized the heavens and the earth," following which, "the head one of the Gods said, 'Let us make man in our own image,'" and that the "heads of the Gods appointed one God for us...."(2) That the Father of Jesus Christ, is not the first of all the Gods, is affirmed by Joseph:

> If Abraham reasoned thus--If Jesus Christ was the Son of God, and John discovered that God the Father of Jesus Christ had a Father(3), you may suppose that He had a Father also. Was there ever a son without a father? And where was there ever a father without first being a son?(4) Whenever did a tree or anything spring into existence without a progenitor? And everything comes in this way. Paul says that which is earthly is in the likeness of that which is heavenly, Hence [sic] if Jesus had a Father, can we not believe that He had a Father also? I despise the idea of being scared to death at such a doctrine, for the Bible is full of it.
> I want you to pay particular attention to what I am saying. Jesus said that the Father wrought precisely in the same way as His Father had done before Him. As the Father had done before? He laid down His life, and took it up the same as His Father had done before.(5)

The Prophet's reference to the Father having a Father, etc., is not unlike Brigham Young's allusion to the Father, Grandfather, and Great Grandfather of Adam's children. And in saying that all things have progenitors, and that "everything comes in this way," he is also in apparent harmony with the procreative views of his successor. The statement "every man who reigns in celestial glory is a God to his dominions,"(1) concludes the summarization of Joseph Smith's published pronouncements relative to this study. Clearly, he is the source of Church doctrine which established Adam as Michael the Archangel, the Ancient of days, a chosen servant of God who came to this earth to become the progenitor of the human race. President Young, and his successors in the presidency, have unitedly taught that doctrine. As for the views expressed by Brigham Young and others which go beyond this, it is readily apparent that the Prophet did not, at any time, refer to Adam in his published remarks as "our Father and our God"--not even in a patriarchal sense. He did affirm Adam's majesty and rule over his earthly progeny, but nowhere did he actually identify Adam as the father of their spirit bodies as well. The nearest thing to such an inference is his acknowledgement of Adam as the "father of the human family" who "presides over the spirits of all men." This might be interpreted to mean the begettor of all men's spirits, but such an interpretation is not justly warranted; to preside is one thing, to beget is quite another. Some have considered the failure of the Prophet to actually say that Michael or Adam was a spirit prior to coming to this earth to be significant. But again, this does not prove that the Prophet didn't believe him to be such. Conclusive proof must be based on what is said, not on what is supposedly left unsaid; the absence of evidence is never completely decisive,

The revelations, writings, and sermons of Joseph Smith combine to identify Adam as one who is in a subservient position to the Father and the Son; for he is explicitly declared to be subject to them, to the Lord, to God. The argument that the identity of these, and other, heavenly personages is sometimes vague and inconclusive, does not justify their identification with any other personages. The manifest teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith do not warrant, nor support such fanciful suppositions.

It is generally understood, for it is an obvious fact, that the Prophet withheld some of his views from the general Church membership. Judging from his own statements, and those of others, he did this because the Saints at large were un-prepared for all that he might have revealed to them. For example, in one address he said: "I could explain a hundred fold more than I ever have of the glories of the kingdoms manifested to me in the vision(1), were I permitted, and were the people prepared to receive them."(2) On another occasion he said that if the church knew all the commandments of God that they would reject half of them through prejudice and ignorance. Similar remarks by him are to be found throughout his comments and writings. In private conversation with Brigham young in Kirtland, the Prophet told him: "Brother Brigham, if I was [sic] to reveal to this people what the Lord has revealed to me, there is not a man or woman would stay with me."(1) His feelings regarding the limitations of the Saints is further borne out by President Wilford Woodruff:

> Brother Joseph used a great many methods of testing the integrity of men; and he taught a great many things which, in consequence of tradition, required prayer, faith, and a testimony from the Lord, before they could be believed by many of the Saints. His mind was opened by the visions of the Almighty, and the Lord taught him many things by vision and revelation that were never taught publicly in his days; for the people could not bear the flood of intelligence which God poured into his mind.(2)

In speaking of the earth's creation and peopling, Heber C. Kimball commented: "The Prophet Joseph frequently spoke of these things in the revelations which he gave, but the people generally did not understand them, but to those who did, they were cheering, they had a tendency to gladden the heart, and enlighten the mind."(3) President Lorenzo Snow, in citing his famous couplet, "As man is God once was, as God is, man may become," said that this doctrine had been taught to the apostles by the Prophet Joseph Smith, although it had not been made public until sometime later.(4) Plural marriage is another good example of a doctrine which was not made public until years after it was first revealed and put into practice among some of the leadership of the Church.(5)

But what of the Prophet's teachings which he never made public, or which were never clearly stamped with his approval? There have been a number of doctrines, some quite fantastic, of which he is ostensibly the author. The "White Horse Prophecy," the belief that the lost tribes are on an adjacent star near the earth, that there are people on the moon, etc., all these are ascribed to him. Perhaps he did so teach, in part, but which part? No one seems to be sure. H. W. Naisbitt told an audience: "it is said that Joseph Smith the prophet taught that Adam had two wives."(1) Who said it? Such a declaration is not to be found in his public pronouncements. Nor was the writer able to validate the ideas assigned to Joseph Smith by E. W. Tullidge in his book The Women of Mormondom, a series of short biographical sketches of prominent early Mormon women. According to this work, the Prophet taught the "sisters in the temple at Kirtland" more advanced doctrines than he apparently ever presented publicly. This is not exactly in harmony with the Prophet's statement to the effect that: "I am bold to declare I have taught all the strong doctrines publicly, and always teach stronger doctrines in public than in private."(2) Perhaps it is just a matter of what he meant by "strong doctrine"; if so, it is a moot point. However, Tullidge, and unfortunate victim of victorian rhetoric, with elaborate, and oft times redundant, verbal detail, recounts some of the Prophet's private doctrines. Briefly, Joseph Smith is said to have told the sisters that Adam is

God the Father, the Father of the spirits of all men born on this earth, that both Adam and Eve came to this earth as resurrected beings with the pre-determined intention of "falling" to a state of mortality, etc.(1) In pointing out that the concept of a "Heavenly Mother" was not revealed to the world until the time of Joseph Smith, he says:

> The oracle of this last grand truth of women's divinity and of her eternal Mother as the partner with the Father in the creation of worlds, is none other the Mormon Church. It was revealed in the glorious theology of Joseph and established by Brigham in the vast patriarchal system which he has made firm as the foundations of the earth, by proclaiming Adam as our Father and God. The Father is first in name and order, but the Mother is with him--these twain, one from the beginning.(2)

Such were the views ascribed to Joseph Smith and Brigham Young by Tullidge in 1876. However, such were not the views he later claimed for the Prophet. In June, 1876, Tullidge referred to Brigham Young as "the fitting successor of the Mormon Prophet, as the modern Moses, and the founder of Utah."(3) But in his revised edition of the Life of Joseph the Prophet, published by the Reorganized Church in 1880, his ardor had supposedly cooled somewhat(4), for he wrote of him:

> Brigham Young, after the death of the Prophet, for a time confounded the views of the Church by sending forth a "proclamation to all the world" that "Adam was our Father and God."

> ....Wondrous difference between Joseph's revealing of Jesus Christ, the God of all creation, the very Eternal Father; but it truly illustrates the apostasy and perversion which followed the death of the Prophet.(1)

This turn-about on the part of Tulledge, under "Reorganite" pressure, does much to discredit his claims. Yet the fact that Eliza R. Snow collaborated with him in the preparation of The Women of Mormondom does lend some weight and respectability to the work. She was widely known and loved by the Saints, and remained a faithful member of the Church until her death. her apparent admiration for Brigham Young may have led her to quite innocently identify the Prophet's teachings with those of his successor, although this is quite unlikely.

It is impossible to accurately determine what, if anything, Joseph Smith revealed that he did not make public. Who can say what may or may not have been said in secret, if it was retained in secret? The public utterances of the Prophet, including his written revelations, are far and away our firmest, and therefore, our safest ground. To go beyond them is to cross into the realm of human speculation, over a bridge upheld by little more than the tenuous strands of possibility.

Adam's Identity in the Standard Works

The Bible

Gospel Mysteries

The name "Adam" is mentioned thirty times in the Bible: twenty-one times in the Old Testament and nine times in the New Testament. Eighteen of the Old Testament references are found in chapters two, three, four, and five of Genesis. Of the origin of Adam's physical body, Genesis merely says: "the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul."(1) As for Eve, we are told that the Lord God "caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam" during which one of his ribs was removed, "and the rib which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man.(2) That the name "Adam" is something of a title, having a symbolic connotation, is apparent from : "Male and female created he them; and blessed them, and called their name Adam, in the day when they were created."(3)

Luke infers that Adam was literally a son of God since, in tracing Christ's genealogy, he makes no distinction between the nature of the fatherhood of Adam over Seth and the Fatherhood of God over Adam, but says: "...Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God."(4) It is interesting to note that Christ is not known to have ever mentioned Adam by name, although he spoke of Abraham about twenty-six times in the Gospels. Paul defined Adam as the "first man"(5) explaining elsewhere that "Adam was first formed, then Eve."(6)

Only the book of Daniel contains the title "Ancient of days"; there it is used three times in connection with Daniel's vision of a latter-day judgement at which the "Ancient of days" shall sit, and "one like the Son of man" appear before him, etc.(1) Only the Latter-day Saints identify Adam with this personage.

Michael is listed five times by name in the Bible, three of these beings in Daniel where he is referred to as "Michael, your prince."(2) Of him Daniel prophesied: "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people: and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that time: and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book."(3) Jude tells of Michael the Archangel contending with the devil "about the body of Moses,"(4) and previous to that, when there was "war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels, and prevailed not; neither was their place found anymore in heaven."(5) An early, non-canonical writing, The Shepherd of Hermas, contains an interesting reference to the power and position of the archangel, Michael, which significantly parallels the L.D.S. doctrine of patriarchal rule:

> And the great and glorious angel is Michael, who has power over this people and governs them; for this is he who put the law into the hearts of those who believe. Therefore he looks after those to whom he gave it to see if they have really kept it.(6)

Elsewhere in the Shepherd of Hermas Michael is referred to as the Son of God;(1) the translator, Kirsopp Lake, was frankly puzzled by this seeming incongruity.

The Book of Mormon

Neither "Michael" nor the "Ancient of days" is to be found in the Book of Mormon although "Adam" is mentioned some twenty-five times. The Book of Mormon does not contain an account of the world's or of men's creation, but confines itself to the "fall," its consequences, etc. Nor does it profess to certain events subsequent to circa 2300 B. C. then too, the Nephite prophets were in possession of the so-called brass plates of Laban containing a record of the creation, thus maiing it unnecessary to recount it on either the large or small plates of Nephi, or on the plates of Mormon.(2) Even Mormoni, the abridger of the Jaredite history known as the "Book of Ether," omits the creation story, saying:

> And as I suppose that the first part of this record, which speaks concerning the creation of the world, and also of Adam, and the account from that time even to the great dower, and whatsoever things transpired among the children of men until that time, is had among the jews--Therefore I do not write those things which transpired from the days of Adam until that time; but they are had upon the plates; and whoso findeth them, the same will have power that he may get the full account.

It is evident that the Book of Mormon was not the source of Joseph Smith's identification of Adam as Michael, the Ancient of days; this became known only after its publication in March, 1830.

The Doctrine and Covenants

Although Joseph Smith spoke of it, it is not known just when he heard the voice of Michael, the Archangel.(1) But it was apparently while living in Harmony, Pa., the summer of 1830 that the revelation proclaiming the "first man"(2) to be "Michael, or Adam, the father of all, the prince of all, the ancient of days"(3) was received. The following month, September, the Prophet received another revelation in which the "Lord God" spoke of Michael as "mine archangel," and of Adam as "your father, whom I created" and made "an agent unto himself," and who, in time, "became subject to the will of the devil":(4)

> Wherefore, I, the Lord God, caused that he should be cast out from the Garden of Eden, from my presence, because > of his transgression, wherein he became spiritually dead, which is the first death....But, behold, I say unto you that I, the Lord God, gave unto Adam and unto his seed, that they should not die as to the temporal death, until I, the Lord God, should send forth angels to declare unto them repentance and redemption, through faith on the name of mine Only Begotten Son.(5)

In March, 1832, the Prophet was told by the Lord that He had "appointed Michael your prince, and established his feet, and set him upon high, and given unto him the keys of salvation under the counsel and direction of the Holy One, who is without beginning of days or end of life."(6) And in the future

"battle of the great God," which is to be fought between "Michael, the seventh angel, even the archangel," and the devil, Michael will gain the victory for the saints of God and overcome "him who seeketh the throne of him who sitteth upon the throne, even the Lamb." This battle is to be fought at the end of the earth's millennial peace. The Doctrine and Covenants infers the death of Adam in relation to the ordination of his righteous sons to the Priesthood; for Seth was "ordained by Adam at the age of sixty-nine years, and was blessed by him three years previous to his (Adam's) death...."(1) It is again mentioned in connection with the great convocation of Adam's righteous posterity in the valley of Adam-ondi-Ahman:(2)

> And the Lord appeared unto them, and they rose up and > blessed Adam, and called him Michael, the prince, the archangel. And the Lord administered comfort unto Adam, and said unto him: I have set thee to be at the head; a multitude of nations shall come of thee, and thou art a prince over them forever. And Adam stood up in the midst of the congregation; and, notwithstanding he was bowed down with age, being full of the Holy Ghost, predicted whatsoever should befall his posterity unto the latest generation.(3)

Pearl of Great Price

Some of the writings of Moses and of Abraham are to be found in the compilation known as the Pearl of Great Price. Although both refer to the creation, neither contains the name, Michael, or the title, the "Ancient of days." The two writings are remarkably alike, and yet significantly different. A major difference is Abraham's use of the term "the Gods" rather than the "I God" found in Moses. Joseph Smith's avowal that the "head Gods"(1) were the creators of earth and man is probably based upon Abraham's polytheism; especially where the account says: "And then the Lord said: Let us go down. And they went down at the beginning, and they, that is the Gods, organized and formed the heavens and the earth."(2)

It is accepted Church doctrine, clearly taught in the endowment, that one of these Gods was Michael, or Adam, and that he played a major role in the formation of this earth. When it was fully prepared, "the Gods went down to organize man in their own image, in the image of the Gods to form they him, male and female to form they them."(3) Prior to this physical embodiment, man was likewise literally begotten in the anthropomorphic image of his Heavenly Father as a spirit child of God.(4)

The Genesis explanation of man's earthly origin, also written by Moses, is almost identical with that to be found in the Book of Moses where we read:

> And I, the Lord God, formed man from the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul, the first flesh upon the earth, the first man also; nevertheless, all things were before created; but spiritually were they created and made according to my word.(5)

Abraham adds that after "the Gods formed man from the dust of the ground," they took "the man's spirit, and put it into him."(6) (5)Ibid., Moses 3:7. (6)Ibid., Abr. 5:7.

The Pearl of Great Price, like Genesis, locates Eve's physical origin in one of Adam's ribs.(1) W. Cleon Skousen, an outstanding student of Latter-day Saint theology, has proffered a possible interpretation of the expression "dust of the ground" as used in connection with man's earthly beginning.(2) He points out that in a message from God to Adam, one which he was to relay to his children, it was said:

> That by reason of transgression cometh the fall, which fall bringeth death, and inasmuch as ye were born into the world by water, and blood, and the spirit, which I have made, and > so became of dust a living soul, even so ye must be born again into the kingdom of heaven, of water, and of the Spirit, and be cleansed by blood, even the blood of mine Only Begotten....(3)

Since the same "dust of the ground" concept used in reference to Adam's birth is used in relation to the births of his offspring, and since Adam, like his more righteous posterity, was "Born again," or baptized in water and in Spirit,(4) it might be reasoned that Adam's physical body was produced in the same manner as those of his children; otherwise the symbolism in the baptismal ordinance, a rebirth of water and of spirit, becomes lost upon him.

Again, like genesis, the Pearl of Great Price defines Adam as the male and female, the man and the woman, in combination.(5) The woman was called Eve "because she was the mother of all living; for thus have I, the Lord God, called the first of all women, which are many."(1) Likewise, "the first man of all men have I called Adam, which is many."(2)

We are informed that "all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years, and he died."(3) He was the first and greatest of the patriarchs, a "son of God, with whom God, himself, conversed."(4)

A final word.--In concluding this study, the writer quotes from the most recent exposition to be published by the Church on the identity and position of Adam. It comes from the pen of Elder Joseph Fielding Smith, president of the quorum of the twelve:

> Adam was among the intelligences spoken of by the Lord to Abraham who were appointed to be rulers on this earth. he was Michael, a prince, and son of God chosen to come to this earth and stand at the head of his posterity, holding the "keys of salvation under the counsel and direction of the Holy One, who is without beginning of days or end of life." (D. & C. 78:16.) This Holy One is Jesus Christ. On the earth Michael was known as Adam. In the pre-existent state he was a spirit like the others of our Father's children. In the Book of Genesis (1:26 and 2:7), we are told that Adam obtained his body from the dust of the earth, and that he was not subject to death is inferred in the commandment the Lord gave him, that if he transgressed the divine commandment and ate the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, he should surely die. (Gen. 2:17). In the Book of Mormon (2 Nephi 2:22) we are positively informed that Adam would have lived forever in the garden if he had not partaken of the forbidden fruit. So Adam was in no sense mortal until after his transgression. That his immortal spirit came from another world is verily true, just as it is true of each one of us, for we all lived in the spirit existence before we came into this world and obtained bodies which inherited mortality through the fall of Adam.
> We are also informed in the scriptures that before Adam and Eve transgressed they were without children, and the > fall was essential to the peopling of the earth with their offspring. When the truth in relation to the consequences of the fall were made known to Adam and Eve, they rejoiced, and Eve said: "...Were it not for our transgression we never should have had seed, and never should have known good and evil, and the joy of our redemption, and the eternal life which God giveth unto all the obedient." (Moses 5:11.) Lehi also understood this truth, and he said: "Adam fell that men might be; and men are, that they might have joy." (2 Nephi 2:25.)(1)

Here is the official doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints; here the matter rests.

ABSTRACT

The Latter-day Saints are unique in that, unlike other Christian denominations, they do not view Adam, the first man, as a renegade from Paradise who should properly be blamed for the carnal, sensual, and devilish nature of the world we live in. On the contrary, they honor him as one of the two greatest universal benefactors of all time. for had it not been for his "fore-ordained" fall from immortal glory to mortal dust and darkness, the spirit children of God would have been deprived of the earthly embodiment which alone makes salvation and eventual equality with the Gods possible. Without that sacrifice on the part of Adam, there would have been no mortal life upon this globe, nor death, nor any Redeemer to conquer it and make real the "hope within us" of immortality and eternal life.

Adam is identified as Michael, the Archangel, the "Ancient of days" the great progenitor and patriarch of the human race, by the Latter-day Saints. This knowledge came through revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith in 1830. And ther are some who maintain that Adam is in reality the father of spirits as well. This belief is primarily based upon the remarks of Brigham Young, the Prophet's successor in the presidency of the Church. However, the Church does not advocate this doctrine. It has consistently and determinedly held to the basic teachings of Joseph Smith relative to Adam. From time to time the question of Adam's identity has arisen among some of the membership causing a certain amount of discussion and debate; but the problem has usually been treated as an academic flight of fancy more than anything else. Even some Church authorities have given vent to theories of their own design, but these too have lacked the imprimatur of official doctrine.

Non-Mormons, especially those affiliated with other religious denominations, are quite fond of acting as censors of Latter-day Saint teachings. Not infrequently, they have taken it upon themselves to upbraid the Church for its base anthropomorphic concept of God, as well as the great respect it evidences for Adam. Their particular target has been the so-called "Adam-God" sermon given by President Young in 1852. They delight in citing it as proof of a doctrine of which the Latter-day Saints should be "ashamed." The fact that the Church has repeatedly denied the acceptance of Adam as God the Father has not diminished, to any appreciable degree, the use, by those elements which seek to "ridicule" Mormonism, of the aforementioned address.

Where there is freedom of thought, there will be at least occasional differences of opinion. Within the Church, such freedom does exist. None are denied the right to speculate upon the unknown so long as they do not betray the fundamental tenets of the faith, or preach as doctrine 'the commandments of men." That such speculation has given rise to individual ideas and interpretations of certain moot points of doctrine is true; yet they are essentially minor differences, differences which in no way affect the basic principles of salvation. Those who comprise the leadership of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints stand four-square behind these universal truths which remain the bed-rock upon which the Church is founded. It is to their united pronouncements that one must turn for official doctrine.

ADAM & EVE CAME FROM ANOTHER PLANET

1. The following statement was recorded by Anson Call in Nauvoo, Illinois, and copied by Patriarch John M. Whitaker, also of Nauvoo. Brigham H. Roberts, Church Historian, years later made a copy from Patriarch Whitaker's copy which is reproduced here. Joseph Smith, Jr. is speaking. Although second hand, it does go along with other quotations which indicate the same thing.

Now regarding Adam, He came here from another planet, an immortalized Being, and brought his wife Eve with him, and by eating of the fruit of this earth, became subject to death and decay. . .was made mortal and subJect to death.

2. This statement was made by President Brigham Young on August 8, 1852 and was delivered in the Salt Lake Tabernacle. The source reference is J.D. 3:90. Note that Adam & Eve came to this planet.

There is only one gospel sermon, recollect, brethren and sisters, and the time that is required to preach it is from the day of the fall, or from the day when Adam and his wife Eve came here upon this planet, and from that time until Jesus Christ has subdued the last enemy, which is death, and put all things under his feet, and wound up all things pertaining to this earth. Then the gospel will have been preached, and brought up and presented, and the effects thereof, to the Father.

3. On November 14, 1852, President Heber C. Kimball gave an address in the Salt Lake Tabernacle. The reference is J.D. 1:356. Note the way in which he indicates that Adam had come from another planet.

When we escape from this earth, (do) we suppose we are going to heaven? Do you suppose you are going to the earth that Adam came from? that Eloheim came from? where Jehovah the Lord came from? No. When you have learned to become obedient to the Father that dwells upon this earth, to the Father and God of this earth, and obedient to the messengers He sends---when you have done all that, remember you are not going to leave this earth. You will never leave it until you become qualified, and capable, and capacitated to become a father of an earth yourselves.

4. This quotation comes from the Journal of Wilford Woodruff under the date of September 17, 1854. Apostle Woodruff became a member of the Quorum of the Twelve on April 26, 1839. On September l7th he says that he attended a Prayer Circle "& had an interesting conversation" with President Brigham Young, Orson Pratt and others. Some of his (Orson Pratt's) doctrines as contained in the Seer were being discussed. Brother Pratt also thought that Adam was made of the dust of the earth. Could not believe that Adam was our God or the Father of Jesus Christ. President Young said that He came from another world & made this. Brought Eve with him, partook of the fruits of the earth, begat children & they were earthly & had mortal bodies & if we were faithful, we should become Gods as He was.

5. The following quote comes from the journal of Samual W. Richards, Vol.

2,215, under the date of March 25, 1855. He served for several years as the British Mission President and was honorably released from that position in June of 1854 when Apostle Franklin D. Richards took over. Apparently he attended a meeting wherein President Young made these comments.

B. Young spoke to the meeting in a very interesting manner.  Adam and Eve were made of the dust of the Earth from which they came, they brought their bodies with them. They had lived, died and been resurrected before they came here and they came with immortal bodies, and had to partake of the fruits of this Earth in order to bring forth mortal bodies, or natural bodies, that their seed might be of the dust of this Earth as they were of the dust of the earth from which they came.

6. Another quotation from the Journal of Wilford Woodruff under the date of May 6, 1855. Again, Elder Woodruff was attending a prayer circle with several of the brethren and President Young made the following comments.

Adam & Eve had lived upon another Earth, were immortal when they came here. Adam assisted in forming this earth & agreed to fall when he came here, & he fell that man might be & the opposite principle to good, the devil, the serpent, the evil, was placed upon the earth that man might know the good from the evil, for without an experience in these things man could not know the one from the other. As soon as the devil was on earth he sowed the seeds of death in everything so as soon as they began to eat of the fruit of the earth they received into their system the seeds of mortality & of death so their children were mortal & subject to death, sorrow, pain & wo. Then when they partook of life, joy, ease & happiness, they would know how to prize it. Father Adam would never cease his labors to redeem his posterity & exalt them to all the glory they were capable of receiving.

7. This is a quote from a discourse given by President Young in the Salt Lake Tabernacle on April 20, 1856. The source is J.D. 3:319.

He was the person who brought the animals and the seeds from other planets to this world, and brought a wife with him and stayed here. You may read and believe what you please as to what is found written in the Bible. Adam was made from the dust of an earth, but not from the dust of this earth. He was made as you and I are made, and no person was ever made upon any other principle.

8. The following comments were part of a discourse given by President Young in the Salt Lake Tabernacle on October 9, 1859. The source reference is J.D. 7:285.

Here let me state to all philosophers of every class upon the earth, when you tell me that father Adam was made as we make adobes from the earth, you tell me what I deem an idle tale. When you tell me that the beasts of the field were produced in that manner, you are speaking idle words devoid of meaning. There is no such thing in all the eternities where the Gods dwell. Mankind are here because they are the offspring of parents who were first brought here from another planet, and power was given them to propagate their species, and they were commanded to multiply and replenish the earth.

9. On January 27, 1860, Elder Wilford Woodruff recorded the minutes of a meeting which was held by the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve in which they met to discuss some of the doctrines which were being taught by Orson Pratt. This journal entry of Elder Woodruff quotes President Young as saying that Adam came to this earth as a resurrected being.

Michael was a resurrected Being and he left Eloheim and came to this earth & with an immortal body, & continued so till he partook of earthly food and begot children who were mortal.

10. The following is an interesting statement made by President Heber C. Kimball on June 12, 1860, delivered at Willow Creek. The J.D. reference for this is 8:243-244.

We often sing, "This earth was once a garden place," where God our Father dwelt, and took possession and a stand that mankind will take who attain to that honour....When he (Adam) planted the garden, he planted it with seeds he brought with him: and he also brought the animals from the earth he lived upon, where his Father dwelt.

11. The quote which now follows was given by President Young at a special meeting held in the St. George temple. It is recorded in the journal of L. John Nuttall, pp 19-21. At this time brother Nuttall was the private secretary to President Young. The date is Wednesday, February 7, 1877 just a few months before the temple was dedicated on April 6th.

We have heard a great deal about Adam and Eve --- how they were formed and some think he was made like an adobe and the Lord breathed into him the breath of life. For we read, "From dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Well, he was made of the dust of the earth, but not of this earth. He was made just the same way you and I are made but on another earth. Adam was an immortal being, when he came on this earth. He had lived on an earth similar to ours.

12. Under the date of June 23, 1889, Apostle Abraham H. Cannon records a discussion he had with his father George Q. Cannon. The whole conversation was on how the Father (Adam) begat Jesus.

Adam, though made of dust, was made, as President Young said, of the dust of another planet than this.

13. Elder B. H. Roberts, in an article printed in The Contributor Vol. 10:265 (1889) made some very interesting remarks concerning Adam coming from another planet.

We are informed that the Lord God made every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb before it grew on our planet. As vegetation was created or made to grow upon some older earth, and made to grow, so likewise man and his helpmate were brought from some other world to our own, to people it with their children.  . . . instead of being molded as a brick we are brought forth by the natural laws of procreation: so also was Adam and his wife in some other world.

14. President Joseph Fielding Smith, in his book: Man, His Origin and Destiny, pp 276-277 commented that life was transplanted here from another earth.

. . . does it not appear to you that it is a foolish and ridiculous notion that when God created this earth he had to begin with a speck of protoplasm, and take millions of years, if not billions, to bring conditions to pass by which his sons and daughters might obtain bodies made in his image? Why not the shorter route and transplant them from another earth as we are taught in the scriptures?

15. In Doctrines of Salvation, Vol 1:139-140, President Smith again comments about how life was transplanted from another earth.

I tell you, life did not commence upon this earth spontaneously. Its origin was not here. Life existed long before our solar system was called into being. The fact is, there never was a time when man---made in the image of God, male and female--did not exist...

The Lord has given us the information regarding his creations, and now he has made many earths, for there never was a beginning, never was a time when man did not exist somewhere in the universe, and when the time came for this earth to be peopled, the Lord, our God, transplanted upon it from some other earth, the life which is found here.

MAN KNOW THYSELF

"As man is God once was, and as God is man may become."

Do you believe your earthly father was once a little boy as you used to be. How can you prove it. Law establishes the fact that it could not be otherwise.

As your earthly father grew to manhood, he learned a new law, that is, new to him, but the law is old as the world: this law was matrimony. He obeyed the law and by the law became entitled to anew name, - "Husband." Having received this title he was prepared to observe still another, to him new, law, whereby he became entitled to another new name, the greatest name in all the world or worlds to come, - "Father." And you a mortal son was born into the home.

Up until this time you had lived in the spirit world, a son of God, and had been educated in the knowledge of the Gods, and i obedience to the law of mortal birth. you came into this world as a little child, and forgot all you formerly knew. In other words, God, your heavenly Father. caused a deep sleep to come upon you. Your spiritual eyes were closed and you began to behold the light of a temporal world as your mortal eyes were opened, and thus you grew at Mother's knee, and here you learned to walk by faith, as Paul says, "And now ye walk by faith and not by sight," and as the years of childhood lead you into youth, you wandered farther and farther into the great garden of the lone and dreary world. the world we now live in, and in this great garden you found all kinds of fruit and vegetation, some good, some bad, "of the good thou mayest freely eat. but of the bad thou shalt not partake of it." "Nevertheless, thou mayest choose for thyself, but remember I your Heavenly Father forbad you."

You also found Lucifer here, and all his associates, seeking to teach you all manner of false doctrine and trying to lead you astray; he sought to teach you to disobey law, to disregard commandments, and to freely eat of all the fruits and plants in the garden, of which you had been commanded not to partake;

he taught you to forget the word of wisdom, to take the name of God in vain, and every other unholy and impure practices, and thus the years of youth went on, until by the bitters in life the law of repentance was awakened in your soul, and by this law you overcame temptation, turned away from sin as best you could, and sought to walk in obedience to all truth, and as you approached manhood, the law of matrimony came also before you. You accepted and obeyed, and entered into an everlasting covenant with one of the daughters of God, to be your wife and companion forever.

But still your spiritual eyes were closed in mortal sleep and while you thus slept, You begot mortal children. (the seed was taken from your loins, or as it is written, "from the rib of man"). Now you have become the co-equal with your earthly father, for you have obeyed the same laws, and have received the same new names. Is it not ever father's ambition that his son should become like him in all things, and enjoy the same blessings he enjoys.

Your mortal children grew up around you, soon to reach the age of maturity, your sons to follow the footsteps of their father, obey the same laws and receive the same new names - and went out and made homes of their own and thus became your co-equal, and your daughters were adopted into the homes of others.

Thus we find you and mother sitting in the twilight of mortal day, alone, thinking most, of the great life beyond the grave, the resurrection and that celestial glory for which you had lived and loved and sacrificed, and soon your mortal eyes are closed in sleep, and the mortal body is laid to rest, but you, yourself., in the spirit lives on, your spiritual eyes are opened again, and you see and remember as before the mortal sleep. Then comes the resurrection, by which you are prepared to receive a fulness of Celestial Glory, you and your companion, and by reason of that everlasting covenant you entered into when in mortality you are still husband and wife, and as such you will continue to live in everlasting progression, that is, to multiply, to beget children, sons and daughters; and as your mortal children were of the earth earthly, so also will your heavenly children be of the spirit world spiritual.

We commonly call our future estate heaven, so you are their Heavenly Father, and Mother, their Heavenly Mother, and all this by obedience to law, notwithstanding you have become a Heavenly Father, you still have a Heavenly Father, whom you love more and more each day as you grow in knowledge and advance in experience, and even your Heavenly Father had a Heavenly Father, and so we might continue, or, as is expressed in a hymn:

"If you could high to Kolob in the twinkling of an eye,
And then continue onward, with that same speed to fly,
Do you think you could ever, through all eternity.
Find out the generation, where Gods began to be,

Now an age to eternity has rolled by, and we see you surrounded by an innumerable host of spiritual children, and these are your children, the children or kingdom over which you will preside forever.

You have read the parable Jesus spoke, how the Father would visit his sons each in their hour, looking thus far into the future, we see your Heavenly Father (the Heavenly Grand-father of your spiritual children) visiting with you and your family, and in the course of the visit, we fancy we hear him saying to you, My son you have a beautiful family here; we commend you for your integrity; we will now call you to a higher calling in the Priesthood, and confer upon you power and authority whereby you may organize an earth for these your spiritual children to dwell upon, that they may also tabernacle in the flesh, and become like unto us. See yonder is space unoccupied and here are materials; - go to and organize them into an earth, like unto the other earths that have heretofore been organized, and when you have done this bring me word, for I am with you always. Again, this to you is a new experience but to your heavenly Father it is not.

You call your spiritual children together and hold a council with them; and in the contemplation of a new earth, a savior must be provided. You call for volunteers, there may be a number of bright sons reply. It is your right to choose the one dearest to your own heart, he being worthy of the position. Another among the volunteers may become offended, and rebel against the plan, and lead many away with him. The chosen one is ordained to his calling, a calling in the Priesthood, and placed in full charge of the organization of the new earth, its redemption and sanctification. Thus the faithful son becomes the creator and redeemer of the new world, Grandfather remaining the highest authority, Architect and Chief Commander, while you, the Father, remain in reserve for other important duties, and thus the six days of creation go on and the earth is finished and is indeed glorious and beautiful.

The Seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord. That day, you and your wife, and all your children, - as many as will follow you - will spend in the the new earth, in worship and thanksgiving.

Now comes the morning of the new week in which mortality must begin, and your spiritual children must be introduced into mortality. Two must go before them and prepare the way for them. Whom will you send? Would you not say to [your] wife, "Come, Mother, let you and I lay aside our Celestial glory for a little season and eat of the elements of this new earth. that we may again become of the earth earthy, and thereby our offspring will be mortal, and thus we will begin the begetting of mortal bodies for these, our spiritual children; and when they have grown to maturity in their mortal estate, we will command them to multiply and replenish the earth. We have passed through earth life, death and the resurrection. We have power to lay aside this Celestial Glory and we have power to take it up again."

To which she, a faithful Mother, will reply: "Yes, we will partake of the elements of this new earth. We will make this sacrifice for our spiritual children that they also may continue on in the law of everlasting progression and become like unto us, for as the Gods are, some may become."

QUOTATIONS DEALING WITH THE RELATIONSHIP OF OUR FIRST EARTHLY PARENTS TO OUR HEAVENLY PARENTS (1830-1978)

1. Diary of Charles L. Walker, Sept 1832, p. 134.

Upon seeing Brigham Young for the first time and while yet some distance away the Prophet Joseph stopped his chopping on a beech log, straightened up, studied Brigham for a moment, then remarked: "There comes the greatest man who ever lived to teach the identity of God to the world, and he will yet lead this people."

[Brigham Young first met Joseph Smith in September, 1832 in Kirtland, Ohio. He said: "Here my joy was full at the privilege of shaking the hand of the Prophet of God, and I received the sure testimony, by the spirit of prophecy, that he was all any man could believe him to be, a true prophet." (Mill Star July 11, 1863, p. 439.) During this visit a meeting was held in which Brigham spoke in tongues. After this manifestation Joseph prophesied: "The time will come when brother Brigham Young will preside over the Church." (See History of the Church 1:297; Mighty Men of Zion, p. 16; Mill Star 21:439; Journal of Discourses 3:51; 4:54; 5:332; 8:206; 9:89, 332; They Knew The Prophet, Hyrum L. Andrus, p. 34.)]

2. Salt Lake School of the Prophet, Minutes, 1883, pp. 69-70; CHO CR/390/1/Box 1, Oct 11, 1883. The following account took place on 7 May 1834 at New Portage, Ohio which is about 50 miles from Kirtland, Ohio. See where the Prophet went here in HC 2:64 & Life of Joseph Smith the Prophet, by G. Q. Cannon, p. 173. See also quotation #3.

Once after returning from a mission, he [Zebedee Coltrin] met Bro. Joseph in Kirtland, who asked him if he did not wish to go with him to a conference at New Portage. The party consisted of Prests. Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, Oliver Cowdery and myself. Next morning at New Portage, he noticed that Joseph seemed to have a far off look in his eyes, or was looking at a distance, and presently he, Joseph, stepped between Brothers Cowdery, and Coltrin and taking them by the arm, said, "lets take a walk." They went to a place where there was some beautiful grass, and grapevines and swampbeech interlaced. President Joseph Smith then said, "Let us pray." They all three prayed in turn--Joseph, Oliver and Zebedee. Bro. Joseph then said, "now brethren we will see some visions." Joseph lay down on the ground on his back and stretched out his arms and the two brethren lay on them. The heavens gradually opened, and they saw a golden throne, on a circular foundation, something like a light house, and on the throne were two aged personages, having white hair, and clothed in white garments. They were the two most beautiful and perfect specimens of mankind he ever saw. Joseph said, They are our first parents, Adam and Eve. Adam was a large broad shouldered man, and Eve as a woman, was as large in proportion.

3. Journal of Abraham H. Cannon, Vol 13:89; August 25th, 1890; Richfield, Utah. The following account took place on 7 May 1834 at New Portage, Ohio which is about 50 miles from Kirtland, Ohio. See where the Prophet went here in HC 2:64 & Life of Joseph Smith the Prophet, G. Q. Cannon, p. 173. See also quotation #2.

Pres. Peterson told of an incident which he often heard Zebedee Coltrin relate. One day the Prophet Joseph asked him and Sidney Rigdon to accompany him into the woods to pray. When they had reached a secluded spot, Joseph laid down on his back and stretched out his arms. He told the brethren to lie one on each arm, and then shut their eyes. After they had prayed he told them to open their eyes. They did so and saw a brilliant light surrounding a pedestal which seemed to rest on the earth. They closed their eyes and again prayed. They then saw, on opening them, the Father seated upon a throne; they prayed again and on looking saw the Mother also; after praying and looking the fourth time they saw the Savior added to the group. He had _____ brown, rather long, wavy hair and appeared quite young.

4. Article by William W. Phelps, Messenger and Advocate, Vol. 1, No. 9, p. 130; June 1835.

New light is occasionally bursted into our minds, of the sacred scriptures, for which I am truly thankful. We shall by and by learn that we were with God in another world, before the foundation of the world, and had our agency; that we came into this world and have our agency, in order that we may prepare ourselves for a kingdom of glory; become archangels, even the sons of God where the man is neither without the woman nor the woman without the man in the Lord: A consummation of glory, and happiness, and perfection so greatly to be wished, that I would not miss of it for the fame of ten worlds.

5. Messages of the First Presidency, Vol. I, p. 113, Joseph Smith, July 1839. See also HC 3:385-391.

The Priesthood was first given to Adam; he obtained the First Presidency, and held the keys of it from generation to generation. He obtained it in the Creation, before the world was formed, as in Gen. i:26, 27, 28. He had dominion given him over every living creature. He is Michael the Archangel, spoken of in the Scriptures. Then to Noah, who is Gabriel; he stands next in authority to Adam in the Priesthood; he was called of God to this office, and was the father of all living in his day, and to him was given the dominion. These men held keys first on earth, and then in heaven.

The Priesthood is an everlasting principle, and existed with God from eternity, and will to eternity, without beginning of days or end of years. The keys have to be brought from heaven whenever the Gospel is sent. When they are revealed from heaven, it is by Adam's authority.

Daniel in his seventh chapter speaks of the Ancient of Days; he means the oldest man, our Father Adam, Michael, he will call his children together and hold a council with them to prepare them for the coming of the Son of Man. He (Adam) is the father of the human family, and presides over the spirits of all men, and all that have had the keys must stand before him in this grand council. This may take place before some of us leave this stage of action. The Son of Man stands before him, and there is given him glory and dominion. Adam delivers up his stewardship to Christ, that which was delivered to him as holding the keys of the universe, but retains his standing as head of the human family.

 I saw Adam in the valley of Adam-ondi-Ahman. He called together his children and blessed them with a patriarchal blessing. The Lord appeared in their midst, and he (Adam) blessed them all, and foretold what should befall them to the latest generation.

This is why Adam blessed his posterity; he wanted to bring them into the presence of God.

6. History of the Church, 4:207-208; Joseph Smith; Monday, October 5, 1840. Emphasis added.

Commencing with Adam, who was the first man, who is spoken of in Daniel as being the "Ancient of Days," or in other words, the first and oldest of all, the great, grand progenitor of whom it is said in another place he is Michael, because he was the first and father of all, not only by progeny, but the first to hold the spiritual blessings, to whom was made known the plan of ordinances for the salvation of his posterity unto the end, and to whom Christ was first revealed, and through whom Christ has been revealed from heaven, and will continue to be revealed from henceforth. Adam holds the keys of the dispensation of the fullness of times; i.e., the dispensation of all the times have been and will be revealed through him from the beginning to Christ, and from Christ to the end of all the dispensations that are revealed.

. . . He [God] set the ordinances to be the same forever and ever, and set Adam to watch over them, to reveal them from heaven to man, or to send angels to reveal them. "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" (Hebrews, i, 14)

These angels are under the direction of Michael or Adam, who acts under the direction of the Lord.

This, then, is the nature of the Priesthood; every man holding the Presidency of his dispensation, and one man holding the Presidency of them all, even Adam; and Adam receiving his Presidency and authority from the Lord, but cannot receive a fullness until Christ shall present the Kingdom to the Father, which shall be at the end of the last dispensation.

7. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 190, May 16, 1841. This is a special manuscript which was not a regular part of Joseph's journal.

Everlasting covenant was made between three personages before the organization of this earth, and relates to their dispensation of things to men on the earth; these personages, according to Abraham's record, are called God the first, the Creator; God the second, the Redeemer; and God the third, the witness or Testator.---MSS

8. History of the Church, 4:425, Sunday, October 3, 1841; TPJS, p. 191.

He [Joseph] explained the difference between an angel and a ministering spirit; the one a resurrected or translated body, with its spirit ministering to embodied spirits---the other a disembodied spirit, visiting and ministering to disembodied spirits. Jesus Christ became a ministering spirit (while His body was lying in the sepulchre) to the spirits in prison, to fulfill an important part of His mission, without which He could not have perfected His work, or entered into His rest. After His resurrection He appeared as an angel to His disciples.

Translated bodies cannot enter into rest until they have undergone a change equivalent to death. Translated bodies are designed for future missions.

The angel that appeared to John on the Isle of Patmos was a translated or resurrected body (i.e. personage). Jesus Christ went in body after His resurrection, to minister to resurrected bodies.

9. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 301, May 17, 1843.

The 7th verse of 2nd chapter of Genesis ought to read---God breathed into Adam his spirit (i.e. Adam's spirit) or breath of life; but when the word "rauch" applies to Eve, it should be translated "lives."

10. History of the Church, 6:51, Joseph Smith, Sunday, October 8th 1843; TPJS, p. 325.

Spirits can only be revealed in flaming fire or glory. Angels have advanced further, their light and glory being tabernacled; and hence they appear in bodily shape. The spirits of just men are made ministering servants to those who are sealed unto life eternal, and it is through them that the sealing power comes down.

Patriarch Adams is now one of the spirits of the just men made perfect; and if revealed now, must be revealed in fire; and the glory could not be endured. Jesus showed Himself to His disciples, and they thought it was His spirit, and they were afraid to approach His spirit. Angels have advanced higher in knowledge and power than spirits.

11. Nauvoo Expositor 1:1, Resolution #2, June 7, 1844.

Inasmuch as we have for years borne with the individual follies and iniquities of Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith, and many of the official characters, and having laboured with them repeatedly with all Christian love, meekness, and humility, yet to no effect, we feel as if forebearance has ceased to be a virtue and hope reformation vain. And inasmuch as they have introduced false and damnable doctrines into the church such as; a plurality of Gods above the God of this universe; and his liability to fall with all of His creations; the plurality of wives; unconditional sealing up.

12. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, pp. 370-372; June 16, 1844. Meeting in the Grove, east of the Temple.

I will preach on the plurality of Gods. * * *

Our text says, "And hath made us kings and priests unto God and His Father." * * * My object was to preach the scriptures, and preach the doctrine they contain, there being a God above, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. * * *

Eloheim is from the word Eloi, God, in the singular number; and by adding the word heim, it renders it Gods. It read first, "In the beginning the head of the Gods brought forth the Gods," or, as others have translated it, "The head of the Gods called the Gods together." * * *

The head God organized the heavens and the earth. In the beginning the heads of the Gods organized the heavens and the earth. * * * The head one of the Gods said, Let us make a man in our own image. I once asked a learned Jew, "If the Hebrew language compels us to render all words ending in heim in the plural, why not render the first Eloheim plural?" He replied, "That is the rule with few exceptions; but in this case it would ruin the Bible." He acknowledged I was right. * * *

In the very beginning the Bible shows there is a plurality of Gods beyond the power of refutation. It is a great subject I am dwelling on. The word Eloheim ought to be in the plural all the way through---Gods. The heads of the Gods appointed one God for us; and when you take that view of the subject, it sets one free to see all the beauty, holiness and perfections of the Gods.

13. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 373; Joseph Smith; June 16, 1844.

If Abraham reasoned thus--If Jesus Christ was the Son of God, and John discovered that God the Father of Jesus Christ had a Father (see Rev 1:6), you may suppose that He had a Father also. Where was there ever a son without a father? And where was there ever a father without first being a son? Whenever did a tree or anything spring into existence without a progenitor? And everything comes in this way. Paul says that which is earthly is in the likeness of that which is heavenly, Hence if Jesus had a Father, can we not believe that He had a Father also? I despise the idea of being scared to death at such a doctrine, for the Bible is full of it.

I want you to pay particular attention to what I am saying. Jesus said that the Father wrought precisely in the same way as His Father had done before Him. As the Father had done before? He laid down His life, and took it up the same as His Father had done before. He did as He was sent, to lay down His life and take it up again; and then was committed unto Him the keys.

14. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 346; Joseph Smith; April Conference, 1844.

What did Jesus say? (Mark it, Elder Rigdon) The scriptures inform us that Jesus said, As the Father hath power in Himself, even so hath the Son power--to do what? Why, what the Father did, The answer is obvious--in a manner to lay down His body and take it up again. Jesus, what are you going to do? To lay down my life as my Father did, and take it up again. Do you believe it? If you do not believe it, you do not believe the Bible.

15. Times & Seasons, August 15, 1844; Joseph Smith; April Conference, 1844. See also Teachings, pp. 343, 345-346.

There are but a very few beings in the world who understand rightly the character of God. * * * If men do not comprehend the character of God, they do not comprehend themselves.

I will go back to the beginning before the world was, to show what kind of being God is. * * *

God himself was once as we are now, and is an exalted man, and sits enthroned in yonder heavens! That is the great secret. If the veil were rent today, and the great God who holds this world in its orbit, and who upholds all worlds and all things by his power, was to make himself visible,---I say, if you were to see him today, you would see him like a man in form---like yourselves in all the person, image, and very form as a man. * * *

These are incomprehensible ideas to some, but they are simple. It is the first principle of the Gospel to know for a certainty the Character of God, and to know that we may converse with him as one man converses with another, and that he was once a man like us; yea, that God himself, the Father of us all, dwelt on an earth, the same as Jesus Christ himself did and I will show it from the Bible.

16. The following statement was recorded by Anson Call in Nauvoo and copied by Patriarch John M. Whitaker also of Nauvoo. B. H. Roberts, Church Historian years later made a copy from Patriarch Whitaker's copy. Joseph Smith; 1840-1844 (Nauvoo days); c. 1844.

Now regarding Adam: He came here from another planet, an immortalized Being, and brought his wife Eve with him, and by eating of the fruit of this earth, became subject to death and decay. . . was made mortal and subject to death.

17. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; Brigham Young; February 16, 1847.

I have a request to make of my family & that is that they, especially old people omit calling me their Father. Call me Brother Brigham--I shall feel better when you do for I do not consider that I am worthy of that appellation-- Father in the Priesthood implies the great head, the term would be proper to Father Adam. Jesus had reference to the same thing when he told his disciples not to call any man Father on earth for their Father was in heaven.

18. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; December 6, 1847.

We went into Council this morning. Several subjects were conversed upon. One was our posterity in this world & the offspring of celestial & resurrected beings in the world to come. President Young remarked that our children in this life did not look just like their parents but was a variety in looks etc., and the offspring of celestial beings were spiritual bodies.

20. J.D. 1:50-51; Friday, April 9, 1852; Sermon delivered by President Brigham Young in the Salt Lake Tabernacle, SLC, Utah. In the Deseret News minutes of this meeting it said: "President Brigham Young addressed the Saints on the subject of their endowments, and poured forth revelation after revelation on the subject. A most heavenly influence prevailed. He closed by shouting Hallelujah, Praise ye the Lord. * * * 6 P.M. The Elders and brethren assembled in the Tabernacle, which was completely crowded. After the usual introductory exercises, President Young preached several sermons on various subjects, the Holy Ghost resting upon him in great power, while he revealed some of the precious things of the kingdom." (Deseret News, April 17, 1852; See also Mill Star 14:356).

I will tell you how it is. Our Father in Heaven begat all the spirits that ever were, or ever will be, upon this earth; and they were born spirits in the eternal world. Then the Lord by His power and wisdom organized the mortal tabernacle of man. We were made first spiritual, and afterwards temporal.

Now hear it, O inhabitants of the earth, Jew and Gentile, Saint and sinner! When our father Adam came into the garden of Eden, he came into it with a celestial body, and brought Eve, one of his wives, with him. He helped to make and organize this world. He is MICHAEL, the Archangel, the ANCIENT OF DAYS! about whom holy men have written and spoken --- He is our Father and our God, and the only God with whom we have to do. Every man upon the earth, professing Christians or non-professing, must hear it, and will know it sooner or later. They came here, organized the raw material, and arranged in their order the herbs of the field, the trees, the apple, the peach, the plum, the pear, and every other fruit that is desirable and good for man; the seed was brought from another sphere, and planted in this earth. The thistle, the thorn, the brier, and the obnoxious weed did not appear until after the earth was cursed. When Adam and Eve had eaten of the forbidden fruit, their bodies became mortal from its effects, and therefore their offspring were mortal. When the Virgin Mary conceived the child Jesus, the Father had begotten him in his own likeness. He was not begotten by the Holy Ghost. And who is the Father? He is the first of the human family; and when he took a tabernacle, it was begotten by his Father in heaven, after the same manner as the tabernacles of Cain, Abel, and the rest of the sons and daughters of Adam and Eve; from the fruits of the earth, the first earthly tabernacles were originated by the Father, and so on in succession. I could tell you much more about this; but were I to tell you the whole truth, blasphemy would be nothing to it, in the estimation of the superstitious and over-righteous of mankind. However, I have told you the truth as far as I have gone. * * *

It is true that the earth was organized by three distinct characters, namely, Eloheim, Yahovah, and Michael, these three forming a quorum, as in all heavenly bodies, and in organizing element, perfectly represented in the Deity, as Father, Son, and Holy Ghost! * * *

What a learned idea! Jesus, our elder brother, was begotten in the flesh by the same character that was in the garden of Eden, and who is our Father in Heaven. Now, let all who may hear these doctrines, pause before they make light of them, or treat them with indifference, for they will prove their salvation or damnation.

I have given you a few leading items upon this subject, but a great deal more remains to be told.

21. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; April 9 1852; Quoting Brigham Young.

Our Father begot all the spirits that were before any tabernacle was made. When our Father came into the Garden He came with his Celestial body & brought one of his wives with him and ate of the fruit of the Garden until He could beget a Tabernacle. And Adam is Michael God and all the God that we have anything to do with. They ate of this fruit & formed the first Tabernacle that was formed. And when the Virgin Mary was begotten with child it was by the Father and in no other way only as we were begotten. I will tell you the truth as it is in God. The world don't know that Jesus Christ our Elder Brother was begotten by our Father in Heaven. Handle it as you please, it will either seal the damnation or salvation of man. He was begotten by the Father & not by the Holy Ghost.

22. Journal of Hosea Stout, Vol. 2:435; Friday, April 9th, 1852.

Another meeting this evening. President B. Young taught that Adam was the father of Jesus and the only God to us. That he came to this world in a resurrected body, etc. More hereafter.

23. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; April 10, 1852; Quoting Heber C. Kimball.

Some have said that I was very presumptuous to say that Brother Brigham was my God and Savior. Brother Joseph was his God. The one that gave Joseph the keys of the Kingdom was his God, which was Peter. Jesus Christ was his God and the God and Father of Jesus Christ was Adam.

24. Journal of Samuel H. Rogers, Vol. 1:179; BYU Special Collections, Mss 1134; April 16, 1852. Spelling as in the original.

Conference commenced on the 6 and continued until the 11, it was heled in the new tabernacle, adjourned until the 6 of next October We had the best Conference that I ever attended during the time of the Conference President Brigham Young said that our spirits ware begotten before that Adam came to the Earth and that Adam helped to make the Earth, that he had a Celestial boddy when he came to the Earth and that he brought his wife or one of his wives with him, and that Eave was allso a Celestial being, that they eat of the fruit of the ground until they begat children from the Earth, he said that Adam was the onley God that we would have, and that Christ was not begotten of the Holy Gost, but of the Father Adam, that Christ, was our elder brother. The argument that he used to shoe that Christ was not begotten by the holy gost, was a caution to the Elders that when they should go to preach the Gospel, to be careful how they laid their hands on the sisters, for the reseption of the holy Gost, lest the holy Gost should get them with Child and that it would be laid to them

25. J.D. 3:90; Delivered in the Tabernacle, SLC; President Brigham Young; August 8, 1852.

There is only one gospel sermon, recollect, brethren and sisters, and the time that is required to preach it is from the day of the fall, or from the day when Adam and his wife Eve came here upon this planet, and from that time until Jesus Christ has subdued the last enemy, which is death, and put all things under his feet, and wound up all things pertaining to this earth. Then the gospel will have been preached, and brought up and presented, and the effects thereof, to the Father.

26. J.D. 6:274-75; Special Conference held in the Tabernacle, Great SLC; Brigham Young; August 28, 1852.

Perhaps in the case before us, as in others, we might say that men become children. We are children in the first place, then become men; and in the second place men become children in their understanding.... But I expect, if I am faithful with yourselves, that I shall see the time with yourselves that we shall know how to prepare to organize an earth like this---know how to people that earth, how to redeem it, how to sanctify it, and how to glorify it, with those who live upon it who hearken to our counsels. The Father and the Son have attained to this point already; I am on the way, and so are you, and every faithful servant of God....

Joseph will come up in his turn, receive his body again, and continue his mission in the eternal worlds until he carries it out to perfection, with all the rest of the faithful, to be made perfect with those who have lived before, and those who shall live after; and when the work is finished, and it is offered to the Father, then they will be crowned and receive keys and powers by which they will be capable of organizing worlds. What will they organize first?

After men have got their exaltations and their crowns---have become Gods, even the sons of God---are made Kings of kings and Lords of lords, they have the power then of propagating their species in spirit; and that is the first of their operations with regard to organizing a world. Power is then given to them to organize the elements, and then commence the organization of tabernacles. How can they do it? Have they to go to that earth? Yes, and Adam will have to go there, and he cannot do without Eve; he must have Eve to commence the work of generation, and they will go into the garden, and continue to eat and drink of the fruits of the corporeal world, until this grosser matter is diffused sufficiently through their celestial bodies to enable them, according to the established laws, to produce mortal tabernacles for their spiritual children.

This is a key for you. The faithful will become Gods, even the sons of God; but this does not overthrow the idea that we have a father.

27. Thomas Evans Jeremy Sr Journal; Church Historical Department; 30 September 1852.

Brother Orson Pratt preached on the subject of the resurrection of the dead, that they are to come out of their graves, but said that he did not know how the power of God would operate to raise them up from their graves. Also he did not believe that Father Adam had flesh and bones, when he came to the garden of Eden, but he and his wife Eve were spirits, and that God formed their bodies out of the dust of the ground, and the (sic) became a living souls. He also said that he believed that Jesus Christ and Adam are brothers in the Spirit, and that Adam is not the God that he is praying unto.

28. Journal of William Clayton; Utah State Historical Society; Oct. 3 1852.

"A morning meeting was held at which Orson Spencer and Orson Pratt spoke on the subject of Adam. Spencer spoke of Adam "coming to this earth in the morning of creation with a resurrected body and etc...He was followed by Elder Orson Pratt on the same subject...He takes the literal reading of the scriptures for his guide, and maintains that God took the dust of the earth, and molded a body into which he put the spirit of man, just as we have generally understood from the scriptures; while Brother Spencer endeavors to substantiate the position taken by President Young; Viz, that Adam came to this earth with a resurrected body, and became mortal by eating the fruits of the earth, which was earthy. The subject was finally left in so much difficulty and obscurity as it has been from the beginning...Elder Pratt advised the Brethren to pray to God for knowledge of the true principles, and it appears evident that when ever the question is decided, it will have to be by revelation from God."

At an afternoon meeting four other Elders talked on the same subject, "without, however, bringing new light in regard to it. The knowledge of the truth in relation to the whole matter, is in the bosom of God, and when he sees fit to give the key, it will be plain and easy to understand."

When we escape from this earth, do we suppose we are going to heaven? Do you suppose you are going to the earth that Adam came from? that Eloheim came from? where Jehovah the Lord came from? No. When you have learned to become obedient to the Father that dwells upon this earth, to the Father and God of this earth, and obedient to the messengers He sends---when you have done all that, remember you are not going to leave this earth. You will never leave it until you become qualified, and capable, and capacitated to become a father of an earth yourselves.

30. The Seer, I, 3; Orson Pratt, "The Pre-Existence of Man", para. 23, 24, 25, p. 37; (Washington, D.C.: March 1853)

The celestial beings who dwell in the Heaven from which we came, having been raised from the grave, in a former world, and having been filled with all the fulness of these eternal attributes, are called Gods, because the fulness of God dwells in each. Both the males and the females enjoy this fulness. The celestial vegetables and fruits which grow out of the soil of this redeemed Heaven, constitute the food of the Gods. This food differs from the food derived from the vegetables of a fallen world: the latter are converted into blood, which circulating in the veins and arteries, produces flesh and bones of a mortal nature, having a constant tendency to decay: while the former, or celestial vegetables, are, when digested in the stomach, converted into a fluid, which, in its nature, is spiritual, and which, circulating in the veins and arteries of the celestial male and female, preserves their tabernacles from decay and death. Earthly vegetables form blood, and blood forms flesh and bones; celestial vegetables, when digested, form a spiritual fluid which gives immortality and eternal life to the organization in which it flows.

Fallen beings beget children whose bodies are constituted of flesh and bones, being formed out of the blood circulating in the veins of the parents. Celestial beings beget children, composed of the fluid which circulates in their veins, which is spiritual, therefore, their children must be spirits, and not flesh and bones. This is the origin of our spiritual organization in heaven. The spirits of all mankind, destined for this earth, were begotten by a father, and born of a mother in Heaven long anterior to the formation of this world. The personages of the father and mother of our spirits, had a beginning to their organization, but the fulness of truth (which is God) that dwells in them, had no beginning; being "from everlasting to everlasting." (Psalm 90:2).

In the Heaven where our spirits were born, there are many Gods, each one of whom has his own wife or wives which were given to him previous to his redemption, while yet in his mortal state. Each God, through his wife or wives, raises up a numerous family of sons and daughters; indeed, there will be no end to the increase of his own children: for each father and mother will be in a condition to multiply forever and ever. As soon as each God has begotten many millions of male and female spirits, and his Heavenly inheritance becomes too small, to comfortably accommodate his great family, he, in connection with his sons, organizes a new world, after a similar order to the one which we now inhabit, where he sends both the male and female spirits to inhabit tabernacles of flesh and bones. Thus each God forms a world for the accommodation of his own sons and daughters who are sent forth in their times and seasons, and generations to be born into the same. The inhabitants of each world are required to reverence, adore, and worship their own personal father who dwells in the Heaven which they formerly inhabited.

. . . the Father came down from heaven, as the Apostles said he did, and begat the Saviour of the world; for he is the ONLY-begotten of the Father, which could not be if the Father did not actually beget him in person . . . . I believe the Father came down in His tabernacle and begat Jesus Christ.

32. J.D 2:6; Delivered in the Tabernacle, SLC, Utah; Brigham Young; October 23, 1853.

Look for instance at Adam. Listen, ye Latter-day Saints! Supposing that Adam was formed actually out of clay, out of the same kind of material from which bricks are formed; that with this matter God made the pattern of a man, and breathed into it the breath of life, and left it there, in that state of supposed perfection, he would have been an adobe to this day. He would not have known anything. Some of you may doubt the truth of what I now say, and argue that the Lord could teach him. This is a mistake. The Lord could not have taught him in any other way than in the way in which He did teach him. You believe Adam was made of the dust of this earth. This I do not believe, though it is supposed that it is so written in the Bible; but it is not, to my understanding. . . . I do not believe that portion of the Bible as the Christian world do. I never did, and I never want to. What is the reason I do not? Because I have come to understanding, and banished from my mind all the baby stories my mother taught me when I was a child.

Remember that God, our heavenly Father, was perhaps once a child, and mortal like we ourselves, and rose step by step in the scale of progress, in the school of advancement; has moved forward and overcome until He has arrived at the point where He now is.

34. The Seer, Vol 1:158-159; October 1853.

There is no doubt that the Holy Ghost came upon Mary to sanctify her, and make her holy, and prepare her to endure the glorious presence of "the Highest," that when "He" should "overshadow" her she might conceive, being filled with the Holy Ghost; hence the angel said, as recorded in Matthew, "That which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost;" that is, the Holy Ghost gave her strength to abide the presence of the Father without being consumed; but it was the personage of the Father who begat the body of Jesus....

The fleshly body of Jesus required a Mother as well as a Father. Therefore, the Father and Mother of Jesus, according to the flesh, must have been associated together in the capacity of Husband and Wife; hence the Virgin Mary must have been, for the time being, the LAWFUL wife of God the Father; we use the term LAWFUL Wife because it would be blasphemous in the highest degree to say that He overshadowed her or begat the Savior unlawfully. . . . * * * Inasmuch as God was the first husband to her, it may be that He only gave her to be the wife of Joseph while in this mortal state, and that He intended after the resurrection to again take her as one of his own wives to raise up immortal spirits in eternity.

As God the Father begat the fleshly body of Jesus, so He, before the world began, begat his spirit. As the body required an earthly Mother, so his spirit required a heavenly Mother. As God associated in the capacity of a husband with the earthly mother, so likewise He associated in the same capacity with the heavenly one. . . . or in other words, the laws of generation upon the earth are after the order of the laws of generation in heaven.

35. Millennial Star, 15:780; President Samual W. Richards, Mission President, British Mission; November, 1853.

Our Father Adam---The Extract from the Journal of Discourses (vol. 1:50) may startle some of our readers, but we would wish them to recollect that in this last dispensation God will send forth, by his servants, things new as well as old, until man is perfected in the truth.

36. Millennial Star, 15:801; President Samual W. Richards, British Mission President; November, 1853.

ADAM, THE FATHER AND GOD OF THE HUMAN FAMILY

The above sentiment appeared in Star No. 48, a little to the surprise of some of its readers; and while the sentiment may have appeared blasphemous to the ignorant, it has no doubt given rise to some serious reflections with the more candid and comprehensive mind. A few reasonable and scriptural ideas upon this subject may be profitable at the present time.

Then Adam is really God! And why not? If there are Lords many and Gods many, as the scriptures inform us, why not our Father Adam be one of them?

37. Millennial Star, 15:842; President Samual W. Richards, British Mission President; December 1853.

It has been said that Adam is the God and Father of the human family, and persons are perhaps in fear and great trouble of mind, lest they have to acknowledge him as such in some future day. For our part we would much rather acknowledge Adam to be our Father than hunt for another and take up with the devil. Whoever is acknowledged Father must have the rights and honor that belong to him. No man may ever expect to attain to more than he is willing others should enjoy. If these things have power to disturb the pure mind, we apprehend that even greater troubles than these may arise before mankind learn all the particulars of Christ's incarnation---Whatever may prove to be the facts in the case it certainly would exhibit a great degree of weakness on the part of anyone to indulge in fears and anxieties about that which he has no power to control. Facts still remain facts whether kept or revealed. If there is a way pointed out by which all beings who come into this world can lay the foundation for rule, and a never-ending increase of kingdoms and dominions, by which they can become Gods, we are all willing the Lord Jesus Christ should enjoy them all as any other being, ascribing honor and power to him as their God. The Apostle informs us that those who are redeemed shall be like Jesus; not to say, however, that they shall be wifeless and childless, and without eternal affections. It should be borne in mind that these wonderful mysteries, as they are supposed to be, are only mysteries because of the ignorance of men; and when men and women are troubled in spirit over these things which come to light through the proper channel of intelligence, they only betray their weakness, ignorance, and folly.

16:482 --- (Report by Elder Thomas Cafall): They (the members of the district) are lacking faith on one principle---the last "cat that was let out of the bag." Polygamy has been got over pretty well; that cloud has vanished away, but they are troubled about Adam being our Father and God. There is a very intelligent person investigating our principles, and who has been a great help to the Saints; he has all the works, and can get along with everything else but the last "cat", and as soon as he can see that clearly, he will become a "Mormon." I instructed him to write to Liverpool upon it.

16:483 --- Elder Joseph Hall: Relative to the principles recently revealed, we have not the least difficulty. If Adam's being our Father and God cannot be proved by the Bible, it is all right.

16:530 --- Elder James A. Little: I believe in the principle of obedience; and if I am told that Adam is our Father and our God, I just believe it. Brethren, I feel well, and have felt well all the time.

16:629 --- It has fallen to your lot to preside over the British Saints at a time and under circumstances unparalleled in the history of the work in this country. The introduction of the Law of Celestial Marriage, which in its operations, will revolutionize all our political, religious, and domestic arrangements; and the announcement of the position which Adam, our great progenitor, occupies among the Gods; have marked your Presidency as a special epoch in the history of the British Mission.

40. Millennial Star, 16:534; Franklin D. Richards, Apostle; June, 1854. F. D. Richards became the new British Mission President at this time.

Concerning the item of doctrine alluded to by Elder Caffall and others, viz., that Adam is our Father and our God, I have to say do not trouble ourselves, neither let the Saints be troubled about that matter. The Lord has told us in a revelation which he gave through the Prophet Joseph, Jan. 19, 1841 --- "I deign to reveal unto my Church things which have been kept hid from before the foundation of the world, things that pertain to the dispensation of the fullness of times." (D&C 124:41) I would like to know where you will find scriptures to prove those things, by which have never before been revealed. Some feel their bounded duty to prove everything which belongs to our faith from the Bible, but I do not, and I will excuse you from all obligation to prove this from the Old Scriptures, for you cannot, if you try. You may bring much collateral evidence from the Bible and other revelations that will dissipate objections, and serve to strengthen the position, but to directly and substantially prove it, as the world requires, and as we can the first principles, it will puzzle you to do it, and from henceforth we may expect more and more of the word of the Lord giving us instructions which are nowhere written in the Old Scriptures. If we feel ourselves, and teach the Saints or the people generally, that we are only to believe that which can be proved from the scriptures, we shall never know much of the Lord ourselves, nor be able to teach the children of men to any very considerable extent. If as Elder Caffall remarked, there are those who are waiting at the door of the Church for this objection to be removed, tell such, THE PROPHET AND APOSTLE BRIGHAM HAS DECLARED IT, AND THAT IS THE WORD OF THE LORD. That is vastly stronger proof than Christendom can give for much that they profess to believe. Tell the Saints that if this stone does not seem to fit into the great building of their faith just now, to roll it aside. You can help them roll it out of their way so that they will be but a short time till they will find a place in their building where no other stone will fit; then it will be on hand all right, and will come into its place in the building without the sound of hammer or chisel.

41. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; Ms/f/115, CHO; September 17, 1854.

President Young preached this afternoon & spoke upon the Law of Consecration & had an interesting conversation in our Prayer Circle; the subject of Elder Orson Pratt publishing the Seer & the doctrine it contained was brought up in conversation. President Young said he ought not to have published the marriage ceremony, it was sacred & one of the last ceremonies attended to in the endowments & ought not to have been given to the world. Brother Pratt said that he thought it was no harm as the plurality of wives & its doctrines was to be published to the world. He said he should not have done it---if he had thought there had been the least harm in it. President Young said he was satisfied that he intended no wrong in it. He said that the doctrine taught in the Seer that God had arrived at that state whereby he could not advance any further in knowledge, power & glory was a false doctrine & not true. That there never will be a time to all eternity when all the Gods of eternity will cease advancing in power, knowledge, experience & glory, for if this was the case, eternity would cease to be & the glory of God would come to an end, but all of the celestial beings will continue to advance in knowledge & power, worlds without end. Joseph would always be ahead of us, we should never catch up with him in all eternity nor he with his leaders. Brother Pratt also thought that Adam was made of the dust of the earth. Could not believe that Adam was our God or the Father of Jesus Christ. President Young said that He came from another world & made this. Brought Eve with him, partook of the fruits of the earth, begat children & they were earthly & had mortal bodies & if we were faithful, we should become Gods as He was. He told Brother Pratt to lay aside his philosophical reasoning & get revelation from God to govern him & enlighten his mind more & it would be a great blessing to him to lay aside his books & go into the canyons as some of the rest of us was doing & it would be better for him. He said his philosophy injured him in a measure many good things was said by President Young that we should grow up in revelation so that principle would govern every act of our lives. He had never found any difficulty in leading this people since Joseph's death.

42. Journal of Joseph L. Robinson; Oct. 6th, 1854.

Attended conference, a very interesting conference, for at this meeting President Brigham Young said thus, that Adam and Eve were the names of the first man and woman of every earth that was ever organized and that Adam and Eve were the natural father and mother of every spirit that comes to this planet, or that receives tabernacles on this planet, consequently we are brother and sisters, and that Adam was God, our Eternal Father. This as Brother Heber remarked, was letting the cat out of the bag, and it came to pass, I believed every word, for I remembered saying to the Brethren at a meeting of High Priests in Nauvoo, while I was speaking to them under the influence of the Spirit, I remarked thus, that our Father Adam had many wives, and that Eve was only one of them, and that she was our mother, and that she was the mother of the inhabitants of this earth, and I believe that also, but behold ye there were some that did not believe these sayings of the Prophet Brigham, even our Beloved Brother Orson Pratt told me he did not believe it. He said he could prove by the scriptures it was not correct. I felt very sorry to hear Professor Orson Pratt say that. I feared least he should apostatize, but I prayed for him that he might endure unto the end, for I knew verily it was possible that great men might fall. I remembered Apostle John E. Page. I saw him take from his pocket a plug of tobacco and bite a mouthful and put it back. It surprised me. I said old chap you will apostatize, but still I really hoped he would not, but he is gone, and I am very sorry for the poor man.

Sunday, Oct. 8, Seven a.m. The Seventies met to consult upon finishing the hall, for the benefit of the quorums, and to hear the report of President Joseph Young.

Ten a.m. Tabernacle crowded. Choir sung a hymn. Prayer by Elder Lorenzo Snow. Chanting by the choir. Elder Hyde spoke inside the Tabernacle, followed by Elder W. W. Phelps; and at the same time a much larger congregation assembled at the north end of the building, were addressed by Elder G. A. Smith and Bishop Woolley. Upon proposition from President Brigham Young, the congregation adjourned to meet in the afternoon at the north end of the Tabernacle, where seats had been prepared. Choir chanted, 'We praise thee, O God.' Benediction by Elder Woodruff.

Two p.m. An immense congregation were comfortably seated in the open air. Singing. Prayer by Elder G. A. Smith. Elder O. Pratt read the 68th Psalm, which the choir chanted. It being the recurring time for administering the sacrament, Bishop L. D. Young asked a blessing upon the bread and Bishop Isaac Hill [?] asked a blessing upon the water. While the emblems were being passed, President Brigham young delivered a highly interesting discourse which held the vast audience as it were spellbound. Elder Lyman Curtis was appointed, and voted to go on a mission in connection with Elder Rufus Allen, and to be under the direction of Elder Parley P. Pratt. On motion of Elder Hyde, it was unanimously voted that all members of this church who go out on the roads to trade, or who go to California, or any other place outside of this Territory, without being sent, or counseled to do so, be cut off from the church. On motion, conference adjourned to meet in the Tabernacle, at ten a.m. on the 6th of April 1855. The choir sung, 'The spirit of God like a fire is burning.' Benediction by President H. C. Kimball.

The sermons, exhortations, and remarks delivered during the conference will appear in the News as fast as the reporter is able to furnish them.

Elder Orson Hyde motioned and it was unanimously voted that all members of the Church who got out on the road to trade, or go to California or any place outside of this Territory, without being sent or counseled to go, be excommunicated. Conference adjourned until the 6th of April 1855. Benediction by President Heber C. Kimball.

46. Journal of the Southern Indian Mission--Diary of Thomas D. Brown, p. 87-89; Friday, 6th Octr. 1854.

On Friday 6th Octr. [1854] Conference assembled, in the afternoon being called on by President Bm. Young I addressed the numerous saints assembled in the Tabernacle, gave them an account of our mission so far, and had liberty. On the evening of this day elder O. Hyde delivered an excellent discourse proving that Jesus Christ was a married man -- and children besides. --See Deseret news Vol.____. No.____. and on Sunday afternoon President B. Young delivered a discourse, equalled by none that I have ever listened to on "Space -- the Eternities -- of matter of duration. The Gods -- Gentile Seduction & Mormon Saviors of the innocent betrayed. The following is the essence of his discourse:

"I believe in one Eternity -- no beginning no end to anything -- Gods -- Angels and _____ never had a beginning & never will have an end: "no beginning no end to space -- no end -- no bounds -- no place in time or eternity will end their formation -- no end to matter -- There is an eternity of matter yet to be organized: no true philosopher can count the millions of eternities yet to be made: we shall learn in all time and in all eternities: The Bible and the ordinances are the same from Adam to the end, there will be no change till the last of Adam's race is saved -- the ordinances are the same -- duties & callings vary as do the circumstances, but the ordinances are the same for salvation in worlds without end. Text "This is eternal life to know the only wise and true God & his Son Jesus Christ whom he has sent" -- "There are Lords many and there are Gods many, & the Father of our Spirits is the Father of Jesus Christ: He is the Father of Jesus Christ, Spirit & Body and he is the beginner of the bodies of all men: Neither can you have a Father, without having a Grandfather: God hath made of one flesh, all the dwellers, or inhabitants on the whole earth, we are all formed of the same materials, from the mother Earth; those who keep their second estate will be celestialized & brought back to dwell with the Father. Can any individual officiate in any ordinances of any nature, before obeying the same and honoring them? Can any man officiate in this kingdom without first becoming a subject in the same? We'll let the numerous Gods alone, and take the one we have to do with. There is no time when worlds have not been created and exalted; there have always been an Adam and an Eve -- the first man and woman, and their oldest son is heir, and should be our Savior. We have one Father and we all are brethren." Eloheim spoke, "Yehovah, Michael -- see matter all around, go and organize a world," Yehovah Michael went and carried material: Then Michael came down with his wife, & began to people it. Michael had his body from the dust of the planet he was begotten on, he obeyed his Lord, was faithful and obedient, died and was resurrected, he did not resurrect himself. An Angel resurrected Jesus -- what Angel? I know not. When Jesus has completed his work, Adam shall have a fulness: Adam's descent was to organize people & redeem a world, by his wife he peopled it by his first born he redeems. Our Spirits were happy before they had a body. An allusion to the Indians -- Father Adam knew all about oxen and cattle. Adam died and was buried, where he was interred is not said. Physicians will tell you, men's efforts to beget will be abortive, without the spirit put in by the Father.

Adam & Eve had children in the spirit -- and their children married -- brother & sister -- then the bodies followed.

Joseph Smith will be the first resurrected being in this dispensation & he will hold the keys of the Resurrection & no man can be raised without his permission, he will delegate this power. He then spoke of the final baptism of the earth by fire -- The earth to be as a Sea of Glass. He next said something of exchange of women & children. All are the children of Father Adam. When Jesus has done his work he will take this planet back to his Father.

"Saviours will come up on Mount Zion & save Esau"

The word "Gentile" means disobedience, and "Israel" means obedience.

The present marriage laws and the usage of custom is folly -- and worse they are the parents of "seduction" & this is worse than all the wives of the Israel of God.

Ye poor damned wretches -- that left that poor girl ruined! her own sole protectress, & the support of your unlawful offspring! by virtuous means if she can, if not by a continuance of a course worse than death & more cruel than the grave! I never ruined a woman

In New York there are 18,000 prostitutes licensed by gentile authority! Philadelphia as bad. What shall we do for them? Burn up their unclean dens -- these wretched holes, where such iniquity is legalized by license -- take the women, cleanse and save them. Let the world cleanse themselves and cease talking about Utah. Recapitulation.

They always Existed. Philosophers have tried to study out how the first gods came I want to ask them a Question: Which was first a squash or apple that produced the Seed or was it the seed that produced the Squash or apple? Which was first. They can't tell. So they need not rack their Brain with it--There never was a time but what (p.36) No man from the days of Adam to the End of the world will ever by saved unless they go thro the same ordin that we do-- There never was any other way to Salvation. Text was: to know the only true & wise God is Eternal life- To know this a person must have Eternal life--God is the father of spirits of all the people of this world--he is the father of the bodies also of the first inhabitants of the Earth also the father of the body of Jesus Christ-- The first people of the Earth was no more made of the dust than you are--I would not make out that Moses lied, by no means. But we are made of dust as much as Adam was. So are our cattle. They are formed or created from the Elements all of which are necessary to produce animal or vegetable life-- as the dust of the earth will produce grass & cattle will eat grass & increase Evry person must have a father & mother or they could not be. (p.37) So we had a grandfather & great-great-great-great-great grandfather So far back there is no beginning-- They always Existed on some world--& when this work was made - our God who is Adam came & commenced the peopling of it- Tho he is God & had lived & died & been reserected on some other plannet- & obtained his exaltation & begat the Spirits of children enough people this world he came down & brot some of the animal & vegetable productions of some other world so that they might grow & increase here - He by eating the mortal fruits of the Earth, it caused & produced mortal children or commenced the increase of men on the Earth which is the bodies for the Spirits to live in

There never was a time when Worlds were not created-- The work of creation was always in Progress--

An Adam & Eve is necesary for evry world The oldest Son, if faithful, is the Saviour of the family--There are Lords many & Gods many But the God that we have to account to, is the father of our Spirits--Adam. All the inhabitance of the Earth are made of one flesh- whither they are black-white-blue or streaked.

Now a few words on the resurrection A Man cant resurrect himself- A person cant officiate in an office that he does not hold- Therefore a person cant resurrect others, 'til he himself has been resurrected---No man or woman in this dispensation will be resurrected unless it is done by Joseph Smith Jr. as a yankee says, I guess he will be resurrected first & then he will res. others-- A word on Marriage. People would think it an awful thing if a man should marry his sister for a wife- but Bless your souls we all do it We mary our sisters because we can get no others-- all the women in the world are our sisters because we are all the child of one father. Our fathers & grandfathers in this world - are our brothers- that is- our spirits are brothers & will be after the resurrection - we will be as near to our father as any of our great grandfathers- they will not be a head of us for being our fathers in this world because we will all be Brothers & all have one father-- The poor Gentiles will whine about the order of Marriage among the Mormons but they dont tell of their own crimes--but I know them from first to last--

What they call gentlemen will go & court & gain the affection of an innocent girl, promise to marry her & destroy her & run away & leave her a disgrace to all that know her, to mourn out her days in sorrow. That is just the character of the great men of the world--they dont take care of their children

Take the sins of one such a man & put them in the balance against the whole of this people & they will sink him among the damned in hell-- while we, the latter day Saints will rise to thrones & dominions. It is not right to compare it in that way because the sins of all this people, that do right with all their wives, is not to be compared to the sins of one such a man as I have described In fact there is no sin in the plurality of wives or any other doctrine of this church unless the people do wrong

I would bless u all so that u would be saved if I had the power-- I have the power to bless all the faithful & I do bless u in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

48. Diary, Joseph Lee Robinson, p. 102-103; Oct. 6, 1854.

Attended conference. A very interesting conference; for at this meeting President Brigham Young said thus: That Adam and Eve were the names of the first man and woman of every earth that was ever organized. And that Adam and Eve were the natural Father and Mother of every spirit that comes to this planet or that receives tabernacles on this planet. Consequently we are brothers and sisters. And that Adam was God our Eternal Father.

This as Brother Heber remarked was letting the cat out of the bag. But behold ye, there were some that did not believe the sayings of the Prophet Brigham. Even our beloved Brother Orson Pratt told me that he did not believe it. He said he could prove by the scriptures it was not correct. I felt sorry to hear Professor Orson Pratt say that. I fear lest he should apostatize.

General Conference commenced this morning at the tabernacle at 10 O clock
The Presidency were present--of the twelve apostles[:] O. Hyde, O. Pratt, W. Woodruff, G. A. Smith, E. T. Benson, L. Snow, as all the business of the Conference is published in the Deseret News of Oct 12 No. 31 I deem it unnecessary to record it here. Conference closed Sunday Evening
Oct. 8th President Young preached to a congregation of several thousand, out of doors and I believe that he preached the greatest sermon that ever was delivered to the Latter day Saints since they have been a people. Elder Watt reported. I also took minutes.

50. Journal of Samual W. Richards, Vol. 2:215; March 25, 1855.

B. Young spoke to the meeting in a very interesting manner. . . . Adam and Eve were made of the dust of the Earth from which they came, they brought their bodies with them. They had lived, died and been resurrected before they came here and they came with immortal bodies, and had to partake of the fruits of this Earth in order to bring forth mortal bodies, or natural bodies, that their seed might be of the dust of this Earth as they were of the dust of the earth from which they came. It was difficult to teach mankind the way of life. The Lord had to give but little at a time as much could not be received, and it is our duty to use that little so as to profit by it and be prepared for more when God should be willing to impart it to us.

51. Journal of Wilford Woodruff, CHO, Ms/f/115; May 6, 1855.

I attended the Prayer-Circle where I had some interesting teaching from President Young in social conversation which was not reported. The following is a key to some of the principles he advanced. He referred to the preaching of Orson Pratt & Orson Hyde the sabbath before upon the subject of the resurrection. He said the identical particles of matter in which we had honored our spirits with, i.e., our tabernacles in which he had suffered, traveled, labored, & built up the kingdom of God, that would be the identical body & no other that would be raised from the grave to immortality & eternal life. Adam & Eve had lived upon another Earth, were immortal when they came here. Adam assisted in forming this earth & agreed to fall when he came here, & he fell that man might be & the opposite principle to good, the devil, the serpent, the evil, was placed upon the earth that man might know the good from the evil, for without an experience in these things man could not know the one from the other. As soon as the devil was on earth he sowed the seeds of death in everything so as soon as they began to eat of the fruit of the earth they received into their system the seeds of mortality & of death so their children were mortal & subject to death, sorrow, pain & wo. Then when they partook of life, joy, ease, & happiness, they would know how to prize it. Father Adam would never cease his labors to redeem his posterity & exalt them to all the glory they were capable of receiving. He did not doubt but that Father Adam knew in the beginning how many of his posterity would receive a Celestial glory & who they were & also a Terrestrial & a Telestial, yet man had his agency to act, choose & refuse good or evil as seemed him good & he would be rewarded according to his works. O. Pratt asks will Adam or any God continue to make worlds, people them, taste of death to redeem them---Answer: I have no doubt but it is his privilege but whether He will do it is a question in my mind. How then can his seed increase to all eternity through the increase of his posterity. Many other remarks were made by the President.

52. J.D. 2:302; Tabernacle, Salt Lake City; Discourse by Pres. Brigham Young; June 3, 1855.

In my fullest belief, it was the design of the Lord that Adam should partake of the forbidden fruit, and I believe that Adam knew all about it before he came to this earth. I believe there was no other way leading to thrones and dominions only for him to transgress, or take that position which transgression alone could place man in, to descend below all things, that they might ascend to thrones, principalities, and powers; for they could not ascend to that eminence without first descending, nor upon any other principle.

53. Millennial Star, Vol 17:785-786; Apostle Franklin D. Richards; 1855.

Not only do the Old and New Testament, and other ancient and modern revelations through the Holy Priesthood assert the fact but mankind of every grade, condition, and religion, whether Christian, Jew, Mohamedan, or Pagan, all believe in leading personages or influences which are the sources of good and evil. One of these is God the Father, Michael or Adam, from whose loins the earth is peopled, and who is now laboring for the redemption of his children. The great captain of evil is Satan, formerly Lucifer, but now a fallen "Son of the Morning" who with his followers are diligently laboring to destroy the works of God by reducing them to a like condition with themselves.

Evening with the Regency in the Upper Room of the President's Office, examining the spelling of the New Books in the D. Alphabet. A very serious conversation took place between President B. Young and Orson Pratt upon doctrine. O. P. was directly apposed to the President's views and very freely expressed his entire disbelief in them after being told by the President that things were so and so in the name of the Lord. He was firm in the position that the President's word in the name of the Lord, was not the word of the Lord to him. The President did not believe that Orson Pratt would ever be Adam, to learn by experience the facts discussed, but every other, person in the room would be if they lived faithful.

55. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; March 11, 1856.

. . . met with the Regency in the evening. The time was occupied till 10 o'clock writing lessons upon the black board. Then the subject was brought up concerning Adam being made of the dust of the earth, and Elder Orson Pratt pursued a course of stubbornness & unbelief in what President Young said that will destroy him if he does not repent & turn from his evil ways. For when any man crosses the track of a leader in Israel & tries to lead the prophet-- he is no longer led by him but is in danger of falling.

56. J.D. 3:344; Discourse by Orson Pratt delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City; April 13, 1856.

Our first parents through transgressing the law of God, brought death into the world, but through the death of Jesus Christ, life and immortality were introduced. The one brings into bondage; the other gives us hope of escape, of redemption, that we may come forth with the same kind of body that Adam had before the fall, a body of immortal flesh and bones.

Adam and Eve were immortal, the same as resurrected beings, but previous to their transgression they had no knowledge of good and evil.

After the redemption we will not only have the same kind of bodies that they possessed in the garden of Eden before the fall, but we will have a knowledge of good and evil through our experience.

57. J.D. 3:319-320; Discourse delivered by President Brigham Young in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City; April 20, 1856.

Though we have it in history that our father Adam was made of the dust of this earth, and that he knew nothing about his God previous to being made here, yet it is not so; and when we learn the truth we shall see and understand that he helped to make this world, and was the chief manager in that operation.

He was the person who brought the animals and the seeds from other planets to this world, and brought a wife with him and stayed here. You may read and believe what you please as to what is found written in the Bible. Adam was made from the dust of an earth, but not from the dust of this earth. He was made as you and I are made, and no person was ever made upon any other principle.

Do you not suppose that he was acquainted with his associates who came and helped to make this earth? Yes, they were just as familiar with each other as we are with our children and parents.

 Yet Enoch had to talk with and teach his people during a period of three hundred and sixty years, before he could get them prepared to enter into their rest, and then he obtained power to translate himself and his people, with the region they inhabited, their houses, gardens, fields, cattle, and all their possessions. He had learned enough from Adam and his associates to know how to handle the elements, and those who would not listen to his teachings were so wicked that they were fit to be destroyed, and he obtained power to take his portion of the earth and move out a little while, where he remains to this day.

58. Journal of Wilford Woodruff, April 20, 1856.

I met with the Presidency & Twelve in the prayer-circle. Brother G. A. Smith spoke in plainness his feelings concerning some principles of Elder O Pratt's wherein he differed from President Young concerning the creation of Adam out of the dust of the Earth & the final consummation of knowledge & many other things. I am afraid when he come to write he will publish in opposition of President Young's views but he promises he would not.

59. J.D. 4:2; Discourse by President Heber C. Kimball delivered in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City; June 29, 1856.

I have learned by experience that there is but one God that pertains to this people, and He is the God that pertains to this earth --- the first man. That first man sent his own Son to redeem the world, to redeem his brethren; his life was taken, his blood shed, that our sins might be remitted. That Son called twelve men and ordained them to be Apostles, and when he departed the keys of the kingdom were deposited with three of those twelve, viz: Peter,

James, and John.

WE BELIEVE IN OUR GOD

We believe in our God, the Prince of his race,
The archangel Michael, the Ancient of Days
Our own Father Adam, earth's Lord as is plain,
Who'll counsel and fight for His children again.

We believe in His Son, Jesus Christ who in love
To His brothers and sisters came down from above,
To die, to redeem them from death, and to teach
To mortals and spirits the gospel we preach.

MICHAEL IS THE ETERNAL FATHER

Sons of Michael, he approaches!
Rise; the Eternal Father greet; Bow, ye thousands, low before him;
Minister before his feet;
Hail the Patriarch's reign,
'Stablished now o'er sea and main!

61. J.D. 4:215-216; Discourse by President Brigham Young delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City; February 8, 1857.

I desire to pursue some of the ideas that brother Cummings has just laid before you . . . even to the advancement of the Saints at a "snail gallop."

The items that have been advanced are principles of real doctrine, whether you consider them so or not. It is one of the first principles of the doctrine of salvation to become acquainted with our Father and our God. The scriptures teach that this is eternal life, to "know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent;" this is as much as to say that no man can enjoy or be prepared for eternal life without that knowledge.

You hear a great deal of preaching upon this subject; and when people repent of their sins, they will get together, and pray and exhort each other, and try to get the spirit of revelation, try to have God their Father revealed to them, that they may know Him and become acquainted with Him.

62. J.D. 4:217-219; Discourse by President Brigham Young delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City; February 8, 1857.

Thus you may continue and trace the human family back to Adam and Eve, and ask, are we of the same species with Adam and Eve? Yes, every person acknowledges this; this comes within the scope of our understanding.

But when we arrive at that point, a vail is dropped, and our knowledge is cut off. Were it not so, you could trace back your history to the Father of our spirits in the eternal world. He is a being of the same species as ourselves; He lives as we do, except the difference that we are earthly, and

He is heavenly. He has been earthly, and is of precisely the same species of being that we are. Whether Adam is the personage that we should consider our heavenly Father, or not, is considerable of a mystery to a good many. I do not care for one moment how that is; it is no matter whether we are to consider Him our God, or whether His Father, or His Grandfather, for in either case we are of one species---of one family---and Jesus Christ is also of our species.  Now to the facts in the case; all the difference between Jesus Christ and any other man that ever lived on the earth, from the days of Adam until now, is simply this, the Father, after He had once been in the flesh, and lived as we live, obtained His exaltation, attained to thrones, gained the ascendancy over principalities and powers, and had the knowledge and power to create---to bring forth and organize the elements upon natural principles. This He did after His ascension, or His glory, or His eternity, and was actually classed with the Gods, with the beings who create, with those who have kept the celestial law while in the flesh, and again obtained their bodies. Then He was prepared to commence the work of creation, as the scriptures teach. It is all here in the Bible; I am not telling you a word but what is contained in that book.

Things were first created spiritually; the Father actually begat the spirits, and they were brought forth and lived with Him. Then He commenced the work of creating earthly tabernacles, precisely as He had been created in this flesh himself, by partaking of the course material that was organized and composed this earth, until His system was charged with it, consequently the tabernacles of His children were organized from the course materials of this earth.

When the time came that His first-born, the Saviour, should come into the world and take a tabernacle, the Father came Himself and favoured that spirit with a tabernacle instead of letting any other man do it. The Saviour was begotten by the Father of His spirit, by the same Being who is the Father of our spirits, and that is all the organic difference between Jesus Christ and you and me. And a difference there is between our Father and us consists in that He has gained His exaltation, and has obtained eternal lives.

63. J.D. 4:248; Discourse by Heber C. Kimball; Salt Lake City; March 1, 1857.

Are you ever going to be prepared to see God, Jesus Christ, His angels, or comprehend His servants, unless you take a faithful and prayerful course? Did you actually know Joseph Smith? No. Do you know brother Brigham? No. Do you know brother Heber? No, you do not. Do you know the Twelve? You do not, if you did, you would begin to know God, and learn that those men who are chosen to direct and counsel you are near kindred to God and to Jesus Christ, for the keys, power, and authority of the kingdom of God are in that lineage.

64. J.D. 4:271; Brigham Young; Salt Lake City; March 8, 1857.

If you look at things spiritually, and then naturally, and see how they appear together, you will understand that when you have the privilege of commencing the work that Adam commenced on this earth, you will have all your children come and report to you of their sayings and acts; and you will hold every son and daughter of yours responsible when you get the privilege of being an Adam on earth.

65. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; March 8, 1857.

I attended the prayer meeting in the evening. President Young had O

Pratt's pamphlet read called The Holy Spirit, & he made the following remarks after hearing it read: He said that Brother Pratt had got beyond the stars. He had corralled them & got beyond them.

66. J.D. 4:266-267; President Brigham Young, delivered in Great Salt Lake; March 8, 1857.

With all the knowledge and wisdom that are combined in the person of brother Orson Pratt, still he does not yet know enough to keep his foot out of it, but drowns himself in his own philosophy, every time that he undertakes to treat upon principles that he does not understand. When he was about to leave here for his present mission, he made a solemn promise that he would not meddle with principles which he did not fully understand, but would confine himself to the first principles of the doctrine of salvation, such as were preached by brother Joseph Smith and the Apostles. But the first that we see in his writings, he is dabbling with things that he does not understand; his vain philosophy is no criterion or guide for the Saints in doctrine.

67. Journal of Heber C. Kimball, 20:17. Deseret News, March 11, 1857.

The Lord told me that Jesus Christ was the son of Adam.

68. J.D. 5:331-332; President Brigham Young in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake; Wednesday afternoon, October 7, 1857.

Some have grumbled because I believe our God to be so near to us as Father Adam. There are many who know that doctrine to be true. Where was Michael in the creation of this earth? Did he have a mission to the earth? He did. Where was he? In the Grand Council, and performed the mission assigned him there. Now if it should happen that we have to pay tribute to Father Adam what a humiliating circumstance it would be! Just wait till you pass Joseph Smith; and after Joseph lets you pass him, you will find Peter; and after you pass the Apostles and many of the Prophets, you will find Abraham, and he will say, 'I have the keys, and except you do thus and so, you cannot pass;' and after awhile you come to Jesus; and when you at length meet Father Adam, how strange it will appear to your present notions. If we can pass Joseph and have him say, 'Here; you have been faithful, good boys' I hold the keys of this dispensation; I will let you pass.' Then we shall be very glad to see the white locks of Father Adam.

69. J.D. 6:31; President Heber C. Kimball, delivered in the Salt Lake Tabernacle; Sunday morning, November 8, 1857.

Now, brethren, you have got a spirit in you, and that spirit was created and organized---was born and begotten by our Father and our God before we ever took these bodies; and these bodies were formed by him, and through him, and of him, just as much as the spirit was; for I will tell you, he commenced and brought forth spirits; and then, when he completed that work, he commenced and brought forth tabernacles for those spirits to dwell in. I came through him, both spirit and body.

70. J.D. 6:145; Discourse by President Brigham Young, delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City; December 27, 1857.

Before the gospel revealed the introduction of sin to this planet, it was a great marvel even to the most learned, and they would ask, "Why was it so?--is it not strange?" and would rest with the expression, "It was suffered to be so." While reasoning or familiarly conversing with one another, let the question be asked, "Why was Eve suffered to partake of the forbidden fruit?" and the invariable reply was, "I cannot answer that question: it seems that it was so, and it appears to be a great pity." That is all the knowledge there is in the world on that point. The starting point they have not learned, that no intelligent being could be exalted with the Gods without being subjected to the temptation of sin, that he might know and understand the power of the adversary, the opposite to goodness; for it is written that "there must needs be an opposition in all things." The world have not yet learned that simple truth.

71. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; Ms/f/115, Church Historical Department; March 24, 1858.

The Presidency and Twelve met in council at the office. Meeting opened by prayer by O. Hyde. I presented before the meeting the case of O. Pratt who did not believe in some of the teachings of President Young and thought President Young had reproved him unjustly. The subject was discussed at length by the Twelve and President Young. Much instruction was given at the close. Orson Pratt confessed his faults and said that he would never teach those principles again or speak them to any person on the earth. We all forgave him and voted to receive him into full fellowship.

72. J.D. 7:163; Brigham Young; Tabernacle, Salt Lake City; June 5, 1859.

The blood he (Christ) spilled upon Mount Calvary he did not receive again into his veins. That was poured out, and when he was resurrected, another element took the place of the blood. It will be so with every person who receives a resurrection: the blood will not be resurrected with the body, being designed only to sustain the life of the present organization. When this is dissolved, and we again obtain our bodies by the power of the resurrection, that which we now call the life of the body, and which is formed from the food we eat and the water we drink, will be supplanted by another element; for flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God.

73. J.D. 7:285-290; Brigham Young, delivered in Salt Lake Tabernacle; October 9, 1859.

Here let me state to all philosophers of every class upon the earth, when you tell me that father Adam was made as we make adobes from the earth, you tell me what I deem an idle tale. When you tell me that the beasts of the field were produced in that manner, you are speaking idle words devoid of meaning. There is no such thing in all the eternities where the Gods dwell. Mankind are here because they are the offspring of parents who were first brought here from another planet, and power was given them to propagate their species, and they were commanded to multiply and replenish the earth. . . . Adam and Eve are the parents of all pertaining to the flesh, and I would not say that they are not also the parents of our spirits.

74. Brigham Young Diary; Great Salt Lake City; Wednesday, January 25, 1860.

. . . Prest Heber C. Kimball had a conversation with the President as to the propriety of calling the Quorum of the Twelve together for the purpose of considering some points of doctrine, on Friday evening at this office.

75. Brigham Young (office) Diary; Great Salt Lake City; Thursday January 26, 1860.

Pres. Young observed to W. C. Staines he had read an article of this weeks 'Valley Tan' Jan. 25. 1860. which branded the whole Mormon Hierarchy as murders. and observed the Pres. I wonder how the brethren submit to be tamely insulted by the Editor of the Tan Mr DeWolf. In course o- the day Bro W. C. Staines informed us he had seen De Wolf, and told him, he would kick his arse [horse] and cow hide him if he ever inserted another article against this people; W. C. Staines then cursed him in the name of Jesus Christ and said he should have the spirit of fear upon him during this life, and after death, he then (34) sealed the curse upon him, in the name of Jesus Christ. DeWolf wanted to apologize but Mr Staines told him he could hear of none he had insulted a whole people, and he would yet know Mormonism was true. Mr De Wolf turned very pale. Mr Staines left also informed he would purchase a paper and shew it to every good Mormon of his acquaintance Mr Staines then left Mr De Wolf to his reflections.

Pres Young rode out and returned in a few hours afterwards; and sent a messenger to Enquire after the health of Prest Wells; who went and ascertained he was rather better; but not sufficiently recovered to safely come out the following day.

76. Church Historian's Office Journal; Friday, January 27, 1860.

. . . At 6 p.m. The Presidency & Prests of Seventies & Twelve met in council at Prest. Young's Office. A sermon written to be published, by Orson Pratt, was read and rejected as false doctrine Elder Pratt advocates the doctrine of worshipping an attribute instead of God, The Author and dispenser of those attributes. The night was spent in speaking on doctrinal points until 12 o'clock.

77. Brigham Young (Office) Journal; Great Salt Lake City; Friday, January 27th 1860.

Bro. Wm Wordsworth had some conversation with the Pres. in relation to selling him his property in the 14th Ward.

Bro. W. C. Staines called in and recapitulated to the President the corrective course he took with t-h-e- De Wolf the Editor of the "Valley Tan". his remarks are in yesterdays minutes.

Bro Cyrus Wheelock remarked to the Pres. that Father Humphrey had left for California also had some conversation with the Pres. about the jealous feelings that exist among men. Pres. remarked many of our feelings would be removed if we were to associate more together; and if that course did not remove them immediately; continue to do so, and perhaps it would; any how matters would end right with the faithful Prest observed to Bro C Wheelock, he did not feel that Aaron Johnson had any feelings to him (35) Pres. also remarked if Joseph Smith the beloved Prophet was here. he would say that Aaron Johnson, was a thorough good man, and one of the best men who had stood by him. Pres further observed that one great cause of contention arose out of idleness, if men would work all day they would be tired at night lay down and rest, and have no cause nor time for contention

In the evening a Council of the twelve was held to consider the doctrines that Orson Pratt had advanced in his last Sermon about worshipping attributes.

The President and the twelve came to the conclusion that Orson Pratt was wrong on that point. Bro G.D. Watt reported the whole of the remarks.

78. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; Church Historical Department, Ms/f/115; January 27, 1860.

Minutes of a meeting of the Presidency & Twelve[,] Presidents of Seventies and other assembled in President Young's Council Room at 6 o'clock. * * * President Young stated the object of the meeting was to converse upon doctrinal points to see if we see alike. I pray that we may have the spirit of God to rest upon us that our minds may be upon the subject & that we may speak by the Holy Spirit. He then called upon A. Carrington to read a sermon, he read it before the company, a piece prepared for the press written by Orson Pratt upon the Godhead. He claimed that it was the attributes of God that he worshipped and not the person & that he worshipped those attributes whether he found them in God, Jesus Christ, Adam, Moses, the Apostles, Joseph, Brigham or in anybody else. After the document was read, President Young then called upon the Twelve to express their feelings upon the subject. He called upon O Hyde to speak & he called upon J. Taylor to speak. He spoke a short time. No one knew at the time (except the President & Carrington) who the author of the document was. Brother Taylor said he did not see it in that light. He worshiped a personage and not the attributes, he thought God was located and could not worship the attributes in anybody. President Young then called a vote of the assembly and said if you understand this to be a correct doctrine as here written I wish you manifest it by saying yes. No one spoke. President Young then said do I worship attributes or the dispenser of these attributes. I worship the dispenser of them of these attributes and not the attributes. This is O Pratt's sermon prepared for the press. I do not want to have it published if it is not right. Brother Orson worships the attributes of God but not God. * * * Orson Pratt has differed from me in many things. But this is a great principle & I do not wish to say you shall do so and so. I do not know of a man who has a mathematical turn of mind but what goes too far. The trouble between Orson Pratt & me is I do not know enough & he knows too much. * * * When I read O Pratt's views in the Seer I could not swallow it. * * * There is not a man in the Church that can preach better than Orson Pratt upon any subject which he understands. It is music to hear him, but the trouble is he will preach upon things he does not know a thing about and then he will preach false doctrine & so will Elder Hyde. He preaches upon the resurrection & teaches things which are not true. * * * Erastus Snow said . . . I cannot see things in the same light that Orson Pratt does, but when President Young has taught doctrine it has always tasted good to me. * * * Orson Pratt said I will speak upon this subject. . . . I have no excuses to make. President Young said I ought to make a confession. But Orson Pratt is not a man to make a confession of what I do not believe. I am not going to crawl to Brigham Young and act the hypocrite and confess what I do not believe. I will be a free man. President Young condemns my doctrines to be false. I do not believe them to be false which I publish in the Seer in England. It has been said we should let those things sleep. But you do not let them sleep. If I had thought while in England that President Young worshipped a God without attributes I would not have written what I did (The above remark was an unkind cut in Orson Pratt he should not have said it). But I do not believe it, yet I will not act the hypocrite. It may cost me my fellowship, but I will stick to it; if I die tonight I would say O Lord God Almighty I believe what I say.

Elder John Taylor spoke at some length and tried to convince Orson Pratt of his error. President Young said Orson Pratt has started out upon false premises to argue upon. His foundation has been a false one all the time and I will prove it false. You have been like a mad stubborn mule, and have taken a false position in order to accuse me. You have accused me of worshipping a stalk or stone or a dead body without life or attributes. You never heard such a doctrine taught by me or any leader of the Church. It is as false as hell, and you will not hear the last of it soon. You know it is false. Do we worship those attributes? No, we worship God because he has all those attributes and is the dispenser of them and because he is our Father & our God. Orson Pratt puts down a lie to argue upon. He has had false ground all the time tonight. There never was a time or eternity but what a God did exist and a God that had children upon the same principle that children are now begotten, and I was begotten by the God I worship who reigns in the heavens and I shall also in my turn reign as a God & so will you.

O Hyde said to O Pratt, my opinion is not worth as much to me as my fellowship in this Church.

President Young said, Michael was a resurrected Being and he left Eloheim and came to this earth & with an immortal body, & continued so till he partook of earthly food and begot children who were mortal (keep this to yourselves) then they died. A Carrington spoke upon the subject a short time and made some useful remarks.

President Young spoke upon the subject of O. Pratt laying down false principles to work upon. * * * President H C Kimball followed President Young and said, Brother Orson Pratt has withstood Joseph and he has withstood Brother Brigham many times and he has done it tonight and it made my blood chill. It is not for you to lead, but to be led by him. You have not the power to dictate but to be dictated. W. Woodruff arose and said Brother Orson Pratt I wish to ask you one or two questions. You see that the spirit and doctrine which you possess is entirely in opposition to the First Presidency, the Quorum of the Twelve, and all who are present this evening, and it chills the blood in our veins to hear your words & feel your spirit. Should not this be a guidance to you that you are wrong. What would become of the Quorum of the Twelve if we all felt as you do. We should all go to hell in a pile together. You say you are honest in the course you are pursuing. I wish to ask you if you were honest when you said that if you had known that President Young worshipped a God without life or attributes that you would not have written what you did. (O Pratt said, I will recall that). It was an insult to President Young and the Holy Priesthood which he holds. Every man in this room who has a particle of the spirit of God, knows that Pres. Young is a Prophet of God and that God sustains him and he has the Holy Spirit and his doctrines are true, and that he is qualifying to lead the people and he has explained everything so plain this evening that a child can understand it, and yet it is no evidence to you. Nothing can make an impression upon you, no argument can reach your understanding. But Brother Orson I have seen the day when you were in sorrow. It was when you were cast out of your Quorum and out of the Church and that to, in consequence of persuing the same course you are this evening. Then you could both see, feel & understand. Then argument could reach you when you saw your glory and crown departing from you. I beg of you to reflect and not let your will carry you too far in these things. It would be better for us not to be able to cast up a simple sum in addition and be humble before the Lord, than to have ever so much knowledge & permit that knowledge to lead us to destruction. There are but few men upon earth upon whom God has bestowed such gifts, qualifications and reasoning powers as he has upon you, and he will hold you responsible for the use you make of them, and you should not make a wreck of your salvation for contending for things which you do not understand[.] I do feel at this advanced state of the Church and the late day and wish the information which you possess that neither you nor your Brethren ought to be troubled with false doctrine. Neither should you cause your Brethren to listen to such a scene of things as we have heard tonight or to insult the president of this Church as you have done. Although you are unbending in your will tonight the day is not far distant when you will be glad to bend to the president of this Church and make reconciliation. * * *

Orson Hyde spoke upon the subject and said Brother Pratt had not got the spirit of God. He was followed by C. C. Rich who backed up the testimony of the Twelve in saying that Orson Pratt was wrong. E. T. Benson spoke upon the same subject and said if Brother Pratt had the confidence in President Young which he ought to have he would feel different. If he had the confidence in his Brethren which he should have I know he would feel different. President Young said I will tell you how I got along with Joseph. I found out that God called Joseph to be a Prophet. I did not do it. I then said I will leave the Prophet in the hands of that God who called and ordained him to be a Prophet. He is not responsible to me and it is none of my business what he does. It is for me to follow & obey him. * * *

Joseph once told me to go to his own house to attend a meeting with him. He said that he would not go without me. I went and Hyrum preached upon the Bible, Book of Mormon, & Doctrine & Covenants and said we must take them as our guide alone. He preached very lengthy until he nearly wearied the people out, when he closed. Joseph told me to get up. I did so. I took the Books and piled them all up on top of each other. I then said that I would not give the ashes of a rye straw for all those books for my salvation without the living oracles. I should follow and obey the living oracles for my salvation instead of any thing else. When I got through, Hyrum got up and made a confession for not including the living oracles.

It may be thought strange by the Brethren that I will still fellowship Elder Pratt after what he has said, but I shall do it. I am determined to whip Brother Pratt into it and make him work in the harness. * * *

F D Richards dismissed the meeting.

79. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; Church Historical Department Ms/f/115; January 28, 1860.

I spent the day in the office. I met with the Twelve in the prayer circle. Orson Pratt met with us, he did not dress, but said he wanted to be in the society of the Twelve. He seemed much more soft in his spirit than he had been.

80. Brigham Young (Office) Diary; Great Salt Lake City; Saturday January 28th 1860.

Prest Joseph Young called in and conversed with his brethren Prest B. Young about the last evenings proceedings.

Elder Orson Pratt called upon the President in relation to last evenings proceedings, Bro Orson admitted he was excited; and for the future would omit such points of doctrine in his discourses that related to the Plurality of Gods. &c but would confine himself to the first principles of the Gospel Bro Orson also asked the President if he had a vacancy for his son Orson as a Clerk The President observed he would endeavor to appoint him as a teacher; as he meant to promote education as much as possible

The President remarked to Bro Orson that much false doctrine arose out of arguing upon false premises, such as supposing something that does not exist, as a God without his attributes, as they cannot exist apart. Bro Orson replied "that many of his (36) doctrinal arguments had been advanced while he was in England in answer to the numerous enquiries that were made of him by reasoning men. The President remarked when questions have been put to me, by opposers, who did not want to hear the simple Gospel Message. he would not answer them and asked Orson why he was not as careful to observe the revelations given to preach in plainness and simplicity as to so strenuously observe the doctrines in other revelations.

81. Deseret News, Vol 9, No 51; Remarks by Elder Orson Pratt, Tabernacle, Jan. 29, 1860.

* * * There are some points of doctrine which I have, unfortunately, thrown out before the people. At the time I expressed those views, I did most sincerely believe that they were in accordance with the word of God. I did most sincerely suppose that I was justifying the truth. But I have since learned from my brethren, that some of the doctrines I had advanced in the "Seer," at Washington were incorrect. Naturally being of a stubborn disposition and having a kind of a self will about me; and moreover supposing really and sincerely that I did understand what true doctrine was in relation to those points, I did not feel to yield to the judgment of my brethren, but believed they were in error. Now, was this right? No, it was not. Why? Because the Priesthood is the highest and only legitimate authority in the Church, in these matters. * * *

"But," inquires one, "have you not felt anxious that the Church should follow your ideas as laid down in the Seer?" I have not; if I had, I should have preached them; I should have tried to reason with you to convince you of their apparent truth. * * *

God placed Joseph Smith at the head of this church. God has likewise placed Brigham Young at the head of this church; . . . . We are commanded to give heed to their words in all things, and receive their words as from the mouth of God, in all patience and faith. When we do not do this, we get into darkness. * * *

82. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; Ms/f/115, Church Historical Department; January 29, 1860.

Sunday I met at the Tabernacle. Orson Pratt was in the stand and quite unexpected to his Brethren he arose before his Brethren and made a very humble, full confession before the whole assembly for his opposition to President Young and his Brethren, and he said he wished all the Church was present to hear it. He quoted Joseph Smith's revelation to prove that President Brigham Young was right and that all was under obligation to follow the leader of the Church. I never heard Orson Pratt speak better or more to the satisfaction of the people, than on this occasion. He would not partake of the sacrament until he had made a confession then he partook of it.

83. Brigham Young (Office) Diary, Great Salt Lake City; Tuesday, Jan 31st 1860.

John L. Smith called and stated he was nearly cured of his Rheumatism, and said the means he used were as follows. 1/2 ox. sulphate of Zinc; 1 dram of opium. mixed in a pint of water, and wash the part affected. he also stated this remedy was good for erysipelas he knew a woman that was cured by this remedy.

Elder Orson Pratt called upon the President in regard to the acknowledgements he had made on Sunday in the Tabernacle. and also made a personal acknowledgement to the President admitting he had a self willed determination in him; The President said he had never differed with him only on points of doctrine, and he never had had any personal feelings, but he was anxious that correct doctrines should be taught for the benefit of the Church and the Nations of the earth. Prest said in one thing he had felt vexed that he did not consult them before he published the M.S. writings he got from Mother Smith. about the life of the Prophet. Orson admitted that he had done wrong and he now saw it but did not at the time of his purchasing and publishing it. President observed the brethren would have made it a matter of fellowship. The President said he did not have it in his heart to disfellowship but merely to correct men in their views. Prest also remarked to Orson he had been willing to go on a Mission to any place at the drop of the Hat, and observed you might as well question my authority to send you on a Mission as to dispute my views in doctrine; Bro Orson said he had never felt unwillingness in the discharge of his practical duties.

84. INSTRUCTIONS TO THE SAINTS; See also Messages of the First Presidency, Vol II, p. 222-223.

On the 26th of January, in the Tabernacle, Elder Orson Pratt, Sen., addressed the Saints; and, through an oversight, a portion of his remarks was printed in Vol. IX. No. 51. of The Deseret News, previous to being carefully revised. Since then those remarks have been examined by br. Pratt and the Council, and are now printed as agreed upon by them, as follows:-

Elder Pratt sustains an unimpeachable character, so far as strict morality, tried integrity, industry, energy, zeal, faithfulness to his religion, and honesty in all business transactions are concerned; but it will be readily perceived, from his "Remarks," that he does not claim exemption from liability to err in judgment in relation to "some points of doctrine." Br. Pratt's preachings and teaching upon the first principles of the Gospel are excellent.

With regard to the quotations and comments in The Seer as to Adam's having been formed "out of the ground," and "from the dust of the ground," &c., it is deemed wisest to let that subject remain without further explanation at present, for it is written that we are to receive "line upon line," according to our faith and capacities, and the circumstances attending our progress.

In the Seer, pages 24 and 25, par. 22, br Pratt states:- "All these Gods are equal in power, in glory, in dominion, and in the possession of all things; each possesses a fulness of truth, of knowledge, of wisdom, of light, of intelligence; each governs himself in all things by his own attributes, and is filled with love, goodness, mercy, and justice towards all. The fullness of all these attributes is what constitutes God." "It is truth, light, and love, that we worship and adore; these are the same in all worlds; and as these constitute God, He is the same in all worlds;" "Wherever you find a fulness of wisdom, knowledge, truth, goodness, love, and such like qualities, there you find God in all his glory, power, and majesty - therefore, if you worship theses adorable perfections, you worship God."

Seer, page 117, par. 95.- "then there will be no Being or Beings in existence that will know one particle more than what we know; then our knowledge, and wisdom, and power will be infinite; and cannot, from thenceforth, be increased or expanded in the least degree;" Same page, par. 96:- "but when they" (the Saints) "become one with the Father and Son and receive a fullness of their glory, that will be the end of all progression in Knowledge, because there will be nothing more to be learned. The Father and the Son do not progress in knowledge and wisdom, because they already know all things past, present, and to come." Par. 97:- "there are none among them (the Gods) that are in advance of the others in knowledge; though some may have been Gods as many millions of years as there are particles of dust in all the universe, yet there is not one truth that such are in possession of but what every other God knows." "None of these Gods are progressing in knowledge: neither can they progress in the acquirement of any truth."

In this treatise entitled "Great First Cause," page 16, par. 17, br Pratt states:- "All the organizations of worlds, of minerals, of vegetables, of animals, of men, of angels, of spirits, and of the spiritual personages of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, must, if organized at all, have been the result of the self combinations and unions of the pre-existent, intelligent, powerful, and eternal particles of substance. These eternal Forces and Powers are the Great Causes of all things and events that have had a beginning."

The foregoing quoted ideas, and all similar ones omitted to be quoted, with the comments thereon, as advanced by br. Pratt in an article, in the Seer, entitled "Pre-Existence of man," and in his treatises entitled absurdities of immaterialism and "Great First Cause," are plausibly presented. But to the whole subject we will answer in the words of the Apostle Joseph Smith, on a similar occasion. One of the Elders of Israel had written a long revelation which he deemed to be very important, and requested br. Joseph to hear him read it. The Prophet commended its style in glowing terms, remarked that the ideas were ingeniously advanced, &c., &c., and that he had but one objection to it. "What is that"? inquired the writer, greatly elated that his production was considered so near perfect. The Prophet Joseph replied, "It is not true."

This should be a lasting lesson to the Elders of Israel not to undertake to teach doctrine they do not understand. If the Saints can preserve themselves in a present salvation day by day which is easy to be taught and comprehended, it will be well with them hereafter.

President Young said, I corrected O Pratt today. I did not say to him that God would increase to all eternity. But I said the moment that we say that God knows all things comprehends all things and has a fulness of all that he ever will attain, that moment eternity ceases. You put bounds to eternity, space & matter and you make an end and stopping place to it. The people or many say they cannot understand the things. This is true. No man can understand the things of eternity. And Brother Pratt and all men should let the matter of the gods alone. I do not understand these things. Neither does any man in the flesh and we should let them alone.

86. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; April 4, 1860.

I attended a Council of the Presidency and Twelve at the Historians Office in the evening upon the subject of the sermon of Orson Pratt. The sermon was read & the time was occupied till half past 11 o'clock in discussing the subject. President Young was the only one of the Presidency who were present. * * * President Young made many remarks concerning doctrinal points & the situation of Orson Pratt who seemed very dark in his mind upon many points of doctrine. President Young wished the matter to be settled before the Quorum of the Twelve and not go before the conference. After spending several hours in investigating the subject it was decided for the Twelve to meet in the morning in prayer and fasting and seek the business among ourselves.

87. Minutes of Meeting, at Historian's Office; Great Salt Lake City; 7 P.M. April 4, 1860.

Present - Brigham Young, Orson Hyde, Orson Pratt, John Taylor, Geo. A. Smith, Wilford Woodruff, E. T. Benson, F. D. Richards. Ed. Hunter. T.B. G.D.W. J.A.S. R.B. R.L.C.

B.Y. Bro. O. Pratt, has Bro Benson spoken to you about that for which we have met to night No. Well it is this bro. Orson. Your late sermon had like to got into the paper, I want to get an understanding of your views, and see if we see things aright perhaps if I could see it as you Orson does perhaps its all that I could ask, but if not we want to have the matter talked over and laid before the Conference in a manner that we all see eye to eye

* * *

O.P. . . . If I could get rid of those things which have lingered upon my mind & which I have believed it to be true. The Bre[thren] are at liberty to publish anything that they see proper or at conference.

I would like to enumerate items, firstly - preached & publish, that Adam is the fa[ther] of our spirits, & father of Spirit & father of our bodies - When I read the Rev given to Joseph I read directly the opposite - Lord spake to Adam, which w Man eventually became Adam's

(3 blank lines)

B.Y. Your statements to night, You come out to night & place them as charges, & have as many against me as I have you. One thing I have thought that I might still have omitted. It was Joseph's doctrine that Adam was God &c When in Luke Johnson's at O. Hydes the power came upon us, or shock that alarmed the neighborhood. God comes to earth & eats & partakes of fruit. Joseph could not reveal what was revealed to him, & if Joseph had it revealed, he was not told to reveal it. The Spirit is sent when the mother feels earth, God put it into his mouth, & when God, to translate he had the power. Not a contradictory thing in what I have said

Bro. Pratt had the Spirit of God like as all in Pottawatomie & believed when the Revel was given to us. Bro Brigham, said could a being in a telestial or terrestrial kingdom keep a celestial law, is it reasonable to expect such a thing.

Orson, it is for you to call the 12 together & do as I have suggested or do as you please. It will be brought before Conference and you will be voted as a false teacher, & your false doctrines discharged. I love your integrity, but your ignorance is as great as any philosophers ought to be.

* * *

G.A. Smith moved that these items come before the Conference Most of the 12 wished to have it laid before the 12 & not go before the Conference.

Bro Brigham, wished the Twelve to take hold & pray with Bro. Orson & have a good flow of the Spirit, & it will go off smooth

* * *

11-30 p.m. Prest B. Young, prayed he prayed for Orson Pratt, & prayed feelingly

* * *

88. Minutes of the Meeting of the Council of the Twelve in Historian's upper room; Great Salt Lake City; April 5. 1860 10 a.m.

Present Elders O. Hyde, O. Pratt, J. Taylor, W. Woodruff, G.A. Smith, C.C. Rich, F.D. Richards.

Gospel Mysteries

O. Hyde . . . To acknowledge that this is the Kingdom of God, and that there is a presiding power, and to admit that he can advance incorrect doctrine, is to lay the ax at the root of the tree Will He suffer his mouthpiece to go into error? No. He would remove him, and place another there. bro. Brigham may err in the price of a horse, or a House and lot, but in the revelations from God, where is the man that has given thus saith the Lord when it was not so? I cannot find one instance.

* * *

O. Hyde Who is our Heavenly Father. I would as soon it was Father Adam, or any other good and lawful being. I shall see him some time, if I do right. What do I know about Adam, in the Councils of the Great God before he came here, or his privileges. I dont know.

* * *

O. Pratt I do not see how I can mend the matter, one way or the other. I think the brethren are laboring under a wrong impression, in all of my writings on doctrine, I have tried to confine myself within revelation. I do not remember one item that I consider new, many of the exceptions what I made last night, are not in writing. On my subject of pre-existence, I have quoted largely from Genesis and the Book of Abraham, I have give it, how Adam and Eve came here and took bodies of flesh and bones, the doctrine was in the Church when I came into it, and I have always rejoiced in it, in regard to Adam being our Father and our God, I have not published it, altho' I frankly say, I have no confidence in it, altho advanced by bro. Kimball in the stand, and afterwards approved by bro. Brigham. . . . One [revelation] says Adam was formed out of the Earth, and the Lord put in his spirit; and another that he came with his body, flesh and bones, thus there are two contrary revelations - in the garden it is said, that a voice said to Adam, in the meridian of time, I will send my only begotten son Jesus Christ. then how can that man and Adam both be the Father of Jesus Christ?

* * *

O. Hyde When there is a want of union, it requires us to speak plain, bro. Pratt does not claim any vision or revelation, but keeps within the scope of Joseph's revelations. The Universalians have their belief, The Presbyterians do the same, they consider they believe they are in the pale of revealed religion. all the Sects do the same, yet how widely they differ, then here comes a man (B.Y.) who says he has a revelation, but it means the sects, if is Antagonistic. I see no necessity of rejecting Joseph's revelations, or going to War with the living ones, that is the nearest to us. bro. Pratt is like the Jews, who garnish the sepulchers of the dead, but reject those that were the nearest to them. I do not see any contradiction or opposition between B. Young & J. Smith.

O. Pratt it was the Father of Jesus Christ that was talking to Adam in the garden - B. Young says that Adam was the Father of Jesus Christ, both of his Spirit and Body, in his teachings from the stand, bro. Richards publishes in the Pearl of Great Price, that another person would come in the meridian of time, which was Jesus Christ.

O. Hyde David in spirit called Jesus Christ, Lord, how then is he his Son? it would seem a contradiction, I went to Joseph and told him my ideas of the Omnipresence of the Spirit, he said it was very pretty, and it was got up very nice, and is a beautiful doctrine, but it only lacks one thing, I enquired what is it bro Joseph, he replied it is not true.

J. Taylor spoke again "if Christ is the first fruits of them that slept" there must be some discrepancy, he must have resumed his position, having a legitimate claim to a possession some where else, he ought not to be debarred from his rights. the power of God was sufficient to resuscitate Jesus immediately, and also the body of Adam.

* * *

O. Pratt I have heard brother Brigham say that Adam is the Father of our Spirits, and he came here with his resurrected body, to fall for his own children; and I said to him, it leads to an endless number of falls, which leads to sorrow and death: that is revolting to my feelings, even if it were not sustained by revelation.

E. Snow Is there any revelation saying that the body of Adam should return to the dust of this Earth?

O. Pratt if you bring Adam as a Spirit, and put him into the tabernacle, runs easy with me; another item, I heard brother Young say that Jesus had a body, flesh and bones, before he came, he was born of the Virgin Mary, it was so contrary to every revelation given.

89. Brigham Young Journal? Prest Young and the Twelve met in the Historians office 8 p m of April 5 1860.

B.Y. this day I have seen the best spirit manifested I have heard 15 or 16 men all running in the same stream I was delighted Tomorrow the Church will be 30 years old about the age that Jesus was when he commenced his mission

We are improving and I just know it, my path is like the noon day sun, and I could cry out hallelujah! hallelujah! Praise to God who has been merciful to us and conferred on us His Holy Spirit A private member in this church is brighter than the power of Kings and Princes of the world. to secure an eternal existence the wicked have to be blotted out of existence & the greatest gift is to have eternal existence for ever written in the Lamb's book of life bro Orson (Pratt) I want you to do just as you have done in your Apostleship, but when you want to teach new doctrine, to write those ideas, and submit them to me, and if they are correct, I will tell you - there is not a man's sermons that I like to read, when you understand your subject - but you are not perfect, neither am I.

90. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; April 5, 1860.

The Quorum of the Twelve met this morning in the prayer room. We talked the matter over concerning Brother Pratt. Dressed and prayed. Read over his sermon and corrected it, and the Twelve voted to receive the confession of Orson Pratt.

91. J.D. 8:243-244; President Heber C. Kimball delivered at Willow Creek; June 12, 1860.

We often sing, "This earth was once a garden place," where God our Father dwelt, and took possession and a stand that mankind will take who attain to that honour. . . . When he (Adam) planted the garden, he planted it with seeds he brought with him; and he also brought the animals from the earth he lived upon, where his Father dwelt.

92. Deseret News; Brigham Young; June 27, 1860.

And I will say, as I have said before, if guilt before my God and my brethren rests upon me in the least, it is in this one thing, that I have revealed too much concerning God and his kingdom, and the designs of our Father in heaven. If my skirts are stained in the least with wrong, it is because I have been too free in telling who God is, how he lives, the nature of his providences and designs in creating the world, in bringing the human family on the earth, his designs concerning them, etc. If I had, like Paul, said --- "But if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant," perhaps it would have been better for the people.

93. Deseret News; Orson Pratt; July 25, 1860. (See also Feb 22, 1860 and Jan 29, 1860.

At the time I expressed these views, I did most sincerely believe that they were in accordance with the word of God. I did most sincerely suppose that I was justifying the truth. But I have since learned from my brethren that some of the doctrines I had advanced in The Seer at Washington were incorrect. Naturally being of a stubborn disposition and having a kind of self-will about me; and moreover supposing really and sincerely that I did understand what true doctrine was in relation to those points, I did not feel to yield to the judgment of my brethren, but believed they were in error.
I do not know that I shall be able to carry out these views; but these are my present determinations. I pray that I may have the grace and strength to perform this. I feel exceedingly weak in regard to these matters.

94. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; September 4, 1860.

Brother Cannon said there was a learned Doctor that wanted to be baptized. . . . He (the doctor) is satisfied that the doctrine of the plurality of God and that Adam is our Father is a true doctrine revealed from God to Joseph & Brigham. For this same doctrine is taught in some of the old Jewish records which have never been in print and I know Joseph Smith nor Brigham Young have had access to, and the Lord has revealed this doctrine unto them or they could not have taught it. President Young said if all that God had revealed was in fine print it would more than fill this room but very little is written or printed which the Lord has revealed.

95. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; September 9, 1860.

* * *

President Young then spoke to Orson Pratt & said that the book debt was the worst trouble the saints had to contend with for 6 years. Orson Pratt has done more to make that debt than any other man. So many books are forced upon the people, and they are forced to take them or they will not be fellowshipped. Now stop publishing & getting your portraits taken & fill the kingdom with them & make the people pay for them, this keeps the people poor and keep them from emigrating. * * *

96. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; September 23, 1860.

. . . we repaired to the prayer room where we had a very interesting meeting. The subject of Orson Pratt came up again concerning his false doctrines. President Kimball wished him to make satisfaction to President Young. But President Young said he did not wish him to make any acknowledgement to him. Brother Pratt was strangely constituted, he had acquired a great deal of knowledge upon many things but in other things he was one of the most ignorant men he ever saw in his life. He was full of integrity & would lie down & have his head cut off for me or his religion if necessary but he will never see his error until he goes into the spirit world. Then he will say, Brother Brigham, how foolish I was. Now Brother Pratt thinks that he and all the Gods will be learning for many millions of years but by & by will know all things & all will know it alike & that will be the end of their exaltations & knowledge. He cannot see the folly of forming this opinion here in the flesh & in his ignorance. But a thousand years hence he will see the folly of it. I will hold on to Brother Pratt and all those my Brethren of the Twelve notwithstanding all their sins, folly & weaknesses until I meet with them in my Fathers Kingdom, to part no more because they love God and are full of integrity. Brother Pratt said I do not believe as Brother Brigham & Brother Kimball do in some points of doctrine & they do not wish me to acknowledge to others that I do not believe. Brother Brigham said No, you cannot see the truth in this matter until you get into the spirit world.

97. J.D. 8:208; President Brigham Young delivered in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City; October 14, 1860.

Many of the sisters grieve because they are not blessed with offspring. You will see the time when you will have millions of children around you. If you are faithful to your covenants, you will become mothers of nations. You will become Eves to earths like this; and when you have assisted in peopling one earth there are millions of earths still in the course of creation.

99. Brigham Young Papers; Ms/d/1234/Bx 49/fd 8, Church Historical Department. Unpublished discourse of Brigham Young given in the Salt Lake City Tabernacle, October 8th, 1861, in the morning session.

I will give you a few words doctrine, upon which there has been much inquiry, and with regard to which considerable ignorance exists. Brother Watt will write it, but it is not my intention to have it published; therefore pay good attention, and store it up in your memories. Some years ago, I advanced a doctrine with regard to Adam being our Father and God. That will be a curse to many of the Elders of Israel, because of their folly with regard to it. They yet grovel in darkness--and will. It is one of the most glorious revelations [concerning] the economy of heaven, yet the world hold it [in] derision.

Had I revealed the doctrine of Baptism for the Dead instead of Joseph Smith, there are men around me [right now] who would have ridiculed the idea until dooms day. But they are ignorant and stupid like the dumb ass.

100. "A Few Words of Doctrine"; Brigham Young; Ms/d/1234/Bx 49/fd 8; an unpublished discourse given in the Tabernacle in Great Salt Lake City, October 8th, 1861, in the A.M.

Let me say one thing to the young girls, and what I shall tell you I wish you to ponder in your hearts. Say nothing about it, for the wicked world has no business with these things, nor half-hearted Mormons. If there is any[one] here who will not make a good use of what they hear, the evil shall be up[on] themselves.

I wish to say to my young sisters, if you can go into the hands of a man, that will lead you into the Kingdom of Heaven, and exalt you there to become an Eve--a Queen of Heaven--the wife of a God; if you can remain with that man [in] whom your soul delights, and you take to him your virginity, you have obtained a treasure that millions of worlds like this [one] could not buy from you--there is your glory to all eternity.

Trifle with this matter, and you will reap sorrow and sore affliction. When you make your choice of a husband for time and eternity, and you are sure you have got your choice, hang on to him. . . .

101. James Beck Journal (Notebook) 1859-1865; October 8th 1861. Spelling as in original.

Conference Mett in the Tabernacle Bro W. W. Phelps said Joseph Smith said that Eve had 28 sons & 28 daughters & that Adam had many wives--Bro Brigham than got into the stand & stated the same thing. He then gave some instructions in relation to sealing He said that there were many men & women who after having been sealed to each other for time & all Eternity--came to him for a Bill of Divorce. & for the sum of 10 Dollors he gave them a Bill Because the Lord permitted it but it was of no use to them. They might just as well tear off a Peice of their shirt tail or have a Peice of Blank Paper for a Divorce. But on account of the hardness of their hearts, the Lord permitted it, as it was in the days of Moses. But there was a way in which a woman could leave a man lawfully. When a woman becomes alienated in her feelings & affections from her husband-it is then his duty to give her a Bill & set her free which would be fornication for the man to cohabit with his wife after she had thus become alienated from him. The children begotten of such a woman would be Bastards in the true Scriptural term of the word Fornication, for the crime of adultry a woman (& also men) would be stoned to Death & then come up in the morning of the Resurection & Claim all of her rights & Privledges in the marriage covenant. Also there was another way in which a woman could leave a man-if the woman Preferred--another man higher in authority & he is willing to take her, & her husband gives her up-there is no Bill of divorce required in the case it is right in the sight of God. But if he ever after has any connexion with her, he is then guilty of committing a very great sin & will be Punished accordingly. If a Man is faithfull & should his wife leave him & be married to another without his consent there is no Power in heaven or on Earth that can Prevent him from claiming her in the Resurrection. If faithfull a Man will attain to an Adam & the Wife to be an Eve & begat Millions of Spirits who will come forth & receive their Tabernacles upon an earth like this &c- The glory of the Man is the woman, And the glory of the woman is her Virginity-Men are the Lords of Creation & the Responsibility rests upon the man & not upon the woman-all women will be saved after they have sufferred & atoned for their sins & thus satisfied the ends of Justice they will not become angels to the Devil. The Curse Placed upon the woman is that her desire shall be to her husband she shall long & Desire for him & will not wish to be suplanted by another & in sorrow & in Pain she shall bring forth her offspring, if it was not for this curse, the woman would bring forth as easy as she would drink a glass of water. The curse upon the man is that he shall labour to support his family by the sweat of his brow &c & he has to be tormented with thorns & briars sunflowers & all kinds of noxious weeds. Is there any way for a man & his wife to committ sin in the mariage state-there is. It is for us to cultivate the Principles of life which God has Planted in us & not for us to Destroy life by an unlawfull intercourse with each other, but for us to multiply & Replenish the Earth as God has enjoined upon us. Only one man to my knowledge has heard this Read besides myself & that was Bro Campkin [lin?] 17th ward. Joseph Smith said that the 2 Prophets who would Prophesy in the streets of Jerusalem for 3 years & a half, were Enoch & Elijh. Also the two wings north & South of our earth were inhabited. the north with the 9-1/2 tribes & the south wing by the People of Enochs City--this Earth when first created occupied a Position next to Kolob the highest in glory of all the Creations consequently on account of the high Position we once occupied we have fallen below all of the others in space--consequently our sufferings are greater--the greater the rise the greater will be the fall-when we are Redeemed we will be taken back again & Placed in our former Position. 102. Millennial Star, Vol. 23:653-654; President George Q. Cannon; October, 1861.

President Young, in the foregoing passages (J.D. 1:50-51 & others), while substantiating the fact of the union of man's preexisting spirit with a bodily product of the "dust of the ground," enters more particularly into the modus operandi of that union. He unmistakably declares man's origin to be altogether of a celestial character---that not only is his spirit of heavenly descent, but his organization too,---that the latter is not taken from the lower animals, but from the originally celestial body of the great Father of humanity.

103. J.D. 9:148; Brigham Young; Tabernacle in Salt Lake City, Utah; January 12, 1862.

Adam was as conversant with his Father who placed him upon this earth as we are conversant with our earthly parents. The Father frequently came to visit his son Adam, and talked and walked with him; and the children of Adam were more or less acquainted with their Grandfather, and their children were more or less acquainted with their Great-Grandfather; and the things that pertain to God and to heaven were as familiar among mankind, in the first ages of their existence on the earth, as these mountains are to our mountain boys.

104. Letter to President Brigham Young from W. W. Phelps; Jan. 20th, 1862.

President Young, or Brother Young just as pleases you best.

Judge Phelps or rather brother Phelps wishes to say that he has discovered the following "old revelation"

"Lead thy people, with thy support, the flock of thine estate, living in a lone wild, in the midst of the garden; let them be lead from the mountains like the days of old. According to the forty years of the going out of Egypt, our Lion will become terrible.

The nations shall behold, and become ashamed of their power;: They shall put their hand upon their mouth, and stop their ears. They shall lick dust like the serpent: like the snakes of the earth. They shall quake, shutting themselves up on account of the Almighty: the Lord our God; They will tremble and fear because of thee."--The Lion of the Lord--so much for Zion: eight years more will complete the "forty"--and then the Temple up, Israel will want "Room;"--and there will be plenty in the "United States" that once was! Hussa! for Deseret. As I am nearly the oldest member of the "Council of fifty," when the state of Deseret is officered I wish to be remembered. When Zion is to be built up no more to be thrown down, I shall be in my place by revelation. To end the whole matter, we must be heared by the Gods; fearing: and, according to the commandments, watch,--for this sustained Adam our Father, who is the Almighty before mentioned. When Israel was in the Wilderness, they kept the word of wisdom, as died like Achan for stealing, god and garments. My voice is Virtue and Victory. Amen!

105. J.D. 9:243; Brigham Young; Dedication of the New Theatre in Great Salt Lake City; March 6, 1862.

The Lord knows all things; man should know all things pertaining to this life, and to obtain this knowledge it is right that he should use every feasible means; and I do not hesitate to say that the stage can, in a great degree, be made to subserve this end. It is written, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." Refuse evil, choose good, hate iniquity, love truth. All this our fathers have done before us; I do not particularly mean father Adam, or his Father; I do not particularly mean Abraham, or Moses, the Prophets, of Apostles, but I mean our fathers who have been exalted for millions of years previous to Adam's time. They have all passed through the same ordeals we are now passing through, and have searched all things, even to the depths of hell.

106. J.D. 10:221; President Brigham Young; given during April and May, 1863.

The Lord could impart this information (how to raise corn) in a special revelation, the same as he instructed Adam and Eve how to cover their nakedness. He showed them how to make aprons of leaves and then coats of skins, and instructed Adam in extracting the metals from their ores, the same as one man instructs another.

107. J.D. 10:235; Discourse by Heber C. Kimball; Provo, Utah; June 27, 1863.

We have been taught that our Father and God, from whom we sprang, called and appointed his servants to go and organize an earth, and, among the rest, he said to Adam, "You go along also and help all you can; you are going to inhabit it when it is organized, therefore go and assist in the good work." It reads in the Scriptures that the Lord did it, but the true rendering is, that the Almighty sent Jehovah and Michael to do the work. They were also instructed to plant every kind of vegetable, likewise the forest and the fruit trees, and they actually brought from heaven every variety of fruit, of the seeds of vegetables, the seeds of flowers, and planted them in this earth on which we dwell. And I will say more, the spot chosen for the garden of Eden was Jackson County, in the State of Missouri, where Independence now stands; it was occupied in the morn of creation by Adam and his associates who came with him for the express purpose of peopling this earth.

Father Adam was instructed to multiply and replenish the earth, to make it beautiful and glorious, to make it, in short, like unto the garden from which the seeds were brought to plant the garden of Eden. I might say much more upon this subject, but I will ask, has it not been imitated before you in your holy endowments so that you might understand how things were in the beginning of creation and cultivation of this earth? God the Father made Adam the Lord of this creation in the beginning, and if we are the Lords of this creation under Adam, ought we not to take a course to imitate our Father in heaven? Is not all this exhibited to us in our endowments: the earth made glorious and beautiful to look upon, representing everything which the Lord caused to be prepared and placed to adorn the earth. The Prophet Joseph frequently spoke of these things in the revelations which he gave, but the people generally did not understand them, but to those who did they were cheering, they had a tendency to gladden the heart and enlighten the mind.

108. J.D. 10:230-231; President Brigham Young; Remarks were delivered on the Public Square, Great Salt Lake City; July 8, 1863.

We believe in God the Father and in Jesus Christ our elder brother. We believe that God is a person of tabernacle, possessing in an infinitely higher degree all the perfections and qualifications of his mortal children. We believe that he made Adam after his own image and likeness, as Moses testifies; and in this belief we differ from the professedly Christian world, who declare that "His center is everywhere, but his circumference is nowhere." Their God has no body nor parts; our God possesses a body and parts, and was heard by Adam and Eve "Walking in the garden in the cool of the day."

109. J.D. 10:355; President Brigham Young; Delivered in the Bowery; November 6, 1864. After quoting D&C 107:53-55, President Young continues:

So, in like manner, every faithful son of God, becomes, as it were, Adam to the race that springs from his loins, when they are embraced in the covenants and blessings of the Holy Priesthood; and in the lapse of eternity, and in the progress of eternal lives, every true son of God becomes a king of kings, and a lord of lords, and it may also be said of him, as it was written of Jesus Christ, "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end."

110. J.D. 11:41; Brigham Young; Remarks delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City; January 8, 1865.

No mortal man has ever seen God in His glory at any time and lived. We may have seen the Lord and angels many times, and did not know it. I will be satisfied with seeing and associating with His children whom I now behold, for there is not a son or daughter of Adam and Eve before me today but what is the offspring of that God we worship. He is our Heavenly Father; He is also our God, and the Maker and upholder of all things in heaven and on earth.

111. J.D. 11:121-122; President Brigham Young; Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, June 18, 1865.

We believe in a Deity who is incorporated---who is a Being of tabernacle, through which the great attributes of His nature are made manifest. It is supposed by a certain celebrated philosopher that the most minute particles of matter . . . possess a portion of divinity, a portion of infinite power, knowledge, goodness and truth, and that these qualities are God, and should be worshipped wherever found. I am an infidel to this doctrine. . . . Elder Orson Pratt has written extensively on the doctrines of this church, and upon this particular doctrine. When he writes and speaks upon subjects with which he is acquainted and understands, he is a very sound reasoner; but when he has written upon matters of which he knows nothing---his own philosophy, which I call vain philosophy---he is wild, uncertain, and contradictory.

He (God) created man, as we create our children; for there is no other process of creation in heaven, on the earth, in the earth, or under the earth, or in all the eternities, that is, that were, or that ever will be.

112. Deseret News, p. 370; Article signed and published by the First Presidency and the Quorum of the Twelve; August 23, 1865.

We do not wish incorrect and unsound doctrines to be handed down to posterity under the sanction of great names, to be received and valued by future generations as authentic and reliable, creating labor and difficulties for our successors to perform and contend with, which we ought not to transmit to them. The interests of posterity are, to a certain extent, in our hands. Errors in history and in doctrine, if left uncorrected by us who are conversant with the events, and who are in a position to judge of the truth or falsity of the doctrines, would go to our children as though we had sanctioned and endorsed them. Such a construction could very easily be put upon our silence respecting them, and would tend to perplex and mislead posterity, and make the labor or correction an exceedingly difficult one for them. We know what sanctity there is always attached to the writings of men who have passed away, especially to the writings of Apostles, when none of their contemporaries are left, and we, therefore, feel the necessity of being watchful upon these points. Personal feelings and friendships and associations ought to sink into comparative insignificance, and have no weight in view of consequences so momentous to the people and kingdom of God as these.

THE SPIRIT

* * *

O may the Saints be perfect
As God our Father was,
When he got back to Eden,
By her celestial laws.

114. Conference Report, October 1865, Semi-Annual General Conference; Elder F. D. Richards; Monday, October 9th, 1865, 10 a.m. [None of these discourses are in the J.D.]

He [Elder Richards] dwelt at length on some of the principles of theology, showing that duties of a temporal nature were the first that were enjoined upon our first parents when they were placed in the garden of Eden;. . . .

115. Millennial Star, Vol 27:698; November, 1865.

The Seer, the "Great First Cause", and certain articles by Orson Pratt on the Holy Spirit were disowned by the Church. The people of the Church were asked to destroy his questionable writings.

116. J.D. 11:286; President Brigham Young; Great Salt Lake Tabernacle; January 13, 1867.

Some men seem as if they could learn so much and no more. They appear to be bounded in their capacity for acquiring knowledge as Brother Orson Pratt, has in theory, bounded the capacity of God. According to his theory, God can progress no further in knowledge and power; but the God that I serve is progressing eternally, and so are his children; they will increase to all eternity, if they are faithful.

117. Journal of Wilford Woodruff, May 5, 1867.

At St. George meeting on Sunday:

I wish to say a word about Amasa Lyman & tell why he is dropped from the Twelve. It is because of his infidelity. He has no faith in the Atonement, & another reason is he has lied in his confession. He has preached infidelity for many years to the people, but not the Presidency & Twelve. Orson Pratt does not believe in a God, only in attributes, but not in a personage. He would have been cut off from the Church long ago had it not have been for me. The Twelve would have cut him off. Did any one of you ever hear of any one of the Twelve ever preach the baby resurrection? I have heard of it. Neither of those brethren will be enabled to do any good.

118. Letter from W. W. Phelps to President Brigham Young; Great Salt Lake City, May 6, 1867.

Pres. Young. If I correctly understood your meaning yesterday afternoon in the Tabernacle, "you did not know whether, the man, I mentioned, as spoken of in the book of Doc. & Cov. Sec. 101 Pat. 3. page 292 English Ed. meant you or not." Now as that Revelation was given more than 28 years ago, and before we were driven from Missouri, or Illinois, and even before the prophet Joseph was martyred, I still have a very easy notion in my heart that, as you lead the "Church of Jesus Christ, of Latter day Saints," over Plains and mountains to these waste places of Zion, to these chambers of the High places of Jehovah, even these "Holy places," where we, as a people, are free from the confusion, and utter abolishment that has already begun to be poured out upon Babylon, that you are the man likened unto Moses, in the revelation, and will, at the end of 40 years, like the Lion mentioned by Micah, become Terrible, and lead the armies of Israel back to Jackson County, Missouri, where, according to your first "anointing in the Lord's House at Kirtland, you, as well as myself, had the sealed blessing of the prophet upon our heads "to live to be as old as Moses," which will bring us both into the resurrection far enough to be changed in the twinkling of an eye.

The Revelations on stewardships, in the Doc. & Cov. commencing on page 165. Sec 26, shows to you and I as well as brothers Kimball and Wells, that the Lord had the same thing in view, when he made us "stewards" over the Revelations:--the fourth paragraph, in particular, with that "whatsoever circumstances," and thus, "whithersoever I the Lord shall send them"--sounds to me as if the Lord knew what you and I would do and need--as to the revelation, which Morris and Cook, are trambooming on up at the Weber, it reads: "And it shall come to pass, that I the Lord God will send one mighty and strong, holding the sceptre of power in his hand, clothed with light for a covering; whose mouth shall utter words, eternal words, while his laurels shall be a fountain of truth: --to set in order the house of God, and to arrange by lot the inheritance of the saints, etc. etc. while that man who was called of God, and appointed that put forth his hand to steady the Ark of God, shall fall by the shaft of death"--etc. now this revelation was sent to me in Zion, and has reference to the time when Adam our father and God, comes at the beginning of our Eternal Lot of inheritance,--according as our names are found in the Law of the Lord, while the fools that received the priesthood, like the fool that took his "one Talent" and hit it;--or reached out to steady the ark, will find themselves where the rich man did --in hell, with plenty of fire--but no water. Love begets lives eternal; our grace begets glory, but sin seeks secession, where goats and skunks can enjoy the lower room fog of a more dismal prison, than the nether room of Noah's Ark. Now should I be wrong in my belief as to these quotations:--please let me have your views, for I am for God, light and life as his "steward" yours etc.

W. W. Phelps

119. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; Ms/f/115, Church Historical Department; May 12, 1867.

At Fillmore public meeting:
President Young said there never was any world created & peopled nor never would be but what would be redeemed by the shedding of the blood of the savior of that world. If we are ever exalted and crowned in the presence of God we shall become saviors of a world which we shall create & people. I know why the Blood of Jesus was shed, I know why the blood of Joseph & Hiram & others have been shed and the blood of others will be shed it is all to answer a purpose and has its effect Adam made this world and suffered himself to take a body and descending below all things we cannot ascend above all things. There never will be any change of the gospel of Salvation. it is an Eternal gospel and the same in all worlds and always will be to the endless ages of Eternity. There never was a period but what worlds existed & never will be, and they all have the same Gospel & Law of Salvation. Amasa Lyman is rejecting the Blood of Christ has cut himself off from the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles and he cannot be restored to it in this probation. He has had a chance to be a great man in this Kingdom. He never was Joseph Smiths councillor but was a Thirteenth Apostle for a long time.

120. J.D. 12:97; Brigham Young; Bowery, Great Salt Lake City; June 30, 1867.

If you are not sanctified and prepared, you ought to be sanctifying and preparing yourselves for the blessings in store for you when it will be said of you, this is Mother Eve. Why? Because you are the mother of all living. You might as well prepare first as last. If you wish to be Eves and mothers of human families, you ought to bear the burden.

121. "Minutes of Meetings Held in Provo City", film/979.2/Z99/v.2, BYU Microfilm Room; given in the Provo Bowery; Sunday morning, 25 August 1867.

Pres. Young was pleased with the teachings that had been given during this conference. Refered to the fall of man. The bodies of Adam and Eve were pure and after the Celestial order until they partook of the forbidden fruit when their bodies were changed with the things of this world. Adam helped organize this world for an inheritance for himself and posterity.

122. Journal of Wilford Woodruff, September 4, 1867.

At Salt Lake City: The Twelve held a Council in the evening in relation to false doctrines. O Hyde had formerly preached an incorrect doctrine on the resurrection called the baby resurrection. Elder Orson Hyde renounced the doctrine & made it all right with the Quorum. Some things were not quite satisfactory with O Pratt on doctrine.

123. Journal of Wilford Woodruff, September 10, 1867.

* * * Social conversation ensued upon this subject (the baby resurrection doctrine of Orson Hyde); even the Godhead. O Pratt said that he did not worship attributes aside from the personage of God, but believed that God was an organized Being the same as man and that man possessed the attributes of God & would become a God if he kept the celestial law.

124. Journal of Wilford Woodruff, September 12, 1867.

At Paris, Idaho: The President & Twelve held a Council in the evening upon the difference of opinion with O. Pratt.

125. Journal of Wilford Woodruff, December 16, 1867.

At meeting of School of the Prophets: President Young said Adam was Michael the Archangel, & he was the Father of Jesus Christ & was our God & that Joseph taught this principle.

126. Wilford Woodruff at the School of the Prophets; Jan 24, 1868.

. . . I feel thankful for the privilege of speaking a few words to this school. I wish to refer to the first doctrine preached (?) that Adam was our Father & God in the revelation called the olive leaf it says that "the devil gathered together the hosts of hell and Michael the ark angel gathered together the hosts of heaven and he overcame the devil & his angels & this is the battle of the great God" who is this Michael the ark angel it is Adam who was Michael in the creation of the world. . .

127. "Minutes of the School of the Prophets", pp. 37-42; Provo, Utah; June 8, 1868.

Abraham B. Smoot:

I will just say further there are a great many subjects pertaining to the building up of Zion, that have not been presented in the school yet---the object of the school is to educate the brethren so that they will be able to take the lead in matters pertaining to the building up of the kingdom.

The doctrine preached by Pres. Young for a few years back, wherein he says that Adam is our God---the God we worship---that most of the people believe this---some believe it because the President says so---others because they can find testimony in the Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants. Amasa Lyman stumbled on this, he did not believe it---he did not believe in the atonement of Jesus---Orson Pratt has also told the President that he does not believe it. This is not the way to act. We should not suffer ourselves to entertain one doubt. We are not accountable on points of doctrines if the President makes a statement. It is not our prerogative to dispute it. He is only accountable in points of doctrine. I have heard President Young avow the truth of Adam being our Father and God but have never heard him argue the question at all.

A. F. McDonald:

I thought I would speak briefly in relation to Adam being our God. Since the year 1852 when the President first spoke on this subject, I have frequently endeavored to reconcile what I have read with regard to this matter. I believe what the President says on the subject although it comes in contact with all our tradition. I have not any doubt in my mind but that Adam is our God. Who his God and Father may be, I have no knowledge. President Kimball spoke on this question recently and very plainly illustrated the character and relationship of our Father and God.

George G. Bywater:
I am not disposed to question the discrepancies on this question of doctrine; if we live faithful all will become clear to us. We cannot become united only as we get united in understanding. When I first heard the doctrine of Adam being our Father and God, I was favorably impressed---enjoyed, and hailed it as a new revelation. It appeared reasonable to me, as the Father of our spirits that he should introduce us here. And what we do not see is only evidence that we have not the light necessary.

128. Letter from Orson Pratt to President Young, cf/1325/Bx 4/fd 3/loose; Salt lake City; July 1, 1868.

"To President B. Young:"
"Dear Brother, since the last two meetings at the school, I have, at times, reflected much and very seriously, upon the feelings which I have suffered myself for years to occasionally entertain respecting certain doctrines, or rather items of ante-deluvian history, now believed by the Church, and have tried to justify myself in taking an opposite view, on the supposition that I was supported by the letter of the word of God: but as often as I have yielded to this influence I have felt an indescribable wretchedness which fully convinces me that I am wrong; I wish to repent of these wrongs for I fully realize that my sins, in this respect, have been very great, and of long continuance, and that it has been only through your great forbearance and long suffering, and the patience of my quorum, that I have been continued in the high and responsible calling of the Apostleship to this day.
"I am deeply sensible that I have greatly sinned against you, and against my brethren of the school, and against God, in foolishly trying to justify myself in advancing ideas, opposed to those which have been introduced by the highest authorities of the Church, and adopted by the Saints. I humbly ask you and the school to forgive me. Hereafter, through the grace of God assisting me, I am determined to be one with you, and never be found opposing anything that comes through the legitimate order of the Priesthood, knowing that it is perfectly right for me to humbly submit, in all matters of doctrine and principle, my judgment to those whose right it is, by divine appointment to receive revelation and guide the Church.
"There is no one thing in this world, or in that which is to come which I do more earnestly desire, than to honor my calling, and be permitted to retain the same, and with my brethren the Twelve, enter the Celestial Kingdom, with a full preparation to enjoy the glory thereof for ever.
"In regard to all that portion of my printed writings which have come under the inspection of the highest authorities of the Church, and judged incorrect, I do most sincerely hope that the same may be rejected and considered of no value, only to point out the imperfections of the author, and to be a warning to others to be more careful. This request I made formerly, but feel to renew it again in this letter.
"With feelings of great sorrow, and deep regret for all my past sins, I subscribe myself your humble brother in Christ."
"Orson Pratt, Sen."

Some may think what I have said concerning Adam strange, but the period will come when the people will be willing to adopt Joseph Smith as their prophet, Seer, and Revelator and God! but not the Father of their spirits, for that was our Father Adam.

132. Millennial Star 31:267; President Brigham Young; 1869.

Before me I see a house full of Eves. What a crowd of reflections the word Eve is calculated to bring up! Eve was the name or title conferred upon our first mother, because she was actually to be the mother of all the human beings who should live upon this earth. I am looking upon a congregation designed to be just such beings.

133. J.D. 13:311; President Brigham Young; delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City; Sunday, April 17, 1870.

The world may in vain ask the question, "Who are we?" But the Gospel tells us that we are the sons and daughters of that God whom we serve. Some say, "We are the children of Adam and Eve." So we are, and they are the children of our Heavenly Father. We are all the children of Adam and Eve, and they and we are the offspring of Him who dwells in the heavens, the highest Intelligence that dwells anywhere that we have any knowledge of.

137. J.D. 14:111; President Brigham Young; delivered in the Salt Lake Tabernacle; May 7, 1871.

Do you not all know that you are the sons and daughters of the Almighty? If you do not I will inform you this morning that there is not a man or woman on the earth that is not a son or daughter of Adam and Eve. We all belong to the races which have sprung from father Adam and mother Eve; and every son and daughter of Adam and Eve is a son and daughter of that God we serve, who organized this earth and millions of others, and who holds them in existence by law.

138. J.D. 14:242; Elder Orson Pratt; August 20, 1871.

There are no marriages among spirits, no coupling together of the males and females among them; but when they rise from the grave after being tabernacled in mortal bodies, they have all the functions that are necessary to people worlds. As our Father and God begat us sons and daughters, so will we rise immortal males and females, and beget children and, in our turn, form and create worlds, and send forth our spirit children to inherit those worlds, the same as we were sent here, and thus will the works of God continue, and not only God himself, and His Son Jesus Christ have the power of endless lives, but all of His redeemed offspring.

139. J.D. 15:136-137; delivered at Farmington; Saturday afternoon, August 24, 1872.

Now a few words to the brethren and sisters upon the doctrine and ordinances of the house of God. All who have lived on the earth according to the best light they had, and would have received the fullness of the Gospel had it been preached to them, are worthy of a glorious resurrection, and will attain to this by being administered for in the flesh by those who have the authority. All others will have a resurrection, and receive a glory, except those who have sinned against the Holy Ghost. It is supposed by this people that we have all the ordinances in our possession for life and salvation, and exaltation, and that we are administering in these ordinances. This is not the case. We are in possession of all the ordinances that can be administered in the flesh; but there are other ordinances and administrations that must be administered beyond this world. I know you would ask what they are. I will mention one. We have not, neither can we receive here, the ordinance and the keys of the resurrection. They will be given to those who have passed off this stage of action and have received their bodies again, as many have already done and many more will. They will be ordained, by those who hold the keys of the resurrection, to go forth and resurrect the Saints, just as we receive the ordinance of baptism, then the keys of authority to baptize others for the remission of their sins. This is one of the ordinances we can not receive here, and there are many more. We hold the authority to dispose of, alter and change the elements; but we have not received authority to organize native element to even make a spear of grass grow. We have no such ordinance here. We organize according to men in the flesh. By combining the elements and planting the seed, we cause vegetables, trees, grains, &c., to come forth. We are organizing a kingdom here according to the pattern that the Lord has given for people in the flesh, but not for those who have received the resurrection, although it is a similitude. Another item: We have not the power in the flesh to create and bring forth or produce a spirit; but we have the power to produce a temporal body. The germ of this, God has placed within us. And when our spirits receive our bodies, and through our faithfulness we are worthy to be crowned, we will then receive authority to produce both spirit and body. But these keys we cannot receive in the flesh. Herein, brethren, you can perceive that we have not finished, and cannot finish our work, while we live here, no more than Jesus did while he was in the flesh.

We can not receive, while in the flesh, the keys to form and fashion kingdoms and to organize matter for they are beyond our capacity and calling, beyond this world. In the resurrection, men who have been faithful and diligent in all things in the flesh, have kept their first and second estate, and worthy to be crowned Gods, even the sons of God, will be ordained to organize matter. How much matter do you suppose there is between here and some of the fixed stars which we can see? Enough to frame many, very many millions of such earths as this, yet it is now so diffused, clear and pure, that we look through it and behold the stars.

. . . I have been found fault with a great many times for casting reflections upon men of science, and especially upon theologians, because of the little knowledge they possess about man being on the earth, about the earth itself, about our Father in heaven, his Son Jesus Christ, the order of heavenly things, the laws by which angels exist, by which the worlds were created and are held in existence, &c. How pleased we would be to place these things before the people if they would receive them! How much unbelief exists in the minds of the Latter-day Saints in regard to one particular doctrine which I revealed to them, and which God revealed to me--namely that Adam is our father and God--I do not know, I do not inquire, I care nothing about it. Our Father Adam helped to make this earth, it was created expressly for him, and after it was made he and his companions came here. He brought one of his wives with him, and she was called Eve, because she was the first woman upon the earth. Our Father Adam is the man who stands at the gate and holds the keys of everlasting life and salvation to all his children who have or who ever will come upon the earth. I have been found fault with by the ministers of religion because I have said that they were ignorant. But I could not find any man on the earth who could tell me this, although it is one of the simplest things in the world, until I met and talked with Joseph Smith.

The Christian world read of, and thing much about, St. Paul, also St. Peter, the chief of the Apostles. These men were faithful to and magnified the priesthood while on the earth. Now, where will be the mystery, after they have passed through all the ordeals, and have been crowned and exalted, and received their inheritances in the eternal worlds of glory, for them to be sent forth, as the Gods have been for ever and ever, with the command--"Make yourselves an earth and people it with your own children?"

* * *

My brother said that God is as we are. He did not mean those words to be literally understood. He meant simply, that in our organization we have all the properties in embryo in our bodies that our Father has in his, and that literally, morally, socially, by the spirit and by the flesh we are his children. Do you think that God, who holds the eternities in his hands and can do all things at his pleasure, it not capable of sending forth his own children, and forming this flesh for his own offspring? Where is the mystery in this? We say that Father Adam came here and helped to make the earth. Who is he? He is Michael, a great prince, and it was said to him by Eloheim, : Go ye and make an earth." What is the great mystery about it? He came and formed the earth. . . . Adam found it in a state of chaos, unorganized and incomplete. . . . Adam came here and got it up in a shape that would suit him to commence business. Father Adam came here, and then they brought his wife. "Well," says one, "Why was Adam called Adam?" He was the first man on the earth, and its framer and maker. He with the help of his brethren, brought it into existence. Then he said,"I want my children who are in the spirit world to come and live here. I once dwelt upon an earth something like this, in a mortal state, I was faithful, I received my crown and exaltation. I have the privilege of extending my work, and to its increase there will be no end. I want my children that were born to me in the spirit world to come here and take tabernacles of flesh, that their spirits may have a house, a tabernacle or a dwelling place as mine has, and where is the mystery?

143. J.D. 16:127; President Daniel H. Wells; Delivered in the Salt Lake Tabernacle; Saturday afternoon, August 9, 1873.

It has been revealed in our day who we are, and the relationship we hold to God. We have learned that God is our Father, and that we are his children, bona fide his children. Not in a spiritual sense alone, but when we say, "Our Father who are in heaven," we mean just what we say.

144. J.D. 16: 167; Brigham Young; Bowery, Paris, Oneida County, Idaho; Sunday, August 31, 1873.

When Father Adam came to assist in organizing the earth out of the crude material that was found, an earth was made upon which the children of men could live. After the earth was prepared Father Adam came and stayed here, and there was a woman brought to him. Now I am telling you something that many of you know, it has been told to you, and the brethren and sisters should understand it. There was a certain woman brought to Father Adam whose name was Eve, because she was the first woman, and she was given to him to be his wife; I am not disposed to give any farther knowledge concerning her at present. There is no doubt but that he left many companions. The great and glorious doctrine that pertains to this I have not time to dwell upon; neither should I at present if I had time. He understood this whole machinery or system before he came to this earth; and I hope my brethren and sisters will profit by what I have told them.

But he may be saved in the kingdom of God but be single to all eternity. Mother Eve was the Daughter of Adam.

146. J.D. 16:324; Orson Pratt; Delivered in the 16th Ward Meeting Rooms; November 22, 1873.

Our first parents were not mortal when they were placed on this earth, but they were as immortal as those who are resurrected in the presence of God. Death came into the world by their transgression, they produced mortality; hence this will be a complete restoration, of which I am speaking.

147. J.D. 17:143; President Brigham Young, Delivered at the Funeral Services of Elder Thomas Williams, in the 14th Ward Assembly Rooms, Salt Lake City, Sunday Morning, July 19, 1874.

This earth is our home, it was framed expressly for the habitation of those who are faithful to God, and who prove themselves worthy to inherit the earth when the Lord shall have sanctified, purified and glorified it and brought it back into his presence, from which it fell far into space. Ask the astronomer how far we are from the nearest of those heavenly bodies that are called the fixed stars. Can he count the miles? It would be a task for him to tell us the distance. When the earth was framed and brought into existence and man was placed upon it, it was near the throne of our Father in heaven. And when man fell---though that was designed in the economy, there was nothing about it mysterious or unknown to the Gods, they understood it all, it was all planned---but when man fell, the earth fell into space, and took up its abode in the planetary system, and the sun became our light. When the Lord said--- "Let there be light," there was light, for the earth was brought near the sun that it might reflect upon it so as to give us light by day, and the moon to give us light by night. This is the glory the earth came from, and when it is glorified it will return again unto the presence of the Father, and it will dwell there, and these intelligent beings that I am looking at, if they live worthy of it, will dwell upon this earth.

As for there labor and pursuits in eternity I have not time to talk upon that subject; but we shall have plenty to do. We shall not be idle. We shall go on from one step to another, reaching forth into the eternities until we become like the Gods, and shall be able to frame for ourselves, by the bequest and command of the Almighty. All those who are counted worthy to be exalted and to become Gods, even the sons of God, will go forth and have earths and worlds like those who framed this and millions on millions of others. This is our home, built expressly for us by the Father of our spirits, who is the Father, maker, framer and producer of these mortal bodies that we now inherit, and which go back to mother earth. When the spirit leaves them they are lifeless; and when the mother feels life come to her infant it is the spirit entering the body preparatory to the immortal existence.

Sunday May 14th 1876 Pleasant At Conference again large attendance after singing by the Cedar choir Br Brigham junior offered up the Dedicatory Prayer dedicating the House to the Lord and to his worship. Br Brigham spoke on the Philosophy of our religion said that all true science emanated from God drew a striking contrast between the religion of Men and the Reveled will of God to his servants. Said that the Father of Jesus Christs spirit, was the same that begat him in the Flesh. Showed that had be been all human He would not have had power to make the atonement and Redeem the world. showed that by throwing away evil and error and adopting goodness an truth and thro the sanctifying influences of the Holy Ghost we should soon be able to receive visits from Angels, and where ever we lived and the surrounding would partake of the influences and become Holy even a Heaven, spoke of the vast creations of God and the Millions of worlds that had and would be redeemed said that the Sun was inhabited and God dweld in the midst of eternal burnings doubted whether the Angels comprehended the vast infinitude of Space Said that the world would not receive the truth when they heard it and loved darkness rather than light and herein they lie under condemnation.

Prest Young said I hope to be able to talk to the people so that they can hear me, and that I can give utterance to my feelings. I hope that I will be able to speak to the satisfaction of myself and then I can satisfy the L.D.S. But especially do I wish to satisfy him whom I serve. I shall not bring forth much scripture but I shall make my own scripture and have been for many years. if you don't believe it I will prove it to you. I will do it by asking some questions. Now if I speak the truth is not it just as much scripture as that which was spoken by Isaiah or Paul, Peter or John. They have gathered up the scraps and have left out 99 of 100 of those scrap and that is called the scriptures-aint my scrip worth as much as anyone elses' if it true? Now I want to save myself as Br Hancock said yesterday so that if I cannot do more I can point- I would sooner be able to point then out of the way and do nothing- a great many times the things that come to my mind is so natural that if I was to stop to think I should conclude I had not got it from the Lord. it is so natural that I think that I have it as we know our own children. Have we learned the character of the Son of God? Yes we know that he is the son of the living God Jesus could not have redeemed this earth had he been begotten of earthly parents. No; he must be begotten of an eternal parent being. so as to have the power of redemption. if Christ had been a son born of earthly parents natural father he could not have saved us. Who is the father? He is the living God & we know that much more than the christian world. The fault that I find with the people of the world is not that they are in darkness, but that they not receive the light. This is their condemnation that light is come into the world and they have chosen darkness rather than light. This is what I find fault with them for. Now we have learned this. Another thing. Do the Christians know where heaven is? No that simple thing they do not know. I never knew a priest or teacher of any denomination who could tell me. It is where happiness, it is where truth, and God is. If the people of a city are shut up in that city & take all truth we will be happy. I don't say that we can be so, but I merely bring it up to show you how it might be. If nobody here but the pure & the holy so they could begin to eat angel's food & they could become purified & the blood leave the body then what name would it have? what would we call it? why we would call it Heaven because we have no other name to call it. But if we had a person to lead us-this we must have for the most simple reason that we cannot get along without--that leader would be our God. When we get to a place, sanctified and purified and glorified we have found Heaven Zion of fled Joseph said if the people did but know it he was their God. I understood it. When the people of the planets look to see us, if they have glasses powerful enough, and I suppose they do have they will see but a little speck like a speck that we see in the water. Now I apply this to St. George, then if we had a ruler he would be our God, and we are but a small speck on the earth. Astronomers say it is 95 millions of miles from the earth to the sun and its makes heat is so great us want to get up on high ground (land). Now know that millions of inhabitants dwell there. Our God is a consuming fire. Every fixed star is a sun & it has its people & its God. This is all simple to those who know, who understand it, it is easy to comprehend. By strict obedience to the laws of life to so live that they may become lights to light up the abode so they will have purified bodies of light. The more they (we) give way to their (our) feelings & weaknesses the weaker we become and the light that is in us becomes darkness. Do you think you should live so as to have light? I think so. This is my religion. All true philosophy, every art to bring things to perfection is of God & our religion incorporates it. A great divine said a few years ago that all science or all religion must come in contact & one must go down, he didnt know which, but he thought it would be religion. A great many things the latter day saints have not understood. Celestial Marriage is not fully understood, not even by myself. Some want to increase but they abuse a wife or children. Do they think they will have a great kingdom--they may be mistaken. A man having even one wife, he may have the promise that he shall have seed. Did not Abraham, add the promise & he is increasing till his seed has filled the whole earth (world) & his seed are conducting all the great affairs of the world. This from one and a half tribes. I am a Yankee & I am pretty good at guessing & guess Abraham was one who was resurrected when Christ arose from the dead. The Savior came to the father, the ancient of days & presents to the father the kingdoms of this world all in a saved condition except the son of perdition & he says here father here they are & I with them. Then he is prepared to go farth & fill up his kingdom & so he goes on. In the creation he placed a man & he called them Adam, including the singular in the plural. So we can go forth increasing to help fill up space & eternity which is beyond the comprehension of man. With power that God gives us, he prepares us to become filled with power that we may overcome. All things first spiritual then temporal--on earth first temporal afterwards spiritual: but what do the Christian world know about this? A powerful Methodist revival preacher said he had traveled said he had moved a swath from Ohio to York. He represented the preacher pulling his ears & weaving around.

Spirits were begotten, born and educated in the celestial world, and were brought forth by celestial bodies.
These spirits I shall leave for the present, and refer to our first parents, Adam and Eve, who were found in the Garden of Eden, tempted and overcome by the power of evil, and consequently subject to evil and sin, which was the penalty of their transgression. They were now prepared, as we are, to form bodies or tabernacles for the reception of pure and holy spirits * * *--- when the mother feels life there is an evidence that the spirit from heaven has entered the tabernacle. * * *
Having fought the good fight. . .then will they become gods, even the sons of God; then will they become eternal fathers, eternal mothers, eternal sons and eternal daughters; being eternal in their organization, they go from glory to glory, from power to power; they will never cease to increase and to multiply world's without end. When they receive their crowns, their dominions, they then will be prepared to frame earth's like unto ours and to people them in the same manner as we have been brought forth by our parents, by our Father and God.
I have often remarked that if the Latter-day Saints and all the world understood the philosophy of their own being, they would bow in humble reverence to him who is the Author of our being and the author of all wisdom and all knowledge known among the children of men.

------

In January 1877, shortly after the lower portion of the St. George Temple was dedicated, President Brigham Young, in following up in the Endowments written, became convinced that it was necessary to have the formula of the Endowments written, and he gave directions to have the same put in writing.
Shortly afterwards he explained what the Lecture at the Veil should portray, and for this purpose appointed a day when he would personally deliver the Lecture at the Veil. Elder J.D.T. McAllister and L. John Nuttall prepared writing material, and as the President spoke they took down his words. Elder Nuttall put the same into form and the writing was submitted to President Young on the same evening at his office in residence at St. George. He there made such changes as he deemed proper, and when he finally passed upon it said: This is the Lecture at the Veil to be observed in the Temple.

A copy of the Lecture is kept at the St. George Temple, in which President Young refers to Adam in his creation &c.

155. Journal of L. John Nuttall; BYU Special Collections; Pres. Brigham Young; delivered in St. George; Wed., Feb. 7, 1877. Was the first draft of the Lecture at the Veil. Brother L. John Nuttall was the private secretary to President Brigham Young until his (Brigham's) death in 1877. He then became the private secretary to President John Taylor (1879-1887) and again to President Wilford Woodruff (1887-1892).

In the creation the Gods entered into an agreement about forming this earth. & putting Michael or Adam upon it. these things of which I have been speaking are what are termed the mysteries of godliness but they will enable you to understand the expression of Jesus made while in Jerusalem. This is life eternal that they might know thee the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. We were once acquainited [acquainted] with the Gods & lived with them but we had the privilige of taking upon us flesh that the spirit might have a house to dwell in. we did so and forgot all and came into the world not recollecting anything of which we had previously learned. We have heard a great deal about Adam and Eve. how they were formed &c some think he was made like an adobie and the Lord breathed into him the breath of life. for we read "from dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return" Well he was made of the dust of the earth but not of this earth. he was made just the same way you and I are made but on another earth. Adam was an immortal being when he came. on this earth he had lived on an earth similar to ours he had received the Priesthood and the Keys thereof. and had been faithful in all things and gained his resurrection and his exaltation and was crowned with glory immortality and eternal lives and was numbered with the Gods for such he became through his faithfulness. and had begotten all the spirit that was to come to this earth. and Eve our common Mother who is the mother of all living bore those spirits in the celestial world. and when this earth was organized by Elohim. Jehovah & Michael who is Adam our common Father. Adam & Eve had the privilege to continue the work of Progression. consequently came to this earth and commenced the great work of forming tabernacles for those spirits to dwell in. and when Adam and those that assisted him had completed this Kingdom our earth he came to it. and slept and forgot all and became like an Infant child. it is said by Moses the historian that the Lord caused a deep sleep to come upon Adam and took from his side a rib and formed the woman that Adam called Eve-this should be interpreted that the Man Adam like all other Men had the seed within him to propagate his species. but not the Woman. she conceives the seed but she does not produce it. consequently she was taken from the side or bowels of her father. this explains the mystery of Moses's dark sayings in regard to Adam and Eve. Adam & Eve when they were placed on this earth were immortal beings with flesh. bones and sinews. but upon partaking of the fruits of the earth while in the garden and cultivating the ground their bodies became changed from immortal to mortal beings with the blood coursing through their veins as the action of life. Adam was not under transgression until after he partook of the forbidden fruit that was nesesary that they might be together that man might be. the woman was found in transgression not the Man- Now in the law of Sacrifice we have the promise of a Savior and man had the privilege and showed forth his obedience by offering of the first fruits of the earth and the firstlings of the flocks- this as a showing that Jesus would come and shed his blood

This place, Spring Hill, is alluded to by the Lord, in this revelation, as being anciently called Adam-ondi-Ahman, because it is the place where Adam shall come to visit his children, or the place where the Ancient of Days shall sit. . . . We have then an understanding that it was the place where Adam dwelt. Perhaps you may be anxious to know what "Ondi-Ahman" means. It means the place where Adam dwelt. "Ahman" signifies God. The whole term means Valley of God, where Adam dwelt. It is in the original language spoken by Adam, as revealed to the Prophet Joseph.

Byron Allred preaches at Manti on Adam as God, with the following remarks in part:

Adam was buried by God (God his Father) and was only dead like a twinkling of an eye, and his God exalted him immediately. Mary was sealed to Adam, and was his wife when she had Jesus. Mary will be the Queen to people another world; Mary was the second wife to Adam; and unless we have two wives, we can never be Gods.

Adam will worship his God and we will worship Adam, and our children will worship us.

159. Women of Mormondom; [This book was written by permission of Brigham Young and was done by Eliza R. Snow, and Elder Edward Tullidge. Tullidge later apostatized into the Godbeite movement.]; March 1877.

"Adam is our Father and God. He is the God of the earth." So says Brigham Young. Adam is the great archangel of this creation. He is Michael. He is the Ancient of Days. He is the father of our elder brother, Jesus Christ---the father of him who shall also come as Messiah to reign. He is the father of the spirits as well as the tabernacles of the sons and daughters of man. Adam! Michael is one of the grand mystical names in the works of creation, redemptions, and resurrections. Jehovah is the second and the higher name. Eloheim--signifying the Gods--is the first name of the celestial trinity. Michael was a celestial, resurrected being, of another world. "In the beginning" the Gods created the heavens and the earths. In their councils they said, let us make man in our own image. So, in the likeness of the Fathers, and the Mothers--the Gods--created they man--male and female. When this earth was prepared for mankind, Michael, as Adam, came down. He brought with him one of his wives, and he called her name Eve. Adam and Eve are the names of the fathers and mothers of worlds. Adam was not made out of a lump of clay, as we make a brick, nor was Eve taken as a rib--a bone--from his side. They came by generation. But woman, as the wife or mate of man, was a rib of man. She was taken from his side, in their glorified world, and brought by him to earth to be the mother of a race. These were father and mother of a world of spirits who had been born to them in heaven. These spirits had been waiting for the grand period of their probation, when they should have bodies or tabernacles, so that they might become, in the resurrection, like Gods. When this earth had become an abode for mankind, with its Garden of Eden, then it was that the morning stars sang together, and the sons and daughters of God shouted for joy. They were coming down to earth. The children of the sun, at least, knew what the grand scheme of the everlasting Fathers and the everlasting Mothers meant, and they, both sons and daughters, shouted for joy. The temple of the eternities shook with their hosannas, and trembled with divine emotions. The father and mother were at length in their Garden of Eden. They came on purpose to fall. They fell "that man might be; and man is, that he "might have joy." They ate of the tree of mortal life, partook of the elements of this earth that they might again become mortal for their children's sake. They fell that another world might have a probation, redemption and resurrection. (pp. 179-180)

God the Father and God the Mother stand, in the grand pre-existing view, as the origin and centre of the spirits of all the generations of mortals who had been tabernacled on this earth. First and noblest of this great family was Jesus Christ, who was the elder brother, in spirit, of the whole human race. These constituted a world-family of pre-existing souls. Brightest among these spirits, and nearest in the circle to our Father and Mother in heaven (the Father being Adam), were Seth, Enoch, Noah and Abraham, Moses, David, and Jesus Christ--indeed that glorious cohort of men and women, whose lives have left immortal records in the worlds's history. Among these the Mormon faith would rank Joseph Smith, Brigham Young, and their compeers.

These are the sons and daughters of Adam--the Ancient of Days--the Father and God of the whole human family. These are the sons and daughters of Michael, who is Adam, the father of the spirits of all our race. These are the sons and daughters of Eve, the Mother of a world. What a practical Unitarianism is this! The Christ is not dragged from his heavenly estate, to be mere mortal, but mortals are lifted up to his celestial plane. He is still the God-Man; but he is one among many brethren who are also God-Men. Moreover, Jesus is one of a grand order of Saviours. Every world has its distinctive Saviour, and every dispensation its Christ. There is a glorious Masonic scheme among the Gods. The everlasting orders come down to us with their mystic and official names. The heavens and the earth have a grand leveling; not by pulling down celestial spheres, but by the lifting up of mortal spheres.

Woman is heiress of the Gods. She is joint heir with her elder brother, Jesus the Christ; but she inherits from her God-Father and her God-Mother. Jesus is the "beloved" of that Father and Mother--their well-tried Son, chosen to work out the salvation and exaltation of the whole human family. And shall it not be said then that the subject rises from the God-Father to the God-Mother? Surely it is a rising in the sense of the culmination of the divine idea. The God-Father is not robbed of his everlasting glory by this maternal completion of himself. It is an expansion both of deity and humanity. They twain are one God! The supreme Unitarian conception is here; the God-Father and the God-Mother! The grand unity of God is in them--in the divine Fatherhood and the divine Motherhood--the very beginning and consummation of creation. Not in the God-Father and the God-Son can the unity of the heavens and the earths be worked out; neither with any logic of facts nor of idealities. In them the Masonic trinities; in the everlasting Fathers and the everlasting Mothers the unities of creations. Our Mother in heaven is decidedly a new revelation, as beautiful and delicate to the masculine sense of the race as it is just and exalting to the feminine. (pp. 190-193)

Pres. Jensen referred to the condition of some of the High Priests in the Malad Ward who were contending one with another concerning some point of doctrine, which they did not understand. The point in dispute being, was Adam our God, some taking the affirmation and some the negative of the question. This was not right. We ought to allow these matters to rest until our minds were better informed regarding them. Contention leads to strife and ill feelings and eventually into apostasy. Hence how careful we ought to be in these regards.

My brethren and sisters, it is a glorious truth that has been taught to us, that we are literally the children of God, that we are his literal descendants, as Jesus was literally descended from Him, and that He is our Father as much as our earthly parent is our father, and we can go to Him with a feeling of nearness, knowing this, understanding it by the revelations which God has given to us.

168. Letter to Pres. John Taylor from Scott Anderson; Salt Lake City; Sept 22nd 1884.

President John Taylor
Sir

Duty imperatively demands that as I am about to withdraw from the Church over which you preside I make known to you and to all whom it may concern the reasons which have compelled me to take this step.

When I joined the Mormon Church a little over 5 years ago I believed implicitly as I do now that the Bible was the word of God and the Rule of Faith and while the "Book of Mormon" and "Doctrine and Covenants" were referred to as additional revelation they no where contradicted the Bible but rather established it.

Before joining the Church I became acquainted with Elders Wm. Budge, John Nicholson, Francis Cope, James L. Bunting, and others. Elder Nicholson preached from the Bible only and almost entirely dwelt on what is known as the first principles claiming that these principles were what had been introduced by our Savior and preached by his immediate apostles but that men had wandered away from them and had fallen into darkness & superstition. I had heard a great many things about the Mormons that were nothing to their credit consequently the eminent social qualities and gentlemanly conduct of Elder Cope won my admiration and esteem. I was greatly pleased to find him a monogamist for while I could not deny that many good men in the past had had more wives than one, I never for one moment assented to the idea that there was any virtue in such a proceeding or that it merited or would receive any reward.

I joined your Church on the 20th of May 1879 and during the first 2 years of my membership I faithfully adhered to it and would have given my life to defend it, during all this time I never heard of Adam being God, never heard of Blood Atonement, never heard of polygamy being required of all men before they could attain to highest glory. Never dreamed that Brigham Young or any one else cooly threw the Bible overboard and preached whatever they pleased which I was bound to accept as the revelations of God. I do not and cannot accuse these men of having told my anything absolutely false, but they certainly withheld the horrible I was in the Church some five years before I heard or knew anything about these things--doctrines against which my soul revolts.

The first shock I received was from Albert Carrington who succeeded William Budge as President of the European Mission. William Budge always appeared to me in the light of a most kind gentlemanly and truly Christian man. It was not unnatural that I should look for all this in a man who was a successor of the twelve apostles of Christ and whose speeches and writings were to be received as Scripture.

Judge my horror and amazement when I found that he constantly used language which I had only heard from the lips of the lowest blackguards and that his conduct generally was something disgraceful. I saw him myself in the presence of several hundred witnesses on board a tugboat in Liverpool conduct himself so disgracefully with a young girl, then a servant in the Mission House, that every Elder present held his head down with shame. I was so disgusted that I almost left the Church then & there. Several of the Elders came to me and assured me that such conduct would not be overlooked, but would be promptly dealt with by the authorities. I believed this, and shortly afterwards left Liverpool to make my way to Utah in obedience to the command to gather. I left behind me a dear old mother, friends, associates, companions, country, everything, and with my family came to Salt Lake. God who alone judgest the hearts of men knows the sincerity and purity of my intentions. I imagined that I had come to the kingdom of God to help to build it up! What did I find? I found that God, the God of the Bible is not even worshiped by the Church over which you preside, the God you worship is Adam. Brigham Young teaches I quote his words, "When our Father Adam came into the Garden of Eden, he came into it with a celestial body and brought Eve one of his wives with him. He is our Father and our God and the ONLY God with whom we have to do." At first I could not bring myself to believe that this doctrine was accepted by the Church, but on careful enquiry found to my horror and astonishment that it was really so. It is true a great many know nothing about it and are simply in ignorance. Those who do know accept it as far more to be relied on than any portion of the Bible, for say they the Bible has been translated over and over again and may be wrong but this is the direct teaching of a Great Prophet.

I reject this as abominable and horrible idolatry and give it as one reason why I cannot remain in your Church.

Then there is the Doctrine of Blood atonement which to me is simply a doctrine of murder. Brigham Young says "I could refer you to plenty of instances where men have been righteously slain in order to atone for their sins." Again he says, "I have seen scores and hundreds of people for whom there would have been a chance if their lives had been taken and their blood spilt upon the ground as a smoking incense to the Almighty." I know of nothing so horrible as this in all the idolatries and superstitions which have cursed the human race, and it would of itself be reason more than sufficient for my withdrawal from your Church. But there are many more, far too many to mention in this letter but I will refer to a few.

As I have shown Adam is made God but you do not give him much power or rather leave him much for you do teach that he has given you the power to wield, that however matters little you hold it and he has parted with it. that is my point you teach that. If a faithful son of Adam's is called behind the vail and has no priesthood God (Adam) cannot give him any. He must wait until he gets it from the earth where you have all the power. If he has no wife or wives (and you teach that he must have at least three or he cannot have the highest glory) God (Adam) is utterly unable to help him You have the keys and he must wait your leisure and pleasure.

In fact you teach that you have the power to make a God "who shall pass by the angels and the Gods" whereas God according to Mormonism can only make an angel (servant) and scarcely that without your permission. This to me is a mockery and silly superstition and I unhesitatingly reject it. I know many members of your Church whose sincerity to do not doubt and who are very good people. But generally speaking I never saw so much hypocrisy in my life as I have seen since I came to Salt Lake City. You profess to have a direct revelation from God commanding you to do no work on Sunday. But you and the people generally are steeped in Sabbath breaking. Shortly after I arrived in the city I found the Theatre open on Sunday and Bishop O. F. Whitney and a number of members of the Church rehearsing plays that they were going to perform at Conference for money. I found that here and in other parts of the Territory rehearsals are commonly held in the preaching houses of the wards upon a Sunday--that painters had been sent for by yourself and other leading members of the Church to do work on Sunday and that the business office of the Church is frequently open all that day and your clerks diligently at work. You profess to abhor drinking, smoking and swearing. One of the heaviest smokers in the city is John Smith the patriarch of the whole Church. Members of the Church in full fellowship keep saloons, and the Church organ the "Deseret News" opens its columns for the advertisements of the lowest dens in the city, and so far as bad language is concerned I say deliberately I have heard more in Salt Lake City from Latter-day Saints in one year than I heard from all the members of other churches with whom I have been acquainted in the whole course of my life. Joseph F. Smith during last conference told the Priesthood meeting that to obey the higher law they must have at least three living wives at one and the same time, and that anything to the contrary was a damned lie. You yourself in the Ogden Tabernacle speaking of what the Gentiles were trying to do said "Who the Devil cares." Surely you do not think I can believe such language from the Holy Spirit of God.

I now request you to erase my name from your books, and only add in conclusion that I have had no quarrel, no dispute, no misunderstanding with any member of your Church. I leave it from conviction and at the call of duty well persuaded that I can meet you or any member of the Church over which you preside at the bar of God and look you in the face before him as an honest man

Yours respectfully,
Scott Anderson

Dear Brother

We the undersigned prefer a charge against Brother Scott Anderson for Apostasy, and ask that you appoint as early a date as practicable for the hearing of the complaint; as we understand he is preparing to leave the City permanently.

Your Brethren in the Gospel.

Brother Scott Anderson being present. Bishop A. McRae asked him whether he was guilty of the charge or not. Bro. Anderson said "If my not being in accord with all things in the Church makes me guilty, then I am guilty."

Bp. McRae. Do you still hold to the sentiments expressed in your letter to Prest Taylor. (copy of same accompanies this) Bro Anderson said, That portion that alludes to doctrine I still adhere to but not to that referring to persons.

Bp. McRae said It is in consequence of the statement you made in your letter to Prest Taylor dissenting from the Church of the Latter Day Saints that we have cited you to appear before us here tonight you being a member of this Ward it is our duty to inquire into the matter. Bro Anderson said I have no desire to enter into any controversy, but will say that since being in Salt Lake I have been treated with the greatest of courtesy and kindness by both man woman and child: do not wish to enter into any details; except that if I was in the Bishops place I should do as he is doing in a similar case.

Bishop A. McRae said Our decision is that you be disfellowshipped from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints for apostasy. Brother Anderson said "he anticipated that such would be the case and immediately left the house.

* * * To the intelligent Latter-day Saint it [the phrase, "Our FATHER which art in Heaven"] emits a world of light and comfort. It enunciates a principle that indissolubly links the immortal past to the mortal present, and this life to the glorious and infinite future.

. . . The spirit could not be perfect without the body--could not answer the great object of its existence, and therefore, this same infinite power that called it into being and provided for its occupation a tangible body will surely at the appointed time call the atoms that formed the mortal casket from their resting place. . . .

* * *

. . . Having, while on earth complied with the requirements of the Father in relation to Celestial Marriage, he is thus qualified to become a "Father of spirits," and his immortal wives become the mothers of spirits, thus obeying the only and eternal law of reproduction.

. . . he is placed upon it [the world] and with his wives repeats the history of man on this and other planets.

The Being that has organized the world; and placed upon it the germs of animated nature; is the one most entitled to furnish mortal bodies for his spiritual children. And when the great drama of life is finished and he with his children are redeemed and glorified, is he not entitled, as the head of an innumerable posterity, to be recognized as a Father and God to those that will rise up and call Him blessed? Is there anything inconsistent or unphilosophic in the doctrine that eternal progression will eventually exalt human beings to the godhead? The reverse would be illogical, no other reason for man's existence can be adduced. In this way only can he be of service in increasing the glory of his Father and God to whom forever he will be a grateful and venerating son and subject.

171. J.D. 26:115; Elder H. W. Naisbitt; Great Salt Lake Tabernacle; Sunday afternoon, March 8, 1885.

The scriptures give an account simply of the woman Eve; declaring that this name was given her of Adam, because she was "the mother of all living;" but outside of biblical record there has been handed down from time immemorial the idea that Adam had two wives, the narrators go so far, or rather so near perfecting the tradition so as to give their names, Lilith being said to be the name of one as Eve was the name of the other, and while it may be difficult to harmonize all the Rabbinical and Talmudic versions of this matter, it is said that Joseph Smith the Prophet taught that Adam had two wives.

172. Epistle to the Church; President John Taylor; April, 1885.

Who are women? The mothers of the whole human family. They are the mothers of the whole human family. Adam was the first flesh upon the earth, and it is an office in the Priesthood. Eve was the first woman, and it is also an office in the Priesthood and should be translated "eternal lives."

173. History of Wels August Nelson, p. 41; 1885. (Scott Anderson talks about Brigham Young and the other authorities talking about it. It is Anderson's Bishop's Court.)

. . . The first question for me to solve was regarding my future inheritance. I had heard preached varied thoughts, but they did not give a logical connection. My wife and I had read the scriptures together, but still I was not satisfied. One morning about three or four, a vision of the pre-existence, and the future was shown me. It was all so clear. My parents were my brother and sister. They were simply a medium in helping God (which is Adam) in bringing his children from the spirit to the mortal stage. This is necessary that we might have the opportunity to being celestial beings like the Father. If I could so conduct myself in this stage of action, to be worthy of the celestial kingdom with eternal increase, then and only then, would I gain an inheritance of my own to be as a Father Adam, and my wife, a mother Eve. Failing this I would forever inherit in connection with others of my brethren and sisters, one of the three glories eternally without increase, hence no need of an individual inheritance. Perfection and Celestial Glory of God are definite terms, the end of all human attainment. While we become fathers and grandparents a hundred times in this world, the highest possible attainment is celestial glory with eternal increase. I know the Redeemer to be the senior of Adam, where or from whence the Prototype provides Redeemers for each planet, is not material to us in this sphere of action. All intelligence comes from the Prototype. There is not intelligence where or beyond the first (first in inconceivable) intelligible. God is not eternally progressing in the sense that we understand it. He is the same today and forever, unchangeable. He is forever increasing in heirs and worlds numerically, but one eternal circle intelligently. With this information I asked the Lord to send my way all the experiences necessary for me to attain an individual inheritance, which in itself includes eternal increase and Godhood.

* * * Since our great progenitor, Adam, figures in many phases of life to which none of us have yet attained, the first portion of the parallel [between the history of man and the history of the earth], to make it more complete, will be founded upon facts connected with his history.

Before Adam fell he was a resurrected man, that is, his physical body had been disorganized, and then reorganized.---The Apostle Peter tells us plainly that this earth is to be dissolved, after which a new world is to be organized. It will be resurrected as Adam was.

Between the time of Adam's resurrection and his fall afterwards, he must have enjoyed a season of rest and peace.---the Millennium which is to give the earth a rest of a thousand years, is the corresponding state in the world's history.

THE POSITION OF ADAM AND NOAH IN THE PRIESTHOOD

The Prophet Joseph taught us that father Adam was the first man on the earth to whom God gave the keys of the everlasting priesthood. He held the keys of the presidency, and was the first man who did hold them. Noah stood next to him, he being the father of all living in his day, as Adam was in his day. THESE TWO MEN WERE THE FIRST WHO RECEIVED THE PRIESTHOOD IN THE ETERNAL WORLDS, BEFORE THE WORLDS WERE FORMED. They were the first who received the everlasting priesthood or presidency on the earth. Father Adam stands at the head, so far as this world is concerned. Of course, Jesus Christ is the Great High Priest of the salvation of the human family. But Adam holds those keys in the world today; he will hold them to the endless ages of eternity. And Noah, and every man who has ever held or will hold the keys of presidency of the kingdom of God, from that day until the scene is wound up, will have to stand before Father Adam and give an account unto the lord, of the principles that we have received when our work is done in the flesh.

176. Millennial Star, Vol 51:278; President George Q. Cannon; April 7, 1889.

We believe that we are the literal offspring of Deity. We have descended from the great Being who formed this earth, and from Him we have inherited the glorious aspirations to be like unto Him. . . .

We believe in a God of revelation, who will give more and more light to us til we can become like Him.

We worship the Being who has revealed Himself to us. It was necessary at the outset of this work to have a revelation from Him. There were many erroneous ideas about God, and the first revelation to Joseph Smith was the appearance of the Father and the Son. I have heard that there are some among us who say that both are one person. This is a fallacy. There are two personages, the Father and the Son. God is the Being who walked in the Garden of Eden, and who talked with the Prophets. This revelation came to us in certainty.

177. Journal of Abraham H. Cannon, (Apostle); BYU Library, Special Collections; June 23, 1889.

He (George Q.) believes that Jesus Christ is Jehovah, and that Adam is His Father and our God: that under certain unknown conditions the benefits of the Savior's atonement extend to our entire solar system. . . . He asked me what I understood concerning Mary conceiving the Savior; and as I found no answer, he asked what was to prevent Father Adam from visiting and overshadowing the mother of Jesus. Then said I: "he must have been a resurrected Being." "Yes," said he, "and though Christ is said to have been the first fruits of them that slept, yet the Savior said he did nothing but what He had seen His Father do, for He had power to lay down His life and take it up again. Adam, though made of dust, was made, as President Young said, of the dust of another planet than this." I was very much instructed by the conversation and this days services.

178. The Contributor, Vol 10:265-267; "Man's Relationship to Deity", B. H. Roberts; 1889.

Then came one of the sons of God* [Footnote reads: Lest any one should doubt that Adam was one of the sons of God, I call attention to the verse of Luke, iii chapter; where, in tracing the genealogy of Jesus back to Adam, and coming to Cainan it goes on to say that "he (Cainan) was the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God."] to the earth--Adam. A garden was planted in Eden and the man placed in it, and there the Lord brought to him every beast of the field and every fowl of the air, and Adam gave names to them all. Afterwards was brought to Adam his wife, whom, since she was derived from man, he named woman; and she became his help-mate, his companion and the mother of his children. In this nothing is hinted at about man being made from the dust, and woman manufactured from a rib, a story which has been a cause of much perplexity to religious people, and a source of much impious merriment to reckless unbelievers. We are informed that the Lord God made every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and every herb before it grew|+ [Footnote: Genesis ii, 4,5.] on our planet. As vegetation was created or made to grow upon some older earth, and the seeds thereof or the plants themselves were brought to our earth and made to grow, so likewise man and his help-meet were brought from some older world to our own, to people it with their children. And though it is said that the "Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground"--it by no means follows that he was "formed" as one might form a brick, or from the dust of this earth. We are all "formed" of the dust of the ground, though instead of being molded as a brick we are brought forth by the natural laws of procreation; so also was Adam and his wife in some older world. And as for the story of the rib, under it I believe the mystery of procreation is hidden.

As Elder Myron Abbott, first Councilor to the Bishop at Bunkerville had given some information on this matter, it was decided to learn from him, more definitely in (next page) relation to this matter.

December 13, 1890

Saturday, Dec. 13. High Council of St. George Stake met at St. George Tabernacle. In response to invitation of the Presidency of the Stake, Bishop Edward Bunker, Jr., and Elders Myron Abbott and Jos. I. Earl were present.

Pres. McArthur invited the brethren named to express themselves on the views said to have been expressed in Bunkerville Ward and which are considered by some to be unsound doctrine.

Myron Abbott, counselor to Bishop Edward Bunker, Jr., stated that for a number of years, questions on church teachings have been agitated in Bunkerville Ward. Bishop Bunker had stated he did not believe Adam was our God, and Bishop Bunker had expressed his opinion that some teachings in the Temples were wrong, notably part of the lecture at the vail. That Father Bunker had the same views. Father Bunker stated to him (Bro. Abbott) a number of years ago, that adoption would be of no avail as administered in the Temple. All such work would have to be done over again.

Bp. Edward Bunker, Jr., among other things said: "In regard to the lecture at the vail, in the Temple, it is certainly wrong. It teaches that Eve was an immortal being and was brought here by Adam, 'did not believe this.' That Adam was not a resurrected (next page) being. In answering question of Councilor Cannon, expressed his belief that Adam was the Archangel and that Jehovah and Michael were persons of Spirit; that Eloheim was a person of Tabernacle and the head of all."

After a prolonged second session of the Council, Bp. Edward Bunker and his councilor, Myron Abbott felt that they had done wrong in contending on the subjects referred to.

Friday, May 15. The High Council of St. George Stake took up the case of Edward Bunker Sr., of Bunkerville Ward, who had been charged with erroneous views and teachings. Father Bunker's views were brought (next page) to the attention of High Council on the 13th of last December. Since then Father Bunker expressed a desire to submit his views to the Council in writing. This was granted resulting in a statement bearing date "Bunkerville, April 25, 1891 and submitted on ten pages of foolscap. After reading the document and discussion on the case Council decided "that the communication of Edward Bunker on what he believes and does not believe, together with the statement of the causes leading to the investigation which called forth is declaration, also the full action of the Council in this matter be forwarded to the First Presidency of the Church, asking their advice to the proper course for us to take, as the Presidency and High Council of this Stake."

Councilor David H. Cannon moved that the Presidency of the Stake with Councilor James G. Bleak and the clerk of the High Council act as a committee to formulate this statement, carried.

Friday, May 22. The following was prepared and subsequently approved by the High Council and forwarded to the First Presidency:

"St. George, May 22, 1891.

To Pres. Wilford Woodruff and Councilors; Brethren:

For some years there has existed a spirit of division on doctrinal points and Church teachings in Bunkerville Ward, this Stake of Zion. It was thought by the gentle corrections and teachings of the Stake Presidency to certain of the disputants, that division would gradually die out and be overcome. Such, we regret to state, has not been the case. Finding the evidences of this division more and more manifest, it was reported to the High Council here at its meeting in November last. By action of the Presidency and High Council, the chief parties to the division were invited to meet with us in council that we might learn more definitely their views.

At our high Council in December last in response to this invitation, Bishop Edward Bunker, Jr. and his councilors Myron Abbott and Jos. I. Earl met with us. Father Edward Bunker being in poor health at the time, could not attend.

Bishop Bunker and his first councilor Myron Abbott, who is also his uncle, being representatives of the diverse and unreconciled views prevailing in the Ward, stated some of their respective differences of belief and teachings.

Upon hearing these brethren it was found that they were each most pronounced in their respective views. (next page)

As a result of the investigation the following was passed as the action of the Council: It is the sense of this Council that it is an error to teach that Adam was not an immortal or resurrected being, when he came to this earth, also, that we pray to Adam as our God; and it is wrong to teach that Adam is one of the Godhead.

Father Edward Bunker was present at High Council in March last, and asked the privilege of expressing his views in writing, upon doctrines and teachings referred to in the December High Council meeting. This was granted. "The written statement has been presented to, and read in, the High Council and the Council has decided to submit it and this whole matter to you." This statement enclosed herewith, sets forth the points upon which the division in Bunkerville Ward is based and we submit it to you with a desire to receive instruction as to what you wish with us as a Presidency and High Council to do in this matter.

There is one thing more: You will notice in the beginning of Father Bunker's statement declaring his views relating to Adam, he uses the words: "That the Council has decided upon as I believe." The only Council action in deciding anything about the points in controversy is embodied in the quoted action of the Council found at the bottom of page two of this letter.

Awaiting your instruction, or decision in this matter.

We remain, dutifully yours,

At two o'clock I was at my Quorum meeting where were present all the Presidency and myself, as also Bro. Lyman; Geo. Gibbs, clerk. Bro. Jos. F. Smith was mouth in prayer. Thereafter some conversation followed as to whether Adam is our God or not. There are some in the Church who do not accept of the statement of Pres. Young that such is the case, but to me it seems reasonable to think that Adam has at least much to do with our present condition, and will control greatly our future destiny.

St George June 11th, 92 Attended the High Council at which Pres Woodruff presided. G. Q. Cannon was present also and a large body of the leading men of this Stake. Br Edward Bunker Sen. and others of Bunkerville, Nevada, had been advancing false doctrine. One item was, that he, Bunker, thought it was right to worship the intelligence that was in God the Eternal Father and not God, who made all things by the power of his Word. And another was that Adam was made of the dust of the earth contained in the Garden of Eden. He had also advanced some erroneous ideas concerning the resurrection. Pres Woodruff and Cannon showed in a very plain manner that it was right to Worship the true, and the Living God, and Him only, and not the intelligence that dwelt in Him; that His Son Jesus Christ, or Jehovah, never taught such doctrine, but always to worship my Father which is in Heaven, and to always pray to the Father in the name of his Son Jesus Christ. Showed that Adam was an immortal being when he came to this earth and was made the same as all other men and Gods are made; and that the seed of man was of the dust of the earth, and that the continuation of the seeds in a glorified state was Eternal Lives. And after this Mortal tabernacle had crumbled to dust in the grave, that God would, in the time of the resurrection by his Matchless Power, bring together again in the form of a glorified and an immortal to the Righteous to dwell with Him forever. Also that those that were not righteous would also be resurrected, but not with a glorified body. Said it was not wisdom for the Elders to contend about such matters and things they did not understand. And not to teach such things to the children in the Sunday Schools; they could not comprehend them. Pres Woodruff spoke of the false doctrine taught by Amasa Lyman some years ago, viz, that the Atoning blood of Jesus Christ was of no more efficacy than the blood of any other man or that of a Bullock &c. Such false ideas had led him to apostasy and finally out of the church. Also of the false teachings of the late Orson Pratt, one of the Twelve, arguing that every particle of matter which composed the elements had all the attributes of the Deity in it, and that they, i.e., the particles of Matter, by some unaccountable way united together and became God. Pres Woodruff told of Orson's unyielding stubbornness, and of upbraiding the Twelve for not being manly, for not declaring their views the way he looked at it, and branding them as cowards &c &c. Spoke of the firmness of Pres Young in correcting Orson Pratt and setting him aright; Of Orson wishing to resign his position in the Quorum; of Pres. Young saying "No you wont Orson, I'll rub your ears until I get you right;" and had it not been for firmness of Pres Young in maintaining the right, and assiduously laboring and showing him his gross errors, Orson would have been out of the Church. Showed the folly of some men because they cannot look up and prove by the Bible the glorious Revelations that God has given they receive them doubtfully. Showed that God had, and would yet, reveal many glorious things that men could not prove, and Search out of the old Bible. Pres Cannon said that it was not necessary that we should or endorse the doctrine that some men taught that Adam was the Father of Jesus Christ. Counsel was given for the Elders to teach that which they knew, not that which they did not. The Meeting was in session over three hours, and much good counsel was given to the Elders present on these things by Pres Woodruff and Cannon. To me it was a feast for I had been pondering over some of these things of late.

Saturday, June 11. High Council of St. George Stake convened at 10 A.M. in St. George Tabernacle. Pres. Daniel D. McArthur Presiding. The Council was favored with the presence of Pres. Wilford Woodruff and his first counselor, Pres. Geo. Q. Cannon. The case of disagreement on points of doctrine between brethren of Bunkerville Ward was called up.

Father Edward Bunker and others from Bunkerville Ward were present[.]

Elder Arthur Winter, clerk of the First Presidency, then read Father Edward Bunker's views on doctrinal points, written April 25, 1891 and forwarded to the First Presidency by St. George Stake Presidency pursuant to action of St. George Stake High Council on May 15, 1891. (See "Annals, 1891" pp. 14--17 inclusive) (next page)

The result of this investigation was that all the Bunkerville parties became reconciled to each other on the points which they had been agitating for a long time and which had engendered bitter feelings between them.

Before I sit down I want to say a word to the Elders of Israel on another subject. . . . How much longer I shall talk to this people I do not know; but I want to say this to all Israel: Cease troubling yourselves about who God is; who Adam is, who Christ is, who Jehovah is. For heaven's sake, let these things alone. Why trouble yourselves about these things? God has revealed Himself, and when the 121st section of the Doctrine and Covenants is fulfilled, whether there be one God or many gods they will be revealed to the children of men, as well as all thrones and dominions, principalities, and powers. Then why trouble yourselves about these things? God is God. Christ is Christ. The Holy Ghost is the Holy Ghost. That should be enough for you and me to know. If we want to know any more, wait till we get where God is in person. I say this because we are troubled every little while with inquiries from Elders anxious to know who God is, who Christ is, and who Adam is. I say to the Elders of Israel, stop this, Humble yourselves before the Lord; seek for light, for truth, and for a knowledge of the common things of the kingdom of God. The Lord is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. He changes not. The Son of God is the same. He is the Savior of the world. He is our advocate with the Father. We have had letter after letter from Elders abroad wanting to know concerning these things. Adam is the first man. He was placed in the Garden of Eden, and is our great progenitor. God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, are the same yesterday, to-day and forever. That should be sufficient for us to know.

Jan. 9th 1897

Hon. A. Saxey---- Provo.

Dear Brother:---your esteemed favor of Dec. 31st came to hand safely. Sickness in my family and consequent increased pressure upon my time have prevented an earlier reply. And even now I cannot attempt more than a cursory reply to your enquiries. I may say I submitted your letter to President Woodruff, and he partially outlined what I should say in answer to your questions. To know this might be more satisfactory to you than to suppose my statements were simply my own. I am happy to know that he and I are in accord on the subject.

With reference to Prest. B. Youngs remarks, in a discourse delivered in 1852. with reference to "Adam being the only God with whom we have to do" &c. I will say:---Prest. Young no doubt expressed his personal opinion or views upon the subject. What he said was not given as a revelation or commandment from the Lord. The Doctrine was never submitted to the Councils of the Priesthood nor to the Church for approval or ratification [p.2] and was never formally or otherwise accepted by the Church. It is therefore in no sense binding upon the Church nor upon the consciences of any of the members thereof, except perhaps only so far as some may have confidence in President Young, believing that he had light on the subject which was not given in connection with his public mention thereof. It is thought, even if there is truth in it, that the bare mention made my Prest. Young, with out indubitable evidence and authority being given of its truth, was unfortunate to say the least.

But the sure test is to be found in "the law and the Testimony" and revealed truth. Whatsoever is not in accordance with these must fall. No scripture being of any private interpretation &c. but open to the understanding of every man who possesses the Holy Ghost, anyone thus endowed may apply the tests by the light of the good spirit. While I am not authorized to sit in judgment upon Prest. Young, I am at liberty to test the truth of his words or utterances by the Revealed and accepted word of God. Anything uttered by man which is contrary to the Divine law must fall, while that only [p.3] which is in harmony with it can remain, or stand.

Generally--when the Lord speaks through his approved channel, he speaks with no uncertain sound. Yet many there be who cannot see the truth no matter how plain to the mind of the Spirit. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned, (1 Cor. 2:9-11-16.) but carnal things by the natural senses. When the inspired head, speaks by the power of the spirit & he is backed up by "thus saith the Lord"--, it becomes a serious matter to reject, or lightly pass it by. There is no such responsibility attached to this statement, made by Prest. Young.

With reference to the "Manifesto" prohibiting plural marriages, I scarcely need to say more than that you expressed yourself on that matter Strictly in accord with my own views, and in harmony with the views of President Woodruff-and the facts.

The doctrine is not repealed, the truth is not annulled, the law is right and just now as ever, but the observance of it is stopped. And as to the future--no man knows, only as it may be revealed to him, and no one is authorized to foretell. We may have opinions, but it may not be wise to express them for by doing so antagonism might be engendered [p.4] Altho our belief would necessarily come within the realm of conjecture only. I am willing to let the matter rest with God for I feel I have done my whole duty, as an individual, in regard to that matter. Of course this is not germane to your question, but I trust you will pardon the digression. I certainly believe fully in the Revelation and I know the principle is sound and right. I believe those who entered into it, are as sacredly obligated today to fulfill their covenants as they ever were. The Manifesto stopped further pl. marriages in time, but it did not divorce a single wife--nor relieve a man who had entered into the Covenant, or a single responsibility. The operation of the law--as to further pl. marriages was suspended--or stopped: but the obligations already incurred were not touched.

I hope you will excuse the hasty and crude form of this letter. and that you will digest it, together with what is not said in it at your leisure. I have not had a nights sleep since last Sunday on account of sickness in my family.

With very Kind regards, I am &c. /s/ Jos. F. Smith

Dear Brother---

On receipt of your letter of the 4th inst., I conferred with Prest. Joseph F. Smith, and we concluded to present the matter to the Council of the First Presidency and Twelve Apostles. Both your letters to me, and the Article to the Fresno Republican, were read. Each of the Presidency and several of the Apostles expressed themselves well pleased with your article, that it evinced skill and valor for the Truth, and they did not see how it could be much improved. The Council did not deem it wise to lay out any line of procedure in which to deal with the subject, but felt that it is best to avoid bringing it up, and to do the best we can and as the Spirit may suggest when it is thrust upon us.

Your having got so many of the Josephites was received with marks of particular pleasure. This, like many other points of more advanced doctrine, is too precious a pearl to be cast before swine. But when the swine get hold of them, let us rescue them by the help of the Spirit as best we can. Thinking it may be convenient to you to have President Youngs sayings on that subject, I enclose a copy from his sermon in the first Volume of the Journal of Discourses.

We have been getting quite a streak of winter weather. . .

Many questions come up from theological classes--questions that are, to say the least, somewhat abstruse, and concerning which there is no written revelation; questions, too, that are not pertinent at all to the work of the schools. I was stopped yesterday afternoon by a young man, who wanted to know whether Adam was the father of our Lord and Savior--whether he was the being we worshiped, etc. Now, we can get ourselves very easily puzzled, if we choose to do so, by speculating upon doctrines and principles of this character. The Lord has said through His Prophet that there are two personages in the Godhead. That ought to be sufficient for us at the present time. . . . But it has always seemed to me that we had better not endeavor to puzzle ourselves or allow our minds to be drawn out upon questions of this kind, concerning which the Lord has not revealed perhaps all that we desire. When men give themselves license to do this, they are very apt to be led along into error and imbibe ideas that are not sound.

* * * Let the teachers in the classes confine themselves to that which God has revealed, and repress as much as possible all these improper inquiries that cannot be answered from the word of the Lord. . . . but let us not try to find out mysteries. If men have received revelations concerning things that the Lord has not revealed to His people, they ought to hold their tongues about such matters; because if God gives men knowledge concerning things which He has not authorized His servant who holds the keys to reveal, they have no business to teach it as doctrine. There are many things which God reveals to His servants from time to time, but a wise person who has a revelation that is trustworthy will not go around telling it and teaching it as doctrine, because the same Spirit, if it be from the Lord, that reveals such things, would also teach that such a course would be very improper. There are many things which God has revealed that are unlawful for men to utter. No doubt, He does now reveal things of this kind from time to time to those who have faith and who are chosen vessels; but you may rest assured that where there are any of that class, they are not around propagating these ideas, whispering them and telling them to people as truths that they ought to understand; the Spirit of God will not prompt any such thing.

Concerning the doctrine in regard to Adam and the Savior, the Prophet Brigham taught some things concerning that; but the First Presidency and the Twelve do not think it wise to advocate these matters. It is sufficient to know that we have a Father--God the Eternal Father, who reveals Himself by His Holy Spirit unto those who seek unto Him; and that Jesus Christ is His Son, our Redeemer, the Savior of the world. If we confine ourselves to the facts as they are written in the word that the Lord has given unto us, we will do well. I would therefore say to all the brethren and sisters, refrain from indulging in these speculations; it does not lead to good. Do not indulge in the asking of foolish and improper questions. The Lord has revealed enough to keep us busy if we but study His word.

In the third chapter of Luke, we find the lineage of Jesus traced from Joseph to Adam, and in the 38th verse it concludes as follows: "Which was the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God." It is hardly to be supposed that this language is to be understood literally up to the last statement and that that should be figurative. What object could there be in making the statement that Adam was the son of God if it were not in the same line of fatherhood as all the rest? There is no break in the statement to indicate that it should not be taken in the same literal sense as all the others?

Dear Brother:--

Your letter of the 9th inst. reached me on the 14th and in reply to the question therein contained, I have this to say: It is certainly unwise for the Elders or any other member of the Church to advocate doctrines that are not clearly set forth in the revealed word of God, and concerning which, in consequence, difference of opinion exist. No good can come from it, but on the contrary, much evil may result. Had the Lord desired or designed that such doctrines should be promulgated, He would have clearly and fully defined them, as he has those beautiful and simple laws and ordinances known) as "the first principles of the Gospel." While it is far from my purpose to stifle thought and free speech among the brethren, or to brand as "false doctrine" any and every mystery of the kingdom, it is nevertheless my wish and my advice, in which Presidents Winder and Lund, my counselors, heartily join, that the Elders should not make a practice of preaching upon these abstruse (sic) themes, these partly revealed principles, respecting which there are such wide differences of belief.

What is called the Adam God doctrine may properly be classed among the mysteries. The full truth concerning it has not been revealed to us; and until it is revealed all wild speculations, sweeping assertions and dogmatic declarations relative thereto, are out of place and improper. We disapprove of them and especially the public (p. 2) expression of such views. In the absence of Elder K----, and without any oral or written statement by him as to his belief regarding this doctrine, we do not feel called upon, nor would it be right to pass judgement in his case; but we will simply say that the accepted doctrine concerning our father Adam, the great sire of the human race, is as follows:

He is Michael, the Ancient of Days, the future God of this earth, when it shall become celestialized and shine like unto a sea of glass mingled with fire, the glorified home of celestial beings for ever. Hence Adam stands at the head of the human family, presides over them spiritually and temporally, and will come in due time as the Ancient of Days to call his children together, according to the scriptures, both ancient and modern. He will preside over them for ever, and be their God eternally; This, of course, after the Millennial reign of Christ. Christ is not Adam, nor is Adam Christ, but both are eternal Gods, and it may even be said Fathers, since they are the parents of eternal or spiritual children. As to the personality and position of each God, and as to which of all is greater, these are matters immaterial at the present time, and are best but an unprofitable speculation. Let us be content with what is plainly revealed on this subject, namely; That though there be Lords many and Gods many, as the Apostle Paul declares, yet to us there is but one God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

With kind regards, I am your brother, and friend,

197. Letter of Benjamin F. Johnson to Elder George S. Gibbs, pp. 18-19; April -- October, 1903. [This letter was requested of Benjamin F. Johnson by the First Presidency in 1903. B. F. Johnson joined the Church in 1833 and died in 1903.]

In teaching us the "Fatherhood of God, and the Brotherhood of Man", we could begin to see why we should "love God supremely, and our brothers as ourselves," He (Joseph Smith) taught us that God was the great head of human procreation, was really and truly the father of both our spirits and our bodies; that (we) were but parts of a great whole, mutually and equally dependent upon each other, according to conditions.

198. J. Arthur Horne, Patriarch, North Seattle Stake, 28 May 1963; see also The Elder's Journal Vol I by C. Jess Groesbeck, p. 291.

Brother Horne and I chatted again tonight about the Gospel and the Adam-God Doctrine, as we have done many times before. Brother Horne, who grew up in Salt Lake City and was the son of Richard Horne and grandson of Joseph Horne said, in reference to the Adam-God Doctrine, that when he first went through the Temple (Salt Lake) for his Endowment in 1902 before going on his mission he was surprised to hear the teachings during the Temple ceremony in the Sermon before the veil, that, `Adam was our God' and that ''he came here with Eve, one of his wives'. Also it was taught that `Eve bore our spirits' (ie the spirits of all men). He asked his father about it but he declined to give any opinion about it. After Brother Horne returned from his mission a few years later, in 1905, he noted these teachings had been removed from the Temple ceremony. He feels that they were left over from Brigham Young's influence, but that he himself couldn't believe such doctrine. He thinks perhaps Brigham just got off in his speculation.

Some of the sectarian ministers are saying that we "Mormons" are ashamed of the doctrine announced by President Brigham Young to the effect that Adam will thus be God of this world. No, friends, it is not that we are ashamed of that doctrine. If you see any change come over our countenances when this doctrine is named, it is surprise, astonishment, that anyone at all capable of grasping the largeness and extent of the universe---the grandeur of existence and the possibilities in man for growth, for progress, should be so lean of intellect, should have such a paucity of understanding, as to call it in question at all. That is what our change of countenance means---not shame--- for the doctrine Brigham Young taught.

As Adam was an immortal being when placed here on earth and commanded to multiply, would not his offspring have been immortal but for the fall?

M.P.F., Logan, Utah.

Yes. But they would have had spiritual bodies only, and not bodies of flesh, blood and bone. When Adam and Eve were first placed in the garden of Eden they had resurrected bodies, in which there was no blood. A spiritual fluid or substance circulated in their veins instead of blood. Consequently, they had not power to beget children with tabernacles of flesh, such as human beings possess. The fall caused a change in their bodies, which, while it rendered them mortal at the same time gave them power to create mortal bodies of flesh, blood and bone for their offspring. This is a very brief explanation of a very important subject.

Adam, our progenitor, "the first man," was, like Christ, a pre-existent spirit, and like Christ he took upon him an appropriate body, the body of a man, and so became a "living soul." The doctrine of the pre-existence,--revealed so plainly, particularly in latter days, pours a wonderful flood of light upon the otherwise mysterious problem of man's origin. It shows that man, as a spirit, was begotten and born of heavenly parents, and reared to maturity in the eternal mansions of the Father, prior to coming upon the earth in a temporal body to undergo an experience in mortality. It teaches that all men existed in the spirit before any man existed in the flesh, and that all who have inhabited the earth since Adam have taken bodies and become souls in like manner.

It is held by some that Adam was not the first man upon this earth, and that the original human being was a development from lower orders of the animal creation. These, however, are the theories of men. The word of the Lord declares that Adam was "the first man of all men" (Moses 1:34), and we are therefore in duty bound to regard him as the primal parent of our race. It was shown to the brother of Jared that all men were created in the beginning after the image of God; and whether we take this to mean the spirit or the body, or both, it commits us to the same conclusion: Man began life as a human being, in the likeness of our heavenly Father.

Man, by searching, cannot find out God. Never, unaided, will he discover the truth about the beginning of human life. The Lord must reveal Himself, or remain unrevealed; and the same is true of the facts relating to the origin of Adam's race--God alone can reveal them. Some of these facts, however, are already known, and what has been made known it is our duty to receive and retain.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, basing its belief on divine revelation, ancient and modern, proclaims man to be the direct and lineal offspring of Deity. God Himself is an exalted man, perfected, enthroned, and supreme. * * *

Man is the child of God, formed in the divine image and endowed with divine attributes, and even as the infant son of an earthly father and mother is capable in due time of becoming a man, so the undeveloped offspring of celestial parentage is capable, by experience through ages and aeons, of evolving into a God.

202. Improvement Era, Vol. 14:548-49; "Editor's Table: Theory and Divine Revelation"; 1910.

Our young people are diligent students. They reach out after truth and knowledge with commendable zeal, and in so doing they must necessarily adopt for temporary use many theories of men. As long, however, as they recognize them as scaffolding useful for research purposes, there can be no special harm in them. It is when these theories are settled upon as basic truth that trouble appears, and the searcher then stands in grave danger of being led hopelessly from the right way.

Recently there was some trouble of this kind in one of the leading Church schools--the training college of the Brigham Young University--where three of the professors advanced certain theories on evolution as applied to the origin of man, and certain opinions on "higher criticism," as conclusive and demonstrated truths. This was done although it is well known that evolution and the "higher criticism"--though perhaps containing many truths--are in conflict on some matters with the scriptures, including some modern revelation.

An investigation was instituted, founded on the charges of Superintendent H. H. Cummings of the Church schools, based on complaints from patrons of the school; and the General Church Board of Education appointed a committee to ascertain to what extent the teaching of unorthodox doctrines in the school by these instructors was based upon fact. The personnel of the committee was: Francis M. Lyman, Heber J. Grant, Hyrum M. Smith, Charles W. Penrose, George F. Richards, Anthony W. Ivins, Horace H. Cummings, and Dr. George H. Brimhall.

The committee met with Professors Henry Peterson, Joseph Peterson and Ralph V. Chamberlain--all three eminent scholars, able instructors, and men of excellent character--and the investigation was held. The meeting and examination were characterized by the utmost cordiality and freedom on both sides. The professors frankly admitted that they held to and taught the theories of evolution as at present set forth in the text books, and also theories relating to the Bible known as "higher criticism," which they appeared to view as conclusive and demonstrated; so that when these ideas and enunciations were in conflict with the scripture, ancient and modern, it required the modification of the latter to come into harmony with the former, carrying the impression that all revelation combines a human element with the divine impression and should be subject to such modification.

The Church, on the contrary, holds to the definite authority of divine revelation which must be the standard; and that, as so-called "science" has changed from age to age in its deductions, and as divine revelation is truth, and must abide forever, views as to the lesser should conform to the positive statements of the greater; and, further, that in institutions founded by the Church for the teaching of theology, as well as other branches of education, its instructors must be in harmony in their teachings with its principles and doctrines.

There was no inclination to interfere with the freedom of thought and expression of the opinion of the professors, but the committee, after carefully weighing the matter, concluded that as teachers in a Church school they could not be given opportunity to inculcate theories that were out of harmony with the recognized doctrines of the Church, and hence that they be required to refrain from so doing.

The committee so reported to the trustees of the Brigham Young University. This body later held a meeting at which they unanimously resolved, "that no doctrine should be taught in the Brigham Young University not in harmony with the revealed word of God as interpreted and construed by the Presidency and Apostles of the Church; and that the power and authority of determining whether any professor or other instructor of the institution is out of harmony with the doctrines and attitude of the Church, be delegated to the presidency of the university."

[Marginal Note: GOD IS A UNION OF TWO--MALE AND FEMALE. See Moses 2:27; Gen

1: 26-27. (Man in an eternal progression--first the intelligences were organized into a spirit--then the spirit and body organized into a living soul-- then a female soul and male soul into a GOD.)]

LESSON THIRTEEN. SUBJECT: Creation of the World.
III. When the time of the spiritual life of the heavens and earth was ended, then the temporal, or natural, or the present time began. Jesus Christ, under the direction of the Father, and in connection with other personages, (described in the scriptures as "the Gods"), began the work of preparing the earth for the abode of man. Animal and vegetable life in great variety was placed upon the earth, and a veritable Eden soon appeared here and there.

LESSON FOURTEEN. SUBJECT: The Creation of Man.
I. Man has descended from God; in fact, he is of the same race as the Gods. His descent has not been from a lower form of life, but from the Highest Form of Life; in other words, man is, in the most literal sense, a child of God. This is not only true of the spirit of man, but of his body also. There never was a time, probably, in all the eternities of the past, when there was not men or children of God. This world is only one of many worlds which have been created by the Father through His Only Begotten. Adam, then, was probably not the first mortal man in the universe, but he was likely the first for this earth.

LESSON FIFTEEN. SUBJECT: The Creation of Adam and Eve.
I. . . . The word "creation" is used in the heading; what is meant by this term, is the process by which our first parents obtained their bodies of flesh and bones. We must look upon Adam, not as a weak mortal man altogether, but as a noble and leading spirit in the heaven. He is Michael who fought with Lucifer, and helped cast the Devil out of heaven. But when Adam's spiritual body took up its abode in a tabernacle of flesh and bones, his recollection of the past was taken from him and he became helpless, until he learned by experience, like all spirits born on this earth learn and get knowledge.
II. One of the important points about this topic is to learn, if possible, how Adam obtained his body of flesh and bones. There would seem to be but one natural and reasonable explanation, and that is, that Adam obtained his body in the same way Christ obtained his--and just as all men obtain theirs--namely, by being born of woman.
"The Father has a body of flesh and bones as tangible as man's; the Son also." (D&C 130:22). Then what is more natural than to conclude that the offspring of such Beings would have bodies of flesh and bones? Like begets like. Note 2.
III. That Jesus Christ was one of the Gods that took part in the creation of man (Adam) is evident from the following passage in the Doctrine and Covenants, (Sec. 29:34), thus carrying forward the great mission given Him of the Father: "Wherefore, verily I say unto you, that all things unto me are spiritual, and not at any time have I given unto you a law which was temporal; neither any man, nor the children; neither Adam your father, whom I created." Note 1 and 2.

Note 1. 2 Ne 2:22,23.
Note 2. From a discourse preached by President Brigham Young, the following is taken: "they (the Gods) came here and organized the raw material, and arranged in their order the herbs of the field, the trees also. The seed was brought from another sphere and planted in this earth. The thistle, the thorn, the briar, and the obnoxious weed did not appear until after the earth was cursed."--JD Vol 1:50.
Parley P. Pratt's Key to Theology: "A Royal planter now descends from yonder world of older date, and bearing in his hand the choice seeds of the older Paradise, he plants them in the virgin soil of a new-born earth. They grow and flourish there, and bearing seed replant themselves, and thus clothe the naked earth with scenes of beauty, and fill the air with fragrant incense. Ripening fruits and herbs at length abound. When lo! from yonder world is transferred every species of animal life: Male and female they come, with blessings on their heads; and a voice is heard again, `Be fruitful and multiply.' Earth--its mineral, vegetable and animal wealth--its Paradise prepared, down comes from yonder world on high, a son of God, with his beloved spouse. And thus a colony from heaven it may be from the sun, is transplanted to our soil. The blessings of their Father are upon them, and the first great law of heaven and earth is again repeated, `Be fruitful and multiply.'"

204. Journal of Thomas A. Clawson, 1912-1917 Book, pp. 69-70; April 8, 1912.

At Special Priesthood meeting at which the official statement of the First Presidency regarding the teachings of Adam-God is presented, Prest. Jos. F. Smith then said that he was in full accord with what Prest Penrose had said and that Prest. Brigham Young when he delivered that sermon only expressed his own views and that they were not corroborated by the word of the Lord in the Standard works of the Church. The Bible, Book of Mormon, Pearl of Great Price and Doctrine and Covenants were voted upon by the Church convened in a Conference and organized in various Quorums of the Priesthood who voted by Quorums after which the body of the Church were asked to vote to sustain the above books as the Standards of the Church. This first vote was taken by the Church when they were in the East. It was again taken in the same manner here in Salt Lake in the year _____.

Now all doctrine if it can't be established by these standards is not to be taught or promulgated by members. That those Patriarchs who persisted in teaching these things and did not stop when told to do so should be handled by their Bishops and their names sent up to the High Councils for further action and be cut off. He also spoke upon the doctrine contained in King Follett's funeral when persons who reported this discourse gave forth the idea that children (p. 70) who died would be resurrected as little children never growing any more but remaining as when they were laid down. In this he said that the Prophet did not teach such doctrine but he had the affidavits of three or more witnesses who heard him say: "The mothers would take up their little ones as they were laid down and that they would have the joy of seeing them grow to the full stature of their spirits."

Smith; Maricopa Stake Conference; December 7, 1913; See also Deseret News, Church section; September 19, 1936, p. 2, 8). I know that my Redeemer liveth; I know that Joseph Smith was a Prophet of God; I know that God is a being with body, parts, and passions and that his Son is in his own likeness, and that man is created in the image of God. The Son, Jesus Christ, grew and developed into manhood the same as you or I, as likewise did God, his father grow and develop to the Supreme Being that he now is. Man was born of woman; Christ the Savior, was born of woman; and God, the Father, was born of woman. Adam, our earthly parent, was also born of woman into this world, the same as Jesus and you and I.

206. Improvement Era, Vol 23:389-393; Joseph Fielding Smith; "The Origin and Destiny of Man"; 1919.

I now come to the main topic in this discussion: From whence came man? What is his destiny? It is to me exceedingly strange that men will travel so far, following a will-o-the-wisp until they are overcome in the quagmire, and reject the truth at their door. For an answer to these questions, why not accept the statement of the One who knows? This knowledge is within the reach of all.

* * *

I accept the word of the Lord to his prophets, for I know it is true. In the first chapter of Genesis, verse 27, this great revelation is found: "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." This being true, man being the offspring of God, he was not placed on the earth as a "cave man;" a savage devoid of intelligence and resembling more the ape than man. Adam, the first man on the earth, was an intelligent being, so filled with vitality after the fall, and perfect in form, that he lived upon the earth nearly one thousand years. Then in the last verse of this chapter we learn that, "God saw everything that he made and, behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day."

* * *

Again, if you believe in modern revelation, if you accept the teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, then you must believe that man is the offspring of God, and if so he was not evolved from a tadpole, or from the scum of the sea.

* * *

I tell you life did not commence upon this earth spontaneously. Its origin was not here. Life existed long before our solar system was called into being. The fact is, there never was a time when man--made in the image of God, male and female--did not exist.

* * *

Thus the Lord has given us the information regarding his creations, and how he has made many earths, for there never was a beginning, never was a time when man did not exist somewhere in the universe, and when the time came for this earth to be peopled the Lord, our God, transplanted upon it from some other earth, the life which is found here. Man he created in his own image. If it were our privilege to go out and visit some of the other creations, other worlds in space, we should discover that they are peopled with beings who look like us, for they, too, are the offspring of God, and of the same race from whence we came. Perhaps they would be more exalted, but, nevertheless, they would be in the image of God, and so are we. Adam was not a "cave man," but perhaps the most nearly perfect man in form and feature to our Father and Creator. Such is the testimony of Joseph Smith.

* * *

It was not until man forsook the divine guidance which the Lord was always willing to extend to him, that retrogression set in. The "cave-man" and the savage are products of transgression and sin; for, in the beginning man was intelligent, and directed by light and truth, even by the Savior, Jesus Christ, who is the Mediator between man and God. The destiny of man is to become, through stages of progression, like unto his Father; and after the resurrection from the dead, he shall be added upon, as the scriptures say, until he shall receive all things "which the father hath," and shall be counted as a son and joint heir with Jesus Christ, the first-fruits of the resurrection and the Savior of the world. This, then, is true evolution, which all Latter-day Saints believe. There is something inspiring, ennobling and grand in this view of things. . . .

207. Gospel Doctrine, p. 64; President Joseph F. Smith; 1919.

We must go through the same ordeal in order to attain to the glory and exaltation which God designed we should enjoy with him in the eternal worlds. In other words, we must become like him; peradventure to sit upon thrones, to have dominion, power, and eternal increase. God designed this in the beginning. We are the children of God. He is an eternal being, without beginning of days or end of years. He always was, he is, he always will be. We are precisely in the same condition and under the same circumstances that God our heavenly Father was when he was passing through this, or a similar ordeal. We are destined to come forth out of the grave as Jesus did, and to obtain immortal bodies as he did--that is, that our tabernacles are to become immortal as his became immortal, that the spirit and the body may be joined together and become one living being, indivisible, inseparable, eternal. This is the object of our existence in the world.

. . . I am going to assume responsibility for making this statement, that man came here, was placed here as an immortal, glorified, resurrected being. I want to make myself clear, because these lectures are going to the brethren, and if they want to correct them they can. . . . I believe it was the fruit that changed and modified Adam's resurrected body, and again made it subject to death. Is that clear? At least, I want you to get my idea. . . and may I say the Church does not teach this as doctrine. Many of the authorities do. Others teach that a body was prepared in some way for Adam and Eve.

[Apostle Melvin J. Ballard the same day, in lecture XI, said: "What Brother Whitaker has said I agree with, with reference to his fall and man's coming here." Also, "Adam had two ways of regaining his lost immortality. One was by partaking of the fruit of the tree of life, and so recovering `from the mortal condition apparently.' The other is through the atonement of Jesus Christ."]

209. Deseret News; B. H. Roberts; July 23, 1921.

As a matter of fact, the "Mormon" church does not teach that doctrine. A few men in the "Mormon" Church have held such views; and several of them quite prominent in the Councils of the Church. . . . Brigham Young and others may have taught that doctrine.

210. The Three Degrees of Glory; Melvin J. Ballard; (Deseret Book Co.: Salt Lake City, Utah); pp. 10-11; Discourse given in the Ogden Tabernacle; September 22, 1922.

What do we mean by endless or eternal increase? We mean that through the righteousness and faithfulness of men and women who keep the commandments of God they will come forth with celestial bodies, fitted and prepared to enter into their great, high and eternal glory in the celestial kingdom of God, and unto them, through their preparation, there will come children, who will be spirit children. I don't think that is very difficult to comprehend and understand. The nature of the offspring is determined by the nature of the substance that flows in the veins of the being. When blood flows in the veins of the being, the offspring will be what blood produces, which is tangible flesh and bone, but when that which flows in the veins is spirit matter, a substance which is more refined and pure and glorious than blood, the offspring of such beings will be spirit children. By that I mean they will be in the image of the parents. They will have a spirit body and have a spark of the eternal or divine that always did exist in them.

Unto such parentage will this glorious privilege come, for it is written in our scriptures that "the glory of God is to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." So, it will be the glory of men and women that will make their glory like unto His. When the power of endless increase shall come to them, and their offspring, growing and multiplying through ages that shall come, they will be in due time, as we have been, provided with an earth like this, wherein they too may obtain earthly bodies and pass through all the experiences through which we have passed, and then we shall hold our relationship to them, the fulness and completeness of which has not been revealed to us, but we shall stand in our relationship to them as God, our Eternal Father, does to us, and thereby is this the most glorious and wonderful privilege that ever will come to any of the sons and daughters of God.

211. Sermons and Missionary Experiences of Melvin J. Ballard; Bryant S. Hinckley, compiler; pp. 205-206.

No matter to what heights God has attained or may attain, he does not stand alone; for side by side with him, in all her glory, a glory like unto his, stands a companion, the Mother of his children. For as we have a Father in heaven, so also we have a Mother there, a glorified, exalted, ennobled Mother. That is a startling doctrine, I recognize, to some folk, and yet we ought to be governed by reason in giving consideration to this doctrine which is a revelation from God. . . . Motherhood is eternal with Godhood, and there is no such thing as eternal or endless life without the eternal and endless continuation of motherhood.

PRE-ADAMITE THEORY NOT A DOCTRINE OF THE CHURCH

Even in the Church there are a scattered few who are now advocating and contending that this earth was peopled with a race--perhaps many races--long before the days of Adam. These men desire, of course, to square the teachings in the Bible with the teachings of modern science and philosophy in regard to the age of the earth and life upon it. If you hear any one talking this way, you may answer them by saying that the doctrine of "pre-Adamites" is not a doctrine of the Church, and is not advocated nor countenanced in the Church. There is no warrant in the scripture, not an authentic word, to sustain it. But the revelations of the Lord reveal Adam as the "Ancient of days," Michael, the Archangel, who is appointed to have jurisdiction through all time and eternity on this earth and to preside over it, under the direction of Jesus Christ. He is called by the Lord the "first man of ALL men" upon the earth, and the Prophet Joseph Smith has said: "Commencing with Adam, who was the first man, who is spoken of in Daniel as being the `Ancient of Days,' or in other words, the first and oldest of all." This is the doctrine which has been taught by authority in the Church regarding Adam.

NO DEATH ON THE EARTH BEFORE ADAM

The Gospel teaches us that if Adam and Eve had not partaken of that fruit of the tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil they would have remained in the garden of Eden in that same condition prevailing before the fall. Under those conditions they would have had no seed. "Adam fell that man might be" as it was decreed in the heavens before the world was. Lehi has given us a very clear and comprehensive view of the mission of Adam and of the atonement of Jesus Christ, and the Book of Mormon is very explicit in teaching these fundamental doctrines. In regard to the pre-mortal condition of Adam and the entire earth, Lehi has stated the following: "And now, behold, if Adam had not transgressed he would not have fallen, but he would have remained in the garden of Eden. And all things which were created must have remained in the same state in which they were after they were created; and they must have remained forever, and had no end.

Is not this statement plain enough? Whom are you going to believe, the Lord, or men? * * *

EXACT MANNER OF CREATION WILL YET BE REVEALED

By revelation we are well informed that Adam was not subject to death when he was placed in the garden of Eden, nor was there any death upon the earth. The Lord has not seen fit to tell us definitely just how Adam came for we are not ready to receive that truth. He did not come here a resurrected being to die again for we are taught most clearly that those who pass through the resurrection receive eternal life, and can die no more. It is sufficient for us to know, until the Lord reveals more about it, that Adam was not subject to death but had the power, through transgressing the law, to become subject to death and to cause the same curse to come upon he earth and all life upon it. For this earth, once pronounced good, was cursed after the fall. It is passing through its mortal probation as well as the life which is upon it, and will eventually receive the resurrection and a place of exaltation which is decreed in the heavens for it.

The time will come when we shall be informed all about Adam and the manner of creation for the Lord has promised that when he comes he will make all these things known. * * *

For my part, I am willing to wait until this time to learn the truth of these things. This information was given to the Saints at one time in a former dispensation, but the Lord has said we may not have it in the days of wickedness;. When the Gentiles "shall repent of their iniquity, and become clean before the Lord," then it shall be revealed again. (Ether 4:6-7.)

WHEN WE HAVE FAITH LIKE UNTO THE BROTHER OF JARED

* * *

So the brother of Jared wrote all about Adam; all about the creation and many other things, which the world in its great wisdom cannot have today because we are not willing in the spirit of faith, such as the brother of Jared had, to accept the things of the Lord. The wise men of today would find the things of the Lord in conflict with their theories, and because of the hardness of our hearts we must wait until, in the spirit of true repentance and faith, we are cleansed and wickedness is banished from the earth.

THE "FALL OF MAN" AND DEATH LEAD TO PROGRESSION

This much regarding Adam has been revealed: He transgressed the law under which he was living in the garden of Eden and was driven out to till the earth. A curse was placed upon the earth and upon all things, and they became mortal--the earth, animal life, plant life and man. But this mortality was the means of giving to all men the privilege of passing through pain, sorrow, temptation and joy, thus increasing their education in preparation for the life which is to come. We speak of this as a fall, but Adam descended that he might rise, for without these experiences neither he nor his children could have experienced the many vicissitudes of this present life. Without the atonement of Jesus Christ we could not pass through the resurrection and death would have held claim upon every creature.

213. The Deseret News, p. 2,8; "Man A Child of God"; Saturday, September 19, 1936.

That man as a descendant of Adam, is, in a most literal sense, a child of God is emphatically explained in the following group of brief excerpts from Church records:

THE CREATION OF ADAM

by Pres. Joseph F. Smith, Dec. 7, 1913, At Stake Conference of Maricopa Stake.

President Smith closed the conference with his usual brilliant, thoughtful remarks. He bore a strong testimony of the truthfulness of the gospel and said in part: "I know that my Redeemer liveth; I know that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God; I know that God is a being with body, parts and passions and that His Son is in His own likeness, and that man is created in the image of God. The Son, Jesus Christ, grew and developed into manhood the same as you or I, as likewise did God, His Father, grow and develop to the Supreme Being that He now is. Man was born of woman; Christ, the Savior, was born of woman; and God, the Father, was born of woman. Adam, our earthly parent, was also born or woman into this world, the same as Jesus and you and I." JOSEPH E. NOBLE, Stake Clerk.

(Deseret News, Dec 27,1913, Sec. III, p. 7).

We belong to our progenitors--to our Father and our God. 8:67.

Things were first created spiritually; the Father actually begat the spirit, and they were brought forth and lived with him. Then he commenced the work of creating earthly tabernacles, precisely as he had been created in this flesh Himself, by partaking of the coarse material that was organized and composed this earth, until His system was charged with it, consequently the tabernacles of His children were organized from the coarse materials of this earth.

This is not only true of the spirit of man, but of his body also. There never was a time, probably, in all the eternities of the past, when there was not men or children of God. This world is only one of many worlds which have been created by the Father through His Only Begotten."

The pedigree of the Savior, according to Luke, traces back to ". . . Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God.--(Luke 3:38).

Revelation cannot bow to tradition. This is the great ideal, and it must be honored and maintained as such. In dealing with it, no Procrustean process is permissible. It must not be chopped off because men think it too long, nor stretched out because they think it too short. It did not come into the world to be mutilated. Truth is the standard--truth as heaven reveals it--and the opinions and theories of men must give way. The Gospel's accessories are no substitute for the Gospel.--Elder Orson F. Whitney.

214. Sermons and Missionary Experiences of Melvin J. Ballard, pp. 239-240; by Bryant S. Hinckley; (sometime between 1919 & 1939).

What do we mean by endless or eternal increase? We mean that through the righteousness and faithfulness of men and women who keep the commandments of God they will come forth with celestial bodies, fitted and prepared to enter into their great, high and eternal glory in the celestial kingdom of God, and unto them, through their preparation, there will come children, who will be spirit children. I don't think that is very difficult to comprehend and understand. The nature of the offspring is determined by the nature of the substance that flows in the veins of the being. When blood flows in the veins of the being, the offspring will be what blood produces, which is tangible flesh and bone, but when that which flows in the veins is spirit matter, a substance which is more refined and pure and glorious than blood, the offspring of such beings will be spirit children. By that I mean they will be in the image of the parents. They will have a spirit body and have a spark of the eternal or divine that always did exist in them.

215. Man, His Origin and Destiny, pp. 276-277; Joseph Fielding Smith; 1940.

. . . does it not appear to you that it is a foolish and ridiculous notion that when God created this earth he had to begin with a speck of protoplasm, and take millions of years, if not billions, to bring conditions to pass by which his sons and daughters might obtain bodies made in his image? Why not the shorter route and transplant them from another earth as we are taught in the scriptures?

216. Church History & Modern Revelation, p. 231; Joseph Fielding Smith; 1940.

We know that when Adam was placed on the earth it was pronounced good, and he as well as the earth was not subject to death. There was no blood in his body, but he had a spiritual body until it was changed by the fall. A spiritual body is one which is not quickened by blood, but by spirit. Before the fall, Adam had a physical, tangible body of flesh and bones, but it was not quickened by blood. The partaking of the forbidden fruit caused blood to exist in his body and thus the seeds of mortality were sown and his body then became temporal, or mortal.

217. The First 2,000 Years, 1st ed., pp. 31-32; W. Cleon Skousen; Chapter 4: The Temporal Creation; 1953.

Origin of Human Life on the Earth

When the Lord was describing to Moses the manner in which human life first came to this planet, He summarily dismissed the subject with the simple statement that Adam's temporal body was made from "the dust of the ground" and that his spirit entered that body to sustain it with the "breath of life." How the Lord provided Adam with a body from the dust of the ground is not mentioned at this point and as a result a great many scriptural scholars made the same mistake certain scientists did. They concluded that by some mysterious means life was created spontaneously. They misled themselves into thinking that the Lord performed some kind of miracle by making a physical form out of earthly clay and then transforming it into a living human body.

Such a concept partakes of the dark ages and is nowhere justified in scripture.

In fact, the Lord originally told Moses precisely what it meant to be made from the dust of the earth. This is a technical phrase. It meant to be "born. . . by water, and blood, and the spirit which I have made, and so became of dust a living soul." (Moses 6:59) This is simply a description of the physical birth. That is also how Adam's physical body was made. It was born of a mother just as the body of every other human being has been made from the dust of the earth.

Where was he born? Who were his parents? To have answered these questions in detail would have required the Lord to discuss events on other planets and He had already told Moses He did not wish to cover such matters at that time. In this dispensation, however, the servants of the Lord have added to our understanding of this problem. Said President Brigham Young, "Mankind are here because they are the offspring of parents (Adam and Eve) who were first brought here from another planet." (Disc of BY, 1925, p 160) And speaking of Adam's origin, President Young declared: "Adam was made from the dust of an earth, but not from the dust of this earth. He was made as you and I were made and no person was ever made on any other principle." (JD 3:319)

This enlightening addition to human knowledge prompted this comment from B. H. Roberts: "As vegetation was created or made to grow upon some older earth, and the seeds thereof or the plants themselves were brought to our earth and made to grow, so likewise man and his help-meet were brought from some other world to our own, to people it with their children. And though it is said that the `Lord God formed man from the dust of the ground'---it by no means follows that he was `formed' as one might form a brick, or from the dust of this earth. We are all `formed' of the dust of the ground, though instead of being molded as a brick we are brought forth by the natural laws of procreation; so also was Adam and his wife in some older world. And as for the story of the rib, under it I believe the mystery of procreation is hidden." (Roberts, Man's Relationship to Deity, pp. 279-280)

The earthly material from which the body of Adam was formed was therefore of the same temporal class as our own earth but it was provided for him by natural and eternal laws of procreation on some other, older earth-planet than our own. When Adam was brought to the earth he was placed in a beautiful and comfortable environment located "eastward in Eden."

[Middle of page 33:] During this period of embellishment when parent stock of the plant and animal kingdoms was being transplanted to this earth, Adam took an active part in supervising this work under the Lord's direction as he also must have done during the earth's preparation. This is referred to by President Young, "Though we have it in history that our Father Adam. . . knew nothing about his God previous to being made here, yet it is not so, and when we learn the truth we shall see and understand that he helped to make this world and was the manager of that operation. He was the person who brought the animals and the seeds from other planets to this world." (JD 3:319)

218. Speech given by J. Reuben Clark, Jr.; Brigham Young University; p. 9; July 7, 1954.

Here we must have in mind---must know---that only the President of the Church, the Presiding High Priest, is sustained as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator for the Church, and he alone has the right to receive revelations for the Church, either new or amendatory, or to give authoritative interpretations of scriptures that shall be binding on the Church, or change in any way the existing doctrines of the Church. He is God's sole mouthpiece on earth for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the only true Church. He alone may declare the mind and will of God to his people. No officer of any other Church in the world has this high right and lofty prerogative.

Our Father in heaven is the Father of Jesus Christ, both in the spirit and in the flesh. Our Savior is the Firstborn in the spirit, the Only Begotten in the flesh. (p. 18)

Gospel Mysteries

Adam's body was created from the dust of the earth, but at that time it was a spiritual earth. Adam had a spiritual body until mortality came upon him through the violation of the law under which he was living, but he also had a physical body of flesh and bones.

Now what is a spiritual body? It is one that is quickened by spirit and not by blood. Our Father in Heaven and our Savior and all those who have passed through the resurrection have physical bodies of flesh and bones, but their bodies are quickened by spirit and not by blood, hence they are spiritual bodies and not blood bodies. The immortal body is quickened by spirit, but the mortal body is quickened by blood. . . .

Now when Adam was in the Garden of Eden, he was not subject to death. There was no blood in his body and he could have remained there forever. This is true of all other creations. This statement may not be very pleasing to our evolutionists, but it is true. (pp. 76-77)

There was no living thing upon the earth until it was prepared for living life. The Pearl of Great Price does not say that man was the first living thing on the earth, but that he was the first flesh and the first man also. He became the first mortal flesh when he fell. By flesh is meant mortality, and Adam was the first mortal on the earth; but animals and other forms of life were placed on earth first, and he was not on the earth until everything was prepared for him. (pp. 77-78)

But Adam was the first flesh on the earth and the first man also. By flesh is meant mortality. There are numerous passages in the scriptures in which mortality and flesh are used synonymously. Adam was placed on the earth after all other creatures were here. He came when the earth was prepared for him. The Lord speaks of his becoming the first "flesh," or mortal, because of his fall. He was, of course, the first man on the earth, contrary to the teachings of our evolutionists. (p. 92)

I tell you, life did not commence upon this earth spontaneously. Its origin was not here. Life existed long before our solar system was called into being. The fact is, there never was a time when man--made in the image of God, male and female--did not exist. . . .

The Lord has given us the information regarding his creations, and how he has made many earths, for there never was a beginning, never was a time when man did not exist somewhere in the universe, and when the time came for this earth to be peopled, the Lord, our God, transplanted upon it from some other earth, the life which is found here. (pp. 139-140)

220. Doctrines of Salvation, 2:47; Joseph Fielding Smith; 1955.

Evidently his (Christ's) Father passed through a period of mortality even as he passed through mortality, and as we all are doing. Our Father in heaven, according to the Prophet, had a Father, and since there has been a condition of this kind through all eternity, each Father had a Father, until we come to a stop where we cannot go further, because of our limited capacity to understand.

221. Evidences & Reconciliations; John A. Widtsoe; April 1, 1960.

In the sermon referred to, (JD 1:50) President Young places Adam unequivocally as a separate character, "Michael," under the dominion of the Trinity. "The earth was organized by three distinct characters, Elohim, Yahovah, and Michael." There was no substituting of Adam for the God to whom we pray. Likewise, the term "father" was constantly applied by Brigham Young to Adam, because Adam was associated with Jesus Christ in the making of the earth; and also in a more literal sense, because, as the first man, he was the father of the race. Yet there are those who have nursed the irrational conclusion that President Young implied that Adam and God, the Father, are one and the same individual.

Brigham Young's much-discussed sermon says that "Jesus was begotten in the flesh by the same character that was in the Garden of Eden, and who is our Father in heaven." Enemies of the Church, or stupid people, reading also that Adam is "our father and our God," have heralded far and wide that the Mormons believe that Jesus Christ was begotten of Adam. Yet, the rational reading of the whole sermon reveals the falsity of such a doctrine. It is explained that God the Father was in the Garden of Eden before Adam, that he was the Father of Adam, and that this same personage, God the Father, who was in the Garden of Eden before Adam, was the Father of Jesus Christ, when the Son took upon himself a mortal body. That is, the same personage was the Father of Adam and of Jesus Christ. In the numerous published sermons of Brigham Young this is the doctrine that appears; none other. The assertion is repeatedly made that Jesus Christ was begotten by God, the Father, distinct by any stretch of imagination from Adam. This is a well-established Latter-day Saint doctrine. (56)

With this doctrine in mind, President Brigham Young preached the sermon which has been construed by enemies to teach that Adam is the God to whom we pray and whom we worship. (JD 1:50) President Young merely followed the sound doctrine taught by Joseph Smith that when the earth story is finished, the heads of all the dispensations will deliver their stewardships to Adam, who in turn will deliver them to Jesus Christ, under whose commission the earth work has been done. . . . Moreover, in the sermon referred to, Brigham Young spoke of Adam as Michael, the archangel, the Ancient of Days, so that nowhere can an intelligent reader confuse Adam with either member of the Godhead. (66-67)

Those who peddle the well-worn Adam-God myth, usually charge the Latter-day Saints with believing that: (1) Our Father in heaven, the Supreme God, to whom we pray, is Adam, the first man; and (2) Adam was the father of Jesus Christ. A long series of absurd and false deductions are made from these propositions. . . . Nowhere is it suggested that Adam is God, the Father, whose child Adam himself was. (68-69)

222. Address given at LDS Institute of Religion; Joseph Fielding Smith; Salt Lake City, Utah; January 14, 1961.

Why did Adam come here? Not subject to death when he was placed upon the earth, there had to come a change in his body through the partaking of this element---whatever you want to call it, fruit---that brought blood into his body; and blood became the life of the body instead of spirit. And blood has in it the seeds of death, some mortal element. Mortality was created through the eating of the forbidden fruit, if you want to call it forbidden, but I think the Lord has made it clear that it was not forbidden. He merely said to Adam, if you want to stay here this is the situation. If so, don't eat it.

224. Phone call to Reed C. Durham; Friday afternoon, April 29, 1966. [Notes from a talk with Bruce R. McConkie concerning Brother McConkie's feelings about Luke 3:38] Note: This particular philosophy finds no support in the scriptures nor in the revelations of Joseph Smith. It only clouds an uncloudy issue.

He had purposely left the door open on that part. He said that it was a true doctrine, that God the Father, Eloheim, a divine resurrected being, came down to this earth after its creation with a wife and produced, in a natural way of sexual intercourse, a child who grew up and became known as Adam. They did the same and brought forth a girl, who grew up and became Eve. They had bodies of flesh and bone, but were not mortal; not till they fell. They (Adam and Eve) were not resurrected and were not translated beings. God really did create their bodies on this earth. They were not transported here; only their spirits. He then said that his father-in-law told him that was a true doctrine, and that it had been taught a great deal by President Joseph F. Smith. He also added that President Joseph Fielding Smith said it was too deep now for most saints and that's the reason for saying about the creation of Adam and Even in the temple, `it's only figurative.'

I'll make a comment on the creation of Adam, and I'll tell you what your source material is. The best source material, really, is the statement of the First Presidency of the day of Joseph F. Smith, John R. Winder and Anthon H. Lund, when they issued the document that most of you are familiar with about the creation, evolution and the fall of Adam. The original source is volume 13 of the Improvement Era, but it's quoted everywhere. In this document they say such things as this--Adam began life as the human germ or embryo that becomes a man--and they also say all men who have taken bodies since that day have come "in like manner." Well, that simply means that Adam was born into the world. That's the way he had to get here.

227. Working Memorandum on the Creation Story; Handout, p. 14; BYU; Cleon Skousen; 1972.

Brigham Young stated that "He (Adam) was made as you and I were made and no person was ever made on any other principle." In fact, the Lord told Moses what it meant to be `made from the dust of the earth.' The Lord said it meant to be `BORN. . .by water, and blood, and the spirit which I have made, and SO BECAME OF DUST A LIVING SOUL.' (Moses 6:59)

228. Melchizedek Priesthood Manual; "Answers to Gospel Questions"; Joseph Fielding Smith; 1972.

Adam and Eve did not come here in a mortal state. They had to come in the manner in which they did and then transgress the law. The transgression of that law, contrary to the view of many, was not a sin. It was not a sin any more than the transgression in the laboratory by a chemist in combining two substances and creating another entirely different from the first. It was not a sin to bring to pass mortality, a condition which was essential to the eternal welfare of man. The fall changed the nature of Adam and Eve to fit them for the condition in which we now are. (p. 60) The statement by President Brigham Young (JD 1:50) that the Father is the first of the human family is easily explained. The expression that he was the same character that was in the Garden of Eden has led to misunderstanding because of the implication which many place upon it that it had reference to Adam. Unfortunately President Brigham Young is not here to make his meaning in this regard perfectly clear. Under the circumstances we must refer to other expressions by President Brigham Young in order to ascertain exactly what his views really were in relation to God, Adam, and Jesus Christ. Let me comment first upon the expression that God is the "first of the human family." This same doctrine was taught by Joseph Smith. It is a fundamental doctrine of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

He also taught that, literally, God is our Father. That men are of the same RACE--the race called humans, and God the progenitor, or creator, is the Father of the human race. . . .

In discussing the statement by President Brigham Young that the Father of Jesus Christ is the same character who was in the Garden of Eden, I maintain that President Young was NOT referring to Adam, but to God the Father, who created Adam, for he was in the Garden of Eden, and according to Mormon doctrine Adam was in his presence constantly, walked with him, talked with him and the Father taught Adam his language. It was not until the Fall, that the Father departed from Adam and from the Garden of Eden. . . .

President Brigham Young did not believe and did not teach, that Jesus Christ was begotten by Adam. He said that Adam was conversant with his Father in the Garden of Eden. This is believed by all members of the Church, and that the Father was in the Garden of Eden until Adam was driven out for his transgression. (p. 20-22)

229. The Message of the Joseph Smith Papyri, p. 147; Hugh Nibley; 1975.

. . . in the mysteries everywhere the sleep is also a forgetting. . . . What we see in Jacob at Bethel, the place of the Temple, is really "Adam who has forgotten his image of the Divine Chariot. . . asleep down below." A very early Christian writing tells how Adam, having settled things with the rebellious Lucifer, proceeded to come down to earth under a heavenly escort, but upon arriving here fell into a deep sleep. . . . The close association between coronation and creation is seen in the Pyramid rite in which the King is commanded to shake off sleep, arise, and receive his power. (p. 147)

In Judeao-Christian tradition the first representative of the arrested sacrifice is Adam, who, as he was sacrificing on an alter, calling upon God with upraised hands, was accosted by Satan, who tried to sacrifice him, smiting him on the right side with a sharp stone. Adam fell upon the altar and Satan fled. While Eve attempted to raise up her husband, and just as he was at the point of death, God accepted his blood flowing upon the altar as a sacrifice, "and thus sent down his word and healed Adam". Thus, as in the cases of Abraham and Isaac, the sacrifice, though arrested, was no mere empty form, since it was clearly in the process of being carried out to the end in good faith. (p. 217)

230. The Ensign, p. 5-6; First Presidency Message; President Spencer W. Kimball; "Absolute Truth"; September 1978.

A few more salient facts, which I shall not attempt at this moment to elaborate upon: Adam and Eve transgressed a law and were responsible for a change that came to all their posterity, that of mortality. Could it have been the different food which made the change? Somehow blood, the life-giving element in our bodies, replaced the finer substance which coursed through their bodies before. They and we became mortal, subject to illness, pains, and even the physical dissolution called death. But the spirit, which is supreme in the dual man, transcends the body. It does not decompose but proceeds to the spirit world for further experience, with the assurance that after sufficient preparation there, a reunion will take place where the spirit will be housed eternally in a remodeled body of flesh and bones. This time the union will never be dissolved, since there will be no blood to disintegrate and cause trouble. A finer substance will give life to the body and will render it immortal.

1. Experience related by Orson F. Whitney on April 24, 1918; Church Historian's Office.

There came a marvelous manifestation and admonition from a higher source, one impossible to ignore. It was a dream or a vision in a dream as I lay upon my bed in the little town of Columbia, Lancaster County, Penn. I seemed to be in the Garden of Gethsemane, a witness of the Savior's agony. I saw Him as plainly as I have seen anyone. Standing behind a tree in the foreground, I beheld Jesus, Peter, James and John as they came through a little wicket gate at my right. Leaving the three apostles there, after telling them to kneel and pray, the Son of God passed over to the other side, where He also knelt and prayed. It was the same prayer with which all Bible readers are familiar: 'O, my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt.'
As he prayed, the tears streamed down His face, which was towards me. I was so moved at the sight that I also wept, out of pure sympathy. My whole heart went out to Him; I loved Him with all my soul and longed to be with Him and longed for nothing else. Presently He arose and walked to where those apostles were kneeling--fast asleep! He shook them gently, awoke them, and in a tone of tender reproach, untinctured by the least show of anger or impatience, asked them plaintively if they could not watch with Him one hour. There He was, with the awful weight of the world's sin upon His shoulders, with the pangs of every man, woman and child shooting through His sensitive soul--and they could not watch with Him one poor hour!
Returning to His place, He offered up the same prayer as before; then He went back and again found them sleeping. Again He awoke them, readmonished them, and once more returned and prayed. Three times this occurred, until I was perfectly familiar with His appearance, face, form and movements. He was of noble stature and majestic mien--not at all weak, effeminate or anything as some painters have portrayed; but the very god that He was and is, as meek and humble as a little child.

All at once, circumstances seemed to change; the scene remained just the same. Instead of before, it was after the crucifixion, and the Savior, with the three apostles, now stood together in a group at my left. They were about to depart and ascend to Heaven. I could endure it no longer. I ran from behind the tree, fell at His feet, clasped Him around the knees and begged Him to take me with Him.
I shall never forget the kind and gentle manner in which He stooped, raised me up, and embraced me. It was so vivid, so real. I felt the very warmth of His body, as He held me in His arms and said in tenderest tones: 'No, my son; these have finished their work; they can go with me; but you must stay and finish yours.' Still I clung to Him. Gazing into His face--for He was taller than I--I besought Him fervently: 'Well, promise me that I will come to you at last.' Smiling sweetly, He said: 'That will depend entirely upon yourself.' I awoke with a sob in my throat, and it was morning.

Away on the Fort Peck Reservation where I was doing missionary work with some of our Brethren laboring among the Indians, seeking the Lord for light to decide certain matters pertaining to our work there, and receiving a witness from him that we were doing things according to his will, I found myself one evening in the dreams of the night in that sacred building, the temple. After a season of prayer and rejoicing I was informed that I should have the privilege of entering into one of these rooms, to meet a glorious personage, and, as I entered the door, I saw, seated on a raised platform, the most glorious being my eyes have ever beheld or that I ever conceived existed in all the eternal worlds. As I approached to be introduced, he spoke my name. If I shall live to be a million years old, I shall never forget that smile. He took me into his arms and kissed me, pressed me to his bosom, and blessed me, until the marrow of my bones seemed to melt! When he had finished, I feel at his feet and, as I bathed them with my tears and kisses, I saw the prints of the nails in the feet of the Redeemer of the world. The feeling that I had in the presence of him who hath all things in his hands, to have his love, his affection, and his blessings was such that if I ever can receive that of which I had but a foretaste, I would give all that I am, all that I ever hope to be, to feel what I then felt!

As one of the humblest among you, and occupying the station I do, I want to bear you my humble testimony that I have received by the voice and the power of revelation, the knowledge and an understanding that God is.
It was a week following the conference, when I was preparing myself for a radio talk on the life of the Savior, when I read again the story of the life, the crucifixion and the resurrection of the Master--there came to me as I read that, a reality of that story, more than just what was on the written page. For in truth, I found myself viewing the scenes with a certainty as though I had been there in person. I know that these things come by the revelations of the living God. 4.Bible Dictionary of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, p. 680.

But that man was not able himself to erect a system, or plan with power sufficient to free him from a destruction which awaited him is evident from the fact that God, as before remarked, prepared a sacrifice in the gift of His own Son who should be sent in due time, to prepare a way, or open a door through which man might enter into the Lord's presence, whence he had been cast out for disobedience. From time to time these glad tidings were sounded in the ears of men in different ages of the world down to the time of Messiah's coming. By faith in this atonement or plan of redemption, Abel offered to God a sacrifice that was accepted, which was the firstlings of the flock. Cain offered of the fruit of the ground, and was not accepted, because he could not do it in faith, he could have no faith, or could not exercise faith contrary to the plan of heaven. It must be shedding the blood of the Only Begotten to atone for man; for this was the plan of redemption; and without the shedding of blood was no remission; and as the sacrifice was instituted for a type, by which man was to discern the great Sacrifice which God had prepared; to offer a sacrifice contrary to that, no faith could be exercised, because redemption was not purchased in that way, nor the power of atonement instituted after that order; consequently Cain could have no faith; and whatsoever is not of faith, is sin. But Abel offered an acceptable sacrifice, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God Himself testifying of his gifts. Certainly, the shedding of the blood of a beast could be beneficial to no man, except it was done in imitation, or as a type, or explanation of what was to be offered through the gift of God Himself; and this performance done with an eye looking forward in faith on the power of that great Sacrifice for a remission of sins. But however various may have been, and may be at the present time, the opinions of men respecting the conduct of Abel, and the knowledge which he had on the subject of atonement, it is evident in our minds, that he [Abel] was instructed more fully in the plan than what the Bible speaks of, for how could he offer a sacrifice in faith, looking to God for a remission of his sins in the power of the great atonement, without having been previously instructed in that plan?

It is reasoned that the Firstborn Son of God has not been the savior of every world of human existence. This fact is established in the light of revealed knowledge, that God the Father a "glorified man", once passed through the experience of mortality, and that he, himself, was the Redeemer and Savior of many earth-life existences. But, as to the worlds which have been created by and through the Son, who is the Only Begotten of the Father in a mortal existence, these are directly associated with the redeeming sacrifice of Christ the Lord.

Wherefore, as I said unto you, it must needs be expedient that Christ--for in the last night the angel spake unto me that this should be his name--should come among the Jews, among those who are the more wicked part of the world; and they shall crucify him--for thus it behooveth our God, and there is none other nation on earth that would crucify their God.

And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him; That he lives; For we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father. That by him, and through him, and of him, the worlds are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God.

And I heard a great voice, bearing record from heaven. He's the Savior, and only begotten of God--by him, of him, and through him, the worlds were all made, even all that career in the heavens so broad, Whose inhabitants, too, from the first to the last, are saved by the very same Savior as ours; And, of course, are begotten God's daughters and sons, by the very same truths, and the very same powers.

This is a terrible arraignment against the inhabitants of this earth. Perhaps this is the reason Jesus Christ was sent here instead of to some other world, for in some other world they would not have crucified him, and his presence was needed here because of the extreme wickedness of the inhabitants of this earth.

If the penalty of the original sin be the eternal separation of body and spirit, how can justice have all its demands, and mercy be shown to the transgression? There is a way and How? It is by the introduction of His Only Begotten Son, the Son of His own bosom, the first born of every creature, holding the birthright over every creation He has made, and holding the keys of salvation over millions of earths like this one; He has a right to come forth and suffer the penalty of death for the fallen sons and daughters of man.

The word atonement signifies deliverance, through the offering of a ransom, from the penalty of a broken law. The sense is expressed in Job 33:24: "Deliver him from going down to the pit: I have found a ransom."
As effected by Jesus Christ, it signifies the deliverance, through his death and resurrection, of the earth and everything pertaining to it, from the power which death has obtained over them through the transgression of Adam. [After quoting D&C 29:23-25; Revelation 21:5, he continues:]
The righteous could not inherit all things in their immortal, exalted condition, if all things were not resurrected to immortality as well as themselves.
The Apostle Paul quite comprehensively sums up the results of Christ's death and resurrection: "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive" (1 Cor. 15:21-22). That is, death having come on all men through the disobedience of Adam, so must all be raised to immortality and eternal life through the death and resurrection of Christ.

ATONEMENT. The apostle Paul taught, "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Corinthians 15:21-22.) Adam's disobedience or "fall" brought both spiritual and temporal death into the world.
To be dead spiritually means to be cut off from the presence of the Lord (see Alma 42:7; 2 Nephi 9:6). Temporal death means that the body and spirit which make up the soul of man, are separated.
In addition to Adam's disobedience, each of us disobeys the commandments to various extents, and these sins would keep us from returning to our Father in heaven, for "no unclean thing can inherit the kingdom of heaven" (see Alma 11:37).
According to the law of justice, a payment had to be made for each breaking of the law; otherwise, the body would have remained in the grave returning to dust, and the spirit would have remained cut off from God eternally.
To satisfy the demands of justice, our Heavenly Father prepared the plan of mercy. "And now," said Alma, "the plan of mercy could not be brought about except an atonement should be made; therefore God himself atoneth for the sins of the world, to bring about the plan of mercy, to appease [to satisfy] the demands of justice, that God might be a perfect, just God, and a merciful God also." (Alma 42:15.)
The Atonement, therefore, is a ransom, a payment, a reconciliation made by Christ for the demands of justice. In the vision recorded in section 76 of the Doctrine and Covenants, Joseph Smith recorded: [76:40-42)].

"What did Christ do? He ransomed us. He restored us. He brought us back through his atonement, through the shedding of his blood. He paid the price, as Paul says. He rescued us from captivity and bondage. That is what ransomed means. He liberated us from death. He paid the price that death required; and we, through his redemption were recovered by the payment of the shedding of his blood....
"The whole plan of redemption is based on vicarious sacrifice, One without sin standing for the whole human family, all of whom were under the curse." (Joseph Fielding Smith, This was Font/Pitch 1,10 - Off.This was Font/Pitch 2,10 - On.Doctrines of SalvationThis was Font/Pitch 2,10 - Off.This was Font/Pitch 1,10 - On., 1:124, 126.) Christ, being free of sin, was able to atone or pay for our sins as well as for Adam's transgression. Lehi taught:
"Wherefore, redemption cometh in and through the Holy Messiah; for he is full of grace and truth.
"Behold, he offereth himself a sacrifice for sin, to answer the ends of the law, unto all those who have a broken heart and a contrite spirit....
"No flesh ... can dwell in the presence of God, save it be through the merits, and mercy, and grace of the Holy Messiah, who layeth down his life according to the flesh, and taketh it again by the power of the Spirit, that he may bring to pass the resurrection of the dead, being the first that should rise." (2 Nephi 2:6-8; see also Mosiah 3:16-19.)
What then does the Atonement mean for each of us? The temporal death, the separation of body and spirit, is replaced by immortality. All men, regardless of their beliefs or righteousness are resurrected to immortality, a rejoining of body and spirit; each of us will live forever. This comes as a gift through the grace of God (see Mormon 9:12-14).
The spiritual death is overcome according to our righteousness. Through Christ's atonement, if we are obedient to the laws and ordinances of the gospel, have faith in the Savior, and repent of our disobedience, he forgives us of our sins, he having already paid for them. Then we can return into the presence of God.
As member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, we believe "that man will be punished for their own sins, and not for Adam's transgression....that through the Atonement of Christ, all mankind may be saved [gain eternal life and dwell with God], by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel." (Second and third Articles and Faith.) We know that we will be resurrected; our duty is to have faith, repent, and obey all of God's commandments so that we may be saved from spiritual death and return to his presence (pp.108-110).

MERCY. Just as obedience to gospel laws produces blessings (D&C 131:20-21), justice demands that for every broken law a penalty must be paid. If justice were allowed to operate without the plan of mercy, man would have been cut off from the presence of God forever: "If it were not for the plan of redemption,... as soon as they were dead their souls were miserable, being cut off from the presence of the Lord. And now, there was no means to reclaim men from this fallen state, which man had brought upon himself because of his own disobedience; Therefore, according to justice, the plan of redemption could not be brought about...." (Alma 42:11-13).
President Joseph Fielding Smith observed: "There was never a sin committed in this world for which reparation has not been, or will not have to be made. If I sin, there must be a reparation or penalty required to pay the debt. If you sin, it is the same." (This was Font/Pitch 1,10 - Off.This was Font/Pitch 2,10 - On.Doctrines of SalvationThis was Font/Pitch 2,10 - Off.This was Font/Pitch 1,10 - On., 1:122-23.) To pay the demands of justice, each of us would have been cut off from our Heavenly Father forever. Out of his love for us, however, our Father prepared a way by which the demands of justice could be met, while still allowing us the opportunity of returning to him. Through the Atonement, the plan of mercy was brought to bear on the law of justice: "The plan of mercy could not be brought about except an atonement should be made; therefore God himself atoneth for the sins of the world, to bring about the plan of mercy, to appease the demands of justice...." (Alma 42:15).

Mercy does not destroy justice; it satisfies the demands of justice. Through the Atonement, Christ paid the penalty for all our sins, and this payment takes effect upon each of us personally when we fulfill the condition of repentance: "But there is...a repentance granted; which repentance mercy claimeth; otherwise, justice claimeth the creature and executeth the law, and the law inflicteth the punishment....
"For behold, justice exerciseth all his demands, and also mercy claimeth all which is her own; and thus, none but the truly penitent are saved." (Alma 42:22,24).
In other words, those who repent will return to God because of his mercy and the Atonement; those who do not repent will be cut off from God's presence, as justice demands.
In this way, justice is preserved, so that God does not become an unjust God; each law we break demands a penalty, and we pay that penalty ourselves if we do not repent. At the same time, the Lord remains a loving and merciful God by providing a way for us to return to him; when we repent, the Atonement of Christ satisfies the demands of justice for our sins. Thus, both justice and mercy are satisfied and "claim their own." (pp. 215-217).

REDEMPTION. The word This was Font/Pitch 1,10 - Off.This was Font/Pitch 2,10 - On.redemptionThis was Font/Pitch 2,10 - Off.This was Font/Pitch 1,10 - On. is used in the Church in two ways. On the one hand, it can mean freedom from death, from the effects of Adam's transgression. This type of redemption, immortality, will come to all men.
However, the second definition of redemption is the one more commonly used in the scriptures. This was Font/Pitch 1,10 - Off.This was Font/Pitch 2,10 - On.RedemptionThis was Font/Pitch 2,10 - Off.This was Font/Pitch 1,10 - On., according to this definition, means freedom from one's sins, exaltation in the celestial kingdom. This type of redemption comes only to those who prove their worthiness by their obedience (pp. 247-248).

The fall of Adam brought two kinds of death into the world---physical death and spiritual death. Physical death is separation of the body and the spirit. Spiritual death is separation from the Lord. If these two kinds of death had not been overcome by Jesus' atonement, two consequences would have resulted: our bodies and our spirits would be separated forever, and we could not live again with our Heavenly Father. But our wise Heavenly Father prepared a wonderful merciful plan to save us from both physical and spiritual death. He planned that a savior would come to earth to ransom (redeem) us from our sins and death. Because of our sins and the weakness of our mortal bodies we could not ransom (redeem) ourselves (see Alma 34:10-12). The one who would be our savior would need to be sinless and to have power over death.
There are several reasons why Jesus Christ was the only person who could become our savior. One reason is that he was the one chosen by our Heavenly Father to be the savior. He was the Only Begotten Son of God, and thus had power over death. Jesus explained: "I lay down my life, that I might take it up again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again" (John 10:17-18). Jesus also qualified to be our Savior because he is the only person who has ever lived on the earth who did not sin. This made him a worthy sacrifice to pay for the sins of others.

The Savior atoned for us by suffering in Gethsemane and by giving his life on the cross. It is impossible for us to fully understand how Christ suffered for the sins of all men. In the Garden of Gethsemane, the weight of our sins caused him to feel such agony and heartbreak that he bled from every pore (see D&C 19:18-19). Later, as he hung upon the cross, Jesus suffered painful death by one of the most cruel methods known to man.
How Jesus must have loved us, to suffer such spiritual and physical agony for our sake! How great the love of Heavenly Father that he would send his Only Begotten Son to suffer and die for the rest of his children. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16).

If it were not for the atonement of Jesus Christ, the sacrifice He made, all the human family would have to lie in the grave throughout eternity without any hope. But God having provided, through the atonement of the Lord Jesus Christ, the medium whereby we can be restored to the bosom and presence of the Father, to participate with Him among the Gods in the eternal worlds--He, having provided for that, has also provided for the resurrection.

In a manner to us incomprehensible and inexplicable, He [Christ] bore the weight of the sins of the whole world, not only of Adam, but of his posterity; and in doing that opened the kingdom of heaven, not only to all believers and all who obeyed the law of God, but to more than one-half of the human family who die before they come to years of maturity, as well as to the heathen,m who, having died without law, will through His mediation be resurrected without law and be judged without law and thus participate, according to their capacity, works, and worth in the blessings of His Atonement (148-149). * * * From the commencement of the offering of sacrifices the inferior creature had to suffer for the superior. Although it had taken no part in the act of disobedience, yet was its blood shed and its life sacrificed, thus prefiguring the atonement of the Son of God, which should eventually taken place. The creature indeed was made subject o vanity not willingly, but by reason of Him who hath subjected the same in hope....But what is the reason for all this suffering and bloodshed, and sacrifice? We are told that "without shedding of blood is no remission" of sins. This is beyond our comprehension. Jesus had to take away sin by the sacrifice of Himself, the just for the unjust, but, previous to this grand sacrifice, these animals had to have their blood shed as types, until the great antitype should offer up Himself once for all. And as He in His own person bore the sins of all, and atoned for them by the sacrifice of Himself, so there came upon Him the weight and agony of ages and generations, the indescribable agony consequent upon this great sacrificial atonement wherein He bore the sins of the world, and suffered in His own person the consequences of an eternal law of God broken by man. Hence His profound grief, His indescribable anguish, His overpowering torture, all experienced in the submission to the eternal fiat of Jehovah and the requirements of an inexorable law (149-150).

From the facts in the case and the testimony presented in the Scriptures it becomes evident that through the great atonement, the expiatory sacrifice of the Son of God, it is made possible that man can be redeemed, restored, resurrected and exalted to the elevated position designed for him in the creation as a Son of God: that eternal justice and law required the penalty to be paid by man himself, or by the atonement of the Son of God: that Jesus offered Himself as the great expiatory sacrifice; that this offering being in accordance with the demands or requirements of the law was accepted by the great Lawgiver; that it was prefigured by sacrifices and ultimately fulfilled by Himself according to the eternal covenant (170-171).

How, and in what manner are men benefited by the atonement?...In this, that the atonement, having restored man to his former position before the Lord, has placed him in a position and made it possible for him to obtain that exaltation and glory which it would have been impossible for him to have received without it; even to become a son of God by adoption; and being a son, then an heir of God, and a joint heir with Jesus Christ; and that, as Christ overcame, He has made it possible and has placed it within the power of believers in Him also to overcome; and as He is authorized to inherit His Father's glory which He had with Him before the world was, with His resurrected body, so through the adoption may we overcome and sit down with Him upon His throne, as He has overcome and sat down upon His Father's throne.

Being the sons of God through the atonement and adoption, and through faith in Jesus Christ, they rise to the dignity and glory of the Godhead, even to be Gods; as it is promised: [Quotes Revelation 3:12, 21; 21:7]

Hence, through His atonement, believers in Christ, and those who obey His law, partake of His glory and exaltation, and are inheritors of the Godhead; whilst those who do not obey His law although resurrected cannot inherit this exaltation; they are raised from the dead, but cannot inherit a celestial glory without being obedient to a celestial law, and thus we come again to a scripture quoted before. Jesus said, "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem" (179-180).

19. JD 22:300, August 28, 1881, John Taylor.

Was it known that man would fall? Yes. We are clearly told that it was understood that man should fall, and it was understood that the penalty of departing from the law would be death, death temporal. And there was a provision made for that. Man was not able to make that provision himself, and hence we are told that it needed the atonement of a God to accomplish this purpose; and the Son of God presented Himself to carry out that object. And when He presented Himself for this position He was accepted by His Father, just the same as any man who owes a debt, if he is not able to pay that obligation, and somebody steps forward and says, I will go security for him. If the persons to whom he is indebted are willing to take him as security they will receive the security's note or obligation to meet the debt. So Jesus offered Himself. Now, man could not have done that. Man could do all that he is capable of doing. But there was an eternal law of God violated and it needed an eternal, infinite sacrifice to atone therefor; and Jesus offered Himself as that sacrifice to atone for the sins of the world; and hence it is written, He was the Lamb slain from before the foundation of the world.

20. JD 14:71-72, July 10, 1870, Brigham Young.

A divine debt has been contracted by the children, and the Father demands recompense. He says to His children on this earth, who are in sin and transgression, it is impossible for you to pay this debt; I have prepared a sacrifice; I will send my Only Begotten Son to pay this divine debt. Was it necessary then that Jesus should die? Do we understand why He should sacrifice His life? The idea that the Son of God, who never committed sin, should sacrifice His life is unquestionably preposterous to the minds of many in the Christian world. But the fact exists that the Father, the Divine Father, whom we serve, the God of the Universe, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the Father of our spirits, provided this sacrifice and sent His Son to die for us; and it is also a great fact that the Son came to do the will of the Father, and that He has paid the debt, in fulfillment of the Scripture which says, "He was the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." ***
Unless God provides a Savior to pay this debt it can never be paid. Can all the wisdom of the world devise means by which we can be redeemed and return to the presence of our Father and Elder Brother and dwell with holy angels and celestial beings? No; it is beyond the power and wisdom of the inhabitants of the earth that now live, or that ever did or ever will live, to prepare or create a sacrifice that will pay this divine debt. But God provided it, and His Son has paid it, and we, each and every one, can now receive the truth and be saved in the kingdom of God.

When we commit sin, it is necessary that we repent of it and make restitution as far as lies in our power. When we cannot make restitution for the wrong we have done then we must apply for the grace and mercy of God to cleanse us from that iniquity.
Men cannot forgive their own sins; they cannot cleanse themselves from the consequences of their sins. Men can stop sinning and can do right in the future and so far their acts are acceptable before the Lord and worthy of consideration. But who shall repair the wrongs they have done to themselves and to others, which it seems impossible for them to repair themselves? By the atonement of Jesus Christ, the sins of the repentant shall be washed away, though they be crimson they shall be made white as wool. This is the promise given to you through the President of the Church today.

When men are called upon to repent of their sins, the call has reference to their own individual sins, not to Adam's transgressions. What is called the original sin was atoned for through the death of Christ, irrespective of any action on the part of man; also man's individual sin was atoned for by the same sacrifice, but on condition of his obedience to the gospel plan of salvation when proclaimed in his hearing.

26. Conference Report, p. 102, October 1926, George Albert Smith.
We are informed that we will not be held responsible for the sin of Adam, but that we will be held responsible for our own sins. The atonement of Jesus Christ removed from us the responsibility of atoning for the sin of father Adam, and he has made it possible for us to live here upon the earth, and in due time, if we take advantage of our opportunities, we will be prepared to be resurrected from the dead when that time shall come.

Jesus died that men, all men, may recover their earthly bodies from the grave.

Despite our frailties, follies, or sins, our bodies will be raised from the grave and given to the waiting spirits. Every person born into the world will be so resurrected. The effect of Adam's act is cancelled out by Jesus, by His willingness to pass through death and the resurrection.
Men must do many things to win salvation in the kingdom of God. Jesus, the Christ, as head of the plan of salvation, under His Father, has many duties besides the resurrection of the bodies of humanity to perform for the blessing of man; and consequently has many titles. He is known as our elder Brother, our Redeemer, our Advocate with the Father each title referring to a special service for man and meriting special discussion. His compensation for Adam's necessary act, by which He brought about the resurrection, is the most direct meaning of His title, Redeemer.
The "fall" of Adam and the atonement of Jesus Christ are necessary key concepts of the gospel. Christianity stands or falls with them. Neither of these concepts can be understood except as they are placed in their proper places in the whole plan of Salvation. Yet we know that they were equally necessary, as are the beginning and end of a journey.
Adam and Eve, who began the earth work in sacrifice and courage, are the greatest and noblest of the human race. Jesus, the Christ, our Master and Brother, who gave His very life for man, is the great divine Leader of the plan formulated by God for man's good. In His name, through the appointment of the Father, are done all things pertaining to the earth and the race of men.

The atonement of the Son of God is a principle that should be clearly understood by us, because unless there is an intelligent comprehension of it, we fail to appreciate the value of the salvation that has been extended to us through the atonement of our Redeemer. It is a great mystery to many people that Christ should die and that through His death redemption should come; and because it is a mystery and they cannot comprehend it by their human wisdom, they are inclined to reject Him as their Savior. How, there are many things connected with life that we cannot understand, and, of course, there are many more things connected with eternal salvation that in our present finite condition we cannot grasp.

30. Conference Report, p. 12, April 1912, Anthon H. Lund.

This earth was prepared for us; this was the school we had to pass through; and the Lord, seeing what would take place, prepared the Lamb, "slain from the foundation of the world" to atone for men and regain all that was lost in the fall. Jesus accepted of this mission. The sacrifice that was to be made for the human family could only be made by one who had not sinned himself. It would have to be done by one who voluntarily offered to do this, in order that justice might be satisfied and mercy be extended to the sinner. We learn in the revelations of the Lord that the fall extended to all, and that the grievous consequence of the fall was banishment from the presence of our Heavenly Father. The consequences of the fall were both temporal and spiritual. Jesus came; he made the sacrifice. He did it willingly. He was without blemish or fault. No sin was found in him, and as such he was a proper subject for the sacrifice.

31. JD 15:324-327; February 9, 1873; Joseph F. Smith.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is a very important and sacred ordinance; however simple it may appear to our minds it is one which will add to our acceptance before God, or to our condemnation.
It was instituted by the Savior in the place of the law of sacrifice which was given to Adam, and which continued with his children down to the days of Christ, but which was fulfilled in his death, he being the great sacrifice for sin, of which the sacrifices enjoined in the law given to Adam were a similitude.
The Lord designed in the beginning to place before man the knowledge of good and evil, and gave him a commandment to cleave to good and abstain from evil. But if he should fail, he would give to him the law of sacrifice and provide a Savior for him, that he might be brought back again into the presence and favor of God and partake of eternal life with him. This was the plan of redemption chosen and instituted by the Almighty before man was placed on the earth. And when man did fall by transgressing the law which was given him, the Lord gave to him the law of sacrifice, and made it clear to his understanding, that it was for the purpose of reminding him of that great event that should transpire in the meridian of time, whereby he and all his posterity might be brought forth by the power of redemption and the resurrection from the dead, and partake of eternal life with God in his kingdom. For this reason Adam and his posterity, from generation to generation, observed this law, and continually looked forward to a time when there should be provided for them a means of redemption from the fall and restoration from death to life, for death was the penalty of the law transgressed, which man was powerless to avert, the fiat of God being, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," and this penalty was to follow upon all flesh, all being as helpless and dependent as he was in this matter. Their only hope of redemption from the grave and the power of death was in the Savior whom God had promised, who should suffer death, but being without sin, having himself never transgressed any law, being without blemish, pure and holy, he should have power to break the bands of death and from the grave rise to immortal life, thereby opening the way for all who should follow him in the regeneration to come forth to life again, redeemed from the penalty of the law, and from the sin of transgression to eternal life. In anticipation, therefore, of this great sacrifice which was to be offered for Adam and his seed, they offered sacrifices, more or less acceptably, and in conformity to the pattern given, in proportion to the knowledge of God and of the Gospel which they had, and their faithfulness from generation to generation, to the days of Jesus.
They would take the firstlings of their flocks, the best fruits of their fields, and those things which were emblematic of purity, innocence, and perfection, symbolical of him who was without sin, and as "a lamb slain from the foundation of the world," and offer sacrifices unto God in memory of him, and the matchless and wonderful deliverance to be wrought out for them by him.
* * *
When Jesus came and suffered, "the just for the unjust," he that was without sin for him that had sinned, and was subject to the penalty of the law which the sinner had transgressed, the law of sacrifice was fulfilled, and in the stead thereof he gave another law, which we call the "Sacrament of the Lord's Supper," by which his life and mission, his death and resurrection, the great sacrifice he had offered for the redemption of man, should be kept in everlasting remembrance, for said he, "This do in remembrance of me, for as often as ye eat this bread, and drink of this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." Therefore this law is to us, what the law of sacrifice was to those who lived prior to the first coming of the Son of Man, until he shall come again.

32. JD 3:315-316; April 7, 1856; Parley P. Pratt.

Christ offered himself a sacrifice for this earth, for men, for the animals, for fishes, and the creeping things. Christ died for the earth and for the elements; Christ died for all mankind upon its face. Christ died, his blood was spilt, the Priesthood was given, and the labor will continue with the Priesthood from generation to generation, until the kingdom will finally be given to the Saints to possess for ever and ever. He died to accomplish the salvation of all except the sons of perdition, and they have had all these blessings applied to them, and have partaken of them, known them, and then turned enemies to them, and there is not anything greater that you can do for them, and they perish, for after the blood of Christ has been shed and they despised it, nothing more can be done for them than already has been, for they have rejected the means of salvation.

1.Similarities Between the Lives and Missions of Adam and Christ.

ADAM	CHRIST
Called the first Adam	Called the second Adam
Took away immortality	Brought back immortality
Entered the world naked	Left the world naked
Was given a garment to cover his nakedness	Was stripped of his garment and he became naked
Partook of food to fall	Fasted to bring him to God
Governed in the first 1,000 years of earth's existence	Will govern in the last 1,000 years of earth's existence
Brought about the fall	Reversed the effects of the fall
The fall closed the veil	The atonement opened the veil to God
The fruit of a tree brought death	Crucified on a tree which brought life to all mankind
Spirit changed to blood in his body	Blood changed to spirit in his body
A wife was brought to Adam	Christ appeared to his wife
Initiated blood sacrifice	Ended blood sacrifice

Gospel Mysteries

Brought corruption	Brought incorruption
Came into the world through a Garden	Left the world through a Garden
Garden of Eden was a place of great peace & serenity	Garden of Gethsemane was a place of great spiritual & physical suffering
Was a polygamist	Was a polygamist
Had many children	Had many children
As in Adam all die	In Christ shall all be made alive
Adam's mission was to give the unembodied spirits a tabernacle of clay	Christ's mission was to give the embodied spirits a tabernacle of glory

2.A Summary of thoughts on the symbolism of events from the passover to the cross:

(1). Christ's garment was without seam (Jesus the Christ, p. 656). Our garments today are with little or no seam, as was the pattern shown to Joseph Smith by the angel Moroni, representing no blemish.

(2). Christ was crucified upon an altar, as was done anciently to the paschal lambs. Only lambs without blemish were sacrificed between 3 & 5 pm, or between the 9th to the 11th hour (Jesus the Christ, J.E. Talmage, p. 618; Josephus, p. 588). Christ died in the 9th hour, or about 3pm on Friday afternoon. He was slain on the very day the Jews were killing lambs for the Passover.

(3). After the last supper, which was held on Thursday afternoon, Christ neither ate food nor drank liquid during the 24 hours prior to his death. He fasted from "even to even". For over 150 years our fast period has been from "even to even", and we also go without food and drink once each month afterwhich we partake of the elements of the crucifixion.

(4). Christ's fast began on Thursday and ended on Friday. Fast day during the early days of the Church was on Thursday. Today, the brethren meet fasting on the first Thursday of each month to pray and conduct business.

(5). We fast 24 hours from all bodily gratifications, symbolizing the fasting which the Savior did, from the time of the Last Supper to when he died and was taken down off the cross (Thursday afternoon to Friday afternoon).

(6). Just as the Savior offered the sacrament in the upper room and then gave a discourse on the gospel, just so do we offer the sacrament today upon an altar and then have discourses on gospel subjects.

(7). The sacrament is offered on Sunday in commemoration of his resurrection which occurred on the first day of the week.

(8). Today our sacrament tables represent altars upon which the atonement, or the last great sacrifice, is remembered.

Summarized Scriptural Statements on the Atonement

Gospel Mysteries

I.2 Nephi 9: 21-22

1.Christ will save all who hearken to his voice.
2.Christ suffereth the pains of all men, woman and children.
3.Christ suffered so that:
a.The resurrection might pass upon all men.
b.All might stand before him at judgment day.

II.2 Nephi 9:25-26 X D&C 76:72; Moroni 8:22

1.Where there is no law there is no punishment.
2.Where there is no punishment there is no condemnation. 3.Where there is no condemnation the mercies of Christ have claim upon them.
4.The atonement satisfies the demands of justice upon all who have not the law given to them.
5.Those without law resurrect to a Terrestrial Kingdom (D&C 76:72; 45:54)
6."Those who died without a knowledge of the gospel who would have received it if they had been permitted to tarry, shall be heirs of the celestial kingdom of God." (D&C 137:7).
7.Little children are without the law and are alive in Christ (Moroni 8:22).
8.Christ atoned for the sins of little children (Mosiah 3:16).

III.Alma 42:14; Mosiah 2:36-39; 3:22,26; 15:11-12, 25-27

1.The fall placed us into the grasp of justice.
2.Justice will come upon the rebellious, not mercy (2:36-39).
3.We cease to be blameless at the time we are taught the gospel. Justice inflicts the wrath of God upon the rebellious (3:22,26).
4.Christ suffered for those who hearkened to his words and who believed that Christ would redeem them. The Lord redeemeth none such that rebel against him and who die in their sins. Wilful rebellion against God comes when we have known the commandments of God and would not keep them (15:11-12, 25-27).

IV.Mosiah 3:11-12, 20-21

1.Christ's blood atones for the sins of those who have died not knowing the will of God concerning them---who sinned ignorantly.
2.The atonement covers those who rebel and then repent and have faith on Christ.

V.2 Nephi 2:7

1.The sacrifice for sin was to answer the ends of the law, unto all those who have a broken heart and contrite spirit, and unto none else.

VI.Alma 34:16; 42:13

1.The plan of redemption is brought about to those with faith unto repentance.
2.The plan of redemption is based upon repentance. Mercy is given to those who repent.

Christ suffered ---

1. To save all men if they will hearken to his voice and repent and have faith in Christ (2 Nephi 9:21; Mosiah 15:11-12; Alma 34:16; 42:13).

Gospel Mysteries

2. For those without the law who sinned ignorantly (2 Nephi 9:21, 25-26; D&C 76:72; 45:54; Moroni 8:22). They are --

A.Children (they are without law) (Moroni 8:22; Mosiah 3:16).

B.All others who knew not the law (2 Nephi 9:21, 25-26; D&C 76:72).

3. So that the resurrection might pass upon all men so that all might stand before God to be judged (2 Nephi 9:22).

THE DOCTRINE OF BLOOD ATONEMENT

By Richard A. Ware

1. Adam and Eve partook of the forbidden fruit and fell from the presence of God. This fall caused a spiritual and physical death to come upon them and their children.

2. Because mankind could not atone for their own sins by the shedding of their own blood, the Savior was chosen from before the foundations of the earth, and came to the earth and shed his blood. This made it possible for all mankind to return to God and thus reverse the effects of Adam's transgression. Secondly, it made it possible for individuals to not have to suffer for their own sins if they would keep the commandments.

3. The atonement of Christ makes it possible for all who desire, to inherit the highest degree of the celestial kingdom without suffering the penalty for their own sins. Thus mercy is extended to the repentant rather than justice.

4. If individuals do not repent, they will have to suffer the penalty for their own sins in hell, afterwhich they will then come up and inherit a kingdom lower than the Celestial.

5. Scripturally, murderers and whoremongers go to hell first and suffer for their sins, and then come up in the telestial kingdom after the millennium is over. The atonement of Christ does not cover the unrepentant.

6. Concerning those who join the church:

A) Those who have not gone to the temple, may repent of their sins and the atonement of Christ will cover them. If they commit murder, however, they are automatically excommunicated and not readmitted into the church. They will have to pay for that sin themselves. If they commit adultery they may be forgiven upon conditions of repentance and they may go on and receive the fulness of the priesthood in this life, if faithful.

B) Those who have received their endowments have risen to a higher state of knowledge. If such a person commits adultery they break a covenant and they are dealt with by judges in Israel. However, they are not qualified to receive the fulness of the priesthood in this life. Such a blessing will have to wait for the next life where priesthood leaders would have to decide.

C) Those who have received the fulness of the priesthood and have made their calling and election sure and who afterward commit adultery "shall be destroyed in the flesh, and shall be delivered unto the buffetings of Satan unto the day of redemp tion" and will then "come forth in the first resurrection, and enter into their exaltation." (D&C 132:26)

7. The atonement of Christ does not cover an individual who has made his calling and election sure and who commits adultery. The individual must suffer for that himself.

8. Blood atonement can only be operable in a day and time when both church and state are combined in the same person, such as a king and priest operating within a Zion society, or as Moses did in Israel.

THE DOCTRINE OF BLOOD ATONEMENT

1. Hebrews 9:22

And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood is no remission.

2. Leviticus 17:11

For the life of the flesh is in the blood; and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls; for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul.

3. Hebrews 10:26

For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins.

4. 1 John 5:16

If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it.

5. Hebrews 6:4

For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost,
And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame.

6. Matthew 12:31-32

Wherefore I say unto you, all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.
And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh a word against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.
7. 1 Corinthians 5:3-5

For I verily, as absent in body but present in spirit, have judged already as though I were present concerning him that hath so done this deed,
In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, when ye are gathered together, and my spirit, with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ,

To deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.

8. 1 John 3:15

Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer; and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him.

9. Genesis 9:6

Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed.

10. Leviticus 20:10

And the man that committeth adultery with another man's wife, even he that committeth adultery with his neighbor's wife, the adulterer and the adulteress shall surely be put to death.

11. D&C 19:15-20

Therefore I command you to repent---repent, lest I smite you by the rod of my mouth, and by my wrath, and by my anger, and your sufferings be sore---how sore you know not, how exquisite you know not, yea, how hard to bear you know not.
For behold, I, God, have suffered these things for all, that they might not suffer if they would repent;
But if they would not repent they must suffer even as I; Which suffering caused myself, even God, the greatest of all, to tremble because of pain, and to bleed at every pore, and to suffer both body and spirit--and would that I might not drink the bitter cup, and shrink---
Nevertheless, glory be to the Father, and I partook and finished my preparations unto the children of men.
Wherefore, I command you again to repent, lest I humble you with my almighty power; and that you confess your sins, lest you suffer these punishments of which I have spoken, of which in the smallest, yea, even in the least degree you have tasted at the time I withdrew my Spirit. 12. D&C 42:18-19, 79

And now, behold, I speak unto the church. Thou shalt not kill; and he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come.
And again, I say, thou shalt not kill; but he that killeth shall die. And it shall come to pass, that if any persons among you shall kill they shall be delivered up and dealt with according to the laws of the land; for remember that he hath no forgiveness; and it shall be proved according to the laws of the land.

And again, verily I say unto you, if a man marry a wife by my word, which is my law, and by the new and everlasting covenant, and it is sealed unto them by the Holy Spirit of promise [by making their calling & election sure], by him who is anointed [the receipt of the fulness of the priesthood], unto whom I have appointed this power and the keys of this priesthood; and it shall be said unto them---Ye shall come forth in the first resurrection; and if it be after the first resurrection, in the next resurrection; and shall inherit thrones, kingdoms, principalities, and powers, dominions, all heights and depths---then shall it be written in the Lamb's Book of Life, that he shall commit no murder whereby to shed innocent blood, and if ye abide in my covenant, and commit no murder whereby to shed innocent blood, it shall be done unto them in all things whatsoever my servant hath put upon them, in time, and through all eternity; and shall be of full force when they are out of the world; and they shall pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to their exaltation and glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads, which glory shall be a fulness and a continuation of the seeds forever and ever.
Verily, verily, I say unto you, if a man marry a wife according to my word, and they are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, according to mine appointment, and he or she shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder wherein they shed innocent blood, yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter into their exaltation; but they shall be destroyed in the flesh, and shall be delivered unto the buffetings of Satan unto the day of redemption, saith the Lord God.
The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, which shall not be forgiven in the world nor out of the world, is in that ye commit murder wherein ye shed innocent blood, and assent unto my death, after ye have received my new and everlasting covenant, saith the Lord God; and he that abideth not this law can in nowise enter into my glory, but shall be damned, saith the Lord.

And as ye have asked concerning adultery, verily, verily, I say unto you, if a man receiveth a wife in the new and everlast ing covenant, and if she be with another man, and I have not appointed unto her by the holy anointing, she hath committed adultery and shall be destroyed.
If she be not in the new and everlasting covenant, and she be with another man, she has committed adultery.
And if her husband be with another woman, and he was under a vow, he hath broken his vow and hath committed adultery.

THE DOCTRINE OF BLOOD ATONEMENT

1. HC 6:81; Saturday, November 25, 1843. Remarks made by Joseph Smith recorded by Wilford Woodruff in his journal for this date.

If a man commit adultery, he cannot receive the celestial kingdom of God. Even if he is saved in any kingdom, it cannot be the celestial kingdom.

[This quotation has some difficulties with it:

1. When Wilford Woodruff recorded this comment, he himself did not yet possess the fulness of the priesthood and therefore probably did not understand what it was, nor how it related to adultery.

2. There are no other minutes detailed enough to shed light on this comment of Joseph's. In this particular meeting Joseph was condemning the spiritual wifery of John C. Bennett. Perhaps Joseph was referring to people who were involved in the spiritual wifery (adultery) and who did not repent would not go to the celestial kingdom. Certainly he was not talking to people who had already been sealed up, as there were only two in that meeting who had been sealed up.

3. Section 132:19 & 26 both state that if a person receives the Holy Spirit of Promise, meaning they have made their calling & election sure, and commits any sin (excluding murder), that he or she will pay the penalties for their sins and then come forth to exaltation. It does not rule out adultery.

4. Elder Bruce R. McConkie in his DNTC vol 3:347, quotes this comment from the prophet Joseph, and applies it to those who have been sealed up. However, the revelation in section 132 does not support that conclusion, and there is sufficient doubt as to what the prophet Joseph really meant.]

2. An Address delivered in the Twelfth Ward Assembly Hall, Salt Lake City; October 12, 1884, by Elder Charles W. Penrose. Reported by John Irvine, and printed at Juvenile Instructor Office, Salt Lake City, Utah. Entitled: "Blood Atonement, as Taught by Leading Elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints".

The doctrine of blood atonement is founded on the sacrifice made by our Lord Jesus Christ for the sins of the world. * * * When Adam and Eve were placed in the garden they were not mortal beings. They were not subject to death. * * * But they broke the law of their being and the penalty thereof was death. [In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.] Now, it took a person who was innocent of sin, a person who was spotless before God, a person upon whom death had no claim, to atone for that transgression. * * * Therefore the "Lamb without spot," a sinless person upon whom death had no claim, had to come and atone for the sin thus committed. * * *

Jesus, then, made a sacrifice for the original sin, and for the actual transgression of man, but with this difference---Jesus Christ atoned for the sin that Adam committed without any act required on the part of Adam, and without any act on the part of his posterity. Adam's one sin brought death into the world, and it passed upon all mankind. Jesus Christ's atonement brings life again, and so all mankind must stand up again upon their feet in their resurrected bodies and be judged for their own sins, not for Adam's transgression. The penalty for Adam's transgression was death to the human family. The atonement wrought out by Christ brings life to them again. The atonement is as broad as the offence, and the effects of Christ's sacrifice are as extended as the effects of Adam's transgression. As I have quoted to you, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." But when all men are made alive again, the good and the bad, the bond and the free, Jew and Gentile; when all are brought up again in the time and order that God has ordained, they must be judged for their own transgressions. Now, then, when they are judged for these transgressions, if they have accepted, by their obedience to the laws of God, the gospel of Christ, and the atonement which Christ wrought out for them, His blood will be a propitiation for their actual sins. If they have not accepted that by obedience to the gospel, then the shedding of His blood will not have effect upon them, and they will have to suffer the penalty. That penalty is banishment from the presence of God, which is spiritual death. * * *

But there are persons who, after having been washed and made clean through the blood of Christ, and made members of His Church, again commit sin. What about them? Why, if they truly repent, and make all the restitution that lays in their power, they may be forgiven, they may be cleansed again. But there are some sins that can be committed from which they cannot be cleansed by the blood of Christ. After receiving the gospel and entering into sacred covenants with God Almighty, after having been enlightened by the spirit of truth, having tasted the good word of God and the power of the world to come; if they commit certain sins they cannot gain the remission of those sins through the blood of Jesus Christ. * * *

It is to be supposed that a person who sins against the Holy Ghost must have first received the Holy Ghost. A person who never received the Holy Ghost, never was enlightened by it, never enjoyed that heavenly gift, could not sins against the Holy Ghost; but if he has received the Holy Ghost through obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ---having first been washed clean of his transgressions through the atoning blood of Christ [washing of feet]---then if he sins against the Holy Ghost he sins against light, he sins against knowledge, he sins understandingly, he sins wilfully, and then there is no more cleansing from sin. * * *

There are some sins that people commit, and no matter how much they may repent, no matter how sorry they may be afterwards, yet the effects of the sins have such far reaching consequences that they will have to pay the penalty of their transgressions before they can come forth from punishment and receive the blessing of God. * * *

The man who commits murder, who imbrues his hands in the blood of innocence, cannot receive eternal life, because he cannot get forgiveness of that sin. What can he do? The only way to atone is to shed his blood. * * * A murderer, by the shedding of his blood, may make some atonement for his sin; but he cannot come forth and inherit an exaltation in eternal life, he must be content with a less degree of glory. * * *

Still, as Brother Brigham taught, there is a chance for some men who have committed this great transgression if their blood be shed, and there are others who, even if they were willing to have their blood shed, could not obtain forgiveness for their transgressions. You can read about this in the revelation on celestial marriage. (D&C 132:26-7) They are those who have not only been baptized into the Church of Christ, received the power of the Holy Spirit and been enlightened from on high, but have been in the most sacred places on the earth, ordained of God by His holy law, and have made special covenants in relation to that and other sins; they have been specially enlightened; they have gone from step to step, from grace to grace, from knowledge to knowledge, and have had keys of power placed in their hands whereby, if they are faithful, they may climb to the highest pinnacle of honor and glory in the presence of our Heavenly Father, and then they turn round and commit this great transgression, the shedding of innocent blood. For them there is no forgiveness. They will be banished from the presence of God; they cannot inherit the glory which was sealed upon them, however repentant they may be; they cannot come up in the first resurrection and enter into their exaltation; but they must be cast out from the presence of God and have the everlasting penalty pronounced, "Depart from me ye workers of iniquity." They will be banished from the presence of God, which is spiritual destruction, that spiritual death which is called the "second death."

But, there are other persons who by making this atonement may obtain redemption---persons that have not advanced to this degree of knowledge and understanding, and whose sins are not of so heinous a nature. Because sin is gauged by the light of the individual. The depth of man's infamy is gauged by the degree of his light and his opportunity. He that knows much is expected to do much. Of him that knows but little, only little is expected. If a man has great light and he sins he is the greater sinner. I have heard people argue that all sin is the result of ignorance. Well, it is just the other way. Sin is rather the result of knowledge; because a man cannot sin without some light. An idiot cannot sin, because he is irresponsible. It takes a responsible being to do responsible wrong. The more responsible a man is, the greater wrong he does if he commits transgression. The greater a man's light is, the greater his sin. The greater the light, the greater the condemnation for doing wrong. From this, then, it would seem that if a man commits a sin unto death [i.e., he commits murder after making his calling & election sure] there is no redemption: if not unto death [i.e., he commits murder prior to calling & election], and he pays the penalty, there is for him a chance of salvation [in the telestial kingdom.] --. * * *

Well, is there any other sin that a man may commit which is worthy of death? I think there is. * * * A man who comes into this Church and is baptized for the remission of his sins and advances no further in the order of God, if he commits this transgression and truly repents and commits the sin no more---and true repentance is shown by refraining from sin in future---he may be forgiven. But if he has entered the sacred covenant spoken of in the revelation on celestial marriage and then commits that transgression, what is the penalty? Why, if it were carried out to the full extent as in times of old his blood would be shed. * * * . . . and any man who commits adultery with his neighbor's wife, or leads his neighbor's daughter astray, after he has entered the new and everlasting covenant, can only make atonement for his transgression by the pouring out of his blood upon the earth. * * * Thus, there are some sins that cannot be atoned for through the blood of Christ. They can only be atoned for by the shedding of the sinner's blood. A murderer is one, and an adulterer is another. * * *

Here is the law of God to the Church by revelation [D&C 42:18-19]. This is the word of God Almighty to the Saints. This law is given to people who have been baptized, who have received the Holy Ghost, who have been made partakers of the heavenly gift---"Thou shalt not kill; but he that killeth shall die". . . . Who is to inflict the penalty? * * * If a man kills he shall be delivered up to be dealt with according to the laws of the land. * * * The church has no authority to execute the death penalty. * * *

After baptized persons have made sacred covenants with God and then commit deadly sins, the only atonement they can made is the shedding of their blood. At the same time, because of the laws of the land, and the prejudices of the nation, and the ignorance of the world, this law cannot be carried out. But when the time comes that the law of God shall be in full force upon the earth, then this penalty will be inflicted for those crimes committed by persons under covenant not to commit them.

3. Decisions of the First Presidency on Temple Work; November 21, 1906. Letter was addressed to Pres. C. N. Lund and counselors who were the presidency of the North Sanpete Stake.
Dear Brethren:--

We herewith submit answers to the questions contained in yours of the 14th inst. * * *

Question: If the good record of a man is broken by his falling into transgression, say adultery or fornication, and he repents and makes restitution as far as he can do so, and has received forgiveness, can he afterwards, by living a faithful and good life, be entitled to receive these higher ordinances?

Answer: Every such case should stand on its own merits. In some instances it may be highly proper to recommend for second anointings, in others improper. For instance, a man who commits adultery after receiving his endowments should not be recommended to receive second blessings. Let the cases of all such men be considered and determined by the authority on the other side of the veil. But where a man commits adultery before joining the Church or even after baptism but before receiving his endowments his condition is different, and yourself and counselors must be the judges as to his worthiness to receive these blessings.

4. The Way to Perfection, pp. 235-36; Pres. Joseph Fielding Smith; Printed August 1, 1931 (1970 ed).

Sexual impurity is a most deadly sin. Anciently it was considered so, and according to the laws of God, those found guilty were in danger of being put to death. There are sins unto death John informs us, and this is one of them. Said John:

If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death: I do not say that he shall pray for it.
All unrighteousness is sin: and there is a sin not unto death. (1 John 5:16-17)

Murder, the shedding of innocent blood, is a sin unto death, and Alma taught Corianton that unchastity was second only to murder. These are his words:

Know ye not, my son, that these things are an abomination in the sight of the Lord; yea, most abominable above all sins save it be the shedding of innocent blood or denying the Holy Ghost? (Alma 39:5)

5. Mormon Doctrine, pp. 92-93; Elder Bruce R. McConkie; 2nd Ed., 1966.
2. But under certain circumstances there are some serious sins for which the cleansing of Christ does not operate, and the law of God is that men must then have their own blood shed to atone for their sins. Murder, for instance, is one of these sins; hence we find the Lord commanding capital punishment. Thus, also, if a person has so progressed in righteousness that his calling and election has been made sure, if he has come to that position where he knows "by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood" that he is sealed up unto eternal life (D&C 131:5), then if he gains forgiveness for certain grievous sins, he must "be destroyed in the flesh," and "delivered unto the buffetings of Satan unto the day of redemption, saith the Lord God." (D&C 132:19-27)

President Joseph Fielding Smith has written: "Man may commit certain grievous sins---according to his light and knowledge---that will place him beyond the reach of the atoning blood of Christ. If then he would be saved, he must make sacrifice of his own life to atone---so far as in his power lies---for that sin, for the blood of Christ alone under certain circumstances will not avail. . . .Joseph Smith taught that there were certain sins so grievous that man may commit, that they will place the transgressors beyond the power of the atonement of Christ. If these offenses are committed, then the blood of Christ will not cleans them from their sins even though they repent. Therefore their only hope is to have their own blood shed to atone, as far as possible, in their behalf." (Doctrines of Salvation, vol 1, pp 133-138; See also Blood Atonement and the Origin of Plural Marriage, 1905, p. 47)

This doctrine can only be practiced in its fulness in a day when the civil and ecclesiastical laws are administered in the same hands. It was, for instance, practiced in the days of Moses, but it was not and could not be practiced in this dispensation, except that persons who understood its provisions could and did use their influence to get a form of capital punishment written into the laws of the various states of the union so that the blood of murderers could be shed.

6. The Miracle of Forgiveness, pp. 117-131; 1969 ed.; Pres. Spencer W. Kimball.

It is true that the great principle of repentance is always available, but for the wicked and rebellious there are serious reservations to this statement. For instance, sin in intensely habit-forming and sometimes moves men to the tra gic point of no return. Without repentance there can be no forgiveness, and without forgiveness all the blessings of eternity hang in jeopardy. As the transgressor moves deeper and deeper in his sin, and the error is entrenched more deeply and the will to change is weakened, it becomes increasingly nearer hopeless and he skids down and down until either he does not want to climb back up or he has lost the power to do so. * * * In discussing the subject of sin and declaring that the Lord and his Church will forgive transgressions, it must be made clear that there are "sins unto death." [SWK then quotes 1 John 5:16-17] In other words, sins are of different degrees of seriousness. There are those which can be forgiven and those for which one may not promise forgiveness. The sin unto death is of such a serious nature that of those who commit it we are told:

. . .their end no man knoweth on earth, nor ever shall know, until they come before me in judgment. (D&C 43:33) * * *

As to the shedding of innocent blood in one sense innocent blood might be thought of as the blood of those persons without guile, or 0. little ones who have not sinned. It might also be thought of as the blood of others whom the murderer deliberately kills. Surely the crucifixion of the perfect Son of God constituted the shedding of innocent blood. Joseph Smith's blood shed in

Carthage Jail was innocent at least he said: "I am void of offense toward God and man." * * *
In the realms of perdition or the kingdom of darkness, where there is no light, Satan and the unembodied spirits of the pre-existence shall dwell together with those of mortality who retrogress to the level of perdition. These have lost the power of regeneration. They have sunk so low as to have lost the inclinations and ability to repent, consequently the gospel plan is useless to them as an agent of growth and development.

7. Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, Vol. 3:342-348; Elder Bruce R. McConkie, lst ed., 1973.

What if those whose calling and election has been made sure thereafter commit grievous sins? Suppose they backslide and walk in the ways of wickedness? Or fight the truth and rebel against God---what then?

That all men commit sin, before and after baptism, and for that matter, before and after their calling and election is made sure, is self-evident. There has been only one Sinless One---the Lord Jesus who was God's own Son. * * *
The prophets and apostles from Adam and Enoch down, and all men, whether cleansed and sanctified from sin or not, are yet subject to and do in fact commit sin. This is the case even after men have seen the visions of eternity and been sealed by that Holy Spirit of Promise which makes their calling and election sure. Since these chosen ones have the sure promise of eternal life, and since "no unclean thing can enter into" the Father's "kingdom" (3 Ne. 27:19), "or dwell in his presence" (Moses 6:57), what of sins committed after being sealed up into eternal life? Obviously the laws of repentance still apply, and the more enlightened a person is, the more he seeks the gift of repentance, and the harder he strives to free himself from sin as often as he falls short of the divine will and becomes subject in any degree to the Master of Sin who is Lucifer. If follows that the sins of the godfearing and the righteous are continually remitted because they repent and seek the Lord anew every day and every hour. * * *
But suppose such persons become disaffected and the spirit of repentance leave them---still, what then? The answer is---and the revelations and teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith so recite!---they must pay the penalty of their own sins, for the blood of Christ will not cleanse them. Or if they commit murder or adultery, they lose their promised inheritance because these sins are exempt from the sealing promises. Or if they commit the unpardonable sin, they becomes sons of perdition.
As we have already seen, making one's calling and election sure comes after and grows out of celestial marriage. Eternal life does not and cannot exist for a man or a woman alone, because in its very nature it consists of the continuation of the family unit in eternity. Thus the revelation on marriage speaks both of celestial marriage (in which the conditional promises of eternal life are given) and of making one's calling and election sure (in which the unconditional promise of eternal life are given) in one and the same sentence---which sentence also says that those who commit sins (except "murder whereby to shed innocent blood") after being sealed up unto eternal life shall still gain exaltation. This is the language: "Then" _ that is, after their calling and election has been made sure -- "shall it be written in the Lamb's Book of Life, that he shall commit no murder whereby to shed innocent blood, and if ye abide in my covenant, and commit no murder whereby to shed innocent blood, it shall be done unto them in all things whatsoever my servant hath put upon them, in time, and through all eternity; and shall be of full force when they are out of the world; and they shall pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to their exaltation and glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads, which glory shall be a fulness and a continuation of the seeds forever and ever. Then shall they be gods," because they have eternal life. (D&C 132:19-20)

Then the revelation speaks of that obedience out of which eternal life grows, and still speaking both of celestial marriage and of making one's calling and election sure says: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, if a man marry a wife according to my word, and they are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, according to mine appointment" -- that is, if they are both married and have their calling and election made sure "and he or she shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder wherein they shed innocent blood, yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter into their exaltation; but they shall be destroyed in the flesh, and shall be delivered unto the buffetings of Satan unto the day of redemption, saith the Lord God." (D&C 132:26)

This matter of being destroyed in the flesh and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until the day of redemption is the doctrine of blood atonement, whereunder those here involved are not cleansed by the blood of Christ, but must pay the penalty for their own sins. This principle can only operate in a day, as that of Moses, when there is no separation of Church and state and when the Church has power to take life. Of conditions in our day, and as to how this law applies to us, President Joseph Fielding Smith says: "We cannot destroy men in the flesh, because we do not control the lives of men and do not have power to pass sentences upon them which involve capital punishment. In the days when there was a theocracy on the earth, then this decree was enforced. What the Lord will do in lieu of this, because we cannot destroy in the flesh, I am unable to say, but it will have to be made up in some other way." (Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 2, p. 97)

As to the shedding of innocent blood, within the meaning of this revelation, the Lord says: "The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, which shall not be forgiven in the world nor out of the world, is in that ye commit murder wherein ye shed innocent blood, and assent unto my death, after ye have received my new and everlasting covenant, saith the Lord God; and he that abideth not this law can in nowise enter into my glory, but shall be damned, saith the Lord." (D&C 132:27) That is, the innocent blood is that of Christ; and those who commit blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, which is the unpardonable sin (Matt 12:31-32), thereby "crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." (Heb. 6:6) They are, in other words, people who would have crucified Christ, having the while a perfect knowledge that he was the Son of God.

Following the pattern set by the Lord of speaking both of celestial marriage and of being sealed up unto eternal life in the same context, Joseph Smith said: "Putting my hand on the knee of William Clayton, I said: Your life is hid with Christ in God, and so are many others. Nothing but the unpardonable sin can prevent you from inheriting eternal life for you are sealed up by the power of the priesthood unto eternal life, having taken the step necessary for that purpose. Except a man and his wife enter into an everlasting covenant and be married for eternity, while in this probation, by the power and authority of the Holy Priesthood, they will cease to increase when they die; that is, they will not have any children after the resurrection. But those who are married by the power and authority of the priesthood in this life, and continue without committing the sin against the Holy Ghost, will continue to increase and have children in the celestial glory. The unpardonable sin is to shed innocent blood, or be accessory thereto. All other sins will be visited with judgment in the flesh, and the spirit being delivered to the buffetings of Satan until the day of the Lord Jesus." (H.C. 5:391-92) Perhaps this matter of being "visited with judgment in the flesh" -- whatever it may be in an individual case _ is the Lord's way of handling things when it is not possible for a person to be "destroyed in the flesh." (D&C 132:26) In this connection, also _ and having in mind that the sealing power was given by Elijah to Peter, James, and John on the Mount of Transfiguration (Teachings, p. 158), and again to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery in the Kirtland Temple (D&C 110:13-16) we should note these words of the Prophet: "This spirit of Elijah was manifest in the days of the Apostles, in delivering certain ones to the buffetings of Satan, that they might be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. They were sealed by the spirit of Elijah unto the damnation of hell until the day of the Lord, or revelation of Jesus Christ." (Teachings, p 338) * * *

Thus, even though a man's calling and election has been made sure, if he then commits blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, he becomes a son of perdition, because when he was sealed up unto eternal life it was with a reservation. The sealing was not to apply in the case of the unpardonable sin.

8. Doctrines of Salvation, vol 2:96-97; President Joseph Fielding Smith; 1955 copyright; 1973 edition.

Here is something which those who contend that the Lord has granted immunity from their sins to some, if they have received certain sealings by the Holy Spirit of promise, have overlooked in this passage. I call attention to these two things. If covenants are broken and enormous sins are committed, but not unto death, there are certain punishments to be inflicted. The mere confession is not enough; the sinners are: 1-to "be destroyed in the flesh"; and 2-to "be delivered unto the buffetings of Satan unto the day of redemption."
Who in the world is so foolish as to wish to sin with the hope of forgiveness, if such a penalty is to be inflicted? No one but a fool! To be "destroyed in the flesh" means exactly that. We cannot destroy men in the flesh, because we do not control the lives of men and do not have power to pass sentences upon them which involves capital punishment. In the days when there was a theocracy on the earth, then this decree was in force. What the Lord will do in lieu of this, because we cannot destroy in the flesh, I am unable to say, but it will have to be made up in some other way.
Then to be turned over to the buffetings of Satan unto the day of redemption, which is the resurrection, must be something horrible in its nature. Who wishes to endure such torment? No one but a fool! I have seen their anguish. I have heard their pleadings for release and their pitiful cries that they cannot endure the torment. This was in this life. Add to that, the torment in the spirit world before the redemption comes--all of this, mark you, coming after sever and humble repentance!
9. Letter from Elder Bruce R. McConkie, October 18, 1978, written to Mr. Thomas B. McAffee, Utah Law Review, College of Law, University of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah. 4pp in length.

In order to understand what Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Charles W. Penrose and other have said, we must mention that there are some sins for which the blood of Christ alone does not cleanse a person. These include blasphemy against the Holy Ghost (as defined by the Church) and that murder which is the unlawful killing of a human being with malice. However, and this cannot be stressed too strongly, this law has not been given to the Church at any time in this dispensation. It has no application whatever to anyone now living whether he is a member or a non-member of the Church. * * *
Let me say categorically and unequivocally that this doctrine can only operate in a day when there is no separation of Church and State and when the power to take life is vested in the ruling theocracy as was the case in the day of Moses. From the day of Joseph Smith to the present there has been no single instance of so-called blood atonement under any pretext. * * *
"It is a fundamental doctrine of our creed that a murderer cannot be forgiven; that he 'hath not eternal life abiding in him'; that if a member of our Church, having received the light of the Holy Ghost, commits this capital crime, he would not receive forgiveness in this world nor in the world to come. The revelations of God to the Church abound in commandments forbidding us to shed blood." [Pres. Wilford Woodruff]

With specific reference to capital punishment as practiced by the State and not the Church he said: "It is part of our faith that the only atonement a murderer can make for his 'sin unto death' is the shedding of his own blood, according to the fiat of the Almighty after the flood: 'Whoso sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed.' But the law must be executed by the lawfully appointed officer. This is 'blood atonement,' so much perverted by maligners of our faith. We believe also in the atonement wrought by the shedding of Christ's blood on Calvary; that it is efficacious for all the race of Adam for the sin committed by Adam, and for the individual sins of all who believe, repent, are baptized by one having authority, and who receive the Holy Ghost by the laying on of authorized hands. Capital crime committed by such an enlightened person cannot be condoned by the Redeemer's blood. For him there is 'no more sacrifice for sin'; his life is forfeit, and he only can pay the penalty. There is no other blood atonement taught; practiced or made part of the creed of the Latter-day Saints." [W. Woodruff speaking]
As far as I can see there is no difference between a firing squad, an electric chair, a gas chamber, or hanging. Death is death and I would interpret the shedding of man's blood in legal executions as a figurative expression which means the taking of life. There seems to me to be no present significance as to whether an execution is by a firing squad or in some other way.

Eternal life is "the greatest of all the gifts of God." D&C 14:7

Celestial Planner or the Lambs book of Life:
Why a Celestial Planner?

To "I give unto you these sayings that you may understand and know how to worship, and know what you worship, that you may come unto the Father in my name." (D&C 93:19.)

We must know the why, how, what, when, where, of the Celestial law.

Our Celestial planner contains the essential elements "to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man." Moses 1:39.

What is the purpose of Life:

Happiness is the purpose of life. "Adam fell that men might be; and men are, that they might have joy." (2 Nephi 2:25.)

Gospel Mysteries

And in that day Adam blessed God and was filled, and began to prophesy concerning all the families of the earth, saying: blessed be the name of God, for because of my transgression my eyes are opened, and in this life I shall have joy, and again in the flesh I shall see God. (Moses 5:10.)

What is the purpose of man? "that they might have joy." (2 Nephi 2:25.)

When should men begin to have joy? "in this life I shall have joy" (Moses 5:10.)

Where ? "in this life I shall have joy" (Moses 5:10.)
On the earth....

Why? So we can live with and like our Heavenly Father again.

FILE:#9 BUFETINGS OF SATAN

The "sealing power" had reference to the early Mormon practice of "electing" certain members of the Church to be candidates to the celestial kingdom by the power of the priesthood. Beqinning in 1831, High Priest were given the authority to seal up individuals that were identified to them by revelation (D&C 68:12, and Far West Record: Minutes of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1830-1844 Donald Q. Cannon and Lyndon W. Cook, eds, [Salt Lake City: Deseret Book Company, 1983], pp. 20-21: "Br. Joseph Smith Jr. said that the order of the Highpriesthood is that they have power given them to seal up the Saints unto eternal life. And said it was the privilege of every Elder present to be ordained to the Highpriesthood"). This practice was discontinued sometine in 1835 not resumed until the Nauvoo period, and then only by express permission and direction of the Prophet. The Mormon doctrine of election differend form that of other religious groups in that the Saints believed that a person could fall from grace (by sin) after achieving grace (D&C 20:32) even though he might have been elected or "sealed" up unto eternal life. Such wilful sin would result in being delivered over to the buffetings of Satan.

Note that the use of the word "seal" as it relates to the anointings mentioned above meant that the promises or ordiances were being bound by the holy priesthood, not that these brethren were being sealed up unto eternal lifs. (Kirtland Elders' Quorum Record, 19 March 1836, footnotes.)

THE LAW OF CHASTITY

1. St. George Temple Minutes K93605 20 April 1886; Declarations of the First Presidency on Temple Work, Vol. 7. President John D. T. McAllister/St. George Temple President.

Advised all to get recommends from their Bishops signed by their

President and by Prest. Taylor and return to them before they leave home. Said those who marry outside of the Church could attend to adoptions if they were recommended but should not give their endowments, because when they get their endowments they enter into covenants to have no sexual intercourse with the sons of Adam, except their lawful husbands, to whom they are given in the authority of the Holy Priesthood.

2. St. George Temple Minute Book, K9368R, p. 201; 28 February 1902; Declarations of the First Presidency on Temple Work, Vol. 8:53. President David Cannon.

President David H. Cannon said to all present, You are welcome to the house of the Lord this morning. I desire to say something to you that is very important to all the saints: Prest. Cannon read a letter that he wrote to the First Presidency and also one in answer to his, to the effect that persons, who have had endowments and afterwards wish to be married for time only must go to a temple to be married or they will violate the law of chastity and the children born to such parents will not be in the covenant.

3. J.D. 3:246; March 16, 1856; President Brigham Young speaking.

. . .in this congregation there are men and women who, with uplifted hands to heaven, before the Father, the Son, and all the holy angels, made solemn covenants that they never would do thus and so. For example, one obligation is, 'I will never have anything to do with any of the daughters of Eve, unless they are given to me of the Lord.' Men will call God to witness that they never will transgress this law, and promise to live a virtuous life, so far as intercourse with females is concerned; but what can you see? A year will not pass away before some few of them are guilty of creeping into bed with the wives of their brethren.

4. Remarks made by Pres. H. C. Kimball in the Tabernacle, Sunday Morning, February 4, 1855; Ms/d/627/Box 3.

If I were to court a man's daughter it is my duty first to ask the father's consent, then [after] I get his permission I have to come and court her. I will now make a few remarks to the Brethren in the priesthood upon this subject. You are under greater responsibility than those out of the kingdom, they have to get the consent of the parents and the woman, but you have first to get leave from the man who holds the keys of the Priesthood, then of the father and mother before you can take a young woman to wife. And if a woman comes to you and makes a proposal, say I have no authority to accept of your proposition but I will go and ask the man who holds the Keys first and then I can tell you what I will do. And when a woman in this Church marries a man out of it, a woman that has received her endowments she violates her covenant. Do you know that? I want to tell you of it. [I said] enough--had no idea of speaking upon these subjects but I am very glad that I have, Are not you? (Congregation responded, Yes.)

Logan, Utah.

Dear Brother Shepherd:
The First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve have unanimously decided to eliminate from the Law of Chastity, in the temple ritual, the words "to whom you shall be given of the Lord in marriage by the authority of the holy priesthood."
We have therefore caused to be rewritten the pages in the temple ceremony books which contain this part of the ritual, and enclose herewith the following sheets as replacements for the ones now in use:

Sheet Nos. 71,72,73 and 74, in the master book.
Sheet No. 41 in the Elohim book.
Sheet No. 21 in the Jehovah book.
Sheet No. 19 in the Peter book.

Please return to us by registered mail the pages that these are intended to replace.
It is desired that this change in the language of the ceremony shall be instituted immediately following the summer vacation.
Sincerely your brethren,

NO PAIN IN CHILDBIRTH

by Richard Ware

1. There are only two kinds of being that have the power of procreation: the Gods and mortals. The Gods have the power permanently, mortals only temporarily.

2. The Gods have the power to bring forth spirit children. This they can do and the woman does not suffer any discomfort in the process.

3. However, when the Gods descend to a mortal world and propagate their species in a fallen world, children are brought forth in sorrow and distress because of the change in environment---from glory to no glory---which glory is a sustaining and healing power on the body.

4. When Adam and Eve came into the Garden of Eden they could continue to bear spirit children, but not mortal children with physical bodies, because the fall of the earth had not yet taken place, and because they still had spirit flowing through their bodies. Whether or not they had spirit children in the Garden however is unknown. When Nephi says they could not have children, he was referring to children who are like us--physical.

5. Those individuals who live faithfully will become gods themselves, and will not only have the power to propagate physical blood bodies (which power they received upon this earth), but they will also gain the power to have spirit children as well.

The increase of those who are exalted in that kingdom will endure for ever; and the bringing forth of children will not be attended with sorrow, pain and distress as it is here: these evils have come in consequence of the fall of man and the transgression by him of God's holy laws. But when men are redeemed to immortality and eternal life there will be no pain, sorrow or affliction of body, and yet children will be brought forth, and to their increase there will be no end.

Equality

1. Under conditions of full gospel equality, perfect fainess and equity would prevail in every sphere of life. All persons similarly situated would be treated exactly the same as all other such persons; all would enjoy and possess the same things. Perfect impartiality would reign, for "there should be an equality among all men." (Mosiah 27:3; Alma 1:26.) By way of illustration, the gospel message itself is and should be freely availabe to all men. (Third Article of Faith.) The Lord "inviteth them all [this is a prophetic statement for the black race] to come unto him and partake of his goodness; and he denieth none that come unto him, black and white, bond and free, male and female; and he remambereth the heathen; and all are alike unto God, both Jew and Gentile." (2 Ne. 26:33.)

Perfect equality does not now prevail, either in the world or in the Church. But when life is perfected among the saints and when the highest gospel law is lived, then both temporal and spiritual equality will prevail. Temporal adjustments under the principles of consecration will make "every man qual accordin to his circumstances and his wants and needs." (D. & C. 51:3; 82:17.) "In your temporal things you shall be qual, and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld." (E. & C. 70:14.) "For if ye are not equal in earthly things ye cannot be equal in obtaining heavenly things." (D. & C. 70:14.) "For if ye are not equal in earthly things ye cannto be equal in obtaining heavenly things." (D. & C. 78:3-7.)

2. Exalted beings will enjoy eternal equality in their high celestial status. "And he makes them equal in power, and in might, and in dominion." (D. & C. 76:95.) [This takes place in the Fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood in the New and Everlasting Covenant of Celestial Marriage.] "And then shall the angels be crowned with the glory of his might, and the saints shall be filled with his glory, and receive their inheritances and be made equal with him." (D. & C. 88:107.) [How can a married person be made equal with a person who is not. We are give the blessings of the fulness of the New and Everlasting Covenant of Marriage to be made equal with God and His Christ...] In other words, they all enjoy exaltation; all live the same kind of life; all exercise the same power, the power of God; all are possessed of the same Spirit, the Spirit of truth; all are gods and have eternal increase; all are joint-heirs with Christ [again if we all have eternal increase and are made brougt up the the standard of God and Joint-heirs with Christ it must mean that he is living the same law that he has brought us up to live] possessing all things with him, and being inheritors of all that the Father hath. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 231.) [Get with Lynn on this concept and explain how when we become parents we have all that our parents have, we have the same power, the same authority, we are like them and see them as they really are...
Scripture, when he comes we shall see Him and know him as he really is for we shall be like him.... Parenthood..... Eternal God
Both the Father and the Son carry the exalted name-title, Eternal God. Both are exalted Beings and as such are Eternal; both are from everlasting to everlasting, with all that this phrase connotates;

> Everlasting to Everlasting: by gaining exaltation-which includes the fulness of the Father and "a continuation of seeds forever and ever"-men [and women jointly] become "gods, because they have no end; therefore shall they be from everlasting to everlasting, because they continue." (D. & C. 132:19-20.) That is, those who gain eternal increase, who have unending spirit children in the resurrection, have thereby become from everlasting to everlasting. Because of their eternal progeny they continue everlastingly without end; from eternity to eternity they are the same; and being perfected and exalted beings, their course never varies, nor is there shadow of turning to the right or the left.
> Our Eternal Father, of course, now has this kind of and existence. "There is a God in heaven," the revelation says, of him "who is infinite and eternal, from everlasting to everlasting the same unchangeable God." (D. & C. 20:17; 109:77.) Christ also describes himself as being "from everlasting to everlasting." (D. & C. 61:1; Ps. 90:2; Docrtines of Salvation, vol. 1, pp. 10-12.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 244.)
> both are beyond finite comprehension in power, dominion, godly attributes, and eternal glory. (D. & C. 121:32.) By their eternal grace men have been [1] created [by the Father], [2] redeemed [by the Son], and placed as possible heirs of all things. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 236-237.)

Eternal lives
Those who gain eternal life (exaltation) also gain eternal lives, meaning that in the resurrection thy have eternal "increase," a "continuation of the seeds," a "continuation of the lives." Their spirit progeny will "continue as innumerable as the stars; or, if ye were to count the sand upon the seashore ye could not number them." (D. & C. 131:1-4; 132:19-25, 30, 55.)

"Except a man and his wife enter into an everlasting covenant and be married for eternity, while in this probation, by the power and authority of the holy priesthood,: the Prophet says, "they will cease to increase when they die; that is, they will not have any children after the resurrection." Then with reference to those who have been properly sealed in marriage and who have thereafter endured in righteousness until their callings and elections were made sure by revelation he adds: "But those who are married by the power and authority of the priesthood in this life, and continue without committing the sin agains the Holy Ghost, [their callings and elections having been made sure through perfect devotion to the truth, they] [Dave: Sure by the hand of the holy priesthood and ratified and made sure by the Holy Ghost] will continue to increase and have children in the celestial glory." (Teachings, pp. 300-301.)
The opposite of eternal lives is eternal deaths. Those who come up separately and singly in the resurrection and who therefore do not have spirit children eternally are said to inherit "the deaths." (D. & C. 132:16-17, 25.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 237-238.)
Eternal progression
...In the full sense, eternal progression is enjoyed only by those who receive exaltation. Exalted persons have all power, all knowledge, and all wisdom; they gain a fulness of truth, becoming one with the Father
Those who gain exaltation, having thus enjoyed the fulness of eternal progression, become like God. It should be realized that God is not progressing in knowledge, truth, virtue, wisdom, or any of the attributes of godliness. He has already gained these things in their fulness. But he is progressing in the sense that his creations increase, his dominions expand, his spirit offspring multiply, and more kingdoms are added to his domains. (Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 1, pp. 5-10.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 238-239.)

Eternity to eternity.
Those who become gods will then be from eternity to eternity, everlastingly the same, always possessing the fulness of all things and multiplying their race without end. (Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 1, pp. 10-12.) (Momon Doctrine, p. 240.)

Everlasting to Everlasting
By gaining exaltation-which includes the fulness of the Father and "a continuation of seeds forever and ever"-men [and women jointly] become "gods, because they have no end; therefore shall they be from everlasting to everlasting, because they continue." (D. & C. 132:19-20.) That is, those who gain eternal increase, who have unending spirit children in the resurrection, have thereby become from everlasting to everlasting. Because of their eternal progeny they continue everlastingly without end; from eternity to eternity they are the same; and being perfected and exalted beings, their course never varies, nor is there shadow of turning to the right or the left.
Our Eternal Father, of course, now has this kind of and existence. "There is a God in heaven," the revelation says, of him "who is infinite and eternal, from everlasting to everlasting the same unchangeable God." (D. & C. 20:17; 109:77.) Christ also describes himself as being "from everlasting to everlasting." (D. & C. 61:1; Ps. 90:2; Docrtines of Salvation, vol. 1, pp. 10-12.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 242.)

Exaltation
Celestial marriage is the gate to exaltation, and exaltation consists in the continuation of the family unit in eternity. Exaltation is eternal life, the kind of life which God lives. Those who obtain it gain an inheritance in highest of three heavens within the celestial kingdom. (D. & C. 131:1-4.)

Gospel Mysteries

They have eternal increase, a continuation of the seeds forever and ever, a continuation of the lives, eternal lives; that is, they have spirit children in the resurrection, in relation to which offspring they stand in the same position that God our Father stands to us. They inherit in due course the fulness of the glory of the Father, meaning that they have all power in heaven and on earth. (D. & C. 76:50-60; 93:1-40.) "Then shall they be gods, because they have no end; therefore shall they be from everlasting to everlasting, because they continue; then shall they be above all, because all things are subject unto them. Then shall they be gods, because they have all power, and the angels are subject unto them." (D. & C. 132:16-26; Docrines of Salvation, vol. 2, pp. 35-79.)

Although salvation may be defined in many ways to mean many things, in its most pure and perfect definition it is a synonym of exaltation. This was the way in which the Prophet used it when he left us this inspired explanation: "Where shall we find a prototype into whose likeness we may be assimilated, in order that we may be made partakers of life and salvation? or, in other words, where shall we find a saved being? for if we can find a saved being, we may ascertain without much difficulty what all others must be in order to be saved. We think that it will not be a matter of dispute, that two beings who are unlike each other cannot be saved; for whatever constitutes the salvation of one will constituet the salvation of every creature which will be saved; and if we find one saved being in all existence, we may see what others must be, or else not be saved.

"We ask, then, where is the prototype? or where is the saved being? We conclude, as to the answer of this question, there will be dispute among those who believe the Bible, that it is Christ: all will agree in this, that he is the prototype or standard of salvation; or, in other words, that he is a saved being. And if we should continue our interrogation and ask how it is that he is saved, the answer would be-because he is a just and holy being; and if he were anything different from what he is, he would not be saved; for his salvation depends on his being precisely what he is and nothing else; for if it were possible for him to change, in the least degree, so sure he would fail of salvation and lose all his dominion, power, authority and glory, which constitute salvation; for salvation consists in the glory, authority, majesty, power and dominion which Jehovah possesses and in nothing else; and no being can possess it but himself or one like him."

After quoting many passages of scripture, the record of the Prophet's teachings continues: "These teachings of the Savior most clearly show unto us the nature of salvation, and what he proposed unto the human family when he proposed to save them--that he proposed to make them like unto himself, and he was like the Father, the great prototype of all saved beings; and for any portion of the human family to be assimilated into their likeness is to be saved; and to be unlike them is to be destroyed; and on this hinge truns the door of salvation." (Lectrues on Faith, pp. 63-67.) (Mormon Doctrine, p 258.)

Exemplar

With reference to "all covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations" (D. & C. 132:7)--that is, in all things--he leads the way and sets an example for his brethren. "Follow thou me," is the cry. (2 Ne. 31:10.) "What manner of men ought ye to be?" he asked; and then answered: "Verily I say unto you, even as I am." (3 Ne. 27:27.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 259).

THE MARRIAGE OF CHRIST

by Richard Ware

Concepts dealing with understanding the marriage of Christ:

1. Christ obtained a fulness of the priesthood by obtaining the fulness of the ordinances of the house of the Lord. This obviously, must include temple marriage. (1)

2. Jesus was married at the wedding of Cana of Galilee. (5,6,11,18,23)

3. There are individuals alive today who are descendants of the Savior and of the original Twelve apostles. (8,9,12,14,15,16,19)

4. Christ was a polygamist. (2,3,4,5,6,7,10,11)

5. According to the Prophet Joseph, the Savior received the fulness of the priesthood on the Mount of Transfiguration. In order for Christ to have received this he must have been married first.

6. See #24 for additional interesting thoughts from the Jewish viewpoint.

THE MARRIAGE OF CHRIST

1. Teaching of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 308; June 11, 1843; Joseph Smith Jr.

If a man gets a fullness of the priesthood of God he has to get it in the same way that Jesus Christ obtained it, and that was by keeping all the commandments and obeying all the ordinances of the house of the Lord.

2. J.D. 1:345-346; August 7, 1853; Salt Lake Tabernacle; Elder Jedediah M. Grant.

What does old Celsus say, who was a physician in the first century, whose medical works are esteemed very highly at the present time. . . .He says, 'The grand reason why the Gentiles and philosophers of his school persecuted Jesus Christ, was, because he had so many wives; there were Elizabeth, and Mary, and a host of others that followed him.' After Jesus went from the stage of action, the Apostles followed the example of their master. For instance, John the beloved disciple, writes in his second Epistle, 'Unto the elect lady and her children, whom I love in the truth.' Again, he says, 'Having many things to write unto you (or communicate), I would not write with paper and ink: but I trust to come unto you, and speak face to face, that our joy may be full.' Again---'The children of thy elect sister greet thee.' This ancient philosopher says they were both John's wives. Paul says, "Mine answer to them that do examine me is this:---Have we not power to lead about a sister, a wife, as well as other apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas." He, according to Celsus, had a numerous train of wives. The grand reason of the burst of public sentiment in anathemas upon Christ and his disciples, causing his crucifixion, was evidently based upon polygamy, according to the testimony of the philosophers who rose in that age. A belief in the doctrine of a plurality of wives caused the persecution of Jesus and his followers. We might almost think they were 'Mormons'.

3. The Seer, pp. 159-160; October 1853; Elder Orson Pratt.

The Evangelists do not particularly speak of the marriage of Jesus; but this is not to be wondered at, for St. John says: 'There are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written.' (John 21:25) One thing is certain, that there were several holy women that greatly loved Jesus---such as Mary, and Martha her sister, and Mary Magdalene; and Jesus greatly loved them, and associated with them much; and when He arose from the dead, instead of first showing Himself to His chosen witnesses, the Apostles, He appeared first to these women, or at least to one of them---namely, Mary Magdalene. Now, it would be very natural for a husband in the resurrection to appear first to his own dear wives, and afterwards show himself to his other friends. If all the acts of Jesus were written, we no doubt should learn that these beloved women were his wives.

4. The Seer, p. 172 Vol 1, No 11; November, 1853; Elder Orson Pratt.

From the passage in the forty-fifth Psalm, it will be seen that the great Messiah who was the founder of the Christian religion, was a Polygamist, as well as the Patriarch Jacob and the prophet David from whom He descended according to the flesh. Paul says concerning Jesus, "Verily he took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham." (Heb. 2:16) Abraham the Polygamist, being a friend of God, the Messiah chose to take upon himself his seed; and by marrying many honorable wives himself, show to all future generations that he approbated the plurality of Wives under the Christian dispensation, as well as under the dispensations in which His Polygamist ancestors lived.

5. J.D. 2:79-82; October 6, 1854; Pres. Orson Hyde; General Conference, S.L.C.

Our first parents, then, were commanded to multiply and replenish the earth; and if the Savior found it his duty to be baptized to fulfill all righteousness, a command of far less importance than that of multiplying his race, (if indeed there is any difference in the commandments of Jehovah, for they are all important, and all essential), would he not find it his duty to join in with the rest of the faithful ones in replenishing the earth? 'Mr. Hyde, do you really wish to imply that the immaculate Savior begat children? It is a blasphemous assertion against the purity of the Savior's life, to say the least of it. The holy aspirations that ever ascended from him to his Father would never allow him to have any such fleshly and carnal connexions, never, no never.' This is the general idea; but the Savior never thought it beneath him to obey the mandate of his Father; he never thought this stooping beneath his dignity; he never despised what God had made. . .'Then you really mean to hold to the doctrine that the Savior of the world was married; do you mean to be understood so? And if so, do you mean to be understood that he had more than one wife?' There is an old prophecy of Isaiah, which I cannot stop to read, but you will find it in the 53rd chapter of his prophecies; read the whole of the chapter. This particular prophecy speaks of Christ all the way through. It is there said, 'When thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed.' If he has no seed, how could he see them? How was it with Mary and Martha, and other women that followed him? In old times, and it is common in this day, the women, even as Sarah, called their husbands Lord; the word Lord is tantamount to husband in some languages, master, lord, husband, are about synonymous. In England we frequently hear the wife say, 'Where is my master?' She does not mean a tyrant, but as Sarah called her husband Lord, she designates hers by the word master. When Mary of old came to the sepulchre on the first day of the week, instead of finding Jesus she saw two angels in white, 'And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She said unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord,' or husband, 'and I know not where they have laid him. . . .Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.' Is there not here manifested the affections of a wife. These words speak the kindred ties and sympathies that are common to that relation of husband and wife. We will turn over to the account of the marriage in Cana of Galilee, and the mother of Jesus was there. Yes, and somebody else too. You will find it in the 2nd chapter of John's Gospel; remember it and read it when you go home. . . .Gentlemen, that is as plain as the translators, or different councils over this Scripture, dare allow it to go to the world, but the thing is there; it is told; Jesus was the bridegroom at the marriage of Cana of Galilee, and he told them what to do. Now there was actually a marriage; and if Jesus was not the bridegroom on that occasion, please tell who was. . . .I do not despise to be called a son of Abraham, if he had a dozen wives; or to be called a brother, a son, a child of the Savior, if he had Mary, and Martha, and several others, as wives; and though he did cast seven devils out of one of them, it is all the same to me. . . .Well, then, he shall see his seed, and who shall declare his generation, for he was cut off from the earth? I shall say here, that before the Savior died, he looked upon his own natural children, as we look upon ours; he saw his seed, and immediately afterwards he was cut off from the earth.

We have had a splendid address from brother Hyde, for which I am grateful. I feel in my heart to bless the people all the time, and can say amen to brother Hyde's remarks. . . .He has done so beautifully, and it will have its desired effect. (J.D. 2:90)

6. J.D. 2:210; March 18, 1855; Salt Lake City; Pres. Orson Hyde.

I discover that some of the Eastern papers represent me as a great blasphemer, because I said, in my lecture on Marriage, at our last Conference, that Jesus Christ was married at Cana of Galilee, that Mary, Martha, and others were his wives, and that he begat children. All that I have to say in reply to that charge is this---they worship a Savior that is too pure and holy to fulfill the commands of his Father. I worship one that is just pure and holy enough 'to fulfill all righteousness;' not only the righteous law of baptism, but the still more righteous and important law 'to multiply and replenish the earth.' Startle not at this! for even the Father himself honored that law by coming down to Mary, without a natural [mortal] body, and begetting a son; and if Jesus begat children, he only 'did that which he had seen his Father do.'

7. Mary Ellen A. Kimball Journal; February 18, 1857; CHO.

[Heber C. Kimball] came to our room [and] said he did not feel well. spoke of an ordinance which he had previously taught and said that only one of his wives had attended to it. he then spoke of our Savior and his wives but more particularly of Mary [and her] faithfulness to her Lord. * * *

8. J.D. 4:248; March 1, 1857; Salt Lake Tabernacle; Pres. Heber C. Kimball.

What do you suppose we are going to do with you? Are you ever going to be prepared to see God, Jesus Christ, His angels, or comprehend His servants, unless you take a faithful and prayerful course? Did you actually know Joseph Smith? No. Do you know brother Brigham? No. Do you know brother Heber? No, you do not. Do you know the Twelve? You do not, if you did, you would begin to know God, and learn that those men who are chosen to direct and counsel you are near kindred to God and to Jesus Christ, for the keys, power, and authority of the kingdom of God are in that lineage. I speak of these things with a view to arouse your feelings and your faithfulness towards God the Father, and His Son Jesus Christ, that you may pray and be humble, and penitent.

9. J.D. 4:259-260; March 1857; Salt Lake City; Pres. Orson Hyde.

It will be borne in mind that once on a time, there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and on a careful reading of that transaction, it will be discovered that no less a person than Jesus Christ was married on that occasion. If he was never married, his intimacy with Mary and Martha, and the other Mary also whom Jesus loved, must have been highly unbecoming and improper to say the best of it. . . .Did Christ come to destroy the law of the Prophets, or to fulfill them? He came to fulfill. Did he multiply, and did he see his seed: Did he honour his Father's law by complying with it, or did he not? Others may do as they like, but I will not charge our Savior with neglect or transgression in this or any other duty. . . .If God be not our Father, grandfather, or great grandfather, or some kind of a father in reality, in deed and in truth, why are we taught to say, 'Our Father who art in heaven?' How much soever of holy horror this doctrine may excite in persons not impregnated with the blood of Christ, and whose minds are consequently dark and benighted, it may excite still more when they are told that if none of the natural blood of Christ flows in their veins, they are not the chosen or elect of God. Object not, therefore, too strongly against the marriage of Christ, but remember that in the last days, secret and hidden things must come to light, and that your life also (which is the blood) is hid with Christ in God.

10. J.D. 11:328; February 10, 1867; Salt Lake Tabernacle; Pres. Brigham Young.

Yet the whole fraternity [of Freemasonry] throughout Christendom will cry out against this order [of polygamy]. "Oh dear, oh dear, oh dear!" What is the matter? "I am in pain," they all cry out, ".i am suffering at witnessing the wickedness there is in our land. Here is one of the 'relics of barbarism!'" Yes, one of the relics of Adam, of Enoch, of Noah, of Abraham, of Isaac, of Jacob, of Moses, David, Solomon, the Prophets, of Jesus, and his Apostles.

11. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; July 22, 1883.

Joseph F. Smith . . . spoke upon the marriage in Cana of Galilee. He thought Jesus was the bridegroom and Mary and Martha the brides. He also referred to Luke lOth chap., 34 to 42 verses. Also John llth chap., 2 & 5 verses, John 12:13. Joseph Smith spoke upon these passages to show that Mary and Martha manifested much closer relationship than merely a believer.

12. Journal of Oliver B. Huntington; Wednesday, December 29, 1886.

While visiting with Zina [Huntington] she related a conversation that occurred between her and a sister "Repshere" upon events in Nauvoo, where the Prophet Joseph Smith sealed her, Sister Repshere, to a Judge Adams of Springfield, Illinois.
The Prophet stated to her [Repshere] that Judge Adams was a literal descendant of Jesus Christ. The Judge died in Nauvoo and Sister Repshere, his wife, who had been married before to [a Mr.] Repshere, died at Hill Creek, Utah.
[NOTE: Judge Adams was a very close friend of the Prophet Joseph. He was one of the original nine men who received the endowment when it was first given on the 4th of May, 1842. Before Judge Adams death, Joseph said he anointed him to the Patriarchal power, and that he [Adams] had had revelations concerning his departure. The Prophet Joseph spoke at his funeral.]

President George Q. Cannon also spoke on the law of tithing. Among other things, said, "There are those in this audience who are descendants of the old Twelve Apostles - and, shall I say it, yes, descendants of the Savior himself. His seed is represented in this body of men."

15. Journal of Rudger Clawson, pp. 374-375; President of the Quorum of the Twelve. Minutes of a solemn assembly meeting Sunday, July 2, 1899, Salt Lake Temple.

President George Q. Cannon also spoke on the law of tithing. Among other things he said, "There are those in this audience who are descendants of the Twelve Apostles--and shall I say it, yes, Descendants of the Savior himself. His seed is represented in this body of men."
Following President Cannon, President Snow arose and said that what Brother Cannon had stated respecting the literal descendants among this company of the old apostles and the Savior himself is true--that the Savior's seed is represented in this body of men.

George Q. Cannon. There are men in this congregation who are descendants of the ancient Twelve Apostles, and I shall say it, of the Son of God himself, for he had seed, and in time they shall be known.

17. Millennial Star Vol 62:97; President Joseph F. Smith; 1900.

Jesus Christ never omitted the fulfilling of a single law that God has made known for the salvation of the children of men. It would not have done for him to have come and obeyed one law and neglected another. He could not consistently do that and then say to mankind, 'Follow me.'

She manifested concern and personal responsibility in the matter of providing for the guests. Evidently her position was different from that of one present by ordinary invitation. Whether this circumstance indicates the marriage to have been that of one of her own immediate family, or some more distant relative, we are not informed [by John's gospel].

. . . .They [the disciples] said to Him: Shall we then, being children, enter the Kingdom? Jesus said to them: When you make the two one, (one flesh--or marriage) and when you make the inner as the outer. . .and when you make the male and the female into a single one, (married), so that the male will not be male and female (not) be female, . . .then shall you enter (the Kingdom). Simon Peter said to them? Let Mary go out from among us, because women are not worthy of the Life. Jesus said: See, I shall lead her, so that I will make her male, (one in marriage) that she too may become a living spirit, resembling you males. For every woman who makes herself male will enter the Kingdom of Heaven.

There were three who walked with the Lord at all times, Mary (his mother), and her sister, and Magdalene, whom they called his consort. . . .And the consort of Christ is Mary Magdalene. The Lord loved Mary more than all the disciples, and kissed her on her mouth often. The others too (the disciples) . . . .they said to him 'Why do you love her more than all of us?' The Saviour answered and said to them 'Why do I not love you like her?' [End of Translation]

22. Letter from Pres. David 0. McKay; October 10, 1966.

I have been directed to tell you that there is no scripture or revelation on this subject [Christ being married]. The wisest presumption upon this and related subjects mentioned in your letter is that the status of Christ, a member of the Godhead, so far transcends the status of human beings and what they can attain in a life-time of utter and complete faithfulness and perfection, that we should suspend and defer all concern about His status.

23. Doc New Testament Commentary 1:135; 1973 edition; Elder Bruce R. McConkie.

John's record of the marriage in Cana is fragmentary; it does not by any means tell the whole story. From what is recorded, however, we learn:

(1) Mary seemed to be the hostess at the marriage party, the one in charge, the one responsible for the entertainment of the guests. It was she who recognized the need for more wine, who sought to replenish the supply, who directed the servants to follow whatever instructions Jesus gave. Considering the customs of the day, it is a virtual certainty that one of Mary's children was being married.

24. Interesting Thoughts:

1. The Jews were all married by age 20. Those who were not married were forced by the civil courts to marry. Celibacy was not known to them.

2. All those who were "rabbis" were married, and Christ was called a "rabbi" on many occasions: Mark 9:5; 11:21; Matt 26:25, 49; John 1:49, 38; 4:31; 9:2; 11:8; 6:25.
3. Although Christ spoke out against adultery, he did not say anything against plural marriage.

4. Plural marriage among the Jews was still the custom in the days of the Savior.

5. Failure to marry was considered a sin among the Jews.
6. The word "woman" in Greek translations means "wife".
7. The term "master" in the Greek means "husband".
8. The term "consort" means husband or wife.
9. The first commandment to have children was to obeyed by all Jews.
10. Jesus was "called" to the wedding of Cana. Jewish tradition "calls" the bridegroom to the wedding.
11. At Jewish weddings the bridegroom is the one who is to handle the refreshments or wine.
12. Only immediate family members are allowed to anoint the bodies of their dead.
13. Christ first appeared to Mary after his resurrection. 14. Christ said to Mary: "Hold me not", not "Touch me not".
15. Christ was intimate with Mary and Martha, they washed his feet and anointed his body, etc.
16. Did Christ set the example in all things for us to follow?
17. Would Christ want his marriage to be performed for him by proxy?
18. How would Christ know the problems or joys of marriage had he not experienced them?

Typescript of minutes of a solemn assembly held in the Salt Lake Temple, Sunday, July 2, 1899

This being the day for the Solemn Assembly called by the First Presidency, a large number of brethren were admitted to the temple at 10 o'clock and were seated in the Celestial and Terrestrial rooms.
There were about 700 present, as follows, The First Presidency, the Twelve, First Seven Presidents of Seventies, Presiding Patriarch, Presiding Bishopric, Presidencies of Stakes, the Bishops of Wards, Stake Presidencies of YMMIA, Relief Societies, Sunday Schools and others.
Meeting was called to order by President Lorenzo Snow. Singing by the Temple Choir: prayer by Apostle F. M. Lyman. Singing.
President Snow said that if the brethren present lived ten, fifteen, or twenty years, or perhaps less, they would go back to Jackson County. The time for returning to Jackson County is much nearer than many suppose and it is the faithful that would be selected to go, and they will be required to accept the United Order. Read of the troubles and curses that are visited upon apostates, said he would tell us what the Lord required of us today. Read Section 119 of the Doctrine and Covenants. Talked upon the subject of tithing. If the people, he said, had paid an honest tithing for the past year we would have received $1,000,000 more than we did receive, and if full tithing had been paid for the past twelve years, we would have received 10,000,000 $ more than we did receive.
Bishop Preston says, and the books prove it, that only about 50 percent tithing is paid. A half tithing or a third tithing is no tithing at all, but simply an offering. If we do not observe this law we have no promise that we shall remain in this land an hour. Said that while visiting in St. George on his recent trip the Lord revealed to him that counsel he should impart to the people, and the word of the Lord was that the Saints should pay their tithing. Trouble has come upon the people. In the south stock is dying off, crops are drying up, and the north crops were partially destroyed by frost. An effort is being made to influence the Government to disfranchise the Latter-day Saints by an constitutional amendment. How far this is due to the disobedience of our people in observing the law of tithing I do not know, but the Saints are certainly under condemnation.
Bishop Preston followed, So far as he could ascertain, he said, there is about one-fourth of the Saints that pay no tithing at all, while the average tithing paid by those who pay is not more than fifty percent, and may fall below that average.
Song. Sacrament. President Snow read Section 86, Doctrine and Covenants. Said we are the sons and daughters of the Lord, and descendants of the prophets and apostles. Said the Lord has forgiven us for our carelessness in paying our tithing in the past, but he will forgive us no longer, and if we do not obey this law, we will be scattered as were the Saints in Jackson County, and this by reason of the knowledge we have attained to. What I say is as true as God lives. We must teach the people this law of tithing--first by paying tithes ourselves. Just as sure as we live, if we do not honor the law of tithing, we will never possess the land of Jackson County, except it be by the shedding of blood, but it will not be by the shedding of blood because you will listen to my voice, and the voice of my brethren.
We are the sons of the prophets and the sons of God. The Lord will not send hornets to drive the people out of Jackson County, as he promised to drive the people out of the land of promise before the children of Israel, but he will send cyclones, earthquakes, and pestilences.
Apostle M. F. Cowley made brief remarks upon the law of tithing.
Recess. Lunch was served in the assembly room on the upper floor. Had sandwiches, cheese, buns and cakes. In view of the long fast, the lunch seemed to be greatly relished by all.

About 5 o'clock, meeting was resumed in the Celestial and Terrestrial rooms. Singing. Instructive remarks were made by the brethren upon the law of tithing: LeRoi Snow, Apostles George Teasdale and President Joseph F. Smith. The latter, in speaking of tithing, said the books should not only record what we do, but what we ought to have done, and did not do. A man is in poor business as President or Bishop of a Ward who says to the people, "Do as you ought to do, not as I do." The poor of a ward --the widows and orphans all should pay their tithing.
President George Q. Cannon also spoke on the law of tithing. Among other things he said, "There are those in this audience who are descendants of the Twelve Apostles--and shall I say it, yes, Descendants of the Savior himself. His seed is represented in this body of men."
Following President Cannon, President Snow arose and said that what Brother Cannon had stated respecting the literal descendants among this company of the old apostles and the Savior himself is true--that the Savior's seed is represented in this body of men. President Snow further said in conclusion he hoped the brethren would take the spirit of these meetings home with them and impart the same to the people.
A resolution to the effect that the brethren would accept the law of tithing, obey it themselves and teach it to the people was adopted by a rising vote and with uplifted hands.
President Snow then led in the sacred shout, and the meeting came to a close. Singing. Benediction by Seymour B Young.

JESUS CHRIST
THE SAVIOR OF OTHER WORLDS

1. 2 Nephi 10:3; Jacob speaking.

Wherefore, as I said unto you, it must needs be expedient that Christ-for in the last night the angel spake unto me that this should be his name-should come among the Jews, among those who are the more wicked part of the world; and they shall crucify him-for thus it behooveth our God, and there is none other nation on earth that would crucify their God.

2. Doctrine & Covenants 76:22-24.

And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him; That he lives; For we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father. That by him, and through him, and of him, the words are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God.

3. Times & Seasons, Vol 4:82-85; Poetic rendition of D&C 76, given in response to a poem by W. W. Phelps; February, 1843; Joseph Smith, Jr.

And I heard a great voice, bearing records from heaven, He's the Savior, and only begotten of God--by him, of him, and through him, the worlds were all made, even all that career in the heavens so broad, Whose inhabitants, too, from the first to the last, are saved by the very same Savior of ours; And, of course, are begotten God's daughters and sons, by the very same truths, and the very same powers.

4. Signs of the Times, p. 10; Deseret Book Co., 1963 ed.; Joseph Fielding Smith.

This is a terrible arraignment against the inhabitants of this earth. Perhaps this is the reason Jesus Christ was sent here instead of to some other world, for in some other world they would not have crucified him, and his presence was needed here because of the extreme wickedness of the inhabitants of this earth.

5. Masterful Discourses, pp. 361-62; No date; Orson Pratt.
If the penalty of the original sin be the eternal separation of body and spirit, how can justice have all its demands, and mercy be shown to the transgression? There is a way and how? It is by the introduction of His Only Begotten Son, the Son of His own bosom, the first born of every creature, holding the birthright over every creation He has made, and holding the keys of salvation over millions of earths like this one; He has a right to come forth and suffer the penalty of death for the fallen sons and daughters of man.

|v133 Art thou a brother or brethren? I salute you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, in token or remembrance of the everlasting covenant, in which covenant I receive you to fellowship, in a determination that is fixed, immovable, and unchangeable, to be your friend and brother through the grace of God in the bonds of love, to walk in all the commandments of God blameless, in thanksgiving, forever and ever. Amen.
(D&C: Section 88:133)

|v1 Then Jesus six days before the passover came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead.
|v2 There they made him a supper; and Martha served: but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him.
|v3 Then took Mary a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.
|v4 Then saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should betray him,
|v5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?
|v6 This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein.
|v7 Then said Jesus, Let her alone: against the day of my burying hath she kept this.
|v8 For the poor always ye have with you; but me ye have not always.
(NewT:John 12:1-8)

|v6 Now when Jesus was in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper,
|v7 There came unto him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he sat at meat.
|v8 But when his disciples saw it, they had indignation, saying, To what purpose is this waste?
|v9 For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor.
|v10 When Jesus understood it, he said unto them, Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon me.
|v11 For ye have the poor always with you; but me ye have not always.
|v12 For in that she hath poured this ointment on my body, she did it for my burial.
(NewT:Matthew 26:6-13)

|v3 And being in Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard very precious; and she brake the box, and poured it on his head. |v4 And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made?
|v6 And Jesus said, Let her alone; why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me.
|v7 For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good: but me ye have not always.
|v8 She hath done what she could: she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying.
|v9 Verily I say unto you, Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her.
(NewT:Mark 14:3-9)

|v1 Then Jesus six days before the passover came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead.

|v37 And, behold, a woman in the city, which was a sinner, when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster box of ointment,

|v38 And stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.
|v39 Now when the Pharisee which had bidden him saw it, he spake within himself, saying, This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him: for she is a sinner.
|v40 And Jesus answering said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.
|v41 There was a certain creditor which had two debtors: the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty.
|v42 And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love him most?
|v43 Simon answered and said, I suppose that he, to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.
|v44 And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head.
|v46 My head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.
|v47 Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.
|v48 And he said unto her, Thy sins are forgiven.
|v49 And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also?
|v50 And he said to the woman, Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace.
(NewT:Luke 7:37-50)

|v37 And, behold, a woman in the city, which was a sinner, when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster box of ointment,

(NewT:Luke 7:37-50)

|v9 Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils.
|v10 And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept.
(NewT:Mark 16:9-11)

|v11 But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre,
|v12 And seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.
|v13 And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

|v14 And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.
|v15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.
|v16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.
|v17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.
(NewT:John 20:11-18)

|v59 And it came to pass, that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father.
|v60 And his mother answered and said, Not so; but he shall be called John.
|v61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.
|v62 And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called.
|v63 And he asked for a writing table, and wrote, saying, His name is John. And they marvelled all.
|v64 And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God.
|v66 And all they that heard them laid them up in their hearts, saying, What manner of child shall this be! And the hand of the Lord was with him.
|v67 And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,
|v68 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people,
|v69 And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David;
|v70 As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began:

|v71 That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us;
|v72 To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant;
|v73 The oath which he sware to our father Abraham,
|v74 That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear,
|v75 In holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.
|v76 And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways;
|v77 To give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins,
|v78 Through the tender mercy of our God; whereby the dayspring from on high hath visited us,
|v79 To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.
(NewT:Luke 1:59-79)

|v7 And also John the son of Zacharias, which Zacharias he (Elias) visited and gave promise that he should have a son, and his name should be John, and he should be filled with the spirit of Elias;
(D&C: Section 27:7)

|v27 Which gospel is the gospel of repentance and of baptism, and the remission of sins, and the law of carnal commandments, which the Lord in his wrath caused to continue with the house of Aaron among the children of Israel until John, whom God raised up, being filled with the Holy Ghost from his mother's womb.
|v28 For he was baptized while he was yet in his childhood, and was ordained by the angel of God at the time he was eight days old unto this power, to overthrow the kingdom of the Jews, and to make straight the way of the Lord before the face of his people, to prepare them for the coming of the Lord, in whose hand is given all power.
(D&C: Section 84:27-28)

|v57 Now Elisabeth's full time came that she should be delivered; and she brought forth a son.
|v58 And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had shewed great mercy upon her; and they rejoiced with her.
|v59 And it came to pass, that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father.
|v60 And his mother answered and said, Not so; but he shall be called John.
|v61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

|v67 And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,

|v68 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people,
|v69 And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David;
|v70 As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began:
|v71 That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us;
|v72 To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant;
|v73 The oath which he sware to our father Abraham,
|v74 That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear,
|v75 In holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.
|v76 And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways;

|v80 And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel.
(NewT:Luke 1:57-80)

|v6 And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.
|v7 And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.
|v8 And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.
|v9 And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.
|v10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.
|v11 For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. |v12 And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.
|v13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,
|v14 Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.
|v15 And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.
|v16 And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.
|v17 And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.
|v18 And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.
|v19 But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.
|v21 And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called JESUS, which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb.

(NewT:Luke 2:6-21)

|v19 For according to the words of the prophets, the Messiah cometh in six hundred years from the time that my father left Jerusalem; and according to the words of the prophets, and also the word of the angel of God, his name shall be Jesus Christ, the Son of God.
(BofM:2 Nephi 25:19)

(BofM:Mosiah 3:8)

|v12 And also that ye might know of the coming of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Father of heaven and of earth, the Creator of all things from the beginning; and that ye might know of the signs of his coming, to the intent that ye might believe on his name.
(BofM:Helaman 14:12)

|v52 And he also said unto him: If thou wilt turn unto me, and hearken unto my voice, and believe, and repent of all thy transgressions, and be baptized, even in water, in the name of mine Only Begotten Son, who is full of grace and truth, which is Jesus Christ, the only name which shall be given under heaven, whereby salvation shall come unto the children of men, ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, asking all things in his name, and whatsoever ye shall ask, it shall be given you.
(PoGP:Moses 6:52)

|v22 And when the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord;
|v23 (As it is written in the law of the Lord, Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord;)
|v24 And to offer a sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord, A pair of turtledoves, or two young pigeons.
|v25 And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Ghost was upon him.
|v26 And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ.
|v27 And he came by the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law,
|v28 Then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said,
|v29 Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word:
|v30 For mine eyes have seen thy salvation,
|v31 Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people;
|v32 A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.
|v33 And Joseph and his mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of him.
|v34 And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against;

|v36 And there was one Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Aser: she was of a great age, and had lived with an husband seven years from her virginity;
|v37 And she was a widow of about fourscore and four years, which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day.
|v38 And she coming in that instant gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem.
|v40 And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him.
(NewT:Luke 2:22-40)

|v1 Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil.
|v2 And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward an hungred.
|v3 And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.
|v4 But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.
|v6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.
|v7 Jesus said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.
|v8 Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them;
|v9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.
|v10 Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.
|v11 Then the devil leaveth him, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto him.
(NewT:Matthew 4:1-11)

|v9 And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.
|v10 And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him:
(NewT:Mark 1:9-11)

|v21 But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

|v22 After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judaea; and there he tarried with them, and baptized.
(NewT:John 3:21-22)

|v21 Now when all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened,
|v22 And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.
(NewT:Luke 3:21-22)

|v32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.
|v34 And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God. (NewT:John 1:32-34)

|v1 Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil.
|v2 And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward an hungred.
|v3 And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.
|v4 But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.
|v5 Then the devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple,
|v6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.
|v7 Jesus said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.
|v8 Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them;
|v9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.
|v10 Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.
|v11 Then the devil leaveth him, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto him.
(NewT:Matthew 4:1-11)

|v12 And immediately the Spirit driveth him into the wilderness.
(NewT:Mark 1:12-14)

|v1 And Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness,
|v2 Being forty days tempted of the devil. And in those days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward hungered.

|v3 And the devil said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread.
|v4 And Jesus answered him, saying, It is written, That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.
|v5 And the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, shewed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.
|v6 And the devil said unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them: for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it.
|v7 If thou therefore wilt worship me, all shall be thine. |v8 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.
|v9 And he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence:
|v10 For it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee:
|v11 And in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.
|v12 And Jesus answering said unto him, It is said, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.
|v13 And when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.

(NewT:Luke 4:1-14)

|v15 John bare witness of him, and cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me: for he was before me.
|v16 And of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace.
|v17 For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.
|v18 No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

|v20 And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ.
|v21 And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No.
|v22 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself?
|v23 He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.
|v24 And they which were sent were of the Pharisees.
|v25 And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?
|v26 John answered them, saying, I baptize with water: but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not;
|v27 He it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.
|v28 These things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

|v29 The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.
|v30 This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me.

|v31 And I knew him not: but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water.
|v32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.
|v33 And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.
|v34 And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.

|v35 Again the next day after John stood, and two of his disciples;
|v36 And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God! (NewT:John 1:15-36)

|v6 And John saw and bore record of the fulness of my glory, and the fulness of John's record is hereafter to be revealed.
|v7 And he bore record, saying: I saw his glory, that he was in the beginning, before the world was;
|v8 Therefore, in the beginning the Word was, for he was the Word, even the messenger of salvation--
|v9 The light and the Redeemer of the world; the Spirit of truth, who came into the world, because the world was made by him, and in him was the life of men and the light of men.
|v10 The worlds were made by him; men were made by him; all things were made by him, and through him, and of him.
|v11 And I, John, bear record that I beheld his glory, as the glory of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, even the Spirit of truth, which came and dwelt in the flesh, and dwelt among us.

|v13 And he received not of the fulness at first, but continued from grace to grace, until he received a fulness;
|v14 And thus he was called the Son of God, because he received not of the fulness at the first.
|v15 And I, John, bear record, and lo, the heavens were opened, and the Holy Ghost descended upon him in the form of a dove, and sat upon him, and there came a voice out of heaven saying: This is my beloved Son.
|v16 And I, John, bear record that he received a fulness of the glory of the Father;
|v17 And he received all power, both in heaven and on earth, and the glory of the Father was with him, for he dwelt in him.

|v18 And it shall come to pass, that if you are faithful you shall receive the fulness of the record of John.
|v19 I give unto you these sayings that you may understand and know how to worship, and know what you worship, that you may come unto the Father in my name, and in due time receive of his fulness.
|v20 For if you keep my commandments you shall receive of his fulness, and be glorified in me as I am in the Father; therefore, I say unto you, you shall receive grace for grace.
|v21 And now, verily I say unto you, I was in the beginning with the Father, and am the Firstborn;
|v22 And all those who are begotten through me are partakers of the glory of the same, and are the church of the Firstborn.
|v23 Ye were also in the beginning with the Father; that which is Spirit, even the Spirit of truth;
|v24 And truth is knowledge of things as they are, and as they were, and as they are to come;

|v25 And whatsoever is more or less than this is the spirit of that wicked one who was a liar from the beginning.
|v26 The Spirit of truth is of God. I am the Spirit of truth, and John bore record of me, saying: He received a fulness of truth, yea, even of all truth;
|v27 And no man receiveth a fulness unless he keepeth his commandments.
|v28 He that keepeth his commandments receiveth truth and light, until he is glorified in truth and knoweth all things.
(D&C: Section 93:6-28)

|v41 Now his parents went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the passover.
|v42 And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem after the custom of the feast.
|v43 And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; and Joseph and his mother knew not of it.
|v44 But they, supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's journey; and they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.
|v45 And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him.
|v46 And it came to pass, that after three days they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions.
|v47 And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers.
|v48 And when they saw him, they were amazed: and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.
|v49 And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?
|v50 And they understood not the saying which he spake unto them.
|v51 And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother kept all these sayings in her heart.
|v52 And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man.
(NewT:Luke 2:41-52)

|v1 In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judaea,
|v2 And saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.
|v3 For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.
|v4 And the same John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins; and his meat was locusts and wild honey.
|v5 Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judaea, and all the region round about Jordan,
|v6 And were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.
(NewT:Matthew 3:1-6)

|v1 The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God;
|v2 As it is written in the prophets, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.
|v3 The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.
|v4 John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins.

|v5 And there went out unto him all the land of Judaea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins.
|v6 And John was clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat locusts and wild honey;
|v7 And preached, saying, There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.
|v8 I indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.
(NewT:Mark 1:1-8)

|v1 Now in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judaea, and Herod being tetrarch of Galilee, and his brother Philip tetrarch of Ituraea and of the region of Trachonitis, and Lysanias the tetrarch of Abilene,
|v2 Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, the word of God came unto John the son of Zacharias in the wilderness.
|v3 And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins;
|v4 As it is written in the book of the words of Esaias the prophet, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.
|v5 Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth;
|v6 And all flesh shall see the salvation of God.
(NewT:Luke 3:1-6)

|v13 And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven.

|v15 That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.

|v16 For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.
|v17 For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.
(NewT:John 3:13-17)

|v9 And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.
|v10 And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him:
(NewT:Mark 1:9-11)

|v21 Now when all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened,
|v22 And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.

(NewT:Luke 3:21-22)

|v35 For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in:
|v37 Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink?
|v38 When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?
|v39 Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?
|v40 And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.
(NewT:Matthew 25:35-40)

|v22 After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judaea; and there he tarried with them, and baptized.

|v23 And John also was baptizing in Aenon near to Salim, because there was much water there: and they came, and were baptized.
|v24 For John was not yet cast into prison.

|v25 Then there arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews about purifying.
|v26 And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou barest witness, behold, the same baptizeth, and all men come to him.
|v27 John answered and said, A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven.
|v28 Ye yourselves bear me witness, that I said, I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before him.
|v29 He that hath the bride is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice: this my joy therefore is fulfilled.
|v30 He must increase, but I must decrease.
|v31 He that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth: he that cometh from heaven is above all.
|v32 And what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth; and no man receiveth his testimony.
|v33 He that hath received his testimony hath set to his seal that God is true.
|v34 For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.
|v35 The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.
|v36 He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him.
(NewT:John 3:22-36)

Anointed One.
Jesus is spoken of as the Christ and the Messiah, which means he is the one anointed of the Father to be his personal representative in all things pertaining to the salvation of mankind. The English word Christ is from a Greek word meaning Anointed, and is the equivalent of Messiah, which is from a Hebrew and Aramaic term meaning Anointed. See Ps. 2:2; Isa. 61:1-3; Luke

D&C 132:23-24
But if ye receive me in the world, then shall ye know me, and shall receive your exaltation; that where I am ye shall be also.
This is eternal lives-to know the only wise and true God, and Jesus Christ, whom he hath sent. I am he. Receive ye, therefore, my law.

Types of Christ
Now, nearly every temptation that comes to you and me comes in one of those forms. Classify them, and you will find that under one of those three nearly every given temptation that makes you and me spotted, ever so little maybe, comes to us as (1) a temptation of the appetite; (2) yielding to the pride and fashion and vanity of thise alienated from the things of God; or (3) a gratifying of the passion, or a desir for the riches of the world, or power among men. (David O. McKay, Conference Report, Oct. 1911, p. 59.)

Saints Saved at Second Coming
1 Thessalonians 4:13-18
Salvation is given the saints--all of them, both the living and the dead--at the Second Coming. The living are caught up to meet their returing Lord, and with him they shall return to live on this earth, which will then be changed and received its paradisical glory. (Tenth Article of Faith.) When the living arrive at the age of a tree, 100 years, they shall be changed from mortality to immortality in the twinkling of an eye and shall then reign as kings and priests in exalted glory. (D. & C. 101:23-31.) [This means that they and their spouces have had all the ordiances available in the temple of the most high and can therefore be changed at any time as a twinkling of an eye. D&C 132:7.]
Also at our Lord's return, the righteous dead shall come forth from their graves with celestial bodies to meet their God. They, then, as kings and priests, [Meaning they are such before the resurrection, this ordiance performed either when they are alive or by proxie for them before they are raised.] (Rev. 5:10.) Thus the saints, whether they sleep in the Lord or live in the flesh until he comes, shall inherit glory and honor and salvation at his Coming. [Their Lamps are filled and one of the wise virgins and the have the Fulness of the Priesthood-all the ordiances of the New and Everlasting covenant of Marriage.] (2 Ne. 9:15-16.)

16-17.
"A trump shall sound both long and loud, even as upon Mount Sinai, and all the earth shall quake, and they shall come forth -- yea, even the dead which died in me, to receive a crown of righteousness, and be clothed upon , even as I am, to be with me, that we may be one." (D. & C. 29:13.) "And the saints that are upon the earth, who are alive, shall be quickened and be cautht up to meet him. And they who have slept in their graves shall come forth, for their graves shall be opened; and they also shall be caught up to meet him in the midst of the pillar of heaven--They are Christ's [A Christ is one who is Annointed with the fulness of the Priesthood.] The first fruits, they who shall descend with him first, and they who are on the earth and in their graves, who are first caught up to meet him; and all this by the voice of the sounding of the trump of the angel of God." (D. & C. 88:96-98.) (DNTC 3, p.

Gospel Mysteries

"The priesthood is an everlasting principle, and exited with God form eternity, and will to eternity, without beginning of days or end of years.: (Teachings, p. 157.) Christ and others held the priesthood in pre-existence. Andam, the Prophet says, "obtained in in the creation, before the world was formed." (Teachings, p. 157.)
but as pertaining to his mortal ministry, Christ our Lord received the Melchizedek Priesthood here on earth, and was ordained to the office of a high priest therein, thus setting an example for others and being in all things the Prototype of salvation. With reference to the mortal receipt of the holy order which is his, and which he had afore used to create this and an infinite number of other worlds, and which he had in fact given to Melchizedek in the first instance, the Prophet says: "If a man gets a fulness of the priesthood of God he has to get it in the same way that Jesus Christ obtainted it, and that was by keeping all the commandments and obeying all the ordinances of the house of the Lord." (Teachings, p. 308.) [Christ had to be Married and sealed up to eternal life] (DNTC 3, p. 156-157.)

|v21 The Son of man indeed goeth, as it is written of him: but woe to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! good were it for that man if he had never been born.
(NewT:Mark 14:21)

|v41 And he cometh the third time, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: it is enough, the hour is come; behold, the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.
(NewT:Mark 14:41)

|v61 But he held his peace, and answered nothing. Again the high priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed?
(NewT:Mark 14:61)

|v62 And Jesus said, I am: and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.
(NewT:Mark 14:62)

|v39 And when the centurion, which stood over against him, saw that he so cried out, and gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was the Son of God.

(NewT:Mark 15:39)

|v35 And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.
(NewT:Luke 1:35)

|v2 Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, the word of God came unto John the son of Zacharias in the wilderness.
(NewT:Luke 3:2)

|v3 And the devil said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread.
(NewT:Luke 4:3)

|v9 And he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence:
(NewT:Luke 4:9)

|v41 And devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ the Son of God. And he rebuking them suffered them not to speak: for they knew that he was Christ.
(NewT:Luke 4:41)

|v24 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power upon earth to forgive sins, (he said unto the sick of the palsy,) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy couch, and go into thine house.
(NewT:Luke 5:24)

|v5 And he said unto them, That the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.
(NewT:Luke 6:5)

|v22 Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake. (NewT:Luke 6:22)

|v34 The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!
(NewT:Luke 7:34)

|v22 Saying, The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be slain, and be raised the third day.
(NewT:Luke 9:22)

|v26 For whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels.
(NewT:Luke 9:26)

|v44 Let these sayings sink down into your ears: for the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men.
(NewT:Luke 9:44)

|v56 For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village.
(NewT:Luke 9:56)

|v58 And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.
(NewT:Luke 9:58)

|c10|v0 Jesus calls, empowers, and instructs the seventy--They preach and heal--Those who receive his disciples receive Christ--The Father is revealed by the Son--Jesus gives the parable of the good Samaritan.
(NewT:Luke 10:Heading)

|v22 All things are delivered to me of my Father: and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him.
(NewT:Luke 10:22)

|v30 For as Jonas was a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall also the Son of man be to this generation.
(NewT:Luke 11:30)

|v8 Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God: (NewT:Luke 12:8)

|v10 And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost it shall not be forgiven.
(NewT:Luke 12:10)

|v40 Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not. (NewT:Luke 12:40)

|v22 And he said unto the disciples, The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of man, and ye shall not see it.
(NewT:Luke 17:22)

|v24 For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of man be in his day.
(NewT:Luke 17:24)

|v26 And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man.
(NewT:Luke 17:26)

|v30 Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed.
(NewT:Luke 17:30)

|v8 I tell you that he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?
(NewT:Luke 18:8)

|v31 Then he took unto him the twelve, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man shall be accomplished.
(NewT:Luke 18:31)

|v10 For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.
(NewT:Luke 19:10)

|v27 And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory.
(NewT:Luke 21:27)

|v36 Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man.
(NewT:Luke 21:36)

|v22 And truly the Son of man goeth, as it was determined: but woe unto that man by whom he is betrayed!
(NewT:Luke 22:22)

|v48 But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?
(NewT:Luke 22:48)

|v69 Hereafter shall the Son of man sit on the right hand of the power of God.
(NewT:Luke 22:69)
|v70 Then said they all, Art thou then the Son of God? And he said unto them, Ye say that I am.
(NewT:Luke 22:70)

|v7 Saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again.
(NewT:Luke 24:7)

|v34 And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.
(NewT:John 1:34)

|v49 Nathanael answered and saith unto him, Rabbi, thou art the Son of God; thou art the King of Israel.
(NewT:John 1:49)

|v51 And he saith unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.
(NewT:John 1:51)

|c3|v0 Jesus tells Nicodemus men must be born again--God so loved the world that the Only Begotten Son came to save men--John the Baptist testifies: He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life.
(NewT:John 3:Heading)

|v13 And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven.
(NewT:John 3:13)

|v14 And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up:
(NewT:John 3:14)

|v17 For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.
(NewT:John 3:17)

|v35 The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.
(NewT:John 3:35)

|v36 He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him.
(NewT:John 3:36)

|c5|v0 Jesus heals an invalid on the Sabbath--Why men must honor the Son--Jesus promises to take gospel to the dead--Man is resurrected, judged, assigned his glory by the Son--Jesus obeys divine law of witnesses.
(NewT:John 5:Heading)

|v19 Then answered Jesus and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.
(NewT:John 5:19)

|v20 For the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself doeth: and he will shew him greater works than these, that ye may marvel.
(NewT:John 5:20)

|v21 For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will.
(NewT:John 5:21)

|v22 For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son:
(NewT:John 5:22)

|v23 That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Son honoureth not the Father which hath sent him.
(NewT:John 5:23)

|v25 Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live.
(NewT:John 5:25)
|v26 For as the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself;
(NewT:John 5:26)

|v27 And hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man.
(NewT:John 5:27)

|v27 Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed.
(NewT:John 6:27)

|v40 And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.
(NewT:John 6:40)

|v53 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.
(NewT:John 6:53)

|v62 What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?
(NewT:John 6:62)

|v69 And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God.
(NewT:John 6:69)

|v28 Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lifted up the Son of man, then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things.
(NewT:John 8:28)

|v35 And the servant abideth not in the house for ever: but the Son abideth ever.
(NewT:John 8:35)

|v36 If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.
(NewT:John 8:36)

|v35 Jesus heard that they had cast him out; and when he had found him, he said unto him, Dost thou believe on the Son of God?
(NewT:John 9:35)

|c10|v0 Jesus is the good Shepherd--He gained power over death from his Father--He promises to visit his other sheep--He proclaims: 'I am the Son of God.'
(NewT:John 10:Heading)

|v36 Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God?
(NewT:John 10:36)

|v4 When Jesus heard that, he said, This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.
(NewT:John 11:4)

|v27 She saith unto him, Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world.
(NewT:John 11:27)

|v23 And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified.
(NewT:John 12:23)

|v34 The people answered him, We have heard out of the law that Christ abideth for ever: and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up? who is this Son of man?
(NewT:John 12:34)

|v31 Therefore, when he was gone out, Jesus said, Now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in him.
(NewT:John 13:31)

|v13 And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son.
(NewT:John 14:13)
|v7 The Jews answered him, We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God.
(NewT:John 19:7)

|v31 But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name.
(NewT:John 20:31)

|c21|v0 Jesus appears to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias--He saith: 'Feed my sheep'--He foretells Peter's martyrdom and John's translation--'Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God.'
(NewT:John 21:Heading)

|v56 And said, Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God.
(NewT:Acts 7:56)

|v37 And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.
(NewT:Acts 8:37)

|v20 And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God.
(NewT:Acts 9:20)

|v28 And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.
(NewT:1 Corinthians 15:28)

|v19 For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me and Silvanus and Timotheus, was not yea and nay, but in him was yea.
(NewT:2 Corinthians 1:19)

|v20 I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.
(NewT:Galatians 2:20)

|c1|v0 The Son is in the express image of the person of the Father--Christ is the Only Begotten Son and thus above the angels.
(NewT:Hebrews 1:Heading)

|v8 But unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom.
(NewT:Hebrews 1:8)

|c3|v0 Christ is the Apostle and High Priest of our profession--Jesus, being the Son is more than a servant--Now is the time and the day of our salvation.
(NewT:Hebrews 3:Heading)

|v14 Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession.
(NewT:Hebrews 4:14)

|v6 If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame.
(NewT:Hebrews 6:6)

|v3 Without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually.

(NewT:Hebrews 7:3)

|v28 For the law maketh men high priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is consecrated for evermore.
(NewT:Hebrews 7:28)

|v29 Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?
(NewT:Hebrews 10:29)

|v22 Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son.
(NewT:1 John 2:22)

|v23 Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: (but) he that acknowledgeth the Son hath the Father also.
(NewT:1 John 2:23)

|v24 Let that therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father.
(NewT:1 John 2:24)

|v8 He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.
(NewT:1 John 3:8)

|v9 In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him.
(NewT:1 John 4:9)

|v14 And we have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.
(NewT:1 John 4:14)
|v15 Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God.
(NewT:1 John 4:15)

|v5 Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?
(NewT:1 John 5:5)

|v10 He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son.
(NewT:1 John 5:10)

|v12 He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.
(NewT:1 John 5:12)

|v13 These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.

(NewT:1 John 5:13)

|v20 And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life.
(NewT:1 John 5:20)

|v3 Grace be with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, in truth and love.
(NewT:2 John 1:3)

|v9 Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.
(NewT:2 John 1:9)

|v13 And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a garment down to the foot, and girt about the paps with a golden girdle.
(NewT:Revelation 1:13)

|v18 And unto the angel of the church in Thyatira write; These things saith the Son of God, who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like fine brass;
(NewT:Revelation 2:18)

|v14 And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.
(NewT:Revelation 14:14)

|v5 In due course the plates were delivered to Joseph Smith, who translated them by the gift and power of God. The record is now published in many languages as a new and additional witness that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God and that all who will come unto him and obey the laws and ordinances of his gospel may be saved.
(BofM:Introduction 2:5)

|v1 Be it known unto all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people, unto whom this work shall come: That we, through the grace of God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, have seen the plates which contain this record, which is a record of the people of Nephi, and also of the Lamanites, their brethren, and also of the people of Jared, who came from the tower of which hath been spoken. And we also know that they have been translated by the gift and power of God, for his voice hath declared it unto us; wherefore we know of a surety that the work is true. And we also testify that we have seen the engravings which are upon the plates; and they have been shown unto us by the power of God, and not of man. And we declare with words of soberness, that an angel of God came down from heaven, and he brought and laid before our eyes, that we beheld and saw the plates, and the engravings thereon; and we know that it is by the grace of God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, that we beheld and bear record that these things are true. And it is marvelous in our eyes. Nevertheless, the voice of the Lord commanded us that we should bear record of it; wherefore, to be obedient unto the commandments of God, we bear testimony of these things. And we know that if we are faithful in Christ, we shall rid our garments of the blood of all men, and be found spotless before the judgment-seat of Christ, and shall dwell with him eternally in the heavens. And the honor be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost, which is one God. Amen.

THE FIVE WOUNDS OF CHRIST

1. A Great Mystery, p. 267; Unpub Mss; abt 1970; Eugene Seaich

Based, however, on passages such as Gal. 6:17 ("From henceforth let no man trouble me, for I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus"), and 2 Cor. 4:10 ("Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus"), the symbol of the Cross was changed in certain traditions to the stigmata of the nails in the palms of the hands and the feet. Thus we encounter throughout medieval art and mysticism the signs of the "Five Sacred Wounds" in the actual flesh of believers....This tradition obviously goes back to the ancient belief that the initiate takes the marks of Christ's suffering upon himself. (Gal. 2:20: "I am crucified with Christ!").

2. The Message of The Joseph Smith Papyri, p. 71; 1975 ed.; Hugh Nibley.

G. The ship having safely passed, the lion, symbol of bloody sacrifice, renders the great serpent incapacitated by inflicting upon him five wounds.

3. The Ensign/November 1981, p. 9; Oct Gen Conf; Elder Neal A. Maxwell.

Should we seek to counsel Him in courage? Should we rush forth eagerly to show Him our mortal medals---our scratches and bruises---He who bears His five special wounds?
Does not His "word of power" actually bring entire new worlds into being and cause others to pass away?

FILE NAME: CHRISTS

|v133 Art thou a brother or brethren? I salute you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, in token or remembrance of the everlasting covenant, in which covenant I receive you to fellowship, in a determination that is fixed, immovable, and unchangeable, to be your friend and brother through the grace of God in the bonds of love, to walk in all the commandments of God blameless, in thanksgiving, forever and ever. Amen.
(D&C: Section 88:133)

|v1 Then Jesus six days before the passover came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead.
|v2 There they made him a supper; and Martha served: but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him.

|v3 Then took Mary a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.
|v4 Then saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should betray him,
|v5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?
|v6 This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein.
|v7 Then said Jesus, Let her alone: against the day of my burying hath she kept this.
|v8 For the poor always ye have with you; but me ye have not always.
(NewT:John 12:1-8)

|v6 Now when Jesus was in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper,
|v7 There came unto him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he sat at meat.
|v8 But when his disciples saw it, they had indignation, saying, To what purpose is this waste?
|v9 For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor.
|v10 When Jesus understood it, he said unto them, Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon me.
|v11 For ye have the poor always with you; but me ye have not always.
|v12 For in that she hath poured this ointment on my body, she did it for my burial.
(NewT:Matthew 26:6-13)

|v3 And being in Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard very precious; and she brake the box, and poured it on his head.
|v4 And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made?
|v5 For it might have been sold for more than three hundred pence, and have been given to the poor. And they murmured against her.
|v6 And Jesus said, Let her alone; why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me.
|v7 For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good: but me ye have not always.
|v8 She hath done what she could: she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying.
|v9 Verily I say unto you, Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her.
(NewT:Mark 14:3-9)

|v1 Then Jesus six days before the passover came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead.
|v2 There they made him a supper; and Martha served: but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him.

|v6 This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein.
|v7 Then said Jesus, Let her alone: against the day of my burying hath she kept this.
|v8 For the poor always ye have with you; but me ye have not always.
(NewT:John 12:1-8)

|v37 And, behold, a woman in the city, which was a sinner, when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster box of ointment,
|v38 And stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.
|v39 Now when the Pharisee which had bidden him saw it, he spake within himself, saying, This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him: for she is a sinner. |v40 And Jesus answering said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.
|v41 There was a certain creditor which had two debtors: the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty.
|v42 And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love him most?
|v43 Simon answered and said, I suppose that he, to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.
|v44 And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head.
|v45 Thou gavest me no kiss: but this woman since the time I came in hath not ceased to kiss my feet.
|v46 My head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.
|v47 Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.
|v48 And he said unto her, Thy sins are forgiven.
|v49 And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also?
|v50 And he said to the woman, Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace.
(NewT:Luke 7:37-50)

|v40 And Jesus answering said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.
|v41 There was a certain creditor which had two debtors: the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty.

|v42 And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love him most?
|v43 Simon answered and said, I suppose that he, to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.
|v44 And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet: but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head.
|v45 Thou gavest me no kiss: but this woman since the time I came in hath not ceased to kiss my feet.
|v46 My head with oil thou didst not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.
|v47 Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.
|v48 And he said unto her, Thy sins are forgiven.
|v49 And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also?
|v50 And he said to the woman, Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace.
(NewT:Luke 7:37-50)

|v9 Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils.
|v10 And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept.
(NewT:Mark 16:9-11)

|v12 And seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.
|v13 And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

|v14 And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.
|v15 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.
|v16 Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.
|v17 Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God.
|v18 Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.
(NewT:John 20:11-18)

|v59 And it came to pass, that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father.
|v60 And his mother answered and said, Not so; but he shall be called John.
|v61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.
|v62 And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called.
|v63 And he asked for a writing table, and wrote, saying, His name is John.

And they marvelled all.
|v64 And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God.
|v65 And fear came on all that dwelt round about them: and all these sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill country of Judaea.
|v66 And all they that heard them laid them up in their hearts, saying, What manner of child shall this be! And the hand of the Lord was with him.
|v67 And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,
|v68 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people,
|v69 And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David;
|v70 As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began:
|v71 That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us;
|v72 To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant;
|v73 The oath which he sware to our father Abraham,
|v74 That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear,
|v75 In holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.
|v76 And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways;
|v77 To give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins,
|v78 Through the tender mercy of our God; whereby the dayspring from on high hath visited us,
|v79 To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.
(NewT:Luke 1:59-79)

|v7 And also John the son of Zacharias, which Zacharias he (Elias) visited and gave promise that he should have a son, and his name should be John, and he should be filled with the spirit of Elias;
(D&C: Section 27:7)

|v27 Which gospel is the gospel of repentance and of baptism, and the remission of sins, and the law of carnal commandments, which the Lord in his wrath caused to continue with the house of Aaron among the children of Israel until John, whom God raised up, being filled with the Holy Ghost from his mother's womb.
|v28 For he was baptized while he was yet in his childhood, and was ordained by the angel of God at the time he was eight days old unto this power, to overthrow the kingdom of the Jews, and to make straight the way of the Lord before the face of his people, to prepare them for the coming of the Lord, in whose hand is given all power.
(D&C: Section 84:27-28)

|v57 Now Elisabeth's full time came that she should be delivered; and she brought forth a son.
|v58 And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had shewed great mercy upon her; and they rejoiced with her.
|v59 And it came to pass, that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father.

|v60 And his mother answered and said, Not so; but he shall be called John.
|v61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.
|v62 And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called.
|v63 And he asked for a writing table, and wrote, saying, His name is John. And they marvelled all.
|v64 And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God.
|v65 And fear came on all that dwelt round about them: and all these sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill country of Judaea.
|v66 And all they that heard them laid them up in their hearts, saying, What manner of child shall this be! And the hand of the Lord was with him.
|v67 And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,
|v68 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people,
|v69 And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David;
|v70 As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began:
|v71 That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us;
|v72 To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant;
|v73 The oath which he sware to our father Abraham,
|v74 That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve him without fear,
|v75 In holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.
|v76 And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways;
|v77 To give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins,
|v78 Through the tender mercy of our God; whereby the dayspring from on high hath visited us,
|v79 To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace. |v80 And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel.
(NewT:Luke 1:57-80)

|v6 And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.
|v7 And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.
|v8 And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.
|v9 And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.
|v10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.
|v11 For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.
|v12 And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.
|v13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

|v14 Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.
|v15 And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.
|v16 And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.
|v17 And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.
|v18 And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.
|v19 But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.
|v20 And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.
|v21 And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called JESUS, which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb.
(NewT:Luke 2:6-21)

|v19 For according to the words of the prophets, the Messiah cometh in six hundred years from the time that my father left Jerusalem; and according to the words of the prophets, and also the word of the angel of God, his name shall be Jesus Christ, the Son of God.
(BofM:2 Nephi 25:19)

|v8 And he shall be called Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Father of heaven and earth, the Creator of all things from the beginning; and his mother shall be called Mary.
(BofM:Mosiah 3:8)

|v12 And also that ye might know of the coming of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Father of heaven and of earth, the Creator of all things from the beginning; and that ye might know of the signs of his coming, to the intent that ye might believe on his name.
(BofM:Helaman 14:12)

|v52 And he also said unto him: If thou wilt turn unto me, and hearken unto my voice, and believe, and repent of all thy transgressions, and be baptized, even in water, in the name of mine Only Begotten Son, who is full of grace and truth, which is Jesus Christ, the only name which shall be given under heaven, whereby salvation shall come unto the children of men, ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, asking all things in his name, and whatsoever ye shall ask, it shall be given you.
(PoGP:Moses 6:52)

|v22 And when the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord;
|v23 (As it is written in the law of the Lord, Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord;)
|v24 And to offer a sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord, A pair of turtledoves, or two young pigeons.
|v25 And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Ghost was upon him.

|v26 And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ.
|v27 And he came by the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law,
|v28 Then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said,
|v29 Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word:
|v30 For mine eyes have seen thy salvation,
|v31 Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people;
|v32 A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.
|v33 And Joseph and his mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of him.
|v34 And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against;
|v35 (Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also,) that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed.
|v36 And there was one Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Aser: she was of a great age, and had lived with an husband seven years from her virginity;
|v37 And she was a widow of about fourscore and four years, which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day.
|v38 And she coming in that instant gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem.
|v39 And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth.
|v40 And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him.
(NewT:Luke 2:22-40)

|v1 Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil.
|v2 And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward an hungred.
|v3 And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.
|v4 But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.
|v5 Then the devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple,
|v6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.
|v7 Jesus said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.
|v8 Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them;
|v9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.
|v10 Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.
|v11 Then the devil leaveth him, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto him.
(NewT:Matthew 4:1-11)

|v9 And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.
|v11 And there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. (NewT:Mark 1:9-11)

|v21 But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God.

|v22 After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judaea; and there he tarried with them, and baptized.
(NewT:John 3:21-22)

|v21 Now when all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened,
|v22 And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.
(NewT:Luke 3:21-22)

|v32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.
|v33 And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.
|v34 And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.
(NewT:John 1:32-34)

|v1 Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil.
|v2 And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward an hungred.
|v3 And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.
|v4 But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.
|v5 Then the devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple,
|v6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.
|v7 Jesus said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.
|v8 Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them;
|v9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.
|v10 Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve. |v11 Then the devil leaveth him, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto him.
(NewT:Matthew 4:1-11)

|v12 And immediately the Spirit driveth him into the wilderness.
|v13 And he was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan; and was with the wild beasts; and the angels ministered unto him.
|v14 Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God,
(NewT:Mark 1:12-14)

|v1 And Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness,
|v2 Being forty days tempted of the devil. And in those days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward hungered.
|v3 And the devil said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread.
|v4 And Jesus answered him, saying, It is written, That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.
|v5 And the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, shewed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.
|v6 And the devil said unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them: for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it.
|v7 If thou therefore wilt worship me, all shall be thine.
|v8 And Jesus answered and said unto him, Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.
|v9 And he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence:
|v10 For it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee:
|v11 And in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.
|v12 And Jesus answering said unto him, It is said, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.
|v13 And when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.

|v14 And Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee: and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about.
(NewT:Luke 4:1-14)

|v15 John bare witness of him, and cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me: for he was before me. |v16 And of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace.
|v17 For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.
|v18 No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

|v20 And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ.
|v21 And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No.
|v22 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself?
|v23 He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.

|v24 And they which were sent were of the Pharisees.
|v25 And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?
|v26 John answered them, saying, I baptize with water: but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not;
|v27 He it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.
|v28 These things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

|v29 The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.
|v30 This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me.
|v31 And I knew him not: but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water.
|v32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him.
|v33 And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.
|v34 And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.

|v35 Again the next day after John stood, and two of his disciples;
|v36 And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God! (NewT:John 1:15-36)

|v6 And John saw and bore record of the fulness of my glory, and the fulness of John's record is hereafter to be revealed.
|v7 And he bore record, saying: I saw his glory, that he was in the beginning, before the world was;
|v8 Therefore, in the beginning the Word was, for he was the Word, even the messenger of salvation--
|v9 The light and the Redeemer of the world; the Spirit of truth, who came into the world, because the world was made by him, and in him was the life of men and the light of men.
|v10 The worlds were made by him; men were made by him; all things were made by him, and through him, and of him.
|v11 And I, John, bear record that I beheld his glory, as the glory of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth, even the Spirit of truth, which came and dwelt in the flesh, and dwelt among us.

|v12 And I, John, saw that he received not of the fulness at the first, but received grace for grace;
|v13 And he received not of the fulness at first, but continued from grace to grace, until he received a fulness;
|v14 And thus he was called the Son of God, because he received not of the fulness at the first.
|v15 And I, John, bear record, and lo, the heavens were opened, and the Holy Ghost descended upon him in the form of a dove, and sat upon him, and there came a voice out of heaven saying: This is my beloved Son.
|v16 And I, John, bear record that he received a fulness of the glory of the Father;
|v17 And he received all power, both in heaven and on earth, and the glory of the Father was with him, for he dwelt in him.

|v18 And it shall come to pass, that if you are faithful you shall receive the fulness of the record of John.

|v19 I give unto you these sayings that you may understand and know how to worship, and know what you worship, that you may come unto the Father in my name, and in due time receive of his fulness.
|v20 For if you keep my commandments you shall receive of his fulness, and be glorified in me as I am in the Father; therefore, I say unto you, you shall receive grace for grace.

|v21 And now, verily I say unto you, I was in the beginning with the Father, and am the Firstborn;
|v22 And all those who are begotten through me are partakers of the glory of the same, and are the church of the Firstborn.
|v23 Ye were also in the beginning with the Father; that which is Spirit, even the Spirit of truth;
|v24 And truth is knowledge of things as they are, and as they were, and as they are to come;
|v25 And whatsoever is more or less than this is the spirit of that wicked one who was a liar from the beginning.
|v26 The Spirit of truth is of God. I am the Spirit of truth, and John bore record of me, saying: He received a fulness of truth, yea, even of all truth;
|v27 And no man receiveth a fulness unless he keepeth his commandments.
|v28 He that keepeth his commandments receiveth truth and light, until he is glorified in truth and knoweth all things.
(D&C: Section 93:6-28)

|v41 Now his parents went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the passover.
|v42 And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem after the custom of the feast.
|v43 And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; and Joseph and his mother knew not of it.
|v44 But they, supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's journey; and they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance.
|v45 And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him.
|v46 And it came to pass, that after three days they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions.
|v47 And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers.
|v48 And when they saw him, they were amazed: and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.
|v49 And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?
|v50 And they understood not the saying which he spake unto them.
|v51 And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother kept all these sayings in her heart.
|v52 And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man.
(NewT:Luke 2:41-52)

|v1 In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judaea,
|v2 And saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.
|v3 For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

|v4 And the same John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins; and his meat was locusts and wild honey.
|v5 Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judaea, and all the region round about Jordan,
|v6 And were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.
(NewT:Matthew 3:1-6)

|v1 The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God;
|v2 As it is written in the prophets, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. |v3 The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.
|v4 John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins.
|v5 And there went out unto him all the land of Judaea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins.
|v6 And John was clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat locusts and wild honey;
|v7 And preached, saying, There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.
|v8 I indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost.
(NewT:Mark 1:1-8)

|v1 Now in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judaea, and Herod being tetrarch of Galilee, and his brother Philip tetrarch of Ituraea and of the region of Trachonitis, and Lysanias the tetrarch of Abilene,
|v2 Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, the word of God came unto John the son of Zacharias in the wilderness.
|v3 And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins;
|v4 As it is written in the book of the words of Esaias the prophet, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.
|v5 Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth;
|v6 And all flesh shall see the salvation of God.
(NewT:Luke 3:1-6)

|v13 And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven.

|v14 And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up:
|v15 That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.

|v16 For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.
|v17 For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.
(NewT:John 3:13-17)

|v9 And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

|v10 And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him:
|v11 And there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.
(NewT:Mark 1:9-11)

|v21 Now when all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened,
|v22 And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him, and a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son; in thee I am well pleased.
(NewT:Luke 3:21-22)

|v35 For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in:
|v37 Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink?
|v38 When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?
|v39 Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?
|v40 And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.
(NewT:Matthew 25:35-40)

|v22 After these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judaea; and there he tarried with them, and baptized.

|v23 And John also was baptizing in Aenon near to Salim, because there was much water there: and they came, and were baptized.
|v24 For John was not yet cast into prison.

|v25 Then there arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews about purifying.
|v26 And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou barest witness, behold, the same baptizeth, and all men come to him.
|v27 John answered and said, A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven.
|v28 Ye yourselves bear me witness, that I said, I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before him.
|v29 He that hath the bride is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice: this my joy therefore is fulfilled.
|v30 He must increase, but I must decrease.
|v31 He that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth: he that cometh from heaven is above all.
|v32 And what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth; and no man receiveth his testimony.
|v33 He that hath received his testimony hath set to his seal that God is true.
|v34 For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.

|v35 The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

FILE:#59 CHURCH OF THE FIRSTBORN

Church of Enoch
Their callings and elections were made sure, and they were all assured of membership in the Church of the Firstborn and of an inheritance of exaltation in the eternal worlds. Those so favored were, of course, with Christ in his resurrection. (D. & C. 133:54-56.)

Church of the Firstborn:
Members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who so devote themselves to righteousness that they receive the higher ordiances of exaltation [namily all those ordiances and sealings contained in the New and everlasting covenant: We will use the dead for example: 1. washings and anointings, 2. the endowment, 3. Celestial marriage 4. The sealing of children to parents, 5. The washing of feet and being pronounced clean every wit, 6. kings and priests, queens and priestesses] become members of the Church of the firstborn. Baptism is the gate to ... [Salvation], but celestial marriage is the gate to [exaltation or] the Church of the Firstborn, the inner circle of faithful saints who are heirs of exaltation and the fulness of the Father's kingdom. (D. & C. 76:54, 67, 71, 94, 102; 77:11; 78:21; 88:1-5; Heb. 12:23.) The Church of the Firstborn is made up of the [Married Sons and Daughters] of God, those who have been adopted into the family of the Lord, those who are destined to be joint-heirs with Christ in receiving all that the Father hath. [This blessing is expressed in the New and everlasting Covenant of Celestial Marriage and therefore it is a Joint Blessing one that single people don't have..., The Angles in heaven are not members of this Church... D&C 132:19 This might nought be true I will have to study this out more....] "If you keep my commandments you shall receive of his fulness, and be glorified in me as I am in the Father; ...And all those who are begotten through me are partakers of the glory of the same, and are the Church of the Firstborn." (D. & C. 93:20-22; Doctrines of Salvation, vol, 2. pp. 9, 41-43.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 139-140.)

Doctrine of the Resurrection
D&C 132:7..

8th time is after the 7000 years and Christ presents us to the father this is the 8th time....

Cleanliness
Thus through thier faithfulness the elders have power to become clean from the blood and sins of this generation. (D. & C. 88:74-75, 85; 109:42; 112:33; 135:5; Ether 12:37.) (Mormon Doctrine, p, 147.)

Second Comforter

Crowns
Those who gain exaltation in the highest heaven of the celestial world [D&C

Gospel Mysteries

131; 132] shall wear crowns. Perhaps literal crowns may be worn on occasion-emblematic of their victory over the world and signifying that they rule and reign as kings and queens in the eternal house of Israel. But at all times they will be "crowned with honor, and glory, and immortality, and eternal life." (D. & C. 75:5.)
In the gospel sense, a crown is the sign and symbol of eternal exaltation and dominion, of godhood in the kingdom of God. Our Lord has been seen in vision wearing "a golden crown" (Rev. 14:14; 6:2; 19:12), and those surrounding the throne of Deity have been seen similarly identified. (Rev. 4:4, 10.) Paul speaks of such persons as having "an incorruptible" crown (1 Cor. 9:25) and as inheriting "a crown of righteousness" (2 Tim. 4:8); James says they "shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him" (Jas. 1:12); John records a similar affirmation (Rev. 2:10); and Peter speakes of receiving "a crown of glory that fadeth not away." (1 Pet. 5:4.) The crowns so spoken of are crowns of eternal life (D. & C. 66:12), of eternal life (D. & C. 66:12), of eternal lives (D. & C. 132:55), of celestial glory. (D. & C. 101:65.)
By keeping the commandments and enduring in righteousness to the end the saints overcome the world and gain crowns of glory in eternity. Hence the counsel: "Hold fast that which thouf hast, that no man take thy crown." (Rev. 3:11.) (Mormon Doctrine, p 173-174.)

Daughters of God
All women are the daughters of God because of their pre-existent birth as female spirits. However, the designation daughters of God, as used in the revelations, has a far more pointed meaning than this. Just as men who pursue a steadfast course toward exaltation become the sons of God while in this life, so women who walk hand-in-hand in obedience with them become the daughters of God. (D. & C. 25:1; 76:24; Mosiah 5:7.)
The temple ordiances, including celestial marriage, precede attainment of that membership in the household of God which makes one a daughter. Those who are adopted as daughters in this life will, if they continue faithful, gain exaltation in the world to come. (Doctrines fo Salvation, vol. 2, pp. 64-65) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 180.)

Death
...durring the millennial era, death and the resurrection shall take place instantaneously. They shall be cahnged from mortality to immortality in the twinkling of an eye, the spirit never having occasion to separate from the body, and in their cases this change is called death. (D. & C. 63:49-52; 3 Ne. 28.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 185.)
[How is this possile? They have all the ordiances of the gospel. D&C 132:7.]

How might we know God D&C 132:24
Dreams
An inspired dream is a vision given to a person while he sleeps. "Behold, I have dreamed a dream; or, in other words, I have seen a vision," Lehi said. (1 Ne. 8:2.) All inspired dreams are visions, but all visions are not dreams. Visions are received in hours of wakefulness or of sleep and in some cases when the recipient has passed into a trance; it is only when the vision occures during sleep that it is termed a dream. (Isa. 29:17; Dan. 2; 7; 1 Ne. 1:16; Alma 30:28.)
As with other visions, inspired dreams foretell future events (Gen. 28:10-22; 31:24; 1 Kings 3:5; 1 Ne. 2:1-2; 3:2); angels appear and minister to faithful persons in their dreams (Gen. 31:11; Matt. 1:20; 2:13, 19); prophetic warnings are given by this means (Ether 9:3); and symbolic representations portrayed in dreams teach marvelous truths. (1 Ne. 8; 9; 1; 15:21.) Inspired dreams are th fruit and faith; they are not given to apostate peoples. (1 Sam. 28:6, 15.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 208.)

The greatest blessings are reserved for those who obtain "the fulness of the priesthood," meaning the fulness of the blessings of the priesthood. These blessings are found only in the temples of God. (D. & C. 124:28, 34, 42; 127:8.) "There are certain key words and signs belonging to the priesthood which must be observed in order to obtain the blessing." (Teachings, p. 199.) Theses, of course, are revealed only in the temples. "Washings, anointings, endowments, and the communications of keys," the prophet says, are essential to enable one "to secure the fulness of those blessings which have been prepared for the Church of the Firstborn, and come up and abide in the presence of Elohim in the eternal worlds." (Teachings, p. 237.) Celestial marriage itself is an "order of the priesthood" without which no one can gain the fulness of glory in the eternal worlds. (D. & C. 131:1-4; 132.) Anciently the elders of Israel who married out of the temple, were said to "have defiled the priesthood, and the covenant of the priesthood." (Neh. 13:25-30.) "Those holding the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood are kings and priests of the most High God, holding the keys of power and blessing." (Teachings, p. 322.) "If a man gets a fulness of the priesthood of God, he has to get it in the same way that Jesus Christ obtained it, and that was by keeping all the commandments and obeying all the ordiances of the house of the Lord.... All men who become heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ will have to receive the fulness of the ordiances of his kingdom; and those who will not receive all the ordiances will come short of the fulness of that glory, if they do not lose the whole." (Teachings, pp. 308-309.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 474-482.)

"And thou hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." (Rev. 5:10; 20:4.)

One Hundred Forty-Four Thousand

At his Second Coming, "the Lamb shall stand upon Mount Zion, and with him a hundred and fouty-four thousand, having his Father's name written on theri foreheads." (D. & C. 133:18; Rev 14:1-5.) These 144,000 are Gods, as the name of their forheads specifies; their callings and elections have been made sure; they are exalted personages; they are "redeemed from among men,... And in their mouth was found no guile: for they were without fault before the throne of Gos." (Rev. 14:4-5.) They have attained perfection.

These brethren, 12,000 from each of the tribes of Israel--excepting for some unspecified reason the tribe of Dan (Rev. 7:2-8)--"are high priests, ordained unto the holy order of God, to adminimster the everlasting gospel; for they are they who are ordained out of every nation, kindred, toungue, and people, by the angels (Peter, James, and John; which keys now reside in the first Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints) to whom is given power over the nations of the earth, to bring as many as will come to the church of the Firstborn." [How do you become a member of any Church in the Kingdom of God? By Ordiance]. (D. & C. 77:9-11.) They are part of "a great multitude, which whom shall have membership in the Church of the Firstborn and therefore be exalted beings [Members of this Church are exalted beings]. (Rev. 7:9-17; Heb. 12:22-24.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 546.)

Gospel Mysteries

Joseph Fielding Smith also added more to this explanation by saying:

> So being ordained an elder, or a high priest, or an apostle, or even president of the Church, is not the thing that brings the exaltation, but obedience to the laws and the ordinances and the covenants required of those who desire to become members of the Chruch of the Firstborn as these are administered in the House of the Lord. To become a member of the Church of the Firstborn, as I understand it, is to become one of the inner circle. We are all members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints by being baptized and confirmed, and there are many who seem to be content to remain such without obtaining the privileges of exaltation. the Lord has made it possible for us to become members of the Church of the Firstborn by receiving the blessings of the House of the Lord, and "overcoming all things." Thus we become heirs, "priests and kings, who have received a fulness, and of his glory," who shall "dwell in the presence of God and His Christ forever and ever," with full exaltation. (Take Heed to Yourselves, see pp. 112-114.)
>
> Joseph Fielding Smith commented:
> What is the difference, if there is a difference, between the Church of the Firstborn and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, or of any day saints? Well, the members of the Church of the Firstborn are members of the Chruch of Jesus Christ, but not all those who are members of the Church of Jesus Christ become members of the Church of the Firstborn. (Seek Ye Earnestly, J. F. Smith, p. 63)

Joseph Fielding Smith probably wrote more on this subject that did any other present-day leader. in his book The Way to Perfection, he wrote:

> Each person baptized into the Church is under obligation to keep the commandments of the Lord. He is under covenant, for baptism in a "new and an everlasting covenant." (D. & C. 22:1) When he has proved himself by a worthy life, having been faithful in all things required of him, then it is his privilege to receive other covenants and to take upon himself other obligations which will make of him an heir, and he will become a member of the "Church of the Firstborn". Into his hands "the Father has given all things." He will be a priest and a king, receiving of the Father's fulness and of His glory. (Way to Perfection, p. 208)
> Thus we see that those who receive the "higher" order of ordinances, and become ordained kings and queens, can become members of the Church of the Firstborn.

Elder Bruce R. McConkie also acknowledged this when he wrote:

> Members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who so devote themselves to righteousness that they receive the higher ordinances of exaltation become members of the Church of the Firstborn. Baptism is the gate to the Church itself, but celestial marriage is the gate to membership in the Church of the Firstborn, the inner circle of faithful saints who are heirs of exaltation and the fulness of the Father's kingdom.
> The Church of the Firstborn is made up of the sons of God, those who have been adopted into the family of the Lord, those who are destined to be joint-heirs with Christ in receiving all that the Father hath. "If you keep my commandments you shall receive of his fulness, and be glorified in me as I am in the Father;... And all those who are begotten through me are partakers of the glory of the same, and are the church of the Firstborn." (Mormon Doctrine, p. 131)

THE COUNCIL OF FIFTY

TPJS 252; Joseph Smith; "The Government of God"; Times and Seasons; July 1842. [Quoted in Ehat; "`It Seems Like Heaven Began on Earth': Joseph Smith and the Constitution of the Kingdom of God"; BYU Studies 20:255; Spring 1980.]

[Describing the ancient government of God] The government was a theocracy; they had God to make their laws, and men chosen by Him to administer them.... [The were led] in both civil and ecclesiastical affairs.... So will it be when the [purposes of God shall be accomplished: when "The Lord shall be King over the whole earth" and "Jerusalem His throne." "The law shall go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."

H.C. 5:139; 29 August 1842. [Discourse of Joseph Smith just having returned from exile and speaking to the missionaries who were going out to nullify the effects of John C. Bennett's tales of Nauvoo. This discourse was given after the Prophet had introduced the endowment, but as yet had not given anyone the fulness of the Priesthood, and the Council of Fifty was still 19 months away from being organized.]

Let the Twelve send all who will support the character of the Prophet, the Lord's anointed; and if all who go will support my character, I prophesy in the name of the Lord Jesus, whose servant I am, that you will prosper in your missions. I have the whole plan of the kingdom before me, and no other person has. [The name of the "Council of Fifty" was given by the Lord in a revelation of 7 April 1842, 4-1/2 months earlier as "The Kingdom of God and His Laws with the Keys and Power thereof, and Judgment in the Hands of His Servants, Ahman Christ."]

H.C. 5:510; Joseph Smith; Sunday, July 16, 1843.

Sunday, 16.---Preached in the morning and evening at the stand in the Grove, near the west of the Temple, concerning a man's foes being those of his own household.

"The same spirit that crucified Jesus is in the breast of some who profess to be Saints in Nauvoo. I have secret enemies in the city intermingling with the Saints, etc. Said I would not prophesy any more, and proposed Hyrum to hold the office of prophet to the Church, as it was his birthright.

I am going to have a reformation, and the Saints must regard Hyrum, for he has the authority, that I might be a Priest of the Most High God; and slightly touched upon the subject of the everlasting covenant, showing that a man and his wife must enter into that covenant in the world, or he will have no claim on her in the next world. But on account of the unbelief of the people, I cannot reveal the fullness of these things at present."

H.C. 5:512-513; 18-19 July 1843.

In a letter of Willard Richards to Brigham Young he chronicles events in Nauvoo, which would interest Pres. Young: * * *

Sunday, 16th. Joseph preached all day; a.m., 27th chap. Matthew &c. Did not hear him. Man's foes, they are of his own house; the spirit that crucified Christ; same spirit in Nauvoo; referred particularly to--I won't say who; was it Brother Marks? Did not say. Brother Cole? Did not hear the sermon; why ask me. Nothing new [despite this "news" to the Saints, the Twelve fully understood these developments.]; same as when you left[.] The spirit was against Christ because of His innocence; so in the present case. Said he would not prophesy any more; Hyrum should be the prophet; (did not tell them he was going to be a priest now [28 Sep 43], or a king by and by [11 Apr 44];) told the Elders not to prophesy when they went out preaching. * * *

19th I send by this mail six papers to Brother Woodruff, same direction. Just met Hyrum in the street; said to him, I am writing to the brethren, has our new prophet anything to say to them? "Give my respects to them." Elders Taylor's and Hyde's best compliments, with success.

H.C. 5:517-518; Sunday, 23 July 1843.

* * * Last Monday morning certain brethren came to me and said they could hardly consent to receive Hyrum as a prophet, and for me [not?] to resign. But I told them, "I only said it to try your faith; and it is strange, brethren, that you have been in the Church so long, and not yet understand the Melchizedek Priesthood." I will resume the subject at some future time.

TPJS, p. 318; Sunday, 23 July 1843. From a manuscript in the Historian's Office of the discourse of Joseph Smith [that President Joseph Fielding Smith copied directly from Joseph Smith's Diary.]

Last Monday morning certain men came to me and said: "Brother Joseph, Hyrum is no prophet--he can't lead the church; you must lead the church. If you resign, all things will go wrong; you must not resign; if you do the church will be scattered."

I felt curious and said: "Have we not learned the Priesthood after the order of Melchizedek, which includes both Prophets, Priests and Kings: see Rev. 1 Chap., 6th v., and I will advance your Prophet to a Priest, and then to a King---not to the Kingdoms of this earth, but of the Most High God. See Rev. 5 Chap., 10th v.---"Thou hast made us unto our God, Kings and Priests, and we shall reign on the earth."

[NOTE: This extract from the Diary of Joseph Smith with this additional information on Joseph Smith becoming a King was first published by President Joseph Fielding Smith in the first edition of Teachings (1937). In each succeeding edition of Teachings, this document was quoted. But then most readers of Teachings will not have read this that carefully, but even if Pres. Smith anticipated this, it still is amazing he chose to publish this important document.]

TPJS, p. 332; 27 August 1843.

Those holding the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood are kings and priests of the Most High God, holding the keys of power and blessings. In fact, that Priesthood is a perfect law of theocracy and stands as God to give laws to the people.

[See H.C. 6: 248] Saturday, 9.--Met in the City Council, and gave my reasons in favor of the repeal of the hog law. . . . [before the paragraph beginning "Council adjourned for one hour", insert the following 2 paragraphs:]
It was the principles of democracy that the peoples voice should be heard when their voice was just but when it was not just it was no longer democratic; but if the minoritys views are more just then Aristarchy should be the governing principle i.e. the wisest and best laws should be made. When Ald. Bennett and Coun. Young will call caucuses and explain the subject to them, then we will hear them and they can petition understandingly and believed if he could explain the subject that 99 out of every hundred would vote to have no hog law in this city from its birth to its death.
I cannot believe in the doctrine of exalting the Majority when it must be brought about by depressing the Minority in a greater degree.

Brother Miller [Joseph said], I perceive the Spirit of God is in the pineries as well as here, and we will call together some of our wise men and proceed to set up the kingdom of God by organizing some of its officers. And from day to day he called some of the brethren about him, organizing them as princes in the Kingdom of God, to preside over the chief cities of the Nation, until the number of fifty-three were called. IN THIS COUNCIL WE ORDAINED JOSEPH SMITH AS KING ON EARTH, and in order to install him as one earthly King it was agreed upon that we would run Joseph Smith for president of the United States and Sidney Rigdon for Vice-president.

[With the priestly rights of Israel, the kingly powers of government as given to the house of David were to be reorganized and established in the earth, and the kingdom given to Israel. Hence Joseph Smith prayed that "the yoke of bondage may begin to be broken off from the house of David." (D & C 109:63). By transgression David lost the rights of kingship and government he held under the Priesthood, as these rights pertain to Israel's rule in eternity. For this reason the Prophet taught:] the Priesthood that he received, and the throne and kingdom of David is to be taken from him and given to another by the name of David in the last days, raised up out of his lineage.

Joseph commenced the organization of the Council for the purpose of taking into consideration the necessary steps to obtain redress for the wrongs which had been inflicted upon us by our persecutors, and also the best manner to settle our people in some distant and unoccupied territory; where we could enjoy our civil and religious rights, without being subject to constant oppression and mobocracy, under the protection of our own laws, subject to the Constitution.

The Council was composed of about fifty members, several of whom were not members of the Church.

We prepared several memorials to Congress for the redress of our grievances, and used every available means to inform ourselves of the unoccupied territory open to settlers.

We held a number of sessions, and investigated the principles upon which our national government is founded; and the true foundation and principles of all governments.

Monday, March 11. In Council again all day--as last night many great and glorious ideas were advanced, we had a very profitable time. We organized into a Council and I was admitted a member. I will here name whose names were put on the list of members of this important organization: Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith, Brigham Young, W. Richards, P.P. Pratt, O. Pratt, J. Taylor, H.C. Kimball, G.A. Smith, W.W. Phelps, L. Woodworth, G. Miller, A. Badlam, P. Haws, Erastus Snow, R. Cahoon, Amos Fielding, A. Cutler, Levi Richards, N.K. Whitney, J.M. Bernhisel, L.D. Wason myself ...

When they [the Mormon troops of Nauvoo] arrived there [at Peoria] they found him [Joseph] at liberty. This was in 1843. The same winter he organized what was called the "Council of Fifty." This was a confidential organization. A man by the name of Jackson belonged to it, though he did not belong to the Church. This Council was designated as a law making department, but no record was ever kept of its doings, or if kept, they were burned at the close of each meeting. Whenever anything of importance was on foot this Council was called to deliberate upon it. The council was called the "Living Constitution." Joseph said that no legislature could enact laws that would meet every case, or attain the ends of justice in all respects.

Mrs. Joe Smith--Grand design of the Prophet--A correspondent at Alton, after stating that the recent murder of Joe Smith has been followed by a depression of his followers, gives the following interesting items:--Mrs. Joe Smith, it is said, has lost all confidence (if she ever had any) in the Mormon faith. She will soon remove to some secure situation, undoubtedly the richest lady in the West. Joe has been amasing money for several years for the purpose of eventually going to Jerusalem, intending to issue a proclamation calling in the Jews, over whom he was to be head till the return of Christ upon the earth--which event he believed would take place 45 years from 1844.--With reference to this expedition he was crowned `King of Israel' in 1844 by Council of Fifty, denominated the `Ancient of Days'. The fifty were all sworn to secrecy. I had the fact from one who assisted at the coronation--divulged since Joe's death. This was the prophet's grand design; and had it been generally known, we'd perhaps have saved our State from the desgrace [sic] and infamy of perpetrating so foul a murder. The fact affords a key to certain movements of the prophet, which are otherwise inexplicable.

William Clayton's Journal, p. 195-196; 1844.

Most of this camp belong to the Church, nearly all; and I would say to you brethren, and to the Elders of Israel, if you are faithful, you will yet be sent to preach this Gospel to the nations of the earth and bid all welcome whether they believe the Gospel or not, and this kingdom will reign over many who do not belong to the Church, over thousands who do not believe in the Gospel. Bye and bye every knee shall bow and every tongue confess and acknowledge and reverence and honor the name of God and His priesthood and observe the laws of the kingdom whether they belong to the Church and obey the Gospel or not, and I mean that every man in this camp shall do it. That is what the scripture means by every knee shall bow, etc., and you cannot make anything else of it.

Reflections. Jan. 1st 1845

. . . The organization of the Kingdom of God on 11th March last is one important event. This organization was called the Council of Fifty or Kingdom of God, and was titled by revelation as follows, "Verily thus saith the Lord, this is the name by which you shall be called, the Kingdom of God and his Laws, with the Keys and power thereof, and judgment in the hands of his servants, Ahman Christ." In this council was the plan arranged for supporting Pres. Jos. Smith as a candidate for the presidency of the U.S. Prest Joseph was the standing chairman of the council and myself the Clerk. In this Council was also devised the plan of establishing an emigration to Texas, and plans laid for the exaltation of a standard and ensign of truth for the nations of the earth. In this council was the plan devised to restore the Ancients [Lamanites] to the Knowledge of the truth and the restoration of Union and peace amongst ourselves. In this council was Prest Joseph chosen our Prophet, Priest and King by Hosannas. In this council was the principles of eternal truth rolled forth to the heavens without reserve and the hearts of the servants of God made to rejoice exceedingly.

John Nuttall; Church Archives; [Quoted in Ehat; "`It Seems Like Heaven Began on Earth': Joseph Smith and the Constitution of the Kingdom of God"; BYU Studies 20:266-273; Spring 1980.]; Tuesday, February 4, 1945.

Tuesday Feby. 4. 1845 Met at the 70s Hall with the Council of the Kingdom. There were only 25 members present viz: B. Young, S. Bent, John Smith, Alpheus Cutler, R. Cahoon, W.W. Phelps, G. Miller, P. Haws, Josh Fielding, Levi Richards, J.D. Parker, L. Woodworth, H.C. Kimball, O. Spencer, P.B. Lewis, D.D. Yearsley, C.C. Rich, O. Pratt, A. Lyman, J. W. Coolidge, O.P. Rockwell, G.A. Smith, E. Snow, and Wd Richards and myself.

This is the first time we met since the massacre of Pres. Joseph & Hyrum Smith. The Council was reorganized and President B. Young appointed standing chairman as successor to Prest Joseph Smith by unanimous vote. The vote was then taken in ancient order on each one present and all were received by unanimous vote. The vote then passed for absent members according to their ages and stations and resulted as follows, viz: Ezra Thayre, Amos Fielding, N.K. Whitney, C.P. Lott, J.M. Bernhisel, Elias Smith, O. Hyde, W. Woodruff, P.P. Pratt, D.S. Hollister, John Taylor, Wm Smith, A.W. Babbitt, J.M. Grant, and B.F. Johnson were unanimously sustained and received into the new organization. The following were rejected and dropped from the Council: Uriah Brown, Wm Marks, Sidney Rigdon, Lyman Wight, James Emmett, Samuel James, Edward Bonny, Alexander Badlam, Geo.J. Adams, Merinus G. Eaton and Lorenzo D. Wasson. President Joseph & Hyrum two of the members were martyred for the truth and John P. Green is dead, so that there is only 40 members left in the Council. It was voted to fill up the Council, at some future time. The weather is extremely cold and the Council adjourned at 2 1/2.

February 27, 1845 Council in Office

B.Y. The obj. is J. Emmett has a co. of 35 teams; in Town to go into the wilderness - Moses Smith knows all abt. them - we can control them yet -Emmett is out of our control - he has flung himself out of the Priesthood - he wants to do, what the Lord wants us to do - bring the lost sheep back - e [sic] save this Co. - he has detd. not to live among the Gentiles - let them live there e preserve themselves - so as to protect them, and keep the Priesthood - my feelings are to save them - if they come back, they will be rec'd - we have dropt James Emmett e Lyman Wight - Bro Butler went according to my council - I never licked [sic] this to any one yet - he will see me again e report to me - he will do a good work yet - Bro Dana is acquainted with nearly all the tribes, e he can take a company right from here to the Pacific - the Flat Heads have 200,000 warriors - ano. tribe 180 e and 150,000 they want Mormonism - we want some to stay among them as missionaries - Phelps says the U.S. report only abt 2 or 300,000 - e also reported the speeches of foes & forces - who are dissatisfied - we can now make a virtue -unite our teams e plow with Ephraim as well as the Gentiles - Smith, is fully satisfied that a majority of tha[t] Co. would be councilled by the 12 if the Council is to stay [or "stop"], they will, or go on just as ordered - we are above the Sacs [?] & Forces where there is quarell - I suppose 160 miles U.W. from here - I supposed that Br. Emmett had an appointment e [sic] by the 12 John Taylor sd. B.Y. talked as plain as any man could - e accused him of stealing from the Gentiles e he denied it - he sd he wd. not be councilled - "I can't come back" he was not willing to be gov.d by the council - if men will not go according to Council, they will go to the devil - he went to work and deceived man [pg. 2] no man was ever spoken to plainer than Emmett was - I advised a man to fetch his wife & property - Suffycools wife was decoyed away e went part of the way, but came back, if there are men who want to abide by council, I say save them - If a man won't abide council here, he won't abide it 1,000 miles if any man won't support our Pres't - I wont keep that man anyhow - my spirit is aroused when I see men decoying others away--recollect Emmett's pledge - he has broke it - he has decoyed man - when the proper time comes, let such men go as are councilled to go - at a time when we needed all the help we could get - he went away - e unless that man comes back e humbles himself we will not fellowship them - if you have done wrong, you can put be [sic] right e be saved e your posterity e if you don't do it you will all be d--d together - if he has a mind to be da--d he can - it makes no difference to us - we will make our calling and our election sure - we will set men at it, in whom we can confide, let me have men who have faith e humility - e I will risk all -

H. C. Kimball: I wo'd rather see Br. Smith with us than away from us - I am not suspicious of my brethren - I look with suspicion upon strangers - the course Emmett has taken has been in direct violation of the Council of Pres. Smith - he was "not to take a man from this city", after all, it came to our ears that he had got about 50 men - we went in pursuit - Emmett was called to acc't [?] e was rebuked by pres. Smith - he sd. don't take the Indians from Augusta - he had no authoirty to even take his family - in violation to every covenant made to the prophet, e that was the reason why he was dropt from that council - if he goes e founs [sic] himself a Kingdom - it will be stript from him hereafter - they will be stript of chich [sic], and every thing else, I know it by the spirit of the H. Ghost - there is no man or woman can be saved upon any oth. principle - for what we dont save in this probation we must save them in anth. e Law e Foster e _____ will never get out of hell until J. Smith unlocks it for them, B. Emmett has severed himself from us, e whatever this council seals, blesses or curses on Earth will be sealed, blessed, or cursed in heaven - we are to become the saviours of men as much as J.C. was - Emmett sd. he wod, not bear the frowns of the Gentiles any longer, e our lives will be sacrificed for this people - either as worn out or martyrs - El Young chastised him at my house - we had a meeting at O. Hydes e Emmett refused to submit to the council - B. Young is the head on this Earth, he is not a hard master, I have been with him too long - if you don't abide council you will go to hell, e after all you will have to get the 12 to help you out - we are like balls of clay now - e are on the wheel in the hands of the Potters, who have to fashion us to suit the mansions in the skies - if there is enough of me, I shall be made fit for any use - these men can make vessels of you, e fit you for God - there are some who say that the 12 are hard task masters but the day will come when it will be found out - this council does not justify Lyman Wight - Emmett or Ridgon all working against us - they are sealing women to one another e running into adultery - we can show that most of Rigdon's followers enter into the Spiritual Wife doctrine -

W. Richards -- I had an interview on Monday with Br. Smith - smith said all my statements are now carried out - I talked with Emmett e found the most stubborn disposition of any man in the world – I was disgusted with him – he was every thing – I was witness to Br. Joseph e others reproving him – it is all their secret instruction that is trying to cut our throats – I would just as soon be [pg. 4] sho'd present the knife to my throat – M. [or "W."] Smith I talked with Emmett upon the California expedition – he sd. this is the same thing that will swallow up the Cal. expedition – Taylor sd. Emmett wants to be a big man e take the lead of this Church – Phelps – Emmitt talked with me bef. this council of 50 – Br. Dana e others who are with him think they can drive this thing thro – those who are not for us are against us – G. A. Smith – we gave it up for a bad job – I believe if he had been in Carthage jail – all the Gents would have glanced past him – A. Lyman – I recollect going with G. Miller to see Emmett he wo'd not say anything – we co'd not ring out the least sense from him – he had seen the Indians – it would be a great undertaking – it was a kind [?] of a grunt – his and, his accomplishment, his wishes were all in himself – he was the only man, e he was but just big enough to do it himself – we co'd not then get a single thing out of him – I discovered he was dying all the wine – he represented his mission as greater than Brother Joseph, e the 12 e all put together – he was always sick of the Gentiles – B.Y. Intelligence cleaveth unto intelligence, e therefore his intelligence is of the wilderness) S. Rigdon wanted to go to Pittsburgh in the same way – the principles taught are "we are the standard, the criterion", e Nauvoo must come to us to get salvation: it is designed by the devil – we know what God designs to do, e the course that individuals will have to go – I Bel. they may be controlled, if it can be got to them – but as to the leaders, it has happened to them according to their desires – I have no confidence in Emmett at all – from any thing that he can say, until he has pursued a course that satisfies me that he is right – he wold send us to destruction in order to gratify his little, nasty, narrow mind – any man can do good when the sun shines, but he is good when he is in oppression, disappointed on the right e left e betrayed on every hand e still upholds his actions, he is the good man for me – [pg. 5]

O. Pratt – has no confidence in Emmett
H.C.K. – proposes that some man be sent with B. Smith as a messenger of salvation
G. Miller – does Emmett say that the Church will be scattered e gathered again in the wilderness? no!
B. Young – No. he considers himself that he is independent of us as a body –Smith can't tell – e gave his feelings "we have been kept in the dark: many wanted to come e fetch their families – he opposed it I have not heard of any communication with L. Wight –
C.C. Rich – after I ret'd from Michigan I asked Emmett what he had been doing – he refused to let me know – I referred him to his chastisement he would only speak in parables – Mr. Smith "is willing to be governed by this council"
S. Bent also asked Emmett – e he said this mission was given him before Jo. death e that the 12 had nothing to do with it –
A. Lyman – we had a mission to the Lamanites – Br. J. gave us a frank relation of the work, and he said "don't stop" till this is accomplished.
B.Y. – the U.S. in buying the lands were to give the Indians 40 miles square – but the agent wrote 40 square miles – Jos. wanted to "visit the Lamanites –I commit to Br. B. the keys of the Kingdom of the Lamanites – he committed them to me – we visited e preached to them they believed it, we have heard a many times from them – Phelps sd. 6 or 3 went over the boundaries of the U.S. to preach – Jos. went to prayer – he then commenced a revelation that Martin was to marry among the Lamanites – e that I was to preach that day – etc etc. it was a long revelation – we have a living constitution – there is enough for every day – if we die let us all die together, e there will be a jolly lot of spirits dancing into the next world – it won't be to hell for there are no fiddles there – [pg. 6]

The govern has passed a law than [sic] when 5000 men are got to Oregon, they can make their own government – Phelps we can thank the Legislature for taking away what they never gave – We have no charter, no laws, "we are free" – the Kingdom is not rent from the Gentiles – B. Young has found out that we are in Eternity, the Millenium has now commenced –
"That we appoint a delegate to visit Emmett" – carried –
" " " " Amasa Lyman to be the delegate – & he to pick his man."
"that we write a good fatherly letter of instruction to them – carried –
"That Orson Pratt write the letter" and Orson Spencer help him "in behalf of the council – carried –

H.C. 7:379; Saturday, March 1, 1845.

Saturday, March 1, 1845---I met with the 'General Council'* at the Seventies Hall. We decided to send nine brethren westward, to search out a location for the saints; many eloquent speeches were made on the present position of affairs: had a good meeting, which continued all day.

The high council met: no business.

*[Footnote: "General Council is the Council of Fifty." This is the footnote in President Young's Ms. History. This Council of Fifty is the legislature of the kingdom of God which includes the church.]

Saturday. March 1. 1845. At 10 a.m., met at the Seventies Hall in the Council of Fifty. The following brethren were taken into fill up the Quorum viz: Joseph Young, John E. Page, David Fullmer, Theodore Turley, Albert P. Rockwood, Jonathan Dunham, & Lucien R. Foster. They subscribed to the laws of the Council and covenanted before God with uplifted hands to maintain all things inviolate agreeable to the order of the Council. Bros Daniel Spencer, Isaac Morley, and Shadrack Roundy were selected to make up the number of 50, but they were absent and sick. Brother John Pack was admitted to sit in the place of Wilford Woodruff, John D. Lee in the place of Ezra Thayer, and Lewis Dana in place of Amos Fielding they being absent in on business. Lewis Dana is a Lamanite of the Oneida nation, and the First Lamanite who has been admitted a member of any Quorum of the Church.

The object of the Council was to decide whether we shall send out a company of men with Bro. Dana to fill Joseph's measures originally adopted in this council by going West to seek out a location and a home where the Saints can dwell in peace and health, and where they can erect the ensign and standard of liberty for the nations, and live by the laws of God without being oppressed and mobbed under a tyrannical government, without protection from the laws. Many able speeches were made on the subject, and the Council finally agreed to send out a company with Brother Dana to accomplish this important object. The following brethren were selected and appointed by unanimous vote of the Council, for this mission, viz. Samuel Bent to be the first man and president of the Mission, Jonathan Dunham next, Cyrus Daniels, Daniel Spencer, John S. Fullmer, Charles Shumway, Albert Carrington, and John W. Farnham. These brethren are expected to start immediately after Conference and proceed from tribe to tribe, to unite the Lamanites and find a home for the saints. The Council adjourned in the midst of the best kind of feelings.

Monday Mar. 10. 1845. ... While writing and copying the records of the Kingdom, I was writing these words dropped by Er H.C. Kimball in the council on the 4th inst. viz "if a man step beyond his bounds he will lose his kingdom as Lucifer did and it will be given to others who are more worthy." This idea came to my mind. It has been a doctrine taught by this church that we were in the Grand Council amongst the Gods when the organization of this world was contemplated and that the laws of government were all made and sanctioned by all present and all the ordinances and ceremonies decreed upon. Now is it not the case that the Council of the Kingdom of God now organized upon this earth are making laws and sanctioning principles which will in part govern the saints after the resurrection, and after death will not these laws be made known by messangers and agents as the gospel was made know to us. And is there not a similarity between this grand council & the council which sat previous to the organization of this world.

Tuesday, 11.---I attended the General Council. The subject of writing to Governor Ford; also the present movements of the mob were discussed. It was considered best for those who are hunted with writs to go on missions; as the policy of commencing a mob persecution has always been to get out vexatious writs in order to provoke resistance to the form of legal authority and thereby produce a collision between us and the state; so that we may, if possible, evade the blow until we can finish the Temple and the Nauvoo House. It was also decided that the workmen on the walls of the Temple commence work tomorrow.

Tuesday May 6. 1845. ... Evening met with the Council of Fifty in the Seventies Hall. The principal topic of conversation was the movements of the mob. It appears their determination is to get up an excitement at the Court and they are already trying it by reporting that the Saints are going en masse to Carthage at the Court, and if the Court does not execute the law on the murderers that we intend to destroy the Court and citizens of the County. From reports which the brethren have brought which have been at Carthage the mob are laying deep plans to bring us into collision with the State, so as to bring about our expulsion or extermination forthwith. It was agreed that none of the brethren leave the City at the Court, only those who are required to be there on business, so that we may prevent the mob from coming into the City and committing depradations in the absence of the brethren. An article was written by O. Hyde & W. Richards to publish in tomorrow's paper notifying the public of the designs of the mob ab and also the course we intend to pursue. The Council did not break up till 10 1/4

Tuesday Sept 30, 1845 Met the Council of Fifty at the Seventies Hall. Elders Bent Cutler & Cahoon presented their lists of families selected by them to go west. They have each got their companies nearly made up of one hundred families each. Pres. Young also appointed S. Roundy, J. Fielding, C.P. Lott, P. Haws and Daniel Spencer to select and organize each a company. Isaac Morely has got his company about full. While in Council report was brought in that two officers had just rode into town and had come to the Mansion. Pres. Young sent B.F. Johnson to find out what they were after. He soon returned and stated that they called for liquor but could get none. They then went to Packs but could get none there. They finally got some at Clapps and then went off in different directions. Word was brought in that an armed company were outside the City. Prest Young sent C.C. Rich to see what they wanted. He soon returned and reported that Gen. Hardin, Judge Douglas and the troops had arrived on the Square near the Temple, and that Douglas was at Elder Taylor's wanting to see the Twelve or the authorities of the place. The Council was immediately adjourned and the Twelve with one or two others went over to Elder Taylor's ... P.M. at the Office recording minutes of the Council of Fifty.

Tuesday Jan 13, 1846 - This morning I arose before day and remained in the Temple until 8 1/2 o'clock when the guard met. Nothing of importance transpired during the night. After the guard had assembled I regulated it for the day and went to the Hall and to Campbell's and then back to the temple at 10 o'clock and met with the Council of Fifty. This is the first time which ever I met with that council.
The subject of our removal west was discussed and I was well entertained.
From the Council, I went home accompanied by J. D. Hunter and Cyrus Daniels and took dinner.

A Report

To Presidents Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball Willard Richards and the Authorities of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Days Saints in Zion in Zion

Greeting

. . . Elder Benson who left on the 13th returned and attended the Conference. . . . (p. 2) . . .

On his (Elder Benson's) way home, he fell in company with Peter Hawes (sic) and Lucien Woodworth, on their return from Texas. They had visited Lyman White (sic), who had treated them in such a manner, as they consondered (sic) was unbecoming their high rank and station. He required them to be baptized; and did not know, but what they had apostatized, since he was acquainted with them. They represent Lyman as very corpulent. They say, he and family consumes eighteen bottles (of old rotgut) Whiskey per week; for which he pays one dollar per bottle. He is not able to work; but officiates as alcade, Prophet, Priest, King, Father, Husband, Purser, Paymaster, Receiver, Keeper, Planner, Scheemer, Director and Generalissimo of the establishment. It seems that he has a little difficulty in his Empire. Some of the nobles and Military Chiefs being uneasy; and one General George Miller has led away about forty or fifty, and was founding a new Empire, without much capitol to begin on; as Lyman told them when they left, if they would go to hell they might go and welcome; but they should take nothing with them. Pierce Hawley officiates as Patriarch, at Lyman's Colony. He determines the lineage of both men and woman; and if it happens, as is sometimes the case, that the tribes are mixt (sic); a change is necessary, and promptly effected (p. 3) and it is not considered right, for a woman of the house of Joseph to degrade her high station by living with a man of another tribe, and consequently of meaner blood. This principle was one cause of the faction party being led off by General Miller; as many of the new recruits would not stand this order.

The people seem to live on an equality in dress, and in every other distinction, except steam and beauty; in this Lyman has the preeminence. No man calls any thing (sic) his own. The company had a fine stock of cattle; and a small but good Country Mill. They were considerable in debt. They say if any of the Company are extravagant, in any of their outgoings in taking out of the storehouse, they fall from the Milchisadec (sic) to the Aronic (sic) Priesthood, and are rationed. They live pretty well. They have plenty of Meal, Milk, Butter and Cheese, and kill a Beef twice a week. If a woman had a dress for her children, she had to go to Sister White. This account is taken from the statements of Peter Hawes and Lucien Woodworth, and may be somewhat colored, as Lyman treated them coldly; and it is quite probable had found, by a little experience, that there was not quite room, for too many big toads in a small puddle. . . . Chapter 2nd

The Bogus Business

"That which is wanting cannot be numbered."

Soon after the Express left for the Mountains last fall, it was currently reported that a company had been formed in this County; the head quarters of which, was at Ferryville; for the purpose of manufacturing a low-priced specie. That the Machinary (sic) which was intended to operate as a branch mint, was in full operation in a shop, which had no outside door; and which was to be carried on for the ostensible purpose of manufacturing and repairing Fire Arms, but for the real purpose of relieving the pressure of the Money Market. Contracts were said to have been made with the St Louis Brokers for large amounts; and the Bullion on hand for the body of the article, which had been cut out, something in the shape of Waggon (sic) Wheels; and only awaited the arrival of Mr. J----- M----- B----- from below with the grease, or rather a little silver to stick on the outside; preparatory to its introduction into the Market. Hearing of the reports from day to day. One man had seen one of the Balls of the Press which had been broken open accidentily (sic). Another had been dreadfully imposed upon with dimes entirely of a new coinage, and which would not pass muster. Another had been invited to join the party (p. 8) another had been told by William Clapp of Nauvoo that J----- M----- B----- had brought a Bogus Press out here, and Fixtures, and lots of things. Information was not wanting. News was plenty. We took an opportunity to advise the principal mechanic, that if these statements were facts, he had better close the business. We did not wish to accuse him of it, but if any thing of the sort was a foot, to quit it and never more have anything to do with so stinking an operation, which was both criminal and dangerious, would ruin themselves and injure the community. For no man could need expect to manufacture a base coin, on a cheap principal, without being detected sooner, or later. Two of the party pledged themselves to quit the business, and not have any thing more to do with it. President Hyde required them to give up the Machinary, Dyes, &c into our hands to be disposed of as wisdom should direct. In consequence of their refusal, James H. Mulholland was arraigned before the High Council on the 6th of January and cut off from the Church. See Minutes of the Council in the 1st No. of the Guardian. During the Session of the Council, Joseph Kelting, who was called as a witness, treated the Council, in such an unsaintlike and contemptous manner that they required at his hands some confession, which he refused to make. After considerable attempt to induce him to acknowledge, the Council cut him off from the Church, after which he raised his Stentorian voice and summoned the Council of Fifty to assemble and try his case as he took an appeal from the High Counil to that Honorable Body.

A few days previous to this Council President Hyde was called upon by Peter Hawes who requested him to call together the Council of Fifty as there was important business to be attended to, and it was necessary that that body should meet immediately as there was feelings and important business to be attended to. President Hyde said he did not feel authorized to do any such (p. 9) thing. That it was the business of President Young exclusively; and if he had the power he could not do it under a year, as the most of them were in the Valley. Br Hawes replied that those who were here could meet come to an understanding, pass acts, and send them on for the approval of the rest, and said, he was willing to take the responsibility of calling them together, asked if those of the Twelve here would attend if he did call them, as he had rights, he wished to be heard. Soon after this a line was written to Peter Hawes and Lucien Woodworth, inviting them to come before the High Council on the 6th of January, and make known their rights claims &c. After the Trial of Mulholland and Kelting, Br Woodworth rose, and said, that he had very few rights in this world; and what I have are personal; had very little to say before the Council. Br Hawes delivered a regular preach. He said, he had a bad cold and was hoarse. However he spoke very loud. Councillor (sic) Harris interrupted him several times, by saying, "a little lower, Br Hawes," "not quite so loud." "Oh, Br Hawes, your voice will burst my head." As the day was far spent, the Council adjourned that day two weeks, when they were to resume the subject. The next day he attended the High Priest Quorum and attempted to deliver an address on the supremacy of the Fifty over all the Authorities in the Church Br E. T. Benson objected to such an investigation; and stated, "that the time was now gone bye (sic) to investigate, and that men should know on what footing they stood now move forward and do the work and not investigate all the time, and never do any thing." Peter Hawes still attempted to speak but his voice was arrested by a motion of Samuel Gully "that whereas the High Council had appointed a time to hear Peter Hawes establish his claims, the time of the High Priest Quorum be occupied about its ordinary business, and the preaching of the Gospel as for his part he did not want to hear Peter Hawes (p. 10) and he presumed the rest did not; a moition was put for him to speak, but the house said no. At the next session of the Council, neither Brs Hawes nor Woodworth appeared but it was thought proper to hear the testimony of the witnesses that were present in relation to their course. Five witnesses testified against them, of a number of speeches, made by them against the authorities of the Church. Squire Merrett testified that he had boarded at Hawe's House, that the Indians came there all hours of the night to get Liquor, which is sold to them by Hawes family; thought that he had seen Hawes measure Liquor was given. After this it was decided that Peter Hawes and Lucien Woodworth should be disfellowshipped until they appeared before the council and answered to the testimony. They and the witnesses were summoned to appear at the next sessions for trial. Br Woodworth appeared made every acknowledgement and seemed perfectly ready to give every satisfaction in his power. He was accordingly forgiven by the Council. Peter, in answer to the testimony against him, said, he did not sell whiskey to the Omahas and it was not sold in his house. Both Whiskey and House belonged to his son Alpheus. And he could not control it. He delivered several long and loud speeches about the power of the "Fifty." The rights of its members. The principals (sic) taught by Joseph; that no Revelation could be given as a command to the Church without the sanction of the "Fifty." He called on Woodworth to back him, but he refused to answer him, and said I have just got out of one scrape and you['ll] not catch me in another upon which Hawes said, "I despise the man who is candles to day soap to morrow and fallow the next. I hate a greased rag." He persisted that the "Fifty" should be called together. He said, that Brigham had pledged himself to carry out the measures of Joseph, and intimated that it had not been done and that the Twelve had swal-(p.11) lowed up thirty eight. Men were building up to themselves Kingdoms. There was the Kingdom of Brigham, the Kingdom of Heber, the Kingdom of Lyman, but who is building up the Kingdom of God. He said that the "Fifty" had not legally adjourned because he was not there to vote for it. Elder G. A. Smith interrupted him by telling him, that the "Fifty" was a Debating School, and despised the principal and expose things sacred as life to the public gaze. I will leave the Room before I will submit to listen to such nonsence (sic), as that a Council of Fifty men cannot adjourn because one of their number neglects to attend. I am ashamed of such doctrine, and won[']t bear it here it here. There was a Quorum organized by Joseph, where the truth of every document professing to be revelation could be tested. That Quorum had no members in it but those who held the Priesthood, but not so with the "Fifty." It had members in it who did not belong to the Church. President Hyde said that as Brother Hawes had denied the Jurisdiction of this Council to try him he considered the right of the Council to try any man in the County of Pottawattamie who might go astray, and violate the laws of the Church.

The Council had a considerable discussion on his Whiskey excuse with the Indians and his hard speeches against the authorities and the Church; most of which were aimed against President Young and President Hyde, and voted to cut him off from the Church unless he made confession of his wrongs. He asked the previlege (sic) of two weeks but never appeared consequently stands cut off from the Church. For the last three sessions the Church Council has had no Trials, and little or no business. . . . (p. 37) . . .

At 9 morning, Sat., 31st, council convened at the House of H. C. Kimble's. The meeting having been called to order by the Pres., arose and said that a member of the council had been guilty of devulging the secrets of this council & that John Pack was charged with it & related that Jackson Reding had been to H. C. Kimble, O. P. Rockwell, & others & told that John Pack had warned him to leave this place fourth with or he would not have the liberty, intimating that his Life was in danger. O. P. Rockwell, H. C. Kimble & others bore record to the same. Counsellor Pack pled innocence so far as revealing anything to Reding that belonged to this Council. Said that he had some conversation with Redding about a debt that owed him, in which he told Jack that his past Life was so dishonest that it had rendered his Person unsafe. After counsellor Morley & others had Spoken, Pres. B. Y. took the Floor. Said that Bro. Pack had not wisdom enough to keep the Secrets of this Council locked up in his own Breast & there was others. Cahoons Fath[er] is an other man that is not fit to Sit in the council of the Gods. Members of this council should be men of firmness and integrity, that when they leave this council Room that the things that belong to this council should be as safe as though it was locked up in the silent vaults of Eternity, but such things must be overcome or the men who indulge in them will be dropped from this council. I mean just what I say. J. Pack pled for Forgiveness, Said Try me a little longer. Then, if I don't prove true, deal with me as you think proper, if it is to cut my head off, & [he] wept bitterly like a child. His request was granted.

Letter from Almon W. Babbitt to Brigham Young; January 9, 1853. Typed as in original without sic.

Washington January 9th 1853

Dear Sir

* * *

I have however said to you that I dissired to fill that possition that could do the most good for my friends or those that call themselves the Kingdom of God. My own Judgement is that a possition upon the floor of the House of Rep with the present Democratic Majority with my information of men & things in this place would do more for the People of Utah than any other position this you must however judge of . . . .

A. W. Babbitt

J.D. 1:173-174, 181-182; Parley P. Pratt; 1853.

A system of religion should include every branch of government that [a people] could possibly need for their dwelling with each other. . . . A religion not wholly true could not possibly develop all the resources, principles, branches, departments, officers, and powers adapted to the government, organization, peace, order, happiness, and defense of society, and for its regulation while dwelling with foreign departments and powers. * * * When I say a religious system I mean that which unites principles of political government and religions. . . . Whether men realize it or not, when they say "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," it is as much as to say "O God, sweep away all the falsehood and abuses of power there are in the world, whether religious or political; . . . And in the place of all these false governments and religions, in political and social life, introduce that eternal government, that pure order of things, those eternal principles and institutions, which govern society in those better worlds, the worlds of immortality and eternal life. * * * The kingdom of God is nigh at hand; we may then begin to look around for it. We must not look to Russia, or to England, to become this kingdom, but to the smallest of the governments of the world. . . . Where must we look for it? In the very spot it has room to grow, and in its smallness be overshadowed with weeds and plants of other kinds; so we must look for its organization, establishment, and development in some country where that little few compose the majority, and should rule. Now with these great characteristics, and plain directions, which any man can gather from the Bible, we need not look to any other place where we may find this kindgom. [sic] Then among the Saints right here, where they compose the majority, where there is another larger government, where they are hemmed in with mountains, and can establish peace, and a kingdom, and a government, and a law.

J.D. 1:230; John Taylor; 1853.

Let us now notice our political position in the world. What are we going to do? We are going to possess the earth. Why? Because it belongs to Jesus Christ, and he belongs to us, and we to him. We are all one, and will take the kingdom and possess it under the whole heavens, and reign over it forever and ever. Now, ye kings and emperors, help yourselves, if you can. This is the truth, and it may as well be told at this time as at any other.

Letter from George Miller; written at St. James, Michigan; June, 1855.

Dear Brother: My letter yesterday closed with an indefinite relation of trip on foot, driving three yoke of oxen to the falls of Black river. Toward the opening of spring of 1844, having made an abundance of lumber for the Nauvoo house and temple, we held a council in regard to future operations. The result of our deliberations was that a memorial should be sent to Joseph and the authorities at Nauvoo expressive of our views, and I was delegated to be the bearer, and upon my arrival at Nauvoo presented the documents to Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith, whom I found together in consultation, and after a hasty perusal, Joseph said to me, Brother Miller, I perceive the Spirit of God is in the pineries as well as here, and we will call together some of our wise men and proceed to set up the kingdom of God by organizing some of its officers. And from day to day he called some of the brethren about him, organizing them as princes in the Kingdom of God, to preside over the chief cities of the Nation, until the number of fifty-three were called. In this council we ordained Joseph Smith as King on earth, and in order to install him as one earthly King it was agreed upon that we would run Joseph Smith for president of the United States and Sidney Rigdon for Vice-president. And in case they were elected we would at once establish dominion in the United States, and in view of a failure we would send a minister to the then republic of Texas to make a treaty with the Cabinet of Texas for all that country north of a west line from the falls of the Colorado River to the NCECES [NUECES]; thence down the same to the United States Territory, and get them to acknowledge us as a nation; and on the part of the Church we would help them defend themselves against Mexico. And if successful in this matter we would have dominion in spite of the United States.

Lucien Woodworth was sent to Texas and I returned to the pineries to bring down Lyman Wight. Upon my arrival at the pineries we set about arranging our lumbering operation, so as to leave a man in charge to carry on the work, and Wight and myself to go to Nauvoo as before agreed upon by the Council of fifty-three princes of the kingdoms.

Some time the last of April, 1844, Lyman Wight and myself and families arrived at Nauvoo, and soon after Woodworth returned from Texas. The Council convened to hear his report which was favorable, and A. W. Brown, Lyman Wight and myself were appointed to meet with the Texas Congress. It was also determined that all the Elders should be sent to all the states and do everything in our power to elect Joseph president. In such an event the dominion of the kingdom would be forever established in the United States, and if not successful, we would fall back on Texas, and be a kingdom notwithstanding. It was thought and urged by the council, that so great an undertaking would require, in order to assure success, the entire united effort of the officials and members of the Church. At no period since the organization of the Church had there been half so many Elders in the vineyard.

Lost truly as ever,
/s/ George Miller.

As was observed by Brother [Orson] Pratt (this morning) that kingdom [of God] is actually organized and the inhabitants of the earth do not know it. If this people know anything about it, all right; it is organized preparatory to taking effect in the due time of the Lord, and in the manner that shall please him. As observed by one of the speakers this morning that kingdom grows out of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, but it is not the church; for a man may be a legislator in that body which will issue laws to sustain the inhabitants of the earth in their individual rights and still not belong to the Church of Jesus Christ at all. And further though a man may not ever believe in any religion it would be perfectly right, when necessary, to give him the privilege of holding a seat among that body which will make laws to govern all the nations of the earth and control those who make no profession of religion at all; for that body would be governed, controlled and dictated to acknowledge others in those rights which they wish to enjoy themselves. Then the Latter-day Saints would be protected, if a kingdom of this kind was on the earth, the same as all other people.

J.D. 5:219; Heber C. Kimball; 6 September 1856. [Quoted in Quinn, "The Council of Fifty and Its Members, 1844 to 1945", BYU Studies 20:187-188; Winter 1980.]

The Church and kingdom to which we belong will become the kingom of our God and his Christ, and brother Brigham Young will become President of the United States.

(Voices responded, "Amen.")

And I tell you he will be something more; but we do not now want to give him the name: but he is called and ordained to a far greater station than that, and he is foreordained to take that station, and he has got it.

Letter to Brigham Young from Lyman Wight; March 2, 1857.

. . . I have also learned by some private communications that you have disfellowshiped me and the company with me. We have great anxiety to know what we are disfellowshiped from. We are truly at a loss to know whether we are disfellowshiped as citizens under your gubernatorialship, or whether you act in behalf of brother Joseph, and have disfellowshiped us to his satisfaction, or whether it was because we did not immediately relinquish that mission and go with you to Salt Lake Valley.

Now Sir, if it is a crime for me to come to Texas as one of the Twelve Apostles, under the direction of Jospeh Smith instead of going to Salt Lake Valley you had ought to beware how you send out men from that region of country into any other country to build up churches; for I protest unto you, and all men living upon the foot stool of God, that I have not taught as much as one word contrary to the doctrine of Jesus Christ as held forth by brother Joseph Smith during his whole life. And Sir, as I have neither spoken evil of you, nor of no other man who has strove to live to the commandments of God, nor have I been guilty of any misdemeanor whatever as you have heard by flying reports. I shall make use of great plainness. In the first place, you have disfellowshiped us without the least shadow of evidence that we were guilty of any misdemeanor whatever. I ask, did not the Twelve unanimously give me the right hand of fellowship just previous to my start for this place? And I again ask, did they ever notify me that they thought it would be better to relinquish it since that day? And did you not state to me Sir, that you would have to speak a little against my going for fear the whole Church to a man would turn out? I gave you that privilege without reluctance believing you to be an honest man. But very much to my astonishment I saw recorded in the Times and Seasons that you stated that I was a coward and ran away for fear of fighting and many other slanderous reports with expressions so sarcastic that should you and I meet before a proper public I should give you a fair opportunity to prove the truth or falsity of your words.

* * *

You will find Sir, that I have produced pointed testimony as published by your ownself to show fact, whereas you have only had flying reports concerning me by men who chose to carry a bone both ways; for instance Haws and Woodworth, men in whom you say you can place confidence, and if you can place confidence in them then why not I? And what did they say before fifty witnesses in this place? They stated that it would take ten yoke of oxen to draw alcohol over the mountains to keep Brother Richards drinking one year and that it cost more to support Brigham Young alone than it did any one hundred men in the Church.

LYMAN WIGHT

J.D. 5:329-330; Brigham Young; the Bowery; 1857.

We have a nation here in the mountains that will be a kingdom by-and-by, and be governed by pure laws and principles. What do you call yourselves? some may ask. Here are the people of the Kingdom of God. It may be some time before that Kingdom is fully developed, but the time will come when the Kingdom of God will reign free and independent. There will be a kingdom on the earth that will be controlled upon the same basis, in part, as that of the Government of the United States; and it will govern and protect in their rights the various classes of men, irrespective of their different modes of worship; for the law must go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem, and the Lord Jesus will govern every nation and kingdom upon the earth. . . . Will the kingdom of Jesus triumph? It will; and the legislators of that kingdom are in this congregation and will remain, and the laws of that kingdom will be made in accordance with the revelations from Jesus Christ. . . . The Kingdom of God will grow out of this Church, and the time appears to have hastened faster than we anticipated. This is the best time we ever saw. We are happy, and we make a heaven of every place to which we go, which is the reason we are happy. How long it will be before the kingdom of God sends forth its laws, I do not know. Brother Erastus Snow remarked that no one can foretell all the events that may arise from our present difficulties; but I can tell you a part. God will reign and will bring forth victory to the humble and faithful; that I know and so do you.

J.D. 10:38-42; Brigham Young; "Constitutional Power of the Congress of the United States: Growth of the Kingdom of God"; March 9, 1862.

The Kingdom of God has sustained me a good while, and I mean to stick to it. We shall form a State Government, and you need not fear any consequences that may arise from such a course. . . .

... When Mr. Fillmore appointed me Governor of Utah, I proclaimed openly that my Priesthood should govern and control that office. I am of the same mind today. We have not received our election returns; but, should I be elected Governor of the State of Deseret, that office shall be sustained and controlled by the power of the eternal Priesthood of the Son of God, or I will walk the office under my feet. Hear it both Saint and sinner, and send it to the uttermost parts of the earth, that whatever office I hold from any Government on this earth shall honor the Government of heaven, or I will not hold it.

Many may not be able to tell why we are in this capacity. I do not think that you see this thing as it is. Our organization will be kept up. We may not do much at present in this capacity, yet what we have done or shall do will have its effect. Our constitution which we sent to Washington has been closely scanned by the Members of Congress. This body of men will give laws to the nations of the earth. We meet [have met] here in our second annual Legislature and I do not care whether you pass any laws this session or not, but I do not wish you to lose one inch of ground you have gained in your organization; but hold fast to it, for this is the Kingdom of God and we are the friends of God, and you find that much will grow out of this organization. But I will say without the inspiration and revelations of God, our acts are of no use. We are called the State Legislature, but when the time comes, we shall be called the Kingdom of God. Our governement is going to pieces and it will be like water that is spilt upon the ground that cannot be gathered. If we do not take care of ourselves, no one will take care of us. . . . I do not care whether you sit one day or not. But I do not want you to loose any part of this governement which you have organized. For the time will come when we will give laws to the nations of the earth. Joseph Smith organized this government before, in Nauvoo, and he said if we did our duty, we should let the water on to the wheel and start the machine in motion. [Clark renders the quotation ". . . if we did our duty, we should prevail over all our enemies."]

J.D. 10:240-41; Heber C. Kimball; the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City; July 19, 1863.

When the kingdom of God is organized upon the earth, it is done to protect the Church of Christ in its rights and privileges, so that you see the Church makes a government to protect itself, but who knows what that government is? All those to whom it has been revealed, and no others. Let the Saints reflect upon these matters which I am laying before them. Think of your holy endowments and what you have been anointed to become, and reflect upon the blessings which have been placed upon you, for they are the same in part that were placed upon Jesus; he was the one that indicated his Apostles into these ordinances; it was he who set up the kingdom of which we are subjects.

Millennial Star, XXVII:538; Aug. 26, 1865.

We are told that the Saints are yet to possess the kingdom; and if by this we are to understand, that a time will come when they are to hold sway and dominion over the whole earth, then it is evident that this can never transpire, until they have learned to govern and control themsleves, and give the principles of purity and righteousness an abiding place within their hearts. In proportion as the people exhibit a willingness to be governed, will the Lord confide the interests of his kingdom to their care, and were it not upon this condition that he acted, the gifts and privileges they might receive would not prove blessings to them. And in order that they should be fitted for taking the positions assigned unto them, when the Lord takes the reins of government into his hands, it is necessary that the principle upon which they will govern them should be gradually developing itself now.

Miscellaneous minutes, 23 January 1867. [Quoted in Quinn, "The Council of Fifty and Its Members, 1844 to 1945", BYU Studies 20:173; Winter 1980.]

[H]e [Brigham Young] was not aware of any particular business to be brought before the council, further than to meet and renew our acquaintance with each other in this capacity. Had no doubt but the brethren had often inquired in their own minds when the Council would again be called together.

Manuscript History of the Church; 4 April 1868. [Quoted in Quinn, "The Council of Fifty and Its Members, 1844 to 1945", BYU Studies 20:173; Winter 1980.]

Council of Fifty met this p.m., but few attended consequently it was turned into a testimony meeting for a short season.

J.D. 17:156-157; Brigham Young; 1874.

I will say to you with regard to the kingdom of God on the earth--Here is the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, organized with its rules, regulations and degrees, with the quorums of the holy Priesthood, from the First Presidency to the teachers and deacons; here we are, an organization. * * * This is what we are in the habit of calling the kingdom of God. But there are further organizations. The Prophet gave a full and complete organization of this kingdom the Spring before he was killed. This kingdom is the kingdom that Daniel spoke of, which was to be set up in the last day; it is the kingdom that is not to be given to another people; it is the kingdom that is to be held by the servants of God, to rule the nations of the earth, to send forth those laws and ordinances that shall apply themselves to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints; that will apply themselves to the mother Church, "the holy Catholic Church"; they will commend themselves to every Protestant Church upon the earth; they will commend themselves to every class of infidels, and will throw their protecting arms around the whole human family, protecting them in their rights. If they wish to worship a white dog, they will have the privilege, and if they wish to worship a man they will have the privilege, and if they wish to worship the "unknown God" they will have the privilege. This kingdom will circumscribe them all and will issue laws and ordinances to protect them in their rights--every right that every people, sect and person can enjoy, and the full liberty that God has granted to them without molestation. Now I want to give you these few words--the kingom of God will protect every person, every sect and all people upon the face of the whole earth in their legal rights; I shall not tell you the names of the members of this kingdom, neither shall I read to you its constitution, but the constitution was given by revelation. The day will come when it will be organized in strength and power. Now, as the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, we work our way along the best we can. Can you understand this?

J.D. 20:204; George Q. Cannon; General Conference Address; Sunday, April 6, 1879.

THE U.S. CONSTITUTION AND THE GOVERNMENT OF GOD

The time will come when we will have power; at present we are in the minority, and it pays for scribblers to write about us and hold us up to ridicule. But suppose the Latter-day Saints had control; suppose their ideas were fulfilled, that is, that we, as it is destined we shall be, were the people who uphold Constitutional government upon this continent, who restored the government to its primitive condition when all the political parties shall have fallen into chaos; would we feel at liberty to say that none but the Latter-day Saints should be elected to offices of trust and responsibility? No. Joseph Smith set the pattern; he taught the brethren who were with him better ideas; you well-informed Latter-day Saints know that there are two powers which God has restored in these the last days. One is the Church of God, the other the Kingdom of God. A man may belong to the Kingdom of God and yet not be a member of the Church of God. In the Kingdom of God, using it in a political sense, there may be heathens and Pagans and Mahommedans [sic] and Latter-day Saints and Presbyterians and Episcopalians and Catholics and men of every creed. Will they legislate for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints alone? Will the laws that they enact protect us alone and not protect others? No. Why? Because God is the Father of the Latter-day Saints as well as of every human being; God is the father of all, is the father of the Chinaman, the Hindoo, the African, the European, the American; is the father of all the races of men and of every creed and nationality. When he established his kingdom it will protect all in their equal rights; I as a Latter-day Saint, will not have power to trample on my fellow-man who may not be orthodox in my opinion, because I am a Latter-day Saint; nor will my fellow-man to whom I am heterodox, have the power to trample upon me. Does not that look right? That is the kind of kingdom we have to contend for; that is the kind of kingdom we have to establish, and it is already provided for in the Constitution given unto us by God, and through the glorious labors of the fathers who laid the foundation of this government, who were inspired and raised by our Almighty Father for this express purpose. There is no liberty that a human being can desire, neither is there a right that can be exercised properly, that we do not have under the Constitution of our land. It needs no ammendment about it; it is broad enough, if interpreted in its true spirit, to cover the individual, the continent, and the entire globe and furnish freedom for all.

[The Council then had a total of fifty men sitting in the circle. With that accomplished, Joseph Smith announced] Now we have the number which the Lord requires--[but] we will take a few more on our own hook. * * *

In the Church we take the Law of God & his Priesthood as the Constitution of his Church--here in this Council we have a living constitution not a written one--which we must conform to.

Mormonism Unveiled; John D. Lee; p. 173; 1881. . . . This was in 1843. The same winter he organized what was called the "Council of Fifty." This was a confidential organization. A man by the name of Jackson belonged to it, though he did not belong to the Church. This Council was designated as a law-making department, but no record was ever kept of its doings, or if kept, they were burned at the close of each meeting. Whenever anything of importance was on foot this Council was called to deliberate upon it. The Council was called the "Living Constitution." Joseph said that no legislature could enact laws that would meet every case, or attain the ends of justice in all respects.

These words ["Ye are my constitution and I am your God and ye are my spokesmen, therefore from henceforth keep my commandments." See 21 April 1880.] are pregnant with meaning & full of intelligence & point out our position in regard to these matters--it is expected of us that [we] can act right--that our interests [are] bound up in the K[ingdom] of God. That we should consider we are not acting for ourselves, but that we are the Spokesmen of God selected for that purpose in the interest of God & to bless & exalt all humanity. We acknowledge him as our God and all men who enter this body must acknowledge him here. There is a peculiary [sic] significance to these things which needs some consideration.

also appears as a quote in the minutes of 21 April 1880, Harold B. Lee Library, Brigham Young University, and probably was taken from an earlier revelation. [I called Jospeh Smith, Jr.] to be a Prophet, Seer and Revelator to my Church and Kingdom; and to be a King and Ruler over Israel. * * *

Thus saith the Lord God who rules in the heavens above and in the earth beneath, I have introduced my Kingdom and my Government, even the Kingdom of God, that my servants have heretofore prophesied of and that I taught my disciples to pray for, saying "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," for the establishment of my rule, for the introduction of my law, for the protection of my Church, and for the maintenance, promulgation and protection of civil and religious liberty in this nation and throughout the world; and all men of every nation, color and creed shall yet be protected and shielded thereby; and every nation and kindred, and people, and tongue shall yet bow the knee to me, and acknowledge me to be Ahman Christ, to the glory of God the Father. * * *

And now I speak unto you who are members of this Council and my Kingdom, I say unto you, as I said unto my disciples of old, Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you. I called you by my servant, Joseph [Smith], and by my servant, Brigham [Young], and by my servant, John [Taylor]. * * *

I moved upon [Joseph Smith] to introduce into my kingdom certain parties not in my Church. * * * [That nonmembers] be admitted to the right of representation . . . and have full and free opportunity of presenting their views, interests and principles, and enjoying all the freedom and rights of the Council.

Drove to the residences of Prest Jos. F. Smith & Geo. Q. Cannon, and notified them that Prest Jno Taylor wished to meet them at his residence at nine a.m.--Prest Cannon rode with me from his residence to Prest Taylor's--shortly after nine a.m. I met in company with Prests Cannon & Smith Bros John and James Sharp and Geo Reynolds at Prest Taylor's and the propriety of selecting Arthur (p. 5) Stayner or any person whose name was not on the registration list to act in any position in the coming Legislature was fully and freely discussed. Prests Smith and James Sharp favored Bro Stayner but it was finally decided upon a motion made by me and 2nd by Jno Sharp, and which was carried that Arthur Stayner or no person whose name was not on the registration list should be selected to fill any office or position in the Legislature.--This motion has no direct bearing upon the subject other than Bro James Sharp and myself having differed as to the necessity or propriety of selecting Arthur Stayner to act as Asst Clerk in the House, we wished Prests Taylor, Cannon and Smith to give us the benefit of their advice on the matter. At 1020 A.M. attended a Caucus meeting of the members of the Legislature at which place the officers of the house and Council were decided upon. At 2 P.M. attended the first regular session of the Council and with other members took the oath of office. All of the members excepting (sic) F. S. Richards were present. In as much as the members names and Acts of the Legislature will be a matter of Public Record I shall make little, or no mention of the members or their acts in my Journal, but shall simply record my own acts, which I have no doubt will not take much writing. I attended another Caucus meeting this evening where it was decided to select a Minute Clerk and Usher for each each House Jos. A. West and Jno Taylor were decided upon as clerks and George Woolley and Moroni L. Pratt, as ushers.

Wednesday Feb 4th 1885--

After listening to some current items of news, President Taylor stated the object of the Council. directed Br Nuttall to read a Revelation which he said he received more than a year ago requiring him to be anointed & set apart as a King Priest and Ruler over Israel on the Earth-over Zion & the Kingdom under Christ our King of Kings. He also read some extracts from minutes of the Council of the Kingdom after which the President called for any remarks when several spoke their mind and F.M.L. motioned that we proceed to obey the requirement of the Revelation. when we clothed in our Priestly attire. E Snow offered prayer, when after the usual ceremony F.M. Lyman prayed in the circle. L. Snow consecrated a bottle of oil. Counselor Cannon anointed President John Taylor and we all laid hands on the Prest. & Geo. Q. Sealed the anointing according to a written form which had been prepared.

At 8 p.m. attended Council at Endowment House where we had prayers consecrated oil, and Prest. Jno Taylor was anointed K.P.R. of C. Z. & K.

Matthew and Claire Noall Journals; U. of U.; Journal no. 3. p. 30-33; July 28th, 1886.

School has been as usual today. After school I finished my little native speech I /31/ have to write it down and then learn it, for I cannot speak correctly without thus doing. After practice I took it to bro. Smith for correction, but the mistakes were not as numerous as I had anticipated. I had not got the ideas strictly correct, however, hence I will have to make another. Pres. Smith explained the subject clearly to me. He said that the Kingdom of God is now upon the earth, and was organized by Jos. Smith the Prophet. He spoke also of "The Council of Fifty" which at present is not to be made public, it is however, a legislative body, and will act in that office in the Kingdom of God. The president of the Church is the president of the council. The power of the Kingdom of God, is not exercised at present, but it is in an organized condition /32/ having a representative of the great king, and as soon as it becomes sufficiently strong it will exercise its authority as a kingdom. The Kingdom of God is not bud in the Church but it will grow and increase until it fills the whole earth even as Daniel prophesied. Nothing will be out of its dominion. It will be over the righteous, and extend its borders until the lowest of the devils are under its dominion. Thus we see it has a very large scope. Not so with the Church, for it will exercise authority over the righteous only. None can enter the gospel of Christ, save through the door of faith, repentence, baptism and the reception of the Holy Ghost and while the Kingdom will reign over those who do not belong to the Church every one will /33/ confess, however, that Christ is the rightful king. The Church will then be in the Kingdom. The Church only has power to punish for crime through disfellowshipping its members, while the kingdom will punish by imprisonment, and death if necessary, even as Moses did in the days of ancient Israel. Thus we see there is a wide difference between the Church and the Kingdom, and yet they are in some respects mingled together.

My dear President:

I shall not be able to return this evening. A telegram has been sent asking for information concerning the advantage they see in urging the calling together of the old Convention. I desire to await a reply to this. The dispatch informed Brother Young also that we feel he had better write the particulars of his business than to return here.

I sincerely hope your health has improved and that you feel stronger.

With love,

Stapled papers with the inscription on the outside piece of paper, "Remarks of Brethren on Scot Amendment"; handwritten in pencil on 20 pages measuring 19.5 cm and on 8 pages measuring 22.0 cm; in George Q. Cannon Papers; CHO; July [?] 26, 1887.

[part of Heber J. Grant's remarks:] My impression has been from the beginning to give the Scot amendment a trial, and when I heard that Prest. Taylor had sat down upon it, I must say I felt a little disappointed. I see nothing to be lost but a great deal may be gained.

[remarks of Franklin D. Richards:] I feel that I would like this Scott Amendment tried. I do not see that it necessarily Compromises us, that is, in an official capacity; by trying it we would gain one year, and that of itself would be of great value. And if Mr. Cleveland could be got nite (sic) nearer Communication, he may find something to admire and praise in us, and it may stimulate him, by way of a desire to get rid of the Mormon problem, to work with a view to let us into the Union.

[part of remarks of John W. Taylor:] The only thing that we can gain by making this Compromise is from 2 to 4 years. At the expiration of that time we will thoroughly advertize to this naion that we are willing to sacrifice, at least so far as our Word is concerned, in order to obtain liberty, and just as soon as we begin to break through suffering for righteousness sake, and clinging to the truth, and avoiding the very appearance of evil, He believe (sic) the Calamities will be greater upon us than if the bill now should become law. It has taken quite a time to school the Latter-day Saints to what we believe to day. And I find that it is getting to be believed that Prest. Taylor will yet receive a revelation to cancel the revelation on Celestial Marriage. And you let anything officially be given about this, and it will create quite a stir among the people. He did not want to express himself in regard to the wisdom of the matter, would leave that to older heads.

[remarks of Abraham O. Smoot:] He did not regard this a new question at all; the same thing was ventilated, only in a different form, perhaps, in Delegate Hooper's day. He was present on a certain occasion when this same subject was submitted to Prest Young & he remembered Bro. Geo. A. Smith's views on it, & his own personal endorsement at the time, which was that we had nothing at all on that point to offer as a Compromise. He had not changed his views since then. Even if he had the right to vote, he would be loth (sic) for it unless it was so dictated by those who had the right to commune with the Lord upon the question. If there were any light from that source he would submit with his brethren. But to say that he will forever sacrifice the practice of that command, he could not; neither did he think anybody could be justified in doing so unless the Lord himself so ordered it. There may be, he said, a policy in it which the ordinary mind could not comprehend. What he wished to know was, whether it was the will of the Lord to do it in order to gain a Victory. If by accepting this amendment we can do it without making it to appear to Israel (he did not care so much for the world) a Compromise or sacrifice, & in reality not to be a sacrifice, he was willing to follow his file-leaders and support it.

[remarks of a "Williams":] This telegram puts a new phase on the question. This Scott Amendment is to be sent by the President to Congress, stating that he will sign the bill if Congress will accept the Amendment. Most of the members of Congress have already expressed themselves as opposed to it. They will vote it down; the whole bill will be lost, and we will be saved both from the effects of the bill itself, and from voting on the question of the Constitutional Amendment. If we reject the proposition it will be considered by the government and the country that the few polygamists who control affairs in Utah are unwilling to have the question submitted to the body of the people. This will be damaging to our cause. By accepting the proposition now we make no promise, we make no agreement. We simply say, we are willing for the people to take their own course in regard to the proposition; and if we accept, the bill is killed, and we are relieved of both the danger and the question of compromise. If the amendment should pass the Congress with the bill, we then will have ample time to reflect upon the question of what shall be done by the people, and the probable effects of voting for the prohibition upon our people upon Congress and upon the Country.

[part of remarks of William B. Preston:] As a political strategy I would accept the proposition. It is generally said by the world that our people do just as the Presidency say. Now, let this proposition be submitted to the people, and let them say whether they are willing to adopt a Constitution with this proposition in. That would be Democratic.

[part of remarks of William Budge:] With my understanding of what they call polygamy, I could recommend the placing of this question before the people. It would be necessary, however, to make some explanation to the people in regard to our understanding of what is called polygamy. If there was no question asked further than whether we would vote against polygamy as understood in the world, I could vote for the amendment, but not to renounce Celestial Marriage.

[part of remarks of Angus M. Cannon:] I look upon it that it may be a ram in the thicket, but I cannot acquiesce in it without feeling that I am losing influence in consequence of the professions I have made heretofore.

[remarks of H.B. Clawson:] If we could do this thing without compromising our views and our religion, I would be in favor [of] doing it, merely to gain time. Time is what we want. I am willing to rest on the decision of the First Presidency in regard to this.

[part of remarks of A. Miner:] We must accept this proposition by all means. It is not a binding condition upon my faith, or upon the faith of any of our brethren. It will not bring the faith of the Latter-day Saints in contempt.

[remarks of Frank Armstrong:] He was in favor of submitting this to the people out of courtesy to our friends at Washington. It would also give time to perfect measures for securing the property. He would rather have the crisis come from the head of the nation than from those here. Individually, he could not vote for it.

[The collection described above is followed by a 9 page account of the verbatim remarks of George Q. Cannon at this meeting, handwritten, and beginning:] Dear Brs: Having expressed yourself (sic) that you had forgotten to hear my opinion with regard to our concurrence to the Scott amendment and having since reflected somewhat on the subject I take this means of giving it.

[His conclusion is found on the last page as follows:] My unqualified opinion that it is too dangerous a thing to play at concessions or anything approaching concession, or the color of concession with the government; the ground is not tenable let the circumstances be what they may.

Heber J. Grant Letterbook Journals--24; 1886-1887 Journal, pp. 581-582; at meeting of Apostles during which the advisability of continuing John W. Young in has activity for Statehood was discussed; October 25, 1887.

John W. Taylor expressed it as his opinion that it would be much better if all of our business in relation to a State was transacted /p. 582/ through the Council of Fifty.

Prest Woodruff said it would be all right for the Council of Fifty to meet and attend to this matter but under existing circumstances it would not be safe to have them do so.

The popular opinion among professing Christians is that the kingdom here alluded to was a spiritual kingdom set up by Jesus Christ upwards of eighteen centuries ago. But such a view of the subject we consider to be altogether erroneous, inasmuch as it does not consist with the declared and evident facts of the case. The kingdom here referred to by the Prophet Daniel, as is also evident from many other prophecies concerning it, will be a literal kingdom. It is catalogued with others that are literal in their character, although it will prove infinitely superior to them in all respects.

It will also be, in its organization, authority, and laws, entirely different to and distinct from all others. Even as the stone from the mountain was distinct from the image which is smote.

[At meeting of Apostles & First Presidency] Prest Woodruff said he would like to make a few remarks. Said it was the Kingdom of God or nothing with him. Did not care for any political party. /p.178/ I am for the Kingdom of God so also are my brethren of the Presidency and the Apostles. If we are united earth or hell cannot overthrow us, and we will prevail and the warfare against us shall not prevail. Believe I shall live to be with you at the dedication of the Temple. God bless you my brethren.

Nearly all of those present expressed themselves briefly on the great necessity of their (sic) being perfect love and union among us.

I noticed tear came in Prest. Woodruff's eyes a time or two while the brethren were expressing their love for the /p. 179/ Kingdom of God and their desire to know the wishes of the Presidency and determination to carry the same out even if it were in opposition to their own feelings.

After meeting Father was speaking to some of the brethren, when he said with the feelings which Pres. Woodruff entertained towards Moses Thatcher, it would not be wise for any of us to mention this matter to him. Father said Moses Thatcher's drawing away from his brethren commenced as far as his knowledge concerning it went, at a time when the Council of Fifty met in the old City Hall, and Moses opposed the proposition to anoint John Taylor as Prophet, Priest and King, and Moses' Opposition prevailed at that time. Moses has constantly opposed the increase of power in the hands of the President of the Church.

The kingdom of God [is] an order or government established by divine authority. It is the only legal government that can exist in any part of the universe. All other governments are illegal and unauthorized. God, having made all beings and worlds, has the supreme right to govern them by his own laws, and by officers of His own appointment. Any people attempting to govern themselves by laws of their own making, and by officers of their own appointment, are in direct rebellion against the Kingdom of God.

Its settings were always strictly private, and all its rules were carefully and promptly observed. . . I was present at every session, and being about the youngest member of that Council (in Nauvoo) I was deeply impressed with all that transpired, or was taught by the Prophet. * * *
[The original membership of the Council of Fifty included] a select circle of the Prophet's most trusted friends, including the twelve, but not all the constituted authorities of the Church, for Presidents Rigdon, Law of Marks [sic], the High Council or the presidents of quorums were not members of that council, which at times would exceed fifty in number.

President Smith: I merely wish to say in addition to what Prest. Lyman has said, (which I endorse thoroughly) that this body of men, this Council of Presidency and Apostles, compose the living constitution of the Church, with power to legislate, judge and decide.
A decision rendered here, though it may not meet exactly the mind of an individual member or individual members, will represent of course the mind of the majority, and it therefore becomes binding on each member of the Council, and not one of us can with impunity oppose it or in anywise, directly or indirectly, speak derogatory to it, as to do so would be a transgression, in spirit at least, of the covenant we enter into with the Lord in this Council. I regard this as one of the most sacred obligations resting upon the Presidency and Twelve.
We are united here in the bonds of the new and everlasting covenant. We represent the government of the holy priesthood, and besides, we are the special witnesses of Jesus Christ, also of Joseph Smith, and of the divinity of this great Latter-day work.

Brother Franklin S. Richards called at Brother David P. Howells' home this morning at my request, and we examined a private record covering a period of a number of years, of an organization that at one time had between forty and fifty members, when I was the junior apostle. Today Brother Franklin and I are the only surviving members. We got about two-thirds of the way through the record, and I arranged to meet him again next Sunday and finish it.

Heber J. Grant was ordained an apostle on 16 October 1882. He was voted for admission to the Council of Fifty on 26 June 1882.

On the following page [below] may be found a listing of Twentieth Century General Authorities called before 1932. Of the forty-four authorities, nineteen died before Heber J. Grant penned this entry in his journal; therefore, his entry is irrelevant to determining whether those individuals were members of the Council of Fifty. Those individuals in part II (where the entry does not apply) who have an asterisk by their name were members of the Council of Fifty. I did not include the name of Heber J. Grant for obvious reasons. Franklin S. Richards was never a General Authority. [page]

"Notes Towards a Definition of the Council of Fifty"; Alfred Bush and K. J. Hansen; pp. 20-21; July 1957.

The council's functions as legislature and administrator of temporal affairs were its prime concern, secondary only to the objective of universal government toward which all of its actions prepared. Hard work and the full efforts of the Latter-day Saints still pointed toward the realization of this kingdom. In acting as the regulator of temporal affairs in all Deseret (and its political heirs) it was concerned with much that seems trivial to twentieth century ears. * * *

But larger issues surrounded these provincial details. The role of the Council in the overall temporal progress of the Western settlement was vital. This is so even if one leaves out of account the matters of policy and action which led to the exodus and the crucial deliberations of the Council at Winter Quarters. The Council of Fifty figures prominently in the colonization and government of the territorial area after the arrival in the Great Salt Lake Valley.

The Council dispatched members to operate ferries which sped immigration of the Saints. In charge of Public Works, it planned and executed the building of roads and bridges in and about the Salt Lake valley. It instituted canal systems and a mail service to the Pacific Coast. It legislated a standard system of weights for the territory and selected plots for cemetaries. It sponsored community organizations for economic self-sufficiency. (The records of a Bishop's meeting in Provo in 1868 tell us that "ZCMI was concocted by the Council of Fifty." [Records of the Bishops' Meetings, Provo, 1868-1875, Vol. II (Microfilm at Brigham Young University), 28.]) Its members administered the United Order for, as Young taught, "It [was] the order of the kingdom." [J.D. 17:154] Members of the Council formed the nucleus (they had been leading officers in Nauvoo) of the Nauvoo legion, revived in the west as the third largest militia in the U.S., which was to serve in protecting and defending the kingdom. The Council investigated food shortages, discussed and rejected the use of subsidies to combat inflation, voted to build a "Firstrate" arsenal, and punished disturbances of the peace.

Utah Historical Quarterly; "The Kingdom of God, The Council of Fifty and the State of Deseret"; James R. Clark; p. 131-148; April 1958.

When they organized the Provisional State of Deseret, before they were accorded territorial status by the United States government, it was not a temporary expedient nor was it an example of American frontier democracy adjusting to a new region. The basic ideas for the government of the State of Deseret were not worked out after the Mormons arrived in Utah, but in meetings of the Council of Fifty in Nauvoo before the westward migration. The State of Deseret was the planned result of the doctrine of the Kingdom of God. The Kingdom of God was a civil-religious form of government. It was, eventually, to spread world wide and to have as its head Jesus Christ, the King. It was the instrument by which He was to govern the entire world.

* * * This kingdom of God was to be a religio-civil government and is not to be confused or identified with the Mormon Church as such, which is a religious organization. However, in current Mormon literature the church is often referred to as the Kingdom, and the distinction between the two terms and the two entities is not now sharp as it was in the territorial period.

It can be stated on the basis of Mormon, non-Mormon, and state and federal documents of the territorial period that the insistence of the Mormon leaders on this concept of the Kingdom of God was largely instrumental, along with the practice of polygamy, in delaying statehood for Utah for half a century. * * *

The basic authority for the Kingdom of God lay in the authority of the priesthood of the president of the Mormon Church, but the directional control was vested in a council known by a number of names, chief of which were the special council, the Council of Fifty, or more commonly, the General Council.

CHARACTERISTICS OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Certain characteristics of the projected Kingdom of God become clear as one reads the voluminous literature dealing with the concept. These characteristics are:

(1) The Kingdom of God was the kingdom predicted by the Old Testament Prophet Daniel. It was the stone cut out of the mountain without hands that was to break in pieces all other kingdoms and consume them.

(2) The Kingdom of God was to be the government of God on earth, and as such it was eventually to absorb all other governments. (3) The Kingdom of God was to include as members and as officers non-Mormons as well as Mormons.

(4) The Kingdom of God was to protect all peoples in their civil and religious rights, including the right to differ.

(5) The Kingdom of God was to rest politically on the doctrine of Legitimacy, expressed succinctly in these words of John Taylor in 1853:

> Let us now notice our political position in the world. What are we going to do? We are going to possess the earth. Why? Because it belongs to Jesus Christ, and he belongs to us, and we to him. We are all one, and will take the kingdom and possess it under the whole heavens, and reign over it forever and ever. Now, ye kings and emperors, help yourselves, if you can. This is the truth, and it may as well be told at this time as at any other. [J.D. 1:230]

(6) The Kingdom of God was a state and a political, social, and economic system which touched all phases of human life.

(7) The Kingdom of God had its own revealed constitution. The Constitution of the United States was written, according to Mormon belief, under the inspiration of God. The constitution of the Kingdom of God was given to Joseph Smith in 1844. Copies of this constitution are not at present available, but there is good evidence that it existed from 1844 to at least 1880.

(8) The Kingdom of God, though composed of non-Mormons as well as Mormons, was to be presided over in ultimate authority by the Mormon priesthood as representatives of Jesus Christ, the King.

(9) The establishment of the Kingdom of God necessitated the gathering of the Saints to form the nucleus of the Kingdom. If membership in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints alone had been involved, the converts could have stayed in their own localities and nations. This ties the Kingdom of God concept definitely to the Mormon doctrine and policy of Zion and the "gathering" discussed in such works as Gustive Larson's Prelude to the Kingdom. * * *

Relative to politics and government, the ultimate aim of the Kingdom recognized only one legitimate government on the earth--the government of God. All other governments were considered to be subordinate and inferior, including the government of the United States, even though its Constitution was held to be divinely inspired. Uniquely, the government of the United States, as provided for in the Constitution of 1789, was recognized as divinely approved in principles and was intended to serve the needs of the people and protect them in their God-given rights until the government of God could be established. * * *

In territorial Utah the Council of Fifty, or General Council, was the policy-making body of the Kingdom of God. It was the body from which policies for the government of men on the earth were to emanate. It was the policy-making body; the legislature of the State of Deseret was the legislative agency required to put these policies into law; and the executive branch, with Brigham Young as governor, was charged with the administration of the laws so formulated.

The council was charged with the responsibility of seeing that all men were protected in their God-given rights as individuals and as free men in all phases of life, and with the inauguration and carrying out of such plans of government as would assure co-operation and unity as well as freedom.

* * * POLITICAL AND CIVIL ACTIVITIES OF THE COUNCIL

The council initiated and supervised the preparation of memorials to Congress, both for the redress of previous grievances and as petitions for the granting of statehood to the people of Deseret, or Utah. Several of these memorials were prepared by the council while the Mormons were still in Nauvoo.

After the Council of Fifty had directed the westward migration of the Mormons in 1847, they met to consider means of government in the new territory. According to the diary of John D. Lee, private secretary to Brigham Young, the council met in Salt Lake City on December 9, 1848, to set up the planned State of Deseret. He says that the council:

> . . . took into consideration the propriety of petitioning Congress for a Territorial Government, giving them to understand at the same time that we wanted officers of our own nomination . . . Pres. B. Young was nominated and voted to be governor of said Territory; Willard Richards, Secretary; Heber C. Kimble, Chief Judge; N. K. Whitney & P. P. Pratt, Assocciate Judges; Dr. J. M. Burnhisal, Marshal. The Territory to be called Desarett. . . . [A Mormon Chronicle: The Diaries of John D. Lee, 1848-1876, p. 80; John D. Lee; Vol. I; ed. Robert Cleland and Juanita Brooks; (2 vols., San Marino, California: The Huntington Library, 1955).]

On January 6, 1849, the council considered a report of a committee which had previously been appointed to set the boundaries of the State of Deseret. On December 27, 1849, a memorial was prepared by the legislative council of the Provisional Government of Deseret praying for admission into the Union as a state, or for a territorial government. On March 28, 1851, the legislature of the State of Deseret passed a formal motion dissolving the State of Deseret.

It is generally known to students of Utah history that the State of Deseret and its legislative and executive branches continued to function for at least another twenty years after formal dissolution in 1851. Some have called this the "ghost" government of the "Ghost State of Deseret." In reality the federally established territorial government of Utah was the de jure government; the State of Deseret was the de facto government; and the Council of Fifty or General Council was the policy-making body for the civil government of Utah from 1848 to 1870, if not later. * * *

CONTINUING ACTIVITIES OF THE COUNCIL OF FIFTY AND THE STATE OF DESERET

In January, 1862, the State of Deseret held a Constitutional Convention at which another memorial for statehood was drafted and sent to Congress. On March 9, 1862, Brigham Young in a public address at a religious gathering made it clear that the ideas and principles espoused by the Council of Fifty and the Kingdom of God were still in operation. He said:

> The Kingdom of God has sustained me a good while, and I mean to stick to it. We shall form a State Government, and you need not fear any consequences that may arise from such a course. . . .
> ...When Mr. Fillmore appointed me Governor of Utah, I proclaimed openly that my Priesthood should govern and control that office. I am of the same mind today. We have not received our election returns; but, should I be elected Governor of the State of Deseret, that office shall be sustained and controlled by the power of the eternal Priesthood of the Son of God, or I will walk the office under my feet. Hear it both Saint and sinner, and send it to the uttermost parts of the earth, that whatever office I hold from any Government on this earth shall honor the Government of heaven, or I will not hold it. [J.D. 10:38-42] * * *

On . . . January 19, 1863 he also delivered a special private message to the General Assembly of the State of Deseret as its de facto governor. This message gives evidence that the concepts of the Kingdom of God and the Council of Fifty were very much alive and in evidence. He clearly outlines the reasons for continuing the government of the State of Deseret despite the fact that Utah had had a territorial government with federally appointeed officers since 1850:

> Many may not be able to tell why we are in this capacity. I do not think that you see this thing as it is. Our organization will be kept up. We may not do much at present in this capacity, yet what we have done or shall do will have its effect. . . .
> This body of men will give laws to the nations of the earth. We have met here in our second Annual Legislature. [The State of Deseret was formally dissolved in 1851--it was evidently formally reorganized in 1861.] . . . We are called the State Legislature, but when the time comes, we shall be called the Kingdom of God. . . the time will come when we will give laws to the nations of the earth. Joseph Smith organized this government before, in Nauvoo, and he said if we did our duty, we should prevail over all our enemies. [Brigham Young,

> Special Message to the General Assembly of the State of Deseret, in Journal History of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, entry of January 19, 1863, in Church Historians's Office, Salt Lake City.]

Highly significant is Brigham Young's statement that the State of Deseret in 1863 was the government organized by Joseph Smith in Nauvoo, which would be called the Kingdom of God and give laws to the nations of the earth. This seems to equate the Kingdom of God and the Council of Fifty with the State of Deseret in 1863. The General Assembly of the State of Deseret may have been but another name for the General Council or the Council of Fifty, which by this time may have had an enlarged membership.

The existence of this fourth government in Utah was referred to in a letter from Governor James Duane Doty to William H. Seward, Secretary of State of the United States, on January 28, 1865:

> There are three distinct governments in this Territory: The Church, the Military, and the civil. In the exercise of their several powers, collisions cannot always be avoided, but I am glad to report that during the past year none have occurred. But the leaders of "the church". . .in 1861, formed an independent government called the State of Deseret. . . . For the information of the Department I herewith transmit a copy of a paper containing the proceedings of the Governor and Legislature of this embryo State at a session held in this city on the 23rd of this month, by which it will be perceived this fourth government is now fully inaugerated. [Utah Governor (James Duane Doty) Report to Honorable W. H. Seward, Secretary of State, United States Department of State, Territorial Papers, Utah Series, Vol. II, January 28, 1865.]

SUMMARY

The foregoing discussion seems to establish without much doubt that there was organized in Nauvoo, Illinois, on March 11, 1844, a Council of Fifty to serve as the policy-making body of the Kingdom of God which the Latter-day Saints were seeking to establish in preparation for the Second Coming of Jesus Christ to reign as King. It seems rather certain from the evidence that it was this Council of Fifty which formulated the policies and handled the relationships with the Federal Government and which directed the efforts of the Latter-day Saints, and those non-Mormon friends who would join with them, in their political, civil, and educational activitites. Although evidence has not been offered, in my discussion, there is every reason to believe that the council directed the economic activities of the Kingdom as well.

The aims and purposes of this Kingdom and council were not directed primarily to the conversion of the world to Mormonism, as that was the province of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The efforts of the council and Kingdom were directed toward the establishment of an equitable form of government that would protect all men in their God-given rights and in their free agency and the establishment of a society in which the freedoms would thrive.

So far-reaching into every phase of society in Territorial Utah is the concept of the Kingdom of God and its accompanying body of control, the General Council, that it might be stated that a significant history of Utah cannot be written which does not take into consideration the influence of these ideas on both the Mormon and non-Mormon populations of the state.

The Rise and Fall of Nauvoo, pp. 180-181; Elder B. H. Roberts; pub. 1965.

It is evident from all this that, speaking broadly, with the Prophet the Kingdom of God was the government of God on earth and in heaven--whether that government was manifested through the authority of a single individual or a complete system of ecclesiastical or national government. This is, however, speaking broadly, not to say loosely; and in the same manner that the subject is spoken of in holy scripture where the phrases Kingdom of God, Kingdom of Heaven, the church of Christ, Church of God, the Church, etc, are often used interchangeably and indiscriminately to represent in a general way that divine institution which God in whole or in part from time to time establishes to help man in the matter of his salvation. But it is proper for the reader to know that Joseph Smith when speaking strictly recognized a distinction between "The Church of Jesus Christ" and the "Kingdom of God." And not only a distinction but a separation of one from the other. The Kingdom of God according to his teaching is to be a political institution that shall hold sway over all the earth; to which all other governments will be subordinate and by which they will be dominated. Of this kingdom Christ is the King; for He is to reign "King of Kings" as well as "Lord of Lords." While all governments are to be in subjection to the Kingdom of God, it does not follow that all its members will be of one religious faith. The Kingdom of God is not necessarily made up exclusively of members of the Church of Christ. In fact the Prophet taught that men not members of The Church could be, not only members of that Kingdom, but also officers within it. It is to grant the widest religious toleration, though exacting homage and loyalty to its great Head, to its institutions, and obedience to its laws.

On the other hand the church of Christ is purely an ecclesiastical organization, comprising within its membership only those who have embraced the Gospel of Jesus Christ; who inwardly have accepted its principles in their faith, and outwardly have received the rites and ceremonies it prescribes. Of this Church Jesus Christ is the Head, since He is to be "Lord of Lords" as well as "King of Kings." The Church is peculiarly Christ's. It bears His name. It is composed of members who, while not behind others in doing Him homage, as the head of the Kingdom of God, accept Him as more than the King of Kings--they accept Him as Lord--as Lord of Lords, as Redeemer--Savior--God. But the church of Christ, precious as it is; beloved by its great Head; in the harmony of its truth, perfect; in the beauty of its holiness, passing all praise; in its power of salvation, absolute--yet the Church of Christ will doubtless stand under the protecting aegis of the Kingdom of God in common with other systems of religion, enjoying only such rights as will be common to all. And while the Church of Christ will enjoy to the full her privileges, promulgate her faith without let or hinderance, make known the truth she holds and her saving grace and power, and manage her own affairs--yet she will not usurp the prerogative of the Kingdom of God, nor interfere with those outside the pale of her jurisdiction--outside of her membership. Such, in substance, was the teaching of the Prophet on this subject. Not publicly, or at least not very publicly; but he taught the foregoing in the counsels of the Priesthood as many testify, and effected an organization as a nucleus of the Kingdom above referred to of which some who were not in The Church were members.

It is only a question of time, said the Prophet, a few years, or a few hundred, perhaps, according to our reckoning, but time and space being without limit in the estimation of our Father, the course will be determined in accordancee with the "eternal fitness of things" through His will only. Lucifer's reign of anarchy prevails at present, and the nations are even now arming for the conflict which they foresee must necessarily ensue, and in the cruel desolation of war, men will be slain by hundreds, thousands and perhaps millions, their widows and orphans compelled to fly to Zion for safety, and it will become the bounden duty of the Elders of Israel to provide for their sustenance and welfare. Our [Church, not nation] present system, said the Prophet, will eventually resolve itself into an "United order" in which every member will work, not for his individual aggrandizement, but purely with an earnest desire to promote the interests of the Kingdom of God on the earth.

We are asked, Is the church of God, and the Kingdom of God the same organization? and we are informed that some of the brethren hold that they are separate.

This is the correct view to take. The Kingdom of God is a separate organization from the Church of God. There may be men acting as officers in the Kingdom of God who will not be members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. On this point the Prophet Joseph gave particular instructions before his death, and gave an example, which he asked the younger elders who were present to always remember. It was to the effect that men might be chosen to officiate as members of the Kingdom of God who had no standing in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The Kingdom of God when established will not be for the protection of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints alone, but for the protection of all men, whatever their religious views or opinions may be. Under its rule, no one will be permitted to overstep the proper bounds or to interfere with the rights of others.

MAKING YOUR CALLING & ELECTION SURE

1. History of the Church, 1:85; June 9, 1830; First Conference of the Church; Fayette, Seneca County, New York; Joseph Smith Jr. speaking.

He [Newel Knight] felt his heart filled with love, with glory, with pleasure unspeakable, and could discern all that was going on in the room; when all of a sudden a vision of the future burst upon him. He saw there represented the great work which through my instrumentality was yet to be accomplished. He saw heaven open, and beheld the majesty on high, and had it made plain to his understanding that the time would come when he would be admitted into His presence to enjoy His society for ever and ever.

2. Journals and Memoirs of Mary Elizabeth Rollins Lightner, pp. 2-3; See also Young Womens Journal, December, 1905, pp. 556-557; First week of February, 1831; Kirtland, Ohio. Note: "The latter part of January, in company with Brothers Sidney Rigdon and Edward Partridge, I started with my wife for Kirtland, Ohio, where we arrived about the first of February, and were kindly received and welcomed into the house of Brother Newel K. Whitney." As the Prophet arrived, many people gathered together in a little log cabin where he was staying, and apparently out of curiosity and interest they went to see him---some had never seen him before. Joseph then called a meeting together with them.

After prayer and singing, Joseph began talking. He began very solemnly and very earnestly. Suddenly his countenance changed, and he stood mute. He seemed almost transfixed. He looked ahead---he was looking ahead and his face outshone the candle which was on the shelf just behind him. I thought I could almost see his cheekbones. He looked as though a searchlight was inside his face. I never saw anything like it on earth. I could not take my eyes away from him. I shall remember him as he looked then as long as I live. After a short time he looked at us very solemnly as if to pierce each heart, and then said, 'Brothers and Sisters, do you know who has been in your midst this night?' One of the Smith family said, 'An angel of the Lord?' Joseph did not answer. Martin Harris was seated at the Prophet's feet on a box; he slid to his knees, clasped his arms around the Prophet's knees and said, 'I know--it was our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.' Joseph put his hand on Martin Harris' head and answered, 'Martin, God revealed that to you. Brothers and sisters, the Savior has been in our midst this night. I want you to remember it. He cast a veil over your eyes, for you could not endure to look upon him. You must be fed with milk and not meat. I want you to remember this if it were the last thing that escaped my lips. He has given you all to me and commanded me to seal you up unto eternal life, that where he is you may be also, and if you are tempted of Satan, say, 'Get thee behind me, Satan; my salvation is secure.'

3. Young Women's Journal, December, 1905, pp. 556-557; Testimony of Mary Elizabeth Rollins Lightner. See also above quotation.

I joined the Church in the year 1830, in Kirtland, Ohio, just six months after it was first organized. I was then twelve years old. The Smith family came to Kirtland early in the spring of 1831. After they were settled in their house, mother and I went to see them. We had heard so much about the Golden Bible, as it was then called, that we were very anxious to hear more. The whole Smith family, excepting Joseph, was there. As we stood talking to them, Brother Joseph and Martin Harris came in with two or three others. When the greetings were over, Brother Joseph looked around very solemnly (it was.the first time some of them had ever seen him) and said, "There are enough here to hold a little meeting."

A board was put across two chairs to make seats. Martin Harris sat on a little box at Joseph's feet. They sang and prayed, then Joseph got up to speak. He began very solemnly and very earnestly; all at once his countenance changed and he stood mute. He turned so white, he seemed perfectly transparent. Those who looked at him that night said he looked like he had a search light within him. I remember I thought we could almost see the bones through the flesh of his face.

I shall remember him as he looked then as long as I live. He stood some moments looking over the congregation, as if to pierce each heart, then said, "Do you know who has been in your midst this night?" One of the Smiths said, "An angel of the Lord?" Martin Harris said, "It was our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ." Joseph put his hand down on Martin's head and said, "The Spirit of God has revealed that to thee. Yes, brothers and sisters, the Savior has been in your midst this night, and I want you all to remember it. There is a veil over your eyes, for you could not endure to look upon him. You must be.fed with milk not with strong meat. I want you all to remember this as if it were the last thing that escapes my lips. He has given you all to me, and commanded me to seal you up to everlasting life, that where he is there you may be also. And if you are tempted of Satan say, "Get behind me Satan, for my salvation is secure." Then he knelt down and prayed. And such a prayer, I never heard before or since. We all felt that he was talking to the Lord and that the Spirit of the Lord rested down on the congregation.

4. Journal of Joseph Knight, Sr.; Summer, 1831; Colesville, Broome County, New York; CHO; as quoted in Principles of Perfection, p. 348, by H.L. Andrus.

All the members of the Colesville Branch those Saints who had joined the Church under adverse circumstances in the area of Colesville, Broome county, New York made their calling and election sure and were sealed to eternal life in 1831. This took place shortly after they and the Prophet arrived in the vicinity of Jackson county, Missouri, in the summer of that year.

5. Far West Record, p. 11; October 25, 1831; General Conference of the Church; Joseph Smith Jr.

Bro. Joseph Smith Jr. said the order of the high priesthood is that they have power given them to seal up the saints unto eternal life. And said it was the privilege of every elder present to be ordained to the high priesthood.

6. Journal History; Tuesday, October 25, 1831; Minutes of a General Conference of the Church.

. . . President Joseph Smith, Jun. said that the order of the High Priesthood was, that they have power given them to seal up the Saints unto eternal life. . .

Bro. Daniel Hanton said that he had a long time since covenanted to do the will of God in all things and remarked that it was his desire to be sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise. . .

Bro. Joseph Smith, Jun. said. . . .Until the Saints had perfect love they were liable to fall. When they had a testimony that their names were sealed in the Lamb's Book of Life, they had perfect love, and then it was impossible for false Christ's to deceive them.

7. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 9; October 25, 1831.

Until we have perfect love we are liable to fall and when we have a testimony that our names are sealed in the Lamb's book of life we have perfect love and then it is impossible for false Christs to deceive us.

8. Journal History; September 27, 1832; CHO. Note: Jared Carter labored in the vicinity of Benson, Vermont from October 25, 1831 until the middle of January, 1832. Of his labors he said:

During my labors in Benson I witnessed many manifestations, both in spirit and miracles, a few of which I will mention. The first instance of God manifesting his power to the Church was on the last day I held meeting with them. While I, in the commencement of the meeting, was praying, I was directed to pray most earnestly that God would grant unto us sealing grace. After this I felt directed by the spirit to declare unto the brethren that that day was a sealing time with them, as I had prayed in faith, that they might be blessed. My communication to them caused some of the brethren to tremble, for this was something that they had never before experienced; but I exhorted them to call more earnestly on the Lord. We then began to pray, but the spirit, as I viewed it in my mind, was not yet poured out; therefore, I again arose and devoted a few minutes to call upon the Lord with one accord. Accordingly, all of us lifted our voices to God, and while we were praying, the Spirit rested down upon us. We then administered the Sacrament and it appeared to me that the Church of Christ in that locality was sealed up to the Lord, and it was likewise made plain to me that every one of us present should meet again in Zion. I then felt as though I could leave them without fear, for I had a testimony that God would keep them.

9. Journal of Orson Pratt, August 26, 1833. Comments by Orson Pratt concerning his labors with Lyman Johnson in the area of Charleston, Vermont.

The 26th, in the forenoon the Church at Charleston, Vt., with some other brethren from other towns, met together and called upon the Lord; and the Lord heard their prayers and moved upon his servant Lyman Johnson by the power of the Holy Ghost to seal them up unto eternal life. And after this the brethren arose one by one and said that they knew that their names were sealed in the Lamb's Book of Life, and they all did bear this glorious testimony save two or three.

On the eighteenth day of December, 1833, the Prophet and a number of the leading Elders of the Church assembled in the printing office which had just been built and that office was dedicated by the Prophet Joseph Smith. Following this ceremony the prophet proceeded to bless Oliver Cowdery and several members of the Smith family, after having conferred upon Joseph Smith, Sen., the office and Priesthood of Patriarch of the Church.

[Speaking of his mother, Joseph said:]
. . . thus saith the Lord, She shall have eternal life.

[Speaking of his father, Joseph said:]
. . . and he shall also possess a mansion on high, even in the Celestial Kingdom. [Speaking of Hyrum, Joseph said:]
. . . And he shall have eternal life.

[Speaking of William, Joseph said:]
. . . he shall be saved unto the uttermost.

Some members of Zion's camp were sealed to eternal life by Joseph Smith before they left. They were promised that they would "come forth in the day of the Lord Jesus" but if they sinned "they would be delivered over to the buffeting of Satan for the destruction of the flesh." Apparently, the blessing was later given to the whole camp, as one of the members relates: "We were called together again and were sealed up unto eternal life the same as in Kirtland."

[Heber had just returned from his mission in England and relates:]

My family having been gone about two months, during which time I heard nothing from them; our brethren being in prison; death and destruction following us everywhere we went; I felt very sorrowful and lonely. The following words came to my mind and the Spirit said unto me, "Write" which I did by taking a piece of paper and writing on my knee as follows:

Verily I say unto my servant Heber, thou art my son, in whom I am well pleased; for thou art careful to hearken to my words, and not transgress my law, nor rebel against my servant Joseph Smith, for thou hast a respect to the words of mine anointed, even from the least to the greatest of them; therefore thy name is written in heaven, no more to be blotted out for ever, because of these things; and this Spirit and blessing shall rest down upon thy posterity for ever and ever; for they shall be called after thy name, for thou shalt have many more sons and daughters, for thy seed shall be as numerous as the sands upon the seashore; therefore, my servant Heber, be faithful, go forth in my name and I will go with you, and be on your right hand and on your left and my angels shall go before you and raise you up when you are cast down and afflicted; remember that I am always with you, even to the end.

14. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, pp. 149-151; June 27, 1839.

The Doctrine of Election. St. Paul exhorts us to make our calling and election sure. This is the sealing power spoken of by Paul in other places.

"13. In whom ye also trusted, that after ye heard the word of truth, the Gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise,

"14. Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of His glory, that we may be sealed up unto the day of redemption."---Ephesians, lst chapter.

This principle ought (in its proper place) to be taught, for God hath not revealed anything to Joseph, but what He will make known unto the Twelve, and even the least Saint may know all things as fast as he is able to bear them, for the day must come when no man need say to his neighbor, Know ye the Lord; for all shall know Him (who remain) from the least to the greatest. How is this to be done? It is to be done by this sealing power, and the other Comforter spoken of, which will be manifest by revelation.

The Two Comforters

There are two Comforters spoken of. One is the Holy Ghost, the same as given on the day of Pentecost, and that all Saints receive after faith, repentance, and baptism. This first Comforter or Holy Ghost has no other effect then pure intelligence. It is more powerful in expanding the mind, enlightening the understanding, and storing the intellect with present knowledge, of a man who is of the literal seed of Abraham, than one that is a Gentile, though it may not have half as much visible effect upon the body; for as the Holy Ghost falls upon one of the literal seed of Abraham, it is calm and serene; and his whole soul and body are only exercised by the pure spirit of intelligence; while the effect of the Holy Ghost upon a Gentile, is to purge out the old blood, and make him actually of the seed of Abraham. That man that has none of the blood of Abraham (naturally) must have a new creation by the Holy Ghost. In such a case, there may be more of a powerful effect upon the body, and visible to the eye, than upon an Israelite, while the Israelite at first might be far before the Gentile in pure intelligence.

The Second Comforter

The other Comforter spoken of is a subject of great interest, and perhaps understood by few of this generation. After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost, (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say to him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve Him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and his election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter, which the Lord hath promised the Saints, as is recorded in the testimony of St. John, in the 14th chapter, from the 12th to the 27th verses.

[Joseph quotes verses 16, 17, 18, 21, & 23 and then continues:]

Now what is this other Comforter? It is no more nor less than the Lord Jesus Christ Himself; and this is the sum and substance of the whole matter; that when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him, or appear unto him from time to time, and even He will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him, and the Lord will teach him face to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of the Kingdom of God; and this is the state and place the ancient Saints arrived at when they had such glorious visions---Isaiah, Ezekiel, John upon the Isle of Patmos, St. Paul in the three heavens, and all the Saints who held communion with the general assembly and Church of the Firstborn.

15. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 189; May 16, 1841.

He [Joseph] then spoke on the subject of election, and read the 9th chapter of Romans, from which it was evident that the election there spoken of was pertaining to the flesh, and had reference to the seed of Abraham, according to the promise God made to Abraham, saying, "In thee, and in thy seed, all the families of the earth shall be blessed." To them belonged the adoption and the covenants, &c. * * * The election of the promised seed still continues, and in the last day, they shall have the Priesthood restored unto them, and they shall be the "saviors on Mount Zion," the ministers of our God; if it were not for the remnant which was left, then might men now be as Sodom and Gomorrah. The whole of the chapter had reference to the Priesthood and the house of Israel; and unconditional election of individuals to eternal life was not taught by the Apostles. God did elect or predestinate, that all those who would be saved, should be saved in Christ Jesus, and through obedience to the Gospel; but He passes over no man's sins, but visits them with correction, and if His children will not repent of their sins He will discard them.

16. History of the Church, 5:323; April 2, 1843; Doctrine & Covenants 130:1-3.

Important Items of Instruction given by Joseph the Prophet at Ramus, Illinois, April 2nd, 1843.

When the Savior shall appear, we shall see Him as He is. We shall see that He is a man like ourselves, and that the same sociality which exists among us here will exist among us there, only it will be coupled with eternal glory, which glory we do not now enjoy. (John xiv:23) The appearing of the Father and the Son, in that verse, is a personal appearance; and the idea that the Father and the Son dwell in a man's heart is an old sectarian notion, and is false.

Calling and Election

Now, there is some grand secret here, and keys to unlock the subject. Notwithstanding the apostle exhorts them to add to their faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, etc., yet he exhorts them to make their calling and election sure. And though they had heard an audible voice from heaven bearing testimony that Jesus was the Son of God, yet he says we have a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed as unto.a light shining in a dark place. Now, wherein could they have a more sure word of prophecy than to hear the voice of God saying, This is my beloved Son.

Now for the secret and grand key. Though they might hear the voice of God and know that Jesus was the Son of God, this would be no evidence that their election and calling was made sure, that they had part with Christ, and were joint heirs with him. They then would want that more sure word of prophecy, that they were sealed in the heaven and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God. Then, having this promise sealed unto them, it was an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast. Though the thunders might roll and lightnings flash, and earthquakes bellow, and war gather thick around, yet this hope and knowledge would support the soul in every hour of trial, trouble and tribulation. Then knowledge through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is the grand key that unlocks the glories and mysteries of the kingdom of heaven. . . .

Then I would exhort you to go on and continue to call upon God until you make your calling and election sure for yourselves, by obtaining this more sure word of prophecy, and wait patiently for the promise until you obtain it. (Pp 298-299)

The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the holy priesthood. It is impossible for a man to be saved in ignorance. Paul saw the third heavens, and I more. (p. 301)

Calling and Election to be Made Sure

Contend earnestly for the like precious faith with the Apostle Peter, "and add to your faith virtue," knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity; "for if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." Another point, after having all these qualification,.he lays this injunction upon the people "to make your calling and election sure." He is emphatic upon this subject---after adding all this virtue, knowledge, etc., "Make your calling and election sure." What is the secret---the starting point? "According as His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness." How did he obtain all things? Through the knowledge of Him who hath called him. There could not anything be given, pertaining to life and godliness, without knowledge. Woe! woe! woe to Christendom!---especially the divines and priests if this be true.

Salvation is for a man to be saved from all his enemies; for until a man can triumph over death, he is not saved. A knowledge of the priesthood alone will do this.

The design of the great God in sending us into this world, and organizing us to prepare us for the eternal worlds, I shall keep in my own bosom at present.

We have no claim in our eternal compact, in relation to eternal things, unless our actions and contracts and all things tend to this. But after all this, you have got to make your calling and election sure. If this injunction would lie largely on those to whom it was spoken, how much more those of the present generation!

lst key: knowledge is the power of salvation. 2nd key: Make your calling and election sure. 3rd key: It is one thing to be on the mount and hear the excellent voice, etc., and another to hear the voice declare to you, You have a part and lot in that kingdom. (pp. 305-306)

Then having this promise sealed unto them it was an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast. 19. History of the Church, 5:391-392; Tuesday, May 16, 1843.

Tuesday, 16.---At eleven o'clock, with George Miller, William Clayton,

Eliza and Lydia Partridge and J. M. Smith, I started for Carthage, where we tarried about half-an-hour conversing with different individuals, when we started for Ramus; arrived about half-past three, p.m., and stayed at William G. Perkins for the evening; then went to Benjamin F. Johnson's with William Clayton to sleep. Before retiring, I gave Brother and Sister Johnson some instructions on the priesthood: and putting my hand on the knee of William Clayton, I said:

"Your life is hid with Christ in God, and so are many others. Nothing but the unpardonable sin can prevent you from inheriting eternal life for you are sealed up by the power of the Priesthood unto eternal life, having taken the step necessary for that purpose.

Except a man and his wife enter into an everlasting covenant and be married for eternity, while in this probation, by the power and authority of the Holy Priesthood, they will cease to increase when they die; that is, they will not have any children after the resurrection. But those who are married.by the power and authority of the priesthood in this life, and continue without committing the sin against the Holy Ghost, will continue to increase and have children in the celestial glory. The unpardonable sin is to shed innocent blood, or be accessory thereto. All other sins will be visited with judgment in the flesh, and the spirit being delivered to the buffetings of Satan until the day of the Lord Jesus.

The way I know in whom to confide---God tells me in whom I may place confidence.

In the celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees; and in order to obtain the highest, a man must enter into this order of the priesthood, (meaning the new and everlasting covenant of marriage;) and if he does not, he cannot obtain it. He may enter into the other, but that is the end of his kingdom; he cannot have any increase."

Wednesday, 17.---Partook of breakfast at Brother Perkins; after which we took a pleasure ride through Fountain Green.

At ten a.m. preached from 2nd Peter, 1st chapter and showed that knowledge is power; and the man who has the most knowledge has the greatest power.

"Salvation means a man's being placed beyond the power of all his enemies. The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the holy priesthood. It is impossible for a man to be saved in ignorance.

Paul saw the third heavens, and I more. Peter penned the most sublime language of any of the apostles."

In the afternoon attended council, and afterwards rode with Benjamin F. Johnson's family.

21. The Words of Joseph Smith, p. 208, by Ehat & Cook; May 21, 1843.

It is one thing to receive knowledge by the voice of God ([to hear the words as Peter, James and John did on the Mount of Transfiguration] "This is my beloved Son, etc.) and another [thing] to know that you yourself will be saved. To have a positive promise of your own salvation is making your Calling and Election sure, viz., [by hearing] the voice of Jesus saying [to you], "My beloved, thou shalt have eternal life." Brethren never cease struggling until you get this evidence. Take heed both before and after obtaining this more sure word of Prophecy. (May 21st)

22. Doctrine & Covenants 132:49; July 16, 1843. A revelation given through

Joseph Smith the Prophet, at Nauvoo, Illinois, recorded July 12, 1843, relating to the new and everlasting covenant, including the eternity of the marriage covenant, as also plurality of wives. Although this revelation was recorded in 1843 it is evident from historical records that the doctrines and principles involved ln this revelation had been known by the prophet since 1831. Joseph's exaltation is sealed upon him.

For I am the Lord thy God and will be with thee even unto the end of the world, and through all eternity; for verily I seal upon you your exaltation, and prepare a throne for you in the kingdom of my Father, with Abraham your father.

23. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, Pages as indicated after quotes.

Four destroying angels holding power over the four quarters of the earth until the servants of God are sealed in their foreheads, which signifies sealing the blessing upon their heads, meaning the everlasting covenant, thereby making their calling and election sure. When a seal is put upon the father and mother, it secures their posterity, so that they cannot be lost, but will be saved by virtue of the covenant of their father and mother. (August 27, 1843; p. 321)

The spirits of just men are made ministering servants to those who are sealed unto life eternal, and it is through them that the sealing power comes down. (p.325)

Then what you seal on earth, by the keys of Elijah, is sealed in heaven; and this is the power of Elijah, and this is the difference between the spirit and power of Elias and Elijah; for while the spirit of Elias is a forerunner, the power of Elijah is sufficient to make our calling and election sure. (pp. 337-338)

It is not only necessary that you should be baptized for your dead, but you will have to go through all the ordinances for them the same as you have gone through to save yourselves. There will be 144,000 saviors on Mount Zion, and with them an innumerable host that no man can number. Oh! I beseech you to go forward, go forward and make your calling and your election sure. (P. 366)

24. J.D. 12:103; Remarks by Pres. Brigham Young; Old Tabernacle, SLC; November 17, 1867.

Before Joseph's death he had a revelation concerning myself and others, which signified that we had passed the ordeal, and that we should never apostatize from the faith of the holy gospel; "and," said Joseph, "if there is any danger of your doing this, the Lord will take you to Himself forthwith, for you cannot stray from the truth." When men and women have travelled to a certain point in their labors in this life, God sets a seal upon them that they never can forsake their God or His kingdom; for, rather than they should do this, He will at once take them to Himself, Probably this is so with many of the elders who are taken from us, and over whom many ignorantly mourn.

QUOTATIONS ON MAKING YOUR CALLING & ELECTION SURE AND RELATED TOPICS 1900-1983

1. Conference Report, pp. 56-57; Semi-Annual General Conference, October 6, 1901, Sunday Afternoon; Elder J. Golden Kimball.

There is another principle I very much desire to call your attention to, and that is, the eternal progression of the Gospel and what it requires to secure eternal life. * * *

The Prophet Joseph Smith informs us that the first Comforter or Holy Ghost has no other effect than pure intelligence, and the Prophet continues by saying "The other Comforter spoken of is a subject of great interest and perhaps understood by few of this generation. After receiving the first Comforter then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted, etc. When the Lord has thoroughly proven him and finds that the man will serve Him at all hazards then the man will find his calling and election made sure. Then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter which the Lord has promised the Saints as recorded in the testimony of St. John, 14:12,27. "Now what is this other Comforter?" says Joseph: "It is no more nor less than the Lord Jesus Christ, and this is the sum and substance of the matter, that when any man obtains this last Comforter he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him, or appear unto him from time to time and even He will manifest the Father unto him.

2. The Vision, pp. 44-46; Sermon given by Elder Melvin J. Ballard in the Ogden, Utah Tabernacle; September 22, 1922.

So you see, it is within the reach of every man and woman who lives, but only attainable by those who pay the price, who stand the test, who prove themselves, who comply with the terms and conditions that make their calling and election sure.

3. The Improvement Era, November, 1949, pp. 719, 752, 754; Address delivered at the Friday afternoon session of the 120th semi-annual general conference, September 30, 1949 in the Tabernacle on Temple Square; Entitled: "Fruits of the Gospel;" Elder Marion G. Romney.

The other fruit of the gospel named in the quotation [D&C 59:23]--"eternal life in the world to come"--must be a glorious thing, for the Lord has said that "he that hath eternal life is rich." (D&C 6:7) and that the "gift of eternal life is the greatest of all the gifts of God." (D&C 14:7.) He who obtains it will obtain an exaltation in the celestial kingdom of our Father in heaven. Speaking of such the Lord says, among other things:

> They are they who are the church of the Firstborn. . . .into whose hands the Father has given all things.--
> They are they who are priests and kings, who have received of his fulness, and of his glory; (D&C 76:54-70)

The gift of eternal life in the world to come may not, of course, be fully realized during earth life. An assurance that it will be obtained in the world to come may, however, be had in this world. As a matter of fact, the blessings of the celestial kingdom are promised only to those who have such an assurance.

[After quoting D&C 76:51-53, Elder Romney continues:]

The Prophet Joseph taught that one so sealed would have within himself an assurance born of the spirit, that he would obtain eternal life in the world to come. He urgently and repeatedly admonished the Saints of his day to obtain such an assurance by making their calling and election sure. It is this assurance within a person which brings to him the peace in this world which will sustain him in every tribulation. * * *

These fruits of the gospel--assurance that we shall obtain eternal life, peace in this world sustained by such an assurance, and finally eternal life in the world to come--are within the reach of us all. Sometimes, however, because of our lack of understanding and appreciation of them, I am persuaded that we take too much for granted. We assume that because we are members of the Church, we shall receive as a matter of course all the blessings of the gospel. I have heard people contend that they have a claim upon them because they have been through the temple, even though they are not careful to keep the covenants they there made. I do not think this will be the case.

We might take a lesson from an account given by the Prophet of a vision of the resurrection, in which he records that one of the saddest things he had ever witnessed was the sorrow of members of the Church who came forth to a resurrection below that which they had taken for granted they would receive.

I conceive the blessings of the gospel to be of such inestimable worth that the price for them must be very exacting, and if I correctly understand what the Lord has said on the subject, it is. The price, however, is within the reach of us all, because it is not to be paid in money nor in any of this world's goods but in righteous living. What is required is wholehearted devotion to the gospel and unreserved allegiance to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

* * *

A half-hearted performance is not enough. We cannot obtain these blessings and be like the rich young man who protested that he had kept the commandments from his youth up but who went away sorrowful when, in answer to the question, "What lack I yet?" Jesus said unto him,

> If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor. . . and come and follow me. (Matt 19:21)

Evidently he could live everything but the welfare program. There can be no such reservation. We must be willing to sacrifice everything. Through self-discipline and devotion we must demonstrate to the Lord that we are willing to serve him under all circumstances. When we have done this, we shall receive an assurance that we shall have eternal life in the world to come. Then we shall have peace in this world. * * *

Now may the Lord bless us, my brethren and sisters, with an understanding of his great gospel. And may we press forward with diligence and energy to perfect and qualify ourselves to receive and enjoy the full fruits thereof, for they are of all things the most joyous to the soul. Let us each day in solemn honesty confront ourselves with the rich man's question, "What lack I yet?" And thus, with utter frankness, discovering our own limitations, let us conquer them one by one until we obtain peace in this world through an assurance that we shall have eternal life in the world to come.

4. The Improvement Era, December, 1965, pp. 1115-1116; Address given at the October semi-annual General Conference, Friday morning session, October 1, 1965; Delivered by Elder Marion G. Romney; Entitled: "Making Our Calling and Election Sure".

The theme I have in mind to discuss is "Making One's Calling and Election Sure." To do this one must receive a divine witness that he will inherit eternal life. The supreme objective of men who understand God, their relationship to him, and his designs for them is to gain eternal life. * * *

The fullness of eternal life is not attainable in mortality, but the peace which is its harbinger and which comes as a result of making one's calling and election sure is attainable in this life. * * *

I should think that every faithful Latter-day Saint ". . .would want that more sure word of prophecy, that they were sealed in the heavens and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God." (DHC, 5, 388.) * * *

Now in conclusion, I give you my own witness. I know that God our Father lives, that we are, as Paul said, his offspring. I know that we dwelt in his presence in pre-earth life and that we shall continue to live beyond the grave. I know that we may return into his presence, if we meet his terms. I know that while we are here in mortality there is a means of communication between him and us. I know it is possible for men to so live that they may hear his voice and know his words and that to receive "the Holy Spirit of promise" while here in mortality is possible. And so, in the words of the Prophet Joseph, ". . .I . . exhort you to go on and continue to call upon God until [by the more sure word of prophecy] you make your calling and election sure for yourselves. . . ." (DHC, 5, 389.)

The ultimate end, even in the individual life is that a man is supposed to see angels, and hear the voice of God, and have the gift of the Holy Ghost. The end result, even for a single individual, if he gets his calling and election made sure and the gospel fully operates in his life, is that he has the Lord Jesus to attend him. And even He will reveal the Father. Now that is the Prophet's own language. When the Gospel gets perfected even in an individual, he has angels coming to him. And he sees God.

7. 1967-68 Melchizedek Priesthood Course of Study--"A Light Unto The World", pp. 250-251; "What Is Celestial Marriage?"

"If the family unit continues, then by virtue of that fact the members of the family have gained eternal life (exaltation), the greatest of all the gifts of God, for by definition exaltation consists in the continuation of the family unit in eternity. Those so inheriting are the sons and daughters of God, the members of his family, those who have made their callings and elections sure. They are joint-heirs with Christ to all that the Father hath, and they receive the fulness of the glory of the Father, becoming gods in their own right. (D&C 132; Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 2, pp. 58-59.) * * *

"Making one's calling and election sure is in addition to celestial marriage and results from undeviating and perfect devotion to the cause of righteousness. Those married in the temple can never under any circumstances gain exaltation unless they keep the commandments of God and abide in the covenant of marriage which they have taken upon themselves.

8. About Marriage & More, p. 49; 1968 edition; Belnap-Griffin, M.D.

Making one's calling and election sure is in addition to celestial marriage and results from undeviating and perfect devotion to the cause of righteousness. Those married in the temple can never under any circumstances gain exaltation unless they keep the commandments of God and abide in the covenant of marriage that they have taken upon themselves.

9. Speeches of the Year, B.Y.U., March 25, 1969; Elder Bruce R. McConkie; Speech entitled: "Making Our Calling and Election Sure"; Transcribed from the original taped version.

Thus, making one's calling and election sure grows out of baptism for one thing, and it grows out of celestial marriage for another. There is no such thing as gaining exaltation and eternal life except in and through the continuation of the family unit in eternity. Since making one's calling and election sure grows out of celestial marriage, the Lord took occasion to reveal the doctrine relative to it in connection with the revelation on marriage. If we enter in at this gate of marriage and then pursue a steadfast course, we gain eternal life. Making our calling and election sure is thus a matter of being married in the temple and of keeping the terms and conditions of this new and everlasting covenant of marriage. After entering in at the gate of celestial marriage, if we keep the commandments, then at some subsequent time, after great devotion and righteousness, after the Lord has proved us at all hazards, then he says:

> . . .Ye shall come forth in the first resurrection;. . .and shall inherit thrones, kingdoms, principalities, and powers, dominions, all heights and depths--(D&C 132:19).

In other words God, by revelation, tells us that our calling and election is made sure, that we are sealed up unto eternal life. * * *

This, then, without amplifying, without saying more, is the doctrine that is involved. It is a true doctrine; it is a sound doctrine. What does it mean to us? It is not something that is beyond us; it is not outside the realm of our capabilities. * * * The Lord would not say to us, "Make your calling and election sure," unless he knew it was within our spiritual potential-- unless we had the capacity and ability to press forward in steadfastness and devotion until that desired eventuality occurred.

Now, I am suggesting that this is within the realm of possibility and of probability for the members of the Church today. There are many in this Church who have obtained such a status. This ought to cause us to make a firm and unshakable determination to gain the blessings and benefits of baptism; to gain the blessings and benefits of celestial marriage; and in each instance those blessings accrue on condition that we keep the covenants that we make in connection with those holy ordinances. And then we ought to press forward with a steadfastness in Christ, keeping the commandments and living by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God, so that our calling and election shall be made sure. In one manner of speaking, this is the most glorious doctrine that there is in the Church.

10. The Improvement Era, December 1969, pp. 84-86; October semi-annual General Conference; Elder Bruce R. McConkie; Sermon entitled: "The Rock of Salvation".

Thus we learn that any man who obeys the law entitling him to receive revelation shall see and hear and know for himself. Revelation for the Church comes through those who are prophets, seers, and revelators to the Church, but personal revelation, revelation for the guidance of the individual, revelation which says to a man and a woman, "Son, daughter, thou shalt be exalted; thou shalt have part and lot in my kingdom," this revelation comes to them as individuals, alone and apart from all others. * * * There are goals to gain, summits to climb, revelation to receive. In the eternal scope of things we have scarcely started out on the course to glory and exaltation. The Lord wants his saints to receive line upon line, precept upon precept, truth upon truth, revelation upon revelation, until we know all things and have become like him.

Let us press forward in making our callings and elections sure, until, as Joseph Smith said, we shall have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend us, or to appear to us from time to time, and until even he will manifest the Father unto us. (See Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 151.)

I know man can commune with his Maker, can petition the throne of grace and receive answers to his prayers, because I have done so.

I know man can receive revelations, because I have received them. * * *

The same things has or can or should happen in the life of every member of his kingdom.

God be praised that, unworthy though we are, he stands ready to and does in fact reveal himself to those of us who are sons and daughters in his kingdom.

11. Doctrines of Salvation, Vol. 2:46-47; 1969 edition; Elder Joseph Fielding Smith; 1955 copyright.

MAKING OUR CALLING AND ELECTION SURE. Those who press forward in righteousness, living by every word of revealed truth, have power to make their calling and election sure. They receive the more sure word of prophecy and know by revelation and the authority of the priesthood that they are sealed up unto eternal life. They are sealed up against all manner of sin and blasphemy except the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost and the shedding of innocent blood. But the mere fact of being married for time and eternity in the temple, standing alone, does not give them this guarantee. Blessings pronounced upon couples in connection with celestial marriage are conditioned upon the subsequent faithfulness of the participating parties.

12. The Ensign, July, 1972, p. 98; April General Conference, Priesthood Session; Entitled: "The Covenant of the Priesthood"; Elder Marion G. Romney.

The Prophet Joseph Smith used to repeatedly urge the brethren of the priesthood to make their calling and election sure. If we want to do that, we will have to magnify our callings in the priesthood.

13. Spiritual Roots of Human Relations, p. 167; 1973 edition; Stephen R. Covey.

A covenant is a contract entered into by two parties and binding upon both. In the waters of baptism we enter into a covenant or promise to keep the commandments of the Lord. He, in turn, gives us a promise that if we are true to our promise, he will give us peace in this world and eternal life in the world to come. The Holy Ghost is sometimes called the Holy Spirit of Promise, which plants in man's breast a conditional promise of eternal life, regardless of the problems and afflictions that may dog his path in this world. It is my understanding that if a person is sufficiently faithful and proven in this world, the time might come either in mortality or in eternity when he will be given an unconditional promise of eternal life. I understand this to be making one's calling and election sure.

14. I Challenge You. . .I Promise You, p. 74; 1973 edition; Paul H. Dunn & Richard M. Eyre.

Considering the greatness and the wonder of the feeling of the Spirit, does it seem possible to you that the Holy Spirit of promise, the calling and election made sure, is in fact an extension and a perfection of this same Spirit?

15. 1973-74 Melchizedek Priesthood Study Guide, p. 7

Not only has the Lord made these goals known to us, but He has provided the means whereby they can be realized. They are not mere idealistic abstractions. They are actual realities which are within the grasp of all of God's children who will humbly accept the Lord & gratefully follow His generous counsel. One of the high and inestimable privileges man has been promised is that he may know God. The Lord said:

[Quotes: John 14:16, 17, 21, 23]

16. The Ensign/November 1974, p. 67; October Semi-Annual General Conference; President Ezra Taft Benson.

And twelfth, goals. Every accountable child of God needs to set goals, short-and long-range goals. * * * This encompasses four main areas for goals: spiritual, mental, physical, and social. "Therefore, what manner of men ought ye to be?" asked the Master, and he answered, "Verily I say unto you, even as I am." (3 Ne. 27:27.) Now there is a lifetime goal---to walk in his steps, to perfect ourselves in every virtue as he has done, to seek his face, and to work to make our calling and election sure.

"Brethren," said Paul, ". . .but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind. and reaching forth unto those things which are before.

"I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Philip. 3:13-14)

17. Relationships. . .Self. . .Family. . .God, pp. 52, 95, 154, 190; Paul H. Dunn and Richard M. Eyre.

How are you spiritually? . . . quite a question, because on its answer may hang your ultimate ability to enter the celestial kingdom. Peter spoke of the celestial prerequisites. . . . (actually, he calls them requirements "to make your calling and election sure". . . .but that calling and election is a promise of celestial glory, so one's requirements are the others.) Peter listed eight: Faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity. * * *

Think about those six ways of attracting the proper spirit to your home. . . .add whatever others you can think of, and consider the possibility that the Holy Spirit of Promise is essentially the final destination and the top rung of a lifetime of Holy Ghost dependency and presence. * * *

As we strive toward the knowledge of Christ, and consequently of the Father, the Holy Ghost will teach us what cannot be learned elsewhere, and we will learn to know the Teacher as well as His topic. . . .Ultimately, when the Spirit of the Holy Ghost becomes strong enough to make our calling and election sure, we will know Jesus Christ well enough that He will become our Second Comforter. * * *

Peter listed the qualities needed to bring about that return. . . .the qualities that will assure calling and election and return. His list was faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity. Joseph Smith said the same thing on the same topic in different words: "Humble yourselves, hunger and thirst after righteousness, live by every word of God." Both the ancient apostle and the modern one were telling us that the way to return is to be Christ-like.

18. The Ensign/July 1976, pp. 50-53; Roy W. Doxey; Article entitled: "Accepted of the Lord---The Doctrine of Making Your Calling and Election Sure".

Although the process of obtaining exaltation continues even into the spirit world, the knowledge that one will become exalted with the privileges of continuing on to eternal life can be certain in this life. This is what making one's calling and election sure is all about. * * *

The promise of becoming a member of the church of the Firstborn is also made to Latter-day Saints. (See D&C 76:50-60.) In our dispensation many Saints have made their calling and election sure. * * *

Inasmuch as the calling and election made sure is the greatest of all blessings received in this life, what greater counsel may Latter-day Saints receive than the following from the Prophet Joseph Smith:

> Then I would exhort you to go on and continue to call upon God until you make your calling and election sure for yourselves, by obtaining this more sure word of prophecy, and wait patiently for the promise until you obtain it." (Teachings, p. 299.)

19. The Ensign/May 1977, pp. 43-45; April General Conference; President Marion G. Romney; Sermon entitled: "The Light of Christ".

[After discussing the Light of Christ, and the Holy Ghost, President Romney continues by discussing the more sure word:]

Now, concerning the third phase of our theme, "the more sure word of prophecy" (D&C 131:5), which is obtained by making one's calling and election sure" (2 Pet. 1:10), the Prophet Joseph said:

"After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost, (by the laying on of hands) . . . then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve Him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and his election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter, which the Lord hath promised the Saints, as is recorded in the testimony of St. John." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 150.)

I should think that all faithful Latter-day Saints "would want that more sure word of prophecy, that they were sealed in the heavens and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God." (H.C. 5:388)

As I read the sacred records, I find recorded experiences of men in all dispensations who have had this more sure anchor to their souls, this peace in their hearts. * * *

In this dispensation many have received like assurances. * * * Now my beloved brethren, by way of summary and conclusion, I bear witness to the verity of these great truths. * * * . . .every such person who, having come this far [baptism & the Holy Ghost], will follow the Prophet's admonition to "continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God" (TPJS, p 150) may obtain the more sure word of prophecy.

That the Lord will bless all of us priesthood bearers that we will so understand these great truths, that in the end we shall, by making our calling and election sure. enjoy the full light of Christ, I humbly pray, in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer, Amen.

20. The Ensign/November 1977, pp. 33-35; October Semi-annual General Conference, Priesthood Session, Saturday, October 1, 1977; Elder Bruce R. McConkie; Sermon entitled: "The Ten Blessings of the Priesthood".

Blessings nine: We have power to make our calling and election sure, so that while we yet dwell in mortality, having overcome the world and been true and faithful in all things, we shall be sealed up unto eternal life and have the unconditional promise of eternal life in the presence of Him whose we are.

Our revelations say: "The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life, by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood." (D&C 131:5.)

During the latter years of his ministry, in particular, the Prophet

Joseph Smith pleaded fervently with the Saints to press forward in righteousness until they made their calling and election sure, until they heard the heavenly voice proclaim: "Son, thou shalt be exalted." (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 150.)

Blessing ten: We have the power--and it is our privilege-- so to live, that becoming pure in heart, we shall see the face of God while we yet dwell as mortals in a world of sin and sorrow.

This is the crowning blessing of mortality. It is offered by that God who is no respecter of persons to all the faithful in his kingdom.

"Verily, thus saith the Lord: It shall come to pass that every soul who forsaketh his sins and cometh unto me, and calleth on my name, and obeyeth my voice, and keepeth my commandments, shall see my face and know that I am." (D&C 93:1.) * * *

Now, my brethren, this is the priesthood which we hold. It will bless us as it blessed Melchizedek and Abraham. The priesthood of Almighty God is here. The doctrines which we teach are true, and by obedience to them we can enjoy the words of eternal life here and now and be inheritors of immortal glory hereafter.

I know, and you know, that as the heavens are above the earth, so are these truths of which we speak above all the ways of the world and all the honors which men can confer.

God grant that we may keep the commandments and be inheritors of all that a gracious Lord promises his people. In the name of Jesus Christ, amen.

21. The Ensign/May 1978, p. 48; April General Conference, Priesthood Session; President Spencer W. Kimball; Sermon entitled: "Strengthening the Family---the Basic Unit of the Church".

Salvation could not come to this world without the mediation of Jesus Christ. How shall God come to the rescue of the generations? He will send Elijah the prophet. The law revealed to Moses in Horeb never was revealed to the children of Israel as a nation. Elijah shall reveal the covenants to seal the hearts of the fathers to the children and the children to the fathers. The anointing and sealing is to be called, elected, and the election made sure.

I know that God lives. I know that Jesus Christ lives," said John Taylor, my predecessor, "for I have seen him." I bear this testimony to you brethren in the name of Jesus Christ, Amen.

[Note: The reference to the anointing and sealing comes from Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 323: "The anointing and sealing is to be called, elected and made sure", and refers to the second anointing and subsequent sealing which makes a person's calling and election sure.]

22. The Ensign/May 1980, pp. 72-3; 150th Annual General Conference, April, 1980; Sunday Afternoon Session, April 6th, 1980; Elder Bruce R. McConkie.

As the Saints prepare to meet their God, so those who are carnal and sensual and devilish prepare to face their doom. As the meek among men make their calling and election sure, so those who worship the God of this world sink ever lower and lower into the depths of depravity and despair.

23. The Holy Temple, pp. 151-153; 1981 edition; Elder Boyd K. Packer.

Nevertheless, in the Church we hold sufficient authority to perform all of the ordinances necessary to redeem and to exalt the whole human family. And, because we have the keys to the sealing power, what we bind in proper order here will be bound in heaven. Those keys---the keys to seal and bind on earth, and have it bound in heaven---represent the consummate gift from our God. With that authority we can baptize and bless, we can endow and seal, and the Lord will honor our commitments.

The Prophet Joseph Smith said he was frequently asked the question:

> "Can we not be saved without going through with all those ordinances, etc."? I would answer, No, not the fullness of salvation. Jesus said "There are many mansions in my Father's house, and I will go and prepare a place for you. House here named should have been translated kingdom; and any person who is exalted to the highest mansion has to abide a celestial law, and the whole law too. (H.C. 6:184)

On another occasion, talking on the same subject, he said:

> There are mansions for those who obey a celestial law, and there are other mansions for those who come short of the law, every man in his own order. There is baptism, etc., for those to exercise who are alive, and baptism for the dead who die without the knowledge of the Gospel.
>
> I am going on in my progress for eternal life. It is not only necessary that you should be baptized for your dead, but you will have to go through all the ordinances for them, the same as you have gone through to save yourselves. . . .Oh! I beseech you to go forward, go forward and make your calling and your election sure. (H.C. 6:365)

President Joseph Fielding Smith said:

> I do not care what office you hold in this Church, you may be an apostle, you may be a patriarch, a high priest, or anything else, and you cannot receive the fulness of the priesthood unless you go into the temple of the Lord and receive these ordinances of which the prophet speaks. No man can get the fulness of the priesthood outside of the temple of the Lord.

He then said that there was a time when the Saints were unable to construct temples, when there was no house prepared in which to receive the ordinances, particularly when the persecutions were intense.

> But now we have got temples, and you cannot get these blessings on the mountaintops, you will have to go into the house of the Lord, and you cannot get the fulness of the priesthood unless you go there. (Elijah, the Prophet and His Mission, pp. 46-47)

Our success in achieving our spiritual goals also depends upon these elements. [1. Envision the goal and keep it continually in mind; 2. Know what to do to reach it; 3. Do what is necessary to reach it.] Peter knew that our vision becomes dim unless we keep the goal constantly in mind. He also knew that when our vision grows dim so does our resolve to endure to the end, especially in the face of continual tribulation and opposition. Reviewing what

Peter said to his fellow Christians can help strengthen our vision and resolve. * * *

Peter's Challenge: Make Your Calling and Election Sure. A high point of Peter's writings is his challenge to "give diligence to make your calling and election sure" (2 Peter 1:10). * * *

What is the "more sure word of prophecy"? (The assurance that one's calling and election is made sure, that one is a joint heir with Christ, that one is sealed in the heavens and has the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God.) * * *

If we are to attain the goal of eternal life, we must properly envision it, know that we need to do to obtain it, and then do whatever is necessary. We have accepted the gospel because we do see and know. To be sure that we overcome all things, we must be obedient, exercise faith, and strive diligently to make our calling and election sure. No goal is more worthy, no blessing greater.

26. The Ensign/May 1984, p. 34; General Conference address by Elder Bruce R. McConkie, "Patterns of Prayer"; April 1984.

And then by way of capstone, covenant, and petition, it would be appropriate for us to choose words that express these thoughts:

And finally, Father, we would be one with thy Son, even as he is one with thee. We seek salvation; we desire eternal life; we long to return to thy presence, and there, sitting down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets and holy men of old, go no more out forever.

Let us see the face of thy Son while we dwell here as mortals. Let us hear him say: Come ye blessed of my Father; ye shall enter into the joy of thy Lord; thy calling and election has been made sure; thou art a joint-heir with me, and shall yet receive, possess, and inherit all that my Father hath.

WORDS & PHRASES WHICH DIRECTLY RELATE TO
THE DOCTRINE OF
MAKING YOUR CALLING & ELECTION SURE
Richard A. Ware
1984

Making Your Calling & Election Sure

The phrase is only mentioned once in the scriptures: 2 Peter 1:10. "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall."

In the pre-earth life the whole house of Israel was "called and elected" to the blessings of baptism, the priesthood, all the temple blessings, and to the blessings of exaltation and eternal life, IF they would prove their valiance once on earth. We were all promised there that these would be our blessings if we followed the path of righteousness upon the earth. Many of those promised blessings have come true for us. We have been baptized, received the priesthood and been married in the temple. But we were also called and elected to receive eternal life, and that is the precise blessing that we must now "make secure" or "make sure". Our calling and election unto eternal life must now be made sure by us if we are to gain exaltation. (Bruce R. McConkie, BYU Address, March 25, 1969, pp. 4-5)

The More Sure Word of Prophecy

This phrase, like calling and election, comes from 2 Peter. In verse 19 we read: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy...." By revelation the Prophet Joseph Smith wrote concerning this phrase: "The more word of prophecy means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood. It is impossible for a man to be saved in ignorance." (H.C. 5:392-93; D&C 131:5-6)
In the pre-earth life we were given a "word of prophecy" or a word of blessing upon our heads that we would obtain all the blessings of the gospel, even eternal life, if we followed the path of righteousness once on earth. In order to make that word of prophecy "more sure" we must follow the righteous path that will remove the conditional clause and make the blessings unconditional to us.
We may know that we are sealed up to eternal life "by revelation and the spirit of prophecy" and "through the power of the Holy Priesthood." The heavens must declare that we are sealed up to eternal life, and then through the ordinances of the temple this blessing is sealed upon us by the priesthood. Such anointings and blessings are above the ordinance of temple marriage. "The anointing and sealing is to be called, elected and made sure." (TPJS, p 323)

The Holy Spirit of Promise

Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained:

When the Holy Spirit of Promise places his ratifying seal upon a baptism, or a marriage, or any covenant, except that of having one's calling and election made sure, the seal is a conditional approval or ratification; it is binding in eternity only in the event of subsequent obedience to the terms and conditions of whatever covenant is involved.
But when the ratifying seal of approval is placed upon someone whose calling and election is thereby made sure---because there are no more conditions to be met by the obedient person ---this act of being sealed up unto eternal life is of such transcendent import that of itself it is called being sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise, which means that in this crowning sense, being so sealed is the same as having one's calling and election made sure. Thus, to be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise is to be sealed up unto eternal life; and to be sealed up unto eternal life is to be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise. And of this usage of terms, a usage which is wholly misunderstood unless the whole concept of the sealing power of the Spirit is understood, the scriptures and other prophetic utterances bear repeated witness. (DNTC 3:335-36)

In Section 88 of the Doctrine and Covenants the Holy Spirit of Promise is called the "other Comforter" which "is the promise which I give unto you of eternal life, even the glory of the celestial kingdom; Which glory is that of the church of the Firstborn, even of God, the holiest of all, through Jesus Christ his Son---." (vs. 3-5) This promise of eternal life rests within the heart and soul of the individual who has been sealed up, and it gives peace and security to him, and is an anchor to the soul in times of trial and difficulty. This is the second comforter of promise, not of presence, which is Jesus Christ himself. Although the Savior will not be able to always reside with an individual, the Holy Spirit of promise can, and will.

The Church of the Firstborn

Jesus Christ is the "firstborn" in the spirit of Heavenly Father. This church calls itself after this concept of Christ being the firstborn. It is composed of individuals who have been sealed up unto eternal life, whether they are alive on earth, or whether they are in the spirit world. No matter where they dwell, they all belong to the same church.

Joseph Smith repeatedly talked about coming into the presence of "the general assembly and church of the firstborn" (TPJS, pp 320-21). Elder McConkie states that "members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who so devote themselves to righteousness that they receive the higher ordinances of exaltation become members of the Church of the Firstborn." He states that "celestial marriage is the gate to membership in the church of the Firstborn, the inner circle of faithful saints who are heirs of exaltation and the fulness of the Fathers kingdom." (Mor Doc, p. 139) These elect people "comprise a very select group, an inner circle of faithful members" of the Church. These people have received the priesthood, and have been "endowed in the temple of the Lord" and have entered "into that 'order of the priesthood' names the 'new and everlasting covenant of marriage' and overcome by faith until, as the sons of God, they merit membership in the Church of the Firstborn." (Mor Doc, pp 200-02)

Being married in the temple for time and all eternity does not make an individual a member of the church of the Firstborn. Temple marriage is only the GATE which leads to membership to that kingdom. The "higher ordinances of exaltation" must first be administered to the individual, just as baptism and confirmation must be administered to in order to become members of the earthly Church of Jesus Christ. Membership to the church of the Firstborn is obtained by an "anointing and sealing" for "the anointing and sealing is to be called, elected and made sure." (TPJS, p 323). In the temple "this room [the Holy of Holies] is reserved for the higher ordinances in the Priesthood relating to the exaltation of both living and dead." (The House of the Lord, J. E. Talmage, p. 163). Note that ordinances in that room are administered to both the living and the dead (by proxy) and have to do with our exaltation.

In August of 1931, Elder Joseph Fielding Smith stated that after a person has been baptized into the church, and after "he has proved himself by a worthy life, having been faithful in all things required of him, then it is his privilege to receive other covenants and to take upon himself other obligations which will make of him an heir, and he will become a member of the 'Church of the Firstborn.' Into his hands, 'the Father has given all things.' He will be a priest and a king, receiving of the Father's fulness and of his glory." Then Elder Smith asks the question: "Is this worth having? * * * The fulness of these blessings can only be obtained in the temple of the Lord!" (Way to Perfection, p. 208)

The Fulness of the Priesthood
King & Priest/Queen & Priestess

Within the gospel context, all who make their calling and election sure and are thus sealed up to eternal life become a king and a priest. A king wears a crown, therefore Joseph asked the question: "Have you a promise of receiving a crown of righteousness from the hand of the Lord, with the Church of the Firstborn?" (TPJS, pp 63-66). "Those who have kept the faith will be crowned with a crown of righteousness; be clothed in white raiment; be admitted to the marriage feast; be free from every affliction; and reign with Christ on the earth." (Ibid). A king "rules" and a priest "reigns". Thus the faithful will "rule and reign in the House of Israel forever." * * * "If the Saints are not to reign, for what purpose are they crowned?" (TPJS, p 64)

To the Relief Society sisters in Nauvoo, the Prophet Joseph stated that "the Lord was going to make of the Church of Jesus Christ a kingdom of Priests, a holy people, a chosen generation, as in Enoch's day." (H.C. 4:570) President Brigham Young commented that "for any person to have the fullness of that priesthood (Melchizedek) he must be a king and priest." (H.C. 5:527) "Those holding the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood are kings and priests of the Most High God, holding the keys of power and blessings."
To become a king and a priest was something that Joseph Smith wanted every man to receive, not just the apostles. The gospel will elevate every righteous man to the level of a king. He said that we "have got to learn how to be Gods" and "to be kings and priests to God, the same as all the Gods have done before" us. (TPJS, pp 346-47) "The fulness of the priesthood includes the authority of both king and priest." * * * "Such as have not received the fulness of the priesthood, and have not been anointed and ordained in the temple of the Most High, may obtain salvation in the celestial kingdom, but not a celestial crown. Many are called to enjoy a celestial glory, yet few are chosen to wear a celestial crown, or rather, to be rulers in the celestial kingdom." (Elder Orson Hyde, M.S. IX,2-Jan 15, 1847, pp 23-4) "All men who will may receive salvation and exaltation and the sealing powers." (D.S. 2:122) "The spirits of just men are made ministering servants to those who are sealed unto life eternal, and it is through them that the sealing power comes down." (H.C. 6:51-52) To receive a fulness of the priesthood is to gain a fulness of the sealing power, the same power which Elijah restored to the earth on April 3, 1836 in the Kirtland temple. Every one who is "ordained after this order and calling should have power, by faith, to break mountains, to divide the earth, to break every band, to stand in the presence of God; to do all things according to his will, according to his command, subdue principalities and powers; and this by the will of the Son of God." (IV Gen 14:26-35)
Those who are kings and queens then have the right to build up their own "kingdoms" through two processes: (1) by giving birth to their own children, and; (2) by adopting individuals into their family. In old testament times all kings were anointed with holy oil as they assumed their office of king. And so it is today. All who become kings are anointed, and to become a priest you are ordained. "Such as have...not be anointed and ordained in the temple of the Most High, may obtain salvation in the celestial kingdom, but not a celestial crown." (O Hyde, Ibid). The anointing and ordaining is done in the Holy of Holies by one who is authorized by the Prophet to perform the ordinances. These higher blessings are above those of temple marriage, and are the ordinances by which an individual is sealed up to eternal life.

Peace In This World/Eternal Life In World To Come

Jesus spoke of a peace that the world could not give. He said: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you." (John 14:27). In a revelation to Joseph Smith the Lord said that an individual could obtain "peace in this world, and eternal life in the world to come." (D&C 59:23)
The peace spoken of is a result of having the second comforter of promise with the soul of the individual. This promise and guarantee of eternal life is like an anchor to the soul in troubled times. For the knowledge is there that one day he will receive eternal life in the world to come. "He who obtains it will obtain an exaltation in the celestial kingdom of our Father in heaven. . . They are they who are the church of the Firstborn." (M. G. Romney, Imp. Era, Nov. 1949, pp. 719, 752, 754). "This gift of eternal life in the world to come many not, of course, be fully realized during earth life. An assurance that it will be obtained in the world to come may, however, be had in this world. As a matter of fact, the blessings of the celestial kingdom are promised only to those who have such an assurance." * * * "The Prophet Joseph taught that one so sealed [by the Holy Spirit of Promise] would have within himself an assurance born of the spirit, that he would obtain eternal life in the world to come. He urgently and repeatedly admonished the Saints of his day to obtain such an assurance by making their calling and election sure. It is this assurance within a person which brings to him the peace in this world which will sustain him in every tribulation. * * * These fruits of the gospel---assurance that we shall obtain eternal life, peace in this world sustained by such an assurance, and finally eternal life in the world to come---are within the reach of us all." (M. G. Romney, Ibid). "Through self-discipline and devotion we must demonstrate to the Lord that we are willing to serve him under all circumstances. When we have done this, we shall receive an assurance that we shall have eternal life in the world to come. Then we shall have peace in this world." (Ibid).

The Second Comforter

The Prophet Joseph Smith said: "There are two comforters spoken of. One is the Holy Ghost. * * * The other Comforter spoken of. . .is no more nor less than the Lord Jesus Christ Himself; and. . .when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him, or to appear unto him from time to time, and even He will manifest the Father unto him...." (TPJS pp 149-151). "If a man gets knowledge enough to have the companionship of the Son of God, the chances are his call and election would be sure." (D.S. 1:55) The first comforter then is the Holy Ghost, while the second one is the Lord himself.

Son & Daughter of God

"The destiny of the faithful man in this Church and the faithful woman is to become a son and daughter of God. * * * Now how are we going to become the sons of God and, of course, daughters as well? How is it done? Can we become the sons and heirs of our Eternal Father simply by being baptized for the remission of our sins after we have repented and have had faith, and have had hands laid upon us for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and have come into the Church? No, it takes more than that. Why, of course they are the children of our Father in heaven, those who do that, as are the people who are outside of the Church; but to become the sons and daughters of God, children, 'heirs, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ,' we must suffer with him, that we may be glorified with him. In other words, we must receive in our hearts, accept in our hearts, every principle of the gospel which has been revealed; and insofar as it is in our power to do so, we must live in accordance with these principles and keep the commandments of God in full. * * * If you would become a son or a daughter of God and an heir of the kingdom, then you must go to the house of the Lord and receive blessings which there can be obtained and which cannot be obtained elsewhere; and you must keep those commandments and those covenants to the end. * * * The ordinances of the temple, the endowment and sealings, pertain to exaltation in the celestial kingdom, where the sons and daughters are. The sons and daughters are not outside in some other kingdom. * * * Sons and daughters have access to the home where he dwells, and you cannot receive that access until you go the temple. * * * You know what it says about servants in the scriptures. Those who become servants are those who are not willing to receive these blessings in the house of the Lord and abide in them. They are not sons; they are not daughters. They are children of God, it is true, for all men are his children. But they do not inherit, and therefore they remain servants throughout eternity. * * * As sons and daughters then, we are heirs of his kingdom and shall receive by right the fulness of the gospel and be entitled to the great blessings and privileges which the Lord in his mercy has revealed to us in the dispensation of the fulness of times." (D.S. 2:37-41)

The Elect of God

"The elect of God comprise a very select group, an inner circle of faithful members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. They are the portion of church members who are striving with all their hearts to keep the fulness of the gospel law in this life so that they can become inheritors of the fulness of gospel rewards in the life to come. As far as the male sex is concerned, they are the ones, the Lord says, who have the Melchizedek Priesthood conferred upon them and who thereafter magnify their callings and are sanctified by the Spirit. In this way, "They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom, and the elect of God." They keep "the oath and covenant which belongeth to the priesthood," and are rewarded with the fulness of the Father's kingdom." (D&C 84:33-41; B. R. McConkie, Mor Doc, p 217)

"To gain this elect status they must be endowed in the temple of the Lord (D&C 95:8), enter into that 'order of the priesthood' named 'the new and everlasting covenant of marriage' (D&C 131:1-4), and overcome by faith until, as the sons of God, they merit membership in the Church of the Firstborn." (D&C 76:50-70, 94-96; Mor Doc, p 218).

"An elect lady is a female member of the Church who has already received, or who through obedience is qualified to receive, the fulness of gospel blessings. This includes temple endowments, celestial marriage, and the fulness of the sealing power. She is one who has been elected or chosen by faithfulness as a daughter of God in this life, an heir of God, a member of his household. Her position is comparable to that of the elders who magnify their callings in the priesthood and thereby receive all that the Father hath." (D&C 84:38; Mor Doc, p 217)

Your Life Is Hid With Christ

The New Testament recorded an interesting phrase which the Prophet Joseph picked up on and applied to William Clayton. In Col 3:3 it says: ". . .and your life is hid with Christ in God." The Prophet Joseph, on May 16, 1843, while speaking with brother William Clayton, said to him: "Your life is hid with Christ in God, and so are many others. Nothing but the unpardonable sin can prevent you from inheriting eternal life for you are sealed up by the power of the Priesthood unto eternal life." (H.C. 5:391-92) Elder Bruce R. McConkie indicated that this meant that "your calling and election has been made sure; you have been sealed up unto eternal life; the Lord has said unto you, 'Son thou shalt be exalted'; you have received the more sure word of prophecy." (B. R. McConkie, DNTC 3:34-35)

Joint-Heir With Christ

"As the literal Son of God---the Firstborn in the spirit, the Only Begotten in the flesh---Christ is the natural heir of his Father. It thus became his right to inherit, receive, and possess all that his Father had. (John 16:15) And his Father is possessor of all things: the universe; all power, wisdom, and goodness; the fulness of truth and knowledge; and an infinity of all good attributes. By heirship and obedience, going from grace to grace, the Son attained these same things. (D&C 93:5-17)

"By obedience to the fulness of gospel law, righteous men are adopted into the family of God so that they also become heirs, joint-heirs with Christ (Rom 8:14-18; Gal 3:26-29; 4:1-7), inheritors of all that the Father hath. (D&C 84:33-41) * * * A joint-heir is one who inherits equally with all other heirs including the Chief Heir who is the Son. Each joint-heir has an equal and an undivided portion of the whole of everything. If one knows all things, so do all others. If one has all power, so do all those who inherit jointly with him. If the universe belongs to one, so it does equally to the total of all upon whom the joint inheritances are bestowed." (B. R. McConkie, Mor Doc, pp 394-95)
Joseph Smith commented that the object of the gospel was "the bringing of men back into the presence of the King of heaven, crowning them in the celestial glory, and making them heirs with the Son to that inheritance which is incorruptible, undefiled, and which fadeth not away." (H.C. 2:5) Those who are the spirits of just men made perfect "minister to the heirs of salvation, both in this world and in the world of spirits." (P. P. Pratt, Key To Theology, p 116) "All men who become heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ will have to receive the fulness of the ordinances of his kingdom." (H.C. 5:423-24) "The Church of the Firstborn is made up of the sons of God, those who have been adopted into the family of the Lord, those who are destined to be joint-heirs with Christ in receiving all that the Father hath." (Mor Doc, p 139)

Spirits of Just Men Made Perfect

On August 13, 1843 Joseph Smith first made reference to the "spirits of just men made perfect". A few months later on October 9th he commented that "The Hebrew Church 'came unto the spirits of just men made perfect, and unto an innumerable company of angels, unto God the Father of all, and to Jesus Christ the Mediator of the new covenant.' What did they learn by coming to the spirits of just men made perfect? * * * What object was gained by this communication with the spirits of the just?" Joseph explains that "angels" have bodies and are "advanced further" than spirits. He then explains that "The spirits of just men are made ministering servants to those who are sealed unto life eternal, and it is through them that the sealing power comes down." (TPJS, p 325)
The spirits of just men made perfect currently reside in the spirit world and minister to heirs of salvation. They are those, who, while they lived upon the earth, were sealed up to eternal life thus making their calling and election sure; or, they had endured to the end of mortal life obeying all the gospel laws and upon their death they were "made perfect" and were promised eternal life at that time.

The Title of "Friend"

Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote:

Those who choose to serve the Lord and who keep his commandments are called his servants. After they have been tried and tested and are found faithful and true in all things, they are called no longer servants, but friends. (John 15:14-15) His friends are the ones he will take into his kingdom and with whom he will associate to all eternity. (D&C 93:45-46) They receive the adoption of sonship. "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father. Wherefore thou are no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." (Gal 4:6-7)

To become a friend of Christ is to receive a special privilege which not many receive. On December 27, 1832 the Lord gave a revelation through Joseph Smith while at Kirtland, Ohio and stated that Joseph Smith and those who were with him were his "friends":

Wherefore, I now send upon you another Comforter, even upon you my friends, that it may abide in your hearts, even the Holy Spirit of promise; which other Comforter...is the promise which I give unto you of eternal life, even the glory of the celestial kingdom; Which glory is that of the church of the Firstborn, even of God, the holiest of all, through Jesus Christ his Son." (D&C 88:3-5)

Friends of God are those who have had the blessings of being sealed up unto eternal life and have made their calling and election sure.

Many Are Called, Few Are Chosen

Many are "called into the Church, called to the holy priesthood, called to receive all the blessings of the gospel, including the crowning blessing of eternal life" yet very few of those who are called become "chosen to inherit the blessings offered through the gospel and the priesthood; chosen for eternal life and exaltation." Yes, many are "called to the Church, but" few are "chosen to be sealed up unto eternal life and to have one's calling and election made sure." (B. R. McConkie, DNTC 3:349)
The Prophet Joseph once made the comment: "How many will be able to abide a celestial law, and go through and receive their exaltation, I am unable to say, as many are called, but few are chosen." (TPJS, p 331) The gospel net draws into the church people of all kinds (many are called and respond to the last invitation). Yet out of all those who are drawn into membership in the church, few of them will continue onward and upward in their search for eternal life and become chosen of the Lord. "There has been a day of calling, but the time has come for a day of choosing; and let those be chosen that are worthy. And it shall be manifest unto my servant, by the voice of the Spirit, those that are chosen; and they shall be sanctified." (D&C 105:35-36) "There are many who have been ordained among you, whom I have called but few of them are chosen. They who are not chosen have sinned a very grievous sin, in that they are walking in darkness at noon-day. * * * If you keep not my commandments, the love of the Father shall not continue with you, therefore you shall walk in darkness." (D&C 95:5-6, 12) "Behold, there are many called, but few are chosen. And why are they not chosen? Because their hearts are set so much upon the things of this world, and aspire to the honors of men...." (D&C 121:34-35)

SUMMARY COMMENTS

It is important that we as Latter-day Saints learn more about our own gospel, and how each doctrine and principle interlaces with the others. This is necessary in order to gain the proper understanding of the gospel plan, so that we can understand where we are personally on that strait and narrow path that leads to eternal life. It never was in the gospel plan that we should remain ignorant of the principles which will exalt us. We must learn how to be Gods, Joseph pointed out, and that will not come without expending great effort in gaining knowledge, and knowledge is necessary in conquering our sins, in correcting our behavior, and in overcoming the spiritual darkness of the world.

However, few of the saints avail themselves of the great flood of revelation which has been given to them through the standard works, and through the writings of the Brethren. "We might take a lesson from an account given by the Prophet of a vision of the resurrection, in which he records that one of the saddest things he had ever witnessed was the sorrow of members of the Church who came forth to a resurrection below that which they had taken for granted they would receive." (M. G. Romney, Imp. Era., General Conference, Nov. 1949, p. 754)

"There will be many who are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who shall never become members of the Church of the Firstborn." (D.S. 2:41) "Those who receive the fulness will be privileged to view the face of our Father. There will not be such an overwhelming number of the Latterday Saints who will get there. President Francis M. Lyman many times has declared, and he had reason to declare, I believe, that if we save one-half of the Latter-day Saints, that is, with an exaltation in the celestial kingdom of God, we will be doing well. Not that the Lord is partial, not that he will draw the line as some will say, to keep people out. He would have every one of us go in if we would; but there are laws and ordinances that we must keep; if we do not observe the law we cannot enter. Many come into the Church, like fish that are gathered into the net, that have to be sorted and thrown out again or put into piles where they belong. And so it will be with us. * * * We are not going to be saved in the kingdom of God just because our names are on the records of the Church. It will require more than that. We will have to have our names written in the Lamb's Book of Life; that is the evidence we have kept the commandments." (D.S. 2:15,14)

INTRODUCTION

"The Most Glorious Doctrine"

According to Elder Bruce R. McConkie, the doctrine of making one's calling and election sure ". . . is the most glorious doctrine that there is in the Church. It is the doctrine that assures people of eternal reward in the kingdom of God. * * * Our objective, our goal, our aim, our determination in this life is to press forward with the steadfastness and devotion which will give us complete peace and satisfaction and joy in this life and assure us of eternal life in the world to come." He suggested that "there are many in this Church who have obtained such a status" and that "this ought to cause us to make a firm and unshakable determination to gain the blessings and benefits of baptism . . . [and] of celestial marriage . . . and then we ought to press forward with a steadfastness in Christ, keeping the commandments and living by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God, so that our calling and election shall be made sure." (BYU Speech, March 25. 1969. Entitled: "Making Our Calling and Election Sure, p. 9; typescript of original taped version).

As the gathering of Israel takes place and the gospel net draws in people from around the world, we find that there are members who do not recognize the real purpose of the gospel and of the church, and consider it to be only a social organization. But, "among those who have received the gospel, and who are seeking diligently to live its laws and gain eternal life, there is an instinctive and determined desire to make their calling and election sure. Because they have tasted the good things of God and sipped from the fountain of eternal truth, they now seek the divine presence, where they shall know all things, have all power, all might, and all dominion, and in fact be like Him who is the great Prototype of all saved beings---God our Heavenly and Eternal Father." (Bruce R. McConkie, Doc. New Test. Comm., 3:325) "If we are to attain the goal of eternal life, we must properly envision it, know what we need to do to obtain it, and then do whatever is necessary. * * * To be sure that we overcome all things, we must be obedient, exercise faith, and strive diligently to make our calling and election sure. No goal is more worthy, no blessing greater." Sometimes, however, while traveling the path to exaltation, our vision grows dim, because we did not keep the eternal goal of gaining the assurance of eternal life in our hearts. The apostle "Peter knew that our vision becomes dim unless we keep the goal constantly in mind. He also knew that when our vision grows dim so does our resolve to endure to the end, especially in the face of continual tribulation and opposition." (Gos. Doc. Teacher Suppl/New Testament, 1983, Lesson 46, pp. 157-160). Thus we find many who begin in the path that leads to the tree of life, but there are few who actually reach it and partake of it's fruit. Indeed, many have been "called" to partake of the fulness of the Father's blessings, but few actually are willing to pay the price that allows them to be "chosen" for those high blessings.

Such blessings are not reserved for apostles and prophets. They are not reserved for the General Authorities. Nor are they available to us only after death, ". . . for God hath not revealed anything to Joseph, but what He will make known unto the Twelve, and even the least Saint may know all things as fast as he is able to bear them, for the day must come when no man need say to his neighbor, Know ye the Lord; for all shall know Him (who remain) from the least to the greatest." (Joseph Smith, Teachings, p. 149) There are those, however, who do not believe that such blessings are attainable or available, and they are right! Without belief and faith in the scriptural and prophetic promises that such blessings are attainable, the required effort will not be expended to achieve the blessings (B. R. McConkie, The Promised Messiah, p.586). Thus the Lord condemns unbelief as a great sin (D&C 84:55. 76) and Nephi was left to mourn because of the unbelief of the children of men (2 Ne 32:7). And those who are ignorant of such blessings should do all within their power to learn and do all they can to obtain them, for it is impossible to be saved in ignorance. (See D&C 131:5-6; Also B.R. McConkie, BYU Speech, p. 7)

"There are goals to gain, summits to climb, revelations to receive. In the eternal scope of things we have scarcely started out on the course to glory and exaltation. The Lord wants his saints to receive line upon line, precept upon precept, truth upon truth, revelation upon revelation, until we know all things and have become like him. Let us press forward in making our callings and elections sure, until, as Joseph Smith said, we shall have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend us, or to appear to us from time to time, and until even he will manifest the Father unto us." (B. R. McConkie, October General Conference, 1969; The Improvement Era 72 (December 1969). p. 85).

The doctrine of making one's calling and election sure may sound like a difficult subject to understand. "It is one which is not fully known or understood by everyone, but at least as far as the fundamentals are concerned, it is a very basic and easily understood doctrine. There is nothing complex or mysterious about it. Rather it is a doctrine we should understand, one out of which determinations should grow to do the things that assure us of peace and satisfaction in this life and eternal rewards in the realms ahead." (See D&C 59:23; B. R. McConkie, BYU Speech, p. 1).

Hopefully, the thoughts expressed in this paper will help clarify the doctrine of making one's calling and election sure, and the relationship it has to other concepts of the gospel, such as the Holy Spirit of promise, the fulness of the priesthood, eternal marriage, and the church of the Firstborn, as well as others. Hopefully, this paper will also inspire commitment and dedication on the part of the reader to be true and faithful in all that God expects of him. For as Joseph said: ". . . great and marvelous are the works of the Lord, and the mysteries of his kingdom which he showed unto us, which surpass all understanding in glory, and in might, and in dominion; which he commanded us we should not write while we were yet in the Spirit, and are not lawful for man to utter; neither is man capable to make them known, for they are only to be seen and understood by the power of the Holy Spirit, which God bestows on those who love him, and purify themselves before him; to whom he grants this privilege of seeing and knowing for themselves; that through the power and manifestation of the Spirit, while in the flesh, they may be able to bear his presence in the world of glory." (D&C 76:114-118)

THE DOCTRINE OF MAKING YOUR CALLING AND ElECTION SURE

Definition

The phrase "make your calling and election sure" comes from the apostle Peter as he was attempting to encourage the saints of his day to obtain the guarantee of eternal life for themselves. He said:

> Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things ye shall never fall:
>
> For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. (2 Peter 1:10-11)

"An abundant entrance has obvious reference to exaltation to the highest heaven of the celestial world" (B. R. McConkie, BYU Speech, p. 3).

In defining the phrase "make your calling and election sure", Elder Bruce R. McConkie said:

> To have one's calling and election made sure is to be sealed up unto eternal life; it is to have the unconditional guarantee of exaltation in the highest heaven of the celestial world; it is to receive the assurance of godhood; it is, in effect, to have the day of judgment advanced, so that an inheritance of all the glory and honor of the Father's kingdom is assured prior to the day when the faithful actually enter into the divine presence to sit with Christ in his throne, even as he is "set down" with his "Father in his throne." (Rev. 3:21; Doc. New Test. Comm., 3:331)

Two Ways To Obtain The Blessing

"To make one's 'calling and election sure' is simply a guarantee of our inheritance in the [highest degree of the] celestial kingdom." This guarantee or assurance, can only be obtained in two ways:

1. By obtaining the more sure word of prophecy, through personal revelation and hearing the voice of God, that you have been sealed up unto eternal life.

2. By receiving the higher ordinances of the priesthood wherein the Prophet of God seals you up to eternal life with the Holy Spirit of promise. (D&C 132:7, 26)

If an individual, for one reason or another, did not make his calling and election sure in this life, but was otherwise worthy, he may continue to work towards it in the spirit world. Those who enter the spirit world already worthy of the blessing, are given it and are called "just men made perfect", for they are "they who are not resurrected, but inherit the same [celestial] glory" (D&C 129:3). All others will continue their efforts in the spirit world towards obtaining the guarantee. When worthy, those in the spirit world will be sealed up to eternal life in the same manner as those on earth, by (1) obtaining the more sure word of prophecy, or (2) by receiving the fulness of the priesthood ordinance for them by proxy on earth.

The Meaning of The More Sure Word of Prophecy

In the same discourse wherein the apostle Peter told his brethren that they should make their calling and election sure, he also said:

> We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed. . . . (2 Peter 1:19)

The Prophet Joseph Smith modified this scripture to read:

> We have therefore a more sure knowledge of the word of prophecy, to which word of prophecy ye do well that ye take heed. . . . (JST 2 Peter 1:19)

Concerning this scripture, the prophet Joseph explained:

> Now, there is some grand secret here, and keys to unlock the subject. Notwithstanding the apostle exhorts them to add to their faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, etc., yet he exhorts them to make their calling and election sure. And though they had heard an audible voice from heaven bearing testimony that Jesus was the Son of God, yet he says we have a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed as unto a light shining in a dark place. Now, wherein could they have a more sure word of prophecy than to hear the voice of God saying, This is my beloved Son.
>
> Now for the secret and grand key. Though they might hear the voice of God and know that Jesus was the Son of God, this would be no evidence that their calling and election was made sure, that they had part with Christ, and were joint heirs with him. They then would want that more sure word of prophecy, that they were sealed in the heaven and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God. Then, having this promise sealed unto them, it was an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast. Though the thunders might roll and lightnings flash, and earthquakes bellow, and.war gather thick around, yet this hope and knowledge would support the soul in every hour of trial, trouble and tribulation. Then knowledge through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is the grand key that unlocks the glories and mysteries of the kingdom of heaven. . . . (Teachings, pp. 298-299; History of the Church (H.C.), Vol. 5:387-390; May 14, 1843).

Although it was a most wonderful experience to see the Savior transfigured and to hear the voice of God, yet this "more sure word of prophecy" was something in addition that was of supreme significance. Concerning this same scriptural passage, Elder McConkie said:

> We have also [now this is something in addition to standing on the mount and hearing the voice of God and seeing the Lord Jesus transfigured before them]--we have also a more sure word of prophecy; .and it is this more sure word that is the great thing; it is greater than the great spiritual experience they had with Christ and God on the mount.] (2 Peter 1:19; BYU Speech, p. 3).

Joseph Smith explained that this was one of the important keys which we must have, to know that "it is one thing to be on the mount and hear the excellent voice, etc., and another to hear the voice declare to you, You have a part and lot in that kingdom (Teachings, pp. 305-306).

By way of definition, the Prophet Joseph Smith clearly defined what the apostle Peter meant concerning the more sure word of prophecy:

> The more sure word of prophecy [mentioned by Peter] means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life, by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood. (May 16-17, 1843; H.C. 5:392; D&C 131:5; See the 1914 edition of the D&C wherein the comment in brackets is found).

According to the Prophet Joseph, a person would be able to make his calling and election sure BY OBTAINING this more sure word of prophecy: Then I would exhort you to go on and continue to call upon God until you make your calling and election sure for yourselves, by obtaining this more sure word of prophecy, and wait patiently for the promise until you obtain it. (Teachings, p. 299).

This concept was also explained by Elder Marion G. Romney as he spoke to the saints in the October, 1965 General Conference:

> I know it is possible for men to so live that they may hear his voice and know his words and that to receive "the Holy Spirit of promise" while here in mortality is possible. And so, in the words of the Prophet Joseph, ". . .I. . .exhort you to go on and continue to call upon God until [by the more sure word of prophecy] you make your calling and election sure for yourselves. . . ." (H.C. 5:389; The Improvement Era 68 (December 1965), p. 1116; comment in brackets inserted by Elder Romney).

Thus, the more sure word of prophecy means, that by personal revelation an individual has heard the voice of God declare to him that he is sealed up unto eternal life. Thus we learn that ". . . any man who obeys the law entitling him to receive revelation shall see and hear and know for himself. Revelation . . . for the guidance of the individual, revelation which says to a man and a woman, 'Son, daughter, thou shalt be exalted; thou shalt have part and lot in my kingdom,' this revelation comes to them as individuals, alone and apart from all others" (McConkie, October General Conference, The Improvement Era 72 (December 1969), p. 85).

"I should think that all faithful Latter-day Saints 'would want that more sure word of prophecy, that they were sealed in the heavens and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God,'" said President Marion G. Romney to the priesthood brethren in the April, 1977 General Conference of the Church. "And I bear further witness that such person who, having come this far, will follow the Prophet's admonition to 'continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God" (Teachings, p. 150), may obtain the more sure word of prophecy. That the Lord will bless all of us priesthood bearers that we will so understand these great truths, that in the end we shall, by making our calling and election sure, enjoy the full light of Christ, I humbly pray." (The Ensign/May 1977, p. 45).

Scriptural & Historical Examples Of

Gospel Mysteries

There are several scriptural and church historical examples of individuals who were sealed up to eternal life through personal revelation. President Marion G. Romney shared these examples as follows:

"Lehi's grandson Enos so hungered after righteousness that he cried unto the Lord until 'there came a voice unto [him]. saying: Enos, thy sins are forgiven thee, and thou shalt be blessed' (Enos 5). Years later Enos revealed the nature of this promised blessing when he wrote:

> I soon go to the place of my rest, which is with my Redeemer; for I know that in him I shall rest. And I rejoice in the day when my mortal shall put on immortality, and shall stand before him; then shall I see his face with pleasure, and he will say unto me: Come unto me, ye blessed, there is a place prepared for you in the mansions of my Father. (Enos 27)

To Alma the Lord said, "Thou art my servant; and I covenant with thee that thou shalt have eternal life." (Mosiah 26:20)

To His twelve Nephite disciples, the Master said:

> What is it that ye desire of me, after that I am gone to the Father?
>
> And they all spake, save it were three, saying: We desire that after we have lived unto the age of man, that our ministry, wherein thou hast called us, may have an end, that we may speedily come unto thee in thy kingdom.
>
> And he said unto them: Blessed are you because ye desired this thing of me; therefore, after that ye are seventy and two years old ye shall come unto me in my kingdom; and with me ye shall find rest. (3 Ne 28:1-3)

As Moroni labored in solitude abridging the Jaredite record, he received from the Lord this comforting assurance:

> Thou hast been faithful; wherefore, thy garments shall be made clean. And because thou hast seen thy weakness thou shalt be made strong, even unto the sitting down in the place which I have prepared in the mansions of my Father. (Ether 12:37)

Paul, in his second epistle to Timothy, wrote:

> I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand.
>
> I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith:
> Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day. (2 Tim. 4:6-8)

In this dispensation many have received like assurances. In the spring of 1839. while the Prophet Joseph and his associates were languishing in Liberty Jail, Heber C. Kimball, our president's grandfather, labored against great odds caring for the Saints and striving to free the brethren who were in jail. On the sixth of April he wrote:

> My family having been gone about two months, during which time I heard nothing from them; our brethren being in prison; death and destruction following us everywhere we went; I felt very sorrowful and lonely. The following words came to mind, and the Spirit said unto me, 'write,' which I did by taking a piece of paper and writing on my knee as follows:
>
> "Verily I say unto my servant Heber, thou art my son, in whom I am well pleased; for thou art careful to hearken to my words, and not transgress my law, nor rebel against my servant Joseph Smith, for thou hast a respect to the words of mine anointed, even from the least to the greatest of them; therefore thy name is written in heaven, no more to be blotted out for ever. (Orson F. Whitney, Life of Heber C. Kimball, Bookcraft, 1975, p. 241).

To the Prophet Joseph Smith the Lord said:

I am the Lord thy God, and will be with thee unto the end of the world, and through all eternity; for verily I seal upon you your exaltation, and prepare a throne for you in the kingdom of my Father, with Abraham your father. (D&C 132:49; All of preceding examples were given by President Romney at the April, 1977 General Conference, and printed in The Ensign/ May 1977. p. 45).

Concerning the importance of Peter's injunction to the brethren of his day to make their calling and election sure, Joseph Smith said:

We have no claim in our eternal compact, in relation to eternal things, unless our actions and contracts and all things tend to this. But after all this, you have got to make your calling and election sure. If this injunction would lie largely on those to whom it was spoken, how much more those of the present generation! (Teachings, pp. 305-306).

Being Sealed Up To Eternal Life Through The Higher Ordinances and the Priesthood

This concept, of being sealed up to eternal life through the priesthood, was a doctrine that was taught and practiced early in church history. There is no indication, however, that the doctrine of being sealed up was directly associated with the concept of making your calling and election sure, until 1839. Joseph Smith did not teach concerning "making your calling and election sure" until June of 1839 when he discoursed on the two comforters (Teachings, pp. 149-151). Prior to that time the concept of "calling and election" apparently did not exist in the minds of the saints, although being sealed up to eternal life did. However, when the Prophet gave his discourses on the two comforters, he equated the concepts of being "sealed up to eternal life" and "making your calling and election sure" as being one and the same. Although he had sealed individuals up to eternal life through the ordinance of washing of feet in 1833, Joseph did not make any attempt to equate this ordinance with calling and election. Nor did he equate, at this particular time, "calling and election" with the ordinance of the fulness of the priesthood, since that ordinance was still over four years away from being performed for the first time.

Historical Review of Being Sealed Up Through the Ordinances of the Priesthood

There are several examples in church history which demonstrate the fact that the high priesthood has used to seal people up to eternal life, or to reveal to individuals that such an occurrence had happened.

At a meeting early in February of 1831, Joseph sealed several saints up to eternal life, saying that the Lord Jesus Christ was in their midst "and had given you all to me and commanded me to seal you up unto eternal life, that where he is you may be also, and if you are tempted of Satan, say, 'Get thee behind me, Satan; my salvation is secure.' (Journals & Memoirs of Mary E. Lightner, pp. 2-3; See also Young Women's Journal, December 1905, pp. 556-557).

According to the Journal of Joseph Knight, Sr., all of the members of the Colesville Branch were sealed up to eternal life early in the summer of 1831. At the October General Conference of the Church, held at Far West in 1831, the minutes of the meeting indicated that Joseph Smith taught:

> . . . the order of the priesthood is that they have power given them to seal up the saints unto eternal life. And said it was the privilege of every elder present to be ordained to the high priesthood [meaning, be ordained high priests].
>
> Bro. Daniel Hanton said that he had a long time since covenanted to do the will of God in all things and remarked that it was his desire to be sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise.
> Bro. Joseph Smith, Jun. said . . . Until the Saints had perfect love they were liable to fall. When they had a testimony that their names were sealed in the Lamb's Book of Life, they had perfect love, and then it was impossible for false Christs to deceive them. (Far West Record, p. 11, October 25, 1831; Journal History, under date; Teachings, p. 9).

On this same date (October 25, 1831). Jared Carter was laboring in the vicinity of Benson, Vermont and stated that while praying with some of the saints that "the spirit rested down upon us . . . and it appeared to me that the Church of Christ in the locality was sealed up to the Lord, and it was likewise made plain to me that every one of us present should meet again in Zion." (Journal History, September 27, 1832).

In a revelation given through the Prophet Joseph, November, 1831, at the request of Orson Hyde, Luke S. Johnson, Lyman E. Johnson, and William E. McLellin, the Lord revealed ". . . of as many as the Father shall bear record, to you [meaning, to those individuals whose names are mentioned here in the revelation] shall be given power to seal them up unto eternal life" (D&C 68: 7-12; H.C. 1:227-229). Some of these individuals exercised this privilege, as will be seen later.

In December of 1832, the Lord commanded the Prophet to organize a school of the prophets, and commanded the ordinance of washing of feet to be a part of that school (D&C 88; H.C. 1:302). Although the Lord revealed that the ordinance of washing of feet was for the purpose of cleansing individuals from "the blood [and sins] of this generation" (D&C 88:138-139), it was also used as a means by which the prophet sealed it's recipients up to eternal life. The school of the prophets assembled in conference on January 23, 1833. when: . . . after much speaking, singing, praying and praising God, all in tongues, we proceeded to the washing of feet (according to the practice recorded in the 13th chapter of John's gospel), as commanded of the Lord. Each Elder washed his own feet first, after which I girded myself with a towel and washed the feet of all of them, wiping them with the towel with which I was girded. * * *

> I then said to the Elders, As I have done so do ye; wash ye, therefore, one another's feet; and by the power of the Holy Ghost I pronounced them all clean from the blood of this generation; but if any of them should sin wilfully after they were thus cleansed, and sealed up unto eternal life, they should be given over unto the buffetings of Satan until the day of redemption. (H.C. 1:323-324).

In August of 1833. while Orson Pratt and Lyman Johnson were administering in the area of Charleston, Vermont, they met with the Church and with brethren from some of the other towns, and unitedly called upon the Lord "and the Lord heard their prayers and moved upon his servant Lyman Johnson by the power of the Holy Ghost to seal them up unto eternal life. And after this the brethren arose one by one and said that they knew their names were sealed in the Lamb's Book of Life, and they did all bear this glorious testimony save two or three." (Journal of Orson Pratt, August 26, 1833).

About 10 days later, Orson Pratt and Lyman Johnson sealed the members of the church at Bath, New Hampshire, Conn., to eternal life. (Journal of Orson Pratt, September 8, 1833).

In December of this year, the Prophet and a number of the leading Elders of the Church assembled in the printing office which had just been built, and the office was dedicated by the Prophet Joseph Smith. At this meeting, Joseph blessed members of his family, including his father and mother, Hyrum and William. Of them he stated that they would have eternal life. (Teachings, pp. 38-41).

Later in May of the next year (1834), the members of Zion's Camp were all called together and were sealed up to eternal life. (Journal of Reuben McBride, BYU Special Collections, Kirtland, Ohio, under date).

Introduction of The Concepts of Making Your Calling and Election Sure And The Second Comforter

In June of 1839, Joseph introduced, for the first time, the phrase from Peter of "making your calling and election sure", and he used it in terms of being "sealed up to eternal life". At this point, however, he limited it's usage to a person who had been sealed up by hearing the voice of God declare to him that he would be exalted, rather than linking it to being sealed up through the ordinances of the priesthood:

> The Doctrine of Election. St. Paul exhorts us to make our calling and election sure. This is the sealing power spoken of by Paul in other places.
>
> "13. In whom ye also trusted, that after ye heard the word of truth, the Gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise,
>
> "14. Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of His glory, that we may be sealed up unto the day of redemption." (Ephesians, 1st chapter)
>
> This principle ought (in its proper place) to be taught, for God hath not revealed anything to Joseph, but what He will make known unto the Twelve, and even the least Saint may know all things as fast as he is able to bear them, for the day must come when no man need say to his neighbor, Know ye the Lord; for all shall know Him (who remain) from the least to the greatest. How is this to be done? It is to be done by this sealing power, and the other Comforter spoken of, which will be manifest by revelation.
>
> There are two Comforters spoken of. One is the Holy Ghost, the same as given on the day of Pentecost, and that all Saints receive after faith, repentance, and baptism. This first Comforter or Holy Ghost has no other effect than pure intelligence.
>
> The other Comforter spoken of is a subject of great interest, and perhaps understood by few of this generation. After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost, (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say to him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve Him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter, which the Lord hath promised the Saints, as is recorded in the testimony of St. John, in the 14th chapter, from the 12th to the 27th verses.

[Joseph then quotes verses 16, 17, 18, 21 & 23, and then continues:]

Now what is this other Comforter? It is no more nor less than the Lord Jesus Christ Himself; and this is the sum and substance of the whole matter; that when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him, or to appear unto him from time to time, and even He will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him, and the Lord will teach him face to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of the Kingdom of God; and this is the state and place the ancient Saints arrived at when they had such glorious visions---Isaiah, Ezekiel, John upon the Isle of Patmos, St. Paul in the three heavens, and all the Saints who held communion with the general assembly and Church of the Firstborn. (Teachings, pp. 149-151).

Therefore, after an individual has come to the point in his life where he has been able to make his calling and election sure, then it becomes his privilege to receive the Savior as his second comforter. Elder McConkie made this point clear when he said:

After the true saints receive and enjoy the gift of the Holy Ghost; after they know how to attune themselves to the voice of the Spirit; after they mature spiritually so that they see visions, work miracles, and entertain angels; after they make their calling and election sure and prove themselves worthy of every trust-after all this and more--it becomes their right and privilege to see the Lord and commune with him face to face. (The Promised Messiah, p. 575)

Four years later, on April 2, 1843, Joseph Smith gave important instruction while at Ramus, Illinois, on the second comforter:

(John 14:23). The appearing of the Father and the Son, in that verse, is a personal appearance; and the idea that the Father and the Son dwell in a man's heart is an old sectarian notion, and is false. (H.C. 5:323; D&C 130:3).

Although the Savior is the second comforter, there is still another concept regarding the second comforter which the Prophet revealed in a revelation given to him December 27, 1832:

Behold, this is pleasing unto your Lord, and the angels rejoice over you; the alms of your prayers have come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth [Heb: armies or hosts], and are recorded in the book of the names of the sanctified, even them of the celestial world.

Wherefore, I now send upon you another Comforter [they already had the Holy Ghost as their first Comforter], even upon you my friends [a title reserved for those who are sealed up]. that it may abide in your hearts [which is something the Savior himself can not do]. even the Holy Spirit of promise [the Holy Ghost now operating as the second Comforter of (the) promise of eternal life]; which other Comforter is the same that I promised unto my disciples, as is recorded in the testimony of John [chapter 14:16-23].

This Comforter is the promise [note that it is the promise] which I give unto you of eternal life, even the glory of the celestial kingdom;

Which glory is that of the church of the Firstborn, even of God, the holiest of all, through Jesus Christ his Son---. (D&C 88:2-5)

In addition to being the first comforter to all the members of the church who actively seek for him, the Holy Ghost is also the second comforter of promise to those saints who have been sealed up to eternal life. The Savior then is the second comforter of PRESENCE, while the Holy Spirit of promise mentioned here, is the second comforter of PROMISE. This understanding of the second comforter was taught as early as 1842, being mentioned in a patriarchal blessing which was given to Vilate M. Kimball, wife of Heber C. Kimball:

> Beloved Sister: I lay my hands upon your head in the name of Jesus, and seal you unto eternal life--sealed here on earth and sealed in heaven, and your name written in the Lamb's Book of Life never to be blotted out.
>
> The same is mentioned and manifested to comfort you heart, and to be a comfort unto you henceforth all your days. It is even a promise according to the mind of the Spirit, and the Spirit shall bear record of the truth; the same is called the Second Comforter, not his presence, but his promise. The same is as immutable as an oath by Himself, because there is none greater blessing that can be given, and no greater riches, it being the riches of eternity, which are the greatest riches of all riches. * * * (Blessing given by Hyrum Smith, Patriarch to the Church, March 9, 1842. See Solomon F. Kimball, Life of David P. Kimball, p. 128).

Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained that:

> When the Holy Spirit of Promise places his ratifying seal upon a baptism, or a marriage, or any covenant, except that of having one.s calling and election sure, the seal is a conditional approval or ratification; it is binding in eternity only in the event of subsequent obedience to the terms and conditions of whatever covenant is involved.
>
> But when the ratifying seal of approval is placed upon someone whose calling and election is thereby made sure--because there are no more conditions to be met by the obedient person---this act of being sealed up unto eternal life is of such transcendent import that of itself it is called being sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise, which means that in this crowning sense, being so sealed is the same as having one's calling and election made sure. Thus, to be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise is to be sealed up unto eternal life; and to be sealed up unto eternal life is to be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise. (Doc. New Test. Comm., 3:335-336)

The Relationship of Making Your Calling and Election Sure To The Fulness of The Priesthood Ordinance

Early in church history, members of the church were not only sealed up to eternal life by those who held the "high priesthood", but were also sealed up by the patriarchs. For instance, on January 19, 1841, the Lord said:

> First, I give unto you Hyrum Smith to be a patriarch unto you, to hold the sealing blessings of my church, even the Holy Spirit of promise, whereby ye are sealed up unto the day of redemption, that ye may not fall notwithstanding the hour of temptation that may come upon you. (D&C 124:124)

Hyrum Smith, as patriarch, sealed Vilate Kimball up to eternal life in 1842, while giving her a patriarchal blessing. Although the power to seal individuals was held by the patriarchs for many years, the ordinance of the fulness of the priesthood became the main ordinance through which this was done.

In order to understand Joseph's teachings concerning being sealed up to eternal life, it is important to understand the relationship it had with the restoration of the temple ordinances, for the power to seal individuals up to eternal life eventually became centered in the temple during the life of Joseph Smith. The ordinance of washing of feet was revealed and administered in 1832-1833; washings and anointings were performed in 1836; the endowment was administered in May of 1842; eternal marriages performed in 1843; and the highest temple ordinance of the fulness of the priesthood was first administered in September, 1843.

By August of 1843, the term "making your calling and election sure" had been expanded by Joseph to refer not only to a person who had received the "more sure word of prophecy" by personal revelation, but also one who had been sealed up by the priesthood through the ordinance of the fulness of the priesthood. Although the prophet was well aware of this sacred ordinance, it had not yet been administered, and would not for another month. However, his discourses on being sealed up reflected his understanding of the purpose and importance of the ordinance. On August 13th he said:

> Four destroying angels holding power over the four quarters of the earth until the servants of God are sealed in their foreheads which signifies sealing the blessing upon their heads, meaning the everlasting covenant, thereby making their calling and election sure. (Teachings, p. 321)

On the 27th of August, Joseph gave a most remarkable discourse on the three grand orders of the priesthood and the mission of Elijah, and touched upon the fulness of the priesthood ordinance which would make of a man a king and a priest and which would give him, thereby, the sealing power. He also mentioned that this ordinance was related to calling and election:

> Those holding the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood are kings and priests of the Most High God, holding the keys of power and blessings. In fact, that Priesthood is a perfect law of theocracy, and stands as God to give laws to the people, administering endless lives to the sons and daughters of Adam. (Teachings, p. 322).
>
> The anointing and sealing is to be called, elected and made sure. (Teachings, p. 323)

President Spencer W. Kimball quoted this same passage and modified the ending to read:

> Elijah shall reveal the covenants to seal the hearts of the fathers to the children and the children to the fathers. The anointing and sealing is to be called, elected, and the election made sure. (April, 1978 Gen Conf, The Ensign/May 1978, p. 48).

In summary, it appears that Joseph Smith evolved in his understanding of the power to seal individuals up to eternal life. In the 1830.s individuals were sealed up to eternal life by the power of the priesthood as it was revealed by revelation. Also, the washing of the feet ordinance was used at least once for this purpose in 1833. Later, in the early 1840's, individuals were sealed up by the patriarch to the church. Although the patriarchs held this power for many years, the ordinance of the fulness of the priesthood became the method whereby individuals were sealed up.

Although Joseph knew about the Holy Spirit of promise as early as 1832, he did not possess the keys of the sealing power until he was visited by Elijah in 1836. Even then, it was not until 1843 that Joseph was able to finally put in somewhat of an order the ordinances which would later be performed in the Nauvoo temple. After they were placed in their proper order, the prophet used the ordinance of the fulness of the priesthood to seal individuals up to eternal life, while the ordinance of washing of feet was used to cleanse individuals from the blood and sins of this generation. After Joseph's death, the ordinance of the fulness became the main vehicle through which Brigham Young and succeeding prophets sealed members of the church up unto eternal life. Ultimately, the power to seal people up was taken from the "high priesthood", and from the patriarchs throughout the church and presently resides only in the Prophet of God.

CONCEPTS WHICH DIRECTLY RELATE TO
THE DOCTRINE OF
MAKING YOUR CALLING & ELECTION SURE

The Meaning of "Calling & Election"

In the pre-earth life the whole house of Israel was "called and elected", or in other words, foreordained, to the blessings of baptism, the priesthood, and all the temple blessings, including the blessings of eternal life and exaltation. We were all promised, in the pre-earth life, that these would be our blessings if we followed the path of righteousness once we were upon the earth. Some of the promised blessings have already come to pass, others have not yet been obtained. "When a man lives the law that qualifies him for eternal life, the Lord is bound by his own law to confer that greatest of all gifts upon him," said Elder McConkie. "The calling [and election to eternal life], which up to that time was provisional, is then made sure. The receipt of the promised blessings are no longer conditional; they are guaranteed. Announcement is made that every gospel blessing shall be inherited." (BYU Speech, March 25, 1969, pp. 4-5; Doc. New Test. Comm., 3:326-330).

The Church of The Firstborn

Jesus Christ is the "firstborn" in the spirit of our Father in Heaven. The Church of the Firstborn calls itself after this concept of Christ being the firstborn. It is composed of individuals who have been sealed up unto eternal life, whether they are alive on earth, or whether they are in the spirit world. No matter where they dwell, the all belong to the same church.

Joseph Smith repeatedly talked about coming into the presence of "the general assembly and church of the firstborn" (Teachings, pp. 320-321). Elder McConkie states that "members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who so devote themselves to righteousness that they receive the higher ordinances of exaltation become members of the Church of the Firstborn." He indicates that =celestial marriage is the GATE to membership in the church of the Firstborn, the inner circle of faithful saints who are heirs of exaltation and the fulness of the Fathers kingdom" (Mor Doc, p. 139). These elect people "comprise a very select group, an inner circle of faithful members" of the Church. These people have received the priesthood, and have been "endowed in the temple of the Lord" and have entered "into that 'order of the priesthood' named the 'new and everlasting covenant of marriage' and overcome by faith until, as the sons of God, they merit membership in the Church of the Firstborn" (Mor Doc, pp. 217-218).

Being married in the temple for time and all eternity does not make an individual a member of the Church of the Firstborn. Temple marriage is only the GATE which leads to membership to that kingdom. The "higher ordinances of exaltation" must first be administered to the individual, just as baptism and confirmation must be administered to a person in order for him to become a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. People on earth will receive all that they ever hoped for ". . . and far more; but they cannot dwell with the Father and Son, unless they go through those ordeals that are ordained for the Church of the Firstborn. The ordinances of the house of God are expressly for the Church of the Firstborn" (J.D. 8:154-155; Remarks by Pres. Brigham Young; August 26, 1860). Membership in the church of the Firstborn is obtained by an "anointing and sealing" for "the anointing and sealing is to be called, elected and made sure" (Teachings, p. 323). It is the mission of the 144,000 high priests in the last days ". . . to bring as many as will come to the church of the Firstborn" (D&C 77:11). In the temple, the holy of holies ". . . is reserved for the higher ordinances in the Priesthood relating to the exaltation of both living and dead" (James E. Talmage, The House of the Lord, p. 163).

In August of 1931, Elder Joseph Fielding Smith stated that after a person has been baptized into the church, and after "... he has proved himself by a worthy life, having been faithful in all things required of him, then it is his privilege to receive other covenants and to take upon himself other obligations which will make of him an heir, and he will become a member of the 'Church of the Firstborn.' Into his hands, 'the Father has given all things.' He will be a priest and a king, receiving of the Father's fulness and of his glory.' Then Elder Smith asks the question: "Is this worth having? * * * The fulness of these blessings can only be obtained in the temple of the Lord!" (Way to Perfection, p. 208).

The Fulness of the Priesthood
King & Priest/Queen & Priestess

Within the gospel context, all who make their calling and election sure and are thus sealed up to eternal life become a king and a priest. A king wears a crown, therefore Joseph asked the question: "Have you a promise of receiving a crown of righteousness from the hand of the Lord, with the Church of the Firstborn? (Teachings, pp. 63-66). "Those who have kept the faith will be crowned with a crown of righteousness; be clothed in white raiment; be admitted to the marriage feast; be free from every affliction; and reign with Christ on the earth" (Ibid). Since a king "rules" and a priest "reigns" the faithful saints will rule and reign in the House of Israel forever. But, "if the saints are not to reign, for what purpose are they crowned?" (Teachings, p. 64).

To the Relief Society sisters in Nauvoo, the Prophet Joseph stated that "the Lord was going to make of the Church of Jesus Christ a kingdom of Priests, a holy people, a chosen generation, as in Enoch's day" (H.C. 4:570). "Those holding the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood are kings and priests of the Most High God, holding the keys of power and blessings" (Ibid). But "no man receives a fullness of the Melchizedek Priesthood till he has received his second anointings" (Journal of Anthony W. Ivins; Monday, April 8, 1901). "If a man gets a fulness of the priesthood of God he has to get it in the same way that Jesus Christ obtained it, and that was by keeping all the commandments and obeying all the ordinances of the house of the Lord", said Joseph Smith. "All men who become heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ will have to receive the fulness of the ordinances of his kingdom; and those who will not receive all the ordinances will come short of the fullness of that glory, if they do not lose the whole" (Teachings, pp. 308-309). "The greatest blessings are reserved for those who obtain 'the fulness of the priesthood,' meaning the fulness of the blessings of the priesthood. These blessings are found only in the temples of God. 'There are certain key words and signs belonging to the priesthood which must be observed in order to obtain the blessing [of the fulness of the priesthood]' (Teachings, p. 199). These, of course, are revealed only in the temples. 'Washings, anointings, endowments, and the communication of keys,' the Prophet says, are essential to enable one 'to secure the fulness of those blessings which have been prepared for the Church of the Firstborn, and come up and abide in the presence of Elohim in the eternal worlds"' (Teachings, p. 237).

To become a king and a priest was something that Joseph Smith wanted every man to receive, not just the apostles. He said that we ". . . have got to learn how to be Gods" and "to be kings and priests to God, the same as all the Gods have done before" us (Teachings, pp. 346-347). "The fulness of the priesthood includes the authority of both king and priest." * * * "Such as have not received the fulness of the priesthood, and have not been anointed and ordained in the temple of the Most High, may obtain salvation in the celestial kingdom, but not a celestial crown. Many are called to enjoy a celestial glory, yet few are chosen to wear a celestial crown, or rather, to be rulers in the celestial kingdom" (Orson Hyde, Mill. Star IX, 2-Jan 15. 1847. pp. 23-24). "All men who will may receive salvation and exaltation and the sealing powers", said Joseph Fielding Smith. "We must receive covenants, sealings, the sealing power, and privileges which are obtained in the temple of the Lord, and then live in accordance with them' (Doc. of Sal., 2:122, 15). "The spirits of just men are made ministering servants to those who are sealed unto life eternal, and it is through them that the sealing power comes down" (H.C. 6:51-52). To receive a fulness of the priesthood, then, is to gain a fulness of the sealing power, the same power which Elijah restored to the earth on April 3, 1836 in the Kirtland Temple. Every one who is "... [anointed and] ordained after this order and calling should have [the sealing] power, by faith, to break mountains, to divide the earth, to break every band, to stand in the presence of God; to do all things according to his will, according to his command, subdue principalities and powers; and this by the will of the Son of God" (JST, Gen 14:26-35). The saints are to become saviors on Mount Zion "by building their temples, erecting their baptismal fonts, and going forth and receiving all the ordinances, baptisms, confirmations, washings, anointings, ordinations and sealing powers upon their heads. . . " (Teachings, p. 330).

In old testament times, kings were anointed with holy oil as they assumed their office of king. Today, kings are anointed, and priests are ordained. "Such as have. . .not been anointed and ordained in the temple of the Most High, may obtain salvation in the celestial kingdom, but not a celestial crown" (Orson Hyde, Ibid). The anointing and ordaining is done in the holy of holies, or a sealing room set apart for such an ordinance, and it is administered by the prophet, or a person assigned by him. These blessings are above those of temple marriage, and are the ordinances by which an individual is sealed up to eternal life.

Peace In This World
Eternal Life In The World To Come

The Savior spoke of a peace that the world could not give. He said: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you" (John 14:27). In a revelation to Joseph Smith the Lord said that an individual could obtain "peace in this world, and eternal life in the world to come" (D&C 59:23).

The peace spoken of is a result of having been sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise. This promise and guarantee of eternal life is like an anchor to the soul in troubled times. "He who obtains it [the promise] will obtain an exaltation in the celestial kingdom of our Father in heaven. . . .They are they who are the church of the .Firstborn" (Marion G. Romney, The Improvement Era, (November 1949), pp. 719, 752, 754). "This gift of eternal life in the world to come may not, of course, be fully realized during earth life. An assurance that it will be obtained in the world to come may, however, be had in this world. As a matter of fact, the blessings of the celestial kingdom are promised only to those who have such an assurance." * * * "The Prophet Joseph taught that one so sealed [by the Holy Spirit of promise] would have within himself an assurance born of the spirit, that he would obtain eternal life in the world to come. He urgently and repeatedly admonished the Saints of his day to obtain such an assurance by making their calling and election sure. It is this assurance within a person which brings to him the peace in this world which will sustain him in every tribulation. * * * These fruits of the gospel---assurance that we shall obtain eternal life, peace in this world sustained by such an assurance, and finally eternal life in the world to come---are within the reach of us all" (Romney, Ibid.). "Through self-discipline and devotion we must demonstrate to the Lord that we are willing to serve him under all circumstances. When we have done this, we shall receive an assurance that we shall have eternal life in the world to come. Then we shall have peace in this world" (Ibid.).

Those who seek the celestial glory must be "born again into the kingdom of heaven, of water, and of the spirit, and be cleansed by blood, even the blood of mine Only Begotten; that ye might be sanctified from all sin, and enjoy the words of eternal life in this world, and eternal life in the world to come, even immortal glory." * * * "Therefore it is given to abide in you; the record of heaven; the Comforter; the peaceable things of immortal glory; the truth of all things; that which quickeneth all things, which maketh alive all things; that which knoweth all things, and hath all power according to wisdom, mercy, truth, justice, and judgment" (Moses 6:59, 61)

Sons & Daughters of God

"The destiny of the faithful man in this Church and the faithful woman is to become a son and daughter of God. * * * Now, how are we going to become the sons of God and, of course, daughters as well? How is it done? Can we become the sons and heirs of our Eternal Father simply by being baptized for the remission of our sins after we have repented and have had faith, and have had hands laid upon us for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and have come into the Church? No, it takes more than that. Why, of course they are the children of our Father in heaven, those who do that, as are the people who are outside of the Church; but to become the sons and daughters of God, children, 'heirs, heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ,' we must suffer with him, that we may be glorified with him. In other words, we must receive in our hearts, accept in our hearts, every principle of the gospel which has been revealed; and insofar as it is in our power to do so, we must live in accordance with these principles and keep the commandments of God in full. * * *

If you would become a son or a daughter of God and an heir of the kingdom, then you must go to the house of the Lord and receive blessings which there can be obtained and which cannot be obtained elsewhere; and you must keep those commandments and those covenants to the end. * * * The ordinances of the temple, the endowment and sealings, pertain to exaltation in the celestial kingdom, where the sons and daughters are. The sons and daughters are not outside in some other kingdom. * * * Sons and daughters have access to the home where he dwells, and you cannot receive that access until you go to the temple. * * * You know what it says about servants in the scriptures. Those who become servants are those who are not willing to receive these blessings in the house of the Lord and abide in them. They are not sons; they are not daughters. They are children of God, it is true, for all men are his children. But they do not inherit, and therefore they remain servants throughout eternity. * * * As sons and daughters then, we are heirs of his kingdom and shall receive by right the fulness of the gospel and be entitled to the great blessings and privileges which the Lord in his mercy has revealed to us in the dispensation of the fulness of times" (Joseph Fielding Smith, Doctrines of Salvation, 2:37-41).

The Elect of God

"The elect of God comprise a very select group, an inner circle of faithful members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. They are the portion of church members who are striving with all their hearts to keep the fulness of the gospel law in this life so that they can become inheritors of the fulness of gospel rewards in the life to come. As far as the male sex is concerned, they are the ones, the Lord says, who have the Melchizedek Priesthood conferred upon them and who thereafter magnify their callings and are sanctified by the Spirit. In this way, 'They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom, and the elect of God.' They keep 'the oath and covenant which belongeth to the priesthood,' and are rewarded with the fulness.of the Father's kingdom'" (D&C 84:33-41; Bruce R. McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, p. 217).

"To gain this elect status they must be endowed in the temple of the Lord (D&C 95:8). enter into that 'order of the priesthood' named 'the new and everlasting covenant of marriage' (D&C 131:1-4), and overcome by faith until, as the sons of God, they merit membership in the Church of the Firstborn'' (D&C 76:50-70, 94-96; Mormon Doctrine, p. 218).

"An elect lady is a female member of the Church who has already received, or who through obedience is qualified to receive, the fulness of the gospel blessings. This includes temple endowments, celestial marriage, and the fulness of the sealing power. She is one who has been elected or chosen by faithfulness as a daughter of God in this life, an heir of God, a member of his household. Her position is comparable to that of the elders who magnify their callings in the priesthood and thereby receive all that the Father hath" (D&C 84:38; Mormon Doctrine, p. 217).

"Your Life Is Hid With Christ"

The New Testament records an interesting phrase which the Prophet Joseph used and applied to William Clayton: ". . . and your life is hid with Christ in God" (Col. 3:3). Joseph Smith, on May 16, 1843. while speaking with William Clayton, said to him: "Your life is hid with Christ in God, and so are many others. Nothing but the unpardonable sin can prevent you from inheriting eternal life for you are sealed up by the power of the Priesthood unto eternal life" (H.C. 5:391-392).

Elder McConkie indicated that this phrase meant that "your calling and election has been made sure; you have been sealed up unto eternal life; the Lord has said unto you, 'Son thou shalt be exalted'; you have received the more sure word of prophecy" (Doc. New Test. Comm., 3:34-35)

Joint-Heirs With Jesus Christ

"As the literal Son of God---the Firstborn in the spirit, the Only Begotten in the flesh---Christ is the natural heir of his Father. It thus became his right to inherit, receive, and possess all that his Father had (John 16:15). And his Father is possessor of all things: the universe; all power, wisdom, and goodness; the fulness of truth and knowledge; and an infinity of all good attributes. By heirship and obedience, going from grace to grace, the Son attained these same things (D&C 93:5-17).

"By obedience to the fulness of gospel law, righteous men are adopted into the family of God so that they also become heirs, joint-heirs with Christ (Rom. 8:14-18; Gal. 3:26-29; 4:1-7), inheritors of all that the Father hath (D&C 84:33-41). * * * A joint-heir is one who inherits equally with all other heirs including the Chief Heir who is the Son. Each joint-heir has an equal and an undivided portion of the whole of everything. If one knows all things, so do all others. If one has all power, so do all those who inherit jointly with him. If the universe belongs to one, so it does equally to the total of all upon whom the joint inheritances are bestowed" (McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, pp. 394-395).

Joseph Smith commented that the object of the gospel was "the bringing of men back into the presence of the King of heaven, crowning them in the celestial glory, and making them heirs with the Son to that inheritance which is incorruptible, undefiled, and which fadeth not away" (H.C. 2:5). Those who are the spirits of just men made perfect ". . . minister to the heirs of salvation, both in this world and in the world of spirits" (P. P. Pratt, Key To Theology, p. 116). "All men who become heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ will have to receive the fulness of the ordinances of his kingdom" (H.C. 5:423-424). "The Church of the Firstborn is made up of the sons of God, those who have been adopted into the family of the Lord, those who are destined to be joint-heirs with Christ in receiving all that the Father hath" (Mormon Doctrine, p. 139).

"To become a joint heir of the heirship of the Son, one must put away all his false traditions" (Teachings, p. 321).

The Spirits of Just Men Made Perfect

On August 13, 1843 Joseph Smith first made reference to the "spirits of just men made perfect". He asked the question: "What would it profit us to come unto the spirits of the just men, but to learn and come up to the standard of their knowledge" (Teachings, p. 320).

On October 9, 1843. Joseph gave a discourse on angels and spirits, and commented that "the Hebrew Church 'came unto the spirits of just men made perfect, and unto an innumerable company of angels, unto God the Father.of all, and to Jesus Christ the Mediator of the new covenant" Joseph then asked the question: "What did they learn by coming to the spirits of just men made perfect? Is it written? No. What they learned has not been and could not have been written. What object was gained by this communication with the spirits of the just? It was the established order of the kingdom of God: The keys of power and knowledge were with them to communicate to the saints. Hence the importance of understanding the distinction between the spirits of the just and angels. Spirits can only be revealed in flaming fire and glory. Angels have advanced further, their light and glory being tabernacled; and hence they appear in bodily shape. The spirits of just men are made ministering servants to those who are sealed unto life eternal, and it is through them that the sealing power comes down" (Teachings, p. 325; See Heb. 1:14).

In a revelation given to Joseph Smith in April of 1829. the Lord revealed to him that John the beloved, who was translated at the time of Christ, was working as ". . . flaming fire and a ministering angel; he shall minister for those who shall be heirs of salvation who dwell on the earth" (D&C 7:6).

The Title of "Friend"

Elder Bruce R. McConkie has written that:

> Those who choose to serve the Lord and who keep his commandments are called his SERVANTS. After they have been tried and tested and are found faithful and true in all things, they are called no longer servants, but FRIENDS (John 15:14-15). His friends are the ones he will take into his kingdom and with whom he will associate to all eternity (D&C 93:45-46). They receive the adoption of sonship. "And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ" (Gal. 4:6-7).

Many Are Called, Few Are Chosen

Many are "called into the Church, called to the holy priesthood, called to receive all the blessings of the gospel, including the crowning blessing of eternal life" yet few of those who are "called" become "chosen to inherit the blessings offered through the gospel and the priesthood; chosen for eternal life and exaltation." Yes, many are "called to the Church, but" few are "chosen to be sealed up unto eternal life and to have one's calling and election made sure" (McConkie, Doc. New Test. Comm., 3:349).

The Prophet Joseph once made the comment: "How many will be able to abide a celestial law, and go through and receive their exaltation, I am unable to say, as many are called, but few are chosen" (Teachings, p. 331). The gospel net draws into the church people of all kinds (many are called, and respond to the last invitation). Yet out of all those who are drawn into membership in the church, few of them will continue onward and upward in their search for eternal life and become chosen of the Lord. "There has been a day of calling, but the time has come for a day of choosing; and let those be chosen that are worthy. And it shall be manifest unto my servant, by the voice of the Spirit, those that are chosen; and they shall be sanctified" (D&C 105:35-36). "There are many who have been ordained among you, whom I have called, but few of them are chosen. They who are not chosen have sinned a very grievous sin, in that they are walking in darkness at noon-day. * * * If you keep not my commandments, the love of the Father shall not continue with you, therefore you shall walk in darkness" (D&C 95:5-6, 12). "Behold, there are many called, but few are chosen. And why are they not chosen? Because their hearts are set so much upon the things of this world, and aspire to the honors of men. . . " (D&C 121:34-35).

DOCTRINAL CONCEPTS OF THE GOSPEL RELATING TO MAKING YOUR CALLING AND ELECTION SURE

The Oath & Covenant of The Priesthood

The oath and covenant of the priesthood, with it's attendant blessings, was revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith on September 22-23, 1832. It states:

> For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken [Aaronic & Melchizedek], and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies.
>
> They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron [Washings, anointings and the Aaronic portion of the endowment] and the seed of Abraham [Melchizedek portion of the endowment and temple marriage]. and the church [of the Firstborn] and kingdom, and the elect of God [having received this position by receiving the fulness of the priesthood ordinance].
>
> And also all they who receive this priesthood [the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood] receive me, saith the Lord.
>
> For he that receiveth my servants receiveth me [as the second comforter];
>
> And he that receiveth me [as his second comforter] receiveth my Father [John 14:23; D&C 130:3; Teachings, pp. 150-151];
>
> And he that receiveth my Father receiveth my Father's kingdom; therefore all that my Father hath shall be given unto him [he becomes an heir---a joint-heir with Christ---of all that the Father has---he is a son of God, no longer a servant].
>
> And this is according to the oath and covenant which belongeth to the [fulness of the Melchizedek priesthood.
>
> Therefore, all those who receive the [fulness of the Melchizedek] priesthood, receive this oath and covenant of my Father, which he cannot break, neither can it be moved.
>
> But whoso breaketh this covenant after he hath received it, and altogether turneth therefrom, shall not have forgiveness of sins in this world nor in the world to come [for they have committed the unpardonable sin, and have become sons of perdition].
>
> And wo unto all those who come not unto this [fulness of the] priesthood which ye have received, which I now confirm upon you who are present this day, by mine own voice out of the heavens. . . . * * *
>
> And every one that hearkeneth to the voice of the Spirit cometh unto God, even the Father.
>
> And the Father teacheth him of the covenant which he has renewed and confirmed upon you, which is confirmed upon you for your sakes, and not for your sakes only, but for the sake of the whole world. (D&C 84:33-42, 47-48).

The above oath and covenant of the priesthood really pertains to those who receive the ordinance of the fulness of the priesthood. All who hold the Melchizedek Priesthood, but who do not hold the fulness, are under obligation to magnify their callings so that they might become worthy of the above blessings, through additional covenants. "In the temples the faithful enter into many covenants pertaining to exaltation. And so it goes, the more faithful and devoted a person is, the more of the covenants of the Lord he is enabled to receive, until he receives them in full and his calling and election is made sure" (McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, p. 167).

"When [each baptized person] has proved himself by a worthy life, having been faithful in all things required of him, then it is his privilege to receive OTHER COVENANTS and to take upon himself other obligations which will make of him an heir, and he will become a member of the 'Church of the Firstborn.' Into his hands, 'the Father has given all things.' He will be a priest and a king, receiving of the Father's fulness and of his glory. Is this worth having? It cannot be obtained without some effort. It cannot be obtained without knowledge of the things of God. * * * And the fulness of these blessings can only be obtained in the temple of the Lord!" (Joseph Fielding Smith, The Way to Perfection, p. 208).

Those who receive the fulness of the priesthood receive "the power and authority of the higher, or Melchizedek Priesthood, [which] is to hold the keys of all the spiritual blessings of the church---to have the privilege of receiving the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, to have the heavens opened unto them, to commune with the general assembly and church of the Firstborn, and to enjoy the communion and presence of God the Father, and Jesus the mediator of the new covenant" (D&C 107:18-19).

The Father Selects And Gives To Christ

In a revelation given to Joseph Smith in August of 1830, the Lord stated that he had ordained Joseph an apostle. and had "committed the keys of my kingdom, and a dispensation of the gospel for the last times; and for the fulness of times, in the which I will gather together in one all things, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; And also with all those whom my Father hath given me out of the world" (D&C 27:12-14). In May of 1831 the Lord said: "Fear not, little children, for you are mine, and I have overcome the world, and you are of them that my Father hath given me; and none of them that my Father hath given me shall be lost" (D&C 50:41-42). Later, in another revelation, the Prophet Joseph recorded: "And as I said unto mine apostles, even so I say unto you, for you are mine apostles, even God's high priests; ye are they whom my Father hath given me; ye are my friends" (D&C 84:63).

This concept of being "chosen" by the Father and subsequently given to the Son was mentioned by the Savior while he lived upon the earth: "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out" (John 6:37). And again, at the time Christ offered the great intercessory prayer he said:

> I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word.
>
> Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee.
>
> For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me.
>
> I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I am glorified in them.
>
> And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are.
>
> While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy name: those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled. * * *

And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth.

Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word. (John 17:6-12, 19-20)

In speaking to those on the American continent, the resurrected Savior stated: "But behold. ye have both heard my voice, and seen me; and ye are my sheep, and ye are numbered among those whom the Father hath given me" (3 Ne 15:24).

Although it is the Father who gives to the Savior those who are to be numbered among his eternal fold, it is the Savior who pleads our cause before the Father in our behalf, that we might be numbered among the saved:

Listen to him who is the advocate with the Father, who is pleading your cause before him---

Saying: Father, behold the sufferings and death of him who did no sin, in whom thou wast well pleased; behold the blood of thy Son which was shed, the blood of him whom thou gavest that thyself might be glorified;

Wherefore, Father, spare these my brethren that believe on my name, that they may come unto me and have everlasting life. (D&C 45:3-5).

As we live the commandments and continue to strive with all our hearts to become what the Lord intends for us to become, the Savior will plead our cause before the Father. At the Father's own discretion, and in his own good time, when he feels that we have been proved enough, then we are given by him to the Savior to be numbered among his eternal fold, having received the fulness of the priesthood blessings, and been sealed up to eternal life.

The Name of The Father
Which Is Bestowed Upon His Sons

While on the Isle of Patmos, John the Revelator saw in vision the prophetic events of the latter-days, and among other things, made a statement about a stone and a new name:

He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a while stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it. (Rev. 2:17)

In 1843, the Prophet Joseph Smith discussed in further detail concerning this stone and the new name:

This earth, in its sanctified and immortal state, will be made like unto crystal and will be a Urim and Thummim to the inhabitants who dwell thereon, whereby all things pertaining to an INFERIOR kingdom, or all kingdoms of a LOWER order, will be manifest to those who dwell on it; and this earth will be Christ's.

Then the white stone mentioned in Revelation 2:17, will become a Urim and Thummim to each individual who receives one, whereby, things pertaining to a HIGHER order of kingdoms will be made known;

And a white stone is given to each of those who come into the celestial kingdom, whereon is a new name written, which no man knoweth save he that receiveth it. The new name is the key word. (D&C 130:9-11)

Concerning the importance of the new name, Elder McConkie wrote:

As with all glorified beings, our Lord has a new name in celestial exaltation, a name known to and comprehended by those only who know God in the sense that they have become as he is and have eternal life. (See Rev:12-17). Thus, Christ's "new name" shall be written upon all those who are joint-heirs with him (Rev. 3:12), and shall signify that they have become even as he is and he is even as the Father. (3 Ne 28:10) (Doc. New Test. Comm., 3:567; Rev. 19:12).

Elder James E. Talmage stated that ". . .the Father placed His name upon the Son; and Jesus Christ spoke and ministered in and through the Father's name; and so far as power, authority, and Godship are concerned His words and acts were and are those of the Father" (Articles of Faith, p. 471).

In a recent General Conference address, Elder Dallin Oaks spoke about how this name of the Son is given to all the faithful saints:

> . . . what we witness [when we partake of the sacrament] is not that we take upon us his name but that we are willing to do so. In this sense, our witness relates to some future event or status whose attainment is not self-assumed. but depends on the authority or initiative of the Savior himself.
>
> Scriptural references to the name of Jesus Christ often signify the authority of Jesus Christ. In that sense, our willingness to take upon us his name signifies our willingness to take upon us the authority of Jesus Christ in the sacred ordinances of the temple, and to receive the highest blessings available through his authority when he chooses to confer them upon us. (The Ensign/May 1985, p..83)

In one of a series of four lectures given by Lynn McKinlay, a BYU religion teacher, brother McKinlay quoted section 130:9-10, and made the following comment in regards to the new name being the "key word":

> This information concerning the key word has been a mystery and will remain a mystery to all, except as they receive the keys of the Fulness of the Priesthood. The key word or new name, as we are given to understand here, gives a man the right to obtain the stone upon which that name is written, and that stone will become to him a Urim and Thummim to reveal to him all the secrets of the higher order of the kingdoms. (Life Eternal, p. 163; 1950)

In the William Clayton Journal of June 14, 1844, the Prophet is recorded as saying: "The g[rand] key word was the first word Adam spoke and it is a word of supplication. He [Joseph] found the word by the Urim and Thummim -- it is that key word to which the heavens is opened.

It is interesting to look at this concept of the Father giving a new name to the Son, and he in turn bestowing it upon those who are sealed up to eternal life. In non-LDS sources, such as the Gospel of Phillip, it states: "One single name is not told in the world, the name which the Father gave to the Son. It is higher than everyone, which is this: the name of the Father, for the Son would not become the Father save that he took upon himself the name of the Father. As for this name, those who have it know it, but they speak it not" (Saying #12).

In Masonry "there is a famous legend which the grand orator elaborates in lecture form in the ceremonies of the 13th, 14th, and 21st degrees of Masonry which has some very ancient roots. . . .The basic, introductory aspect of the legend is: that up in the pre-existence, there was a special Secret Doctrine that was given by Deity, and it was given down to the Earth first to Adam. Adam then was to carefully guard this Secret Doctrine because it contained all the Mysteries. It contained the knowledge of God, and the name it contained was the sacred name of God. Adam then bestowed it [the Secret Doctrine] upon his son, Seth, who guarded it very carefully---only among the inner circle of believers---and then it was handed down until it came to Enoch" ("Is There No Help For The Widow's Son", address by Dr. Reed C. Durham, Jr., at the Mormon History Association Convention, held at Nauvoo, Illinois, in the old Nauvoo Hotel, on Saturday, April 20, 1974).

The scriptures confirm this idea of there being a sacred name which the Father gave to the Son: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth: And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father" (Phil 2:9-11). The Lord's prayer speaks in terms of the Father's name being "hallowed" (Matt 6:9). The apostle Paul, in his epistle to the Hebrews, speaks about Christ's more excellent name: "Being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they" (Heb 1:4).

In an article on "The Early Christian Prayer-Circle", Hugh Nibley mentions an old Coptic work (The First Jeu) which discusses some interesting details about prayer circles that were held and what they did in them. It is interesting that he mentions that ". . . they [the participants] must form this circle in order to receive a name which they are eager to possess" (I Jeu 90-91; Unpublished Mss, p. 7; December, 1969).

From the information available, there is apparently a name, which those who receive the fulness of the priesthood, receive. With this name they are able to obtain their seer stone. The Prophet Joseph said ". . . that every man who lived on the earth was entitled to a seer stone, and should have one, but they are kept from them in consequence of their wickedness" (Manuscript History of Brigham Young, 1801-1844, December 27. 1841). With the name and the stone, an individual would be able to continue his progression towards the desired goal of perfection.

Being Saved By Grace

In a revelation given to the Prophet Joseph Smith in 1829. the Lord revealed that salvation, in it's purest sense, "is the greatest of all the GIFTS of God", adding that "there is no gift greater than the gift of salvation" (D&C 6:13). Two months later the Lord revealed that eternal life was "the greatest of all the GIFTS of God" (D&C 14:7), showing that not only are the two concepts of salvation and eternal life synonymous, but they are also gifts of God.

We normally do not think of eternal life as a gift of God. Rather we think of it more in terms of something we work for and earn --- something that we would merit because of our works. But being a gift of God, it automatically renders itself as being unattainable solely through works. A gift presupposes a giver, and it is the prerogative of the giver to decide when he wants to give the gift, and what the conditions of the gift might be.

In the Joseph Smith Translation of Genesis, the prophet said that the fulness of the priesthood was ".. . after the order of the Son of God; which order came, not by man, nor by the will of man; neither by father nor mother; neither by beginning of days nor end of years; but of God; And it was delivered unto men by the calling of his own voice, according to his own will, unto as many as believed on his name" (JST Gen 14:28-29). Thus, the fulness of the priesthood is a gift of God, and is given by God ". . . according to his own will." And the conditions are, that the person must believe "... on his name."

Thus, we can finally understand the difficult writings of the apostle Paul, in regards to his writings on works and grace:

> For by grace [according to the will of God] are ye saved [sealed up to eternal life & receive the fulness of the priesthood] through faith

[having believed on his name]; and not of yourselves [we must wait patiently for the promise of eternal life to come to us]: it [the promise of eternal life] is the gift of God [in spite of our works, we cannot request the gift, for it must come at the pleasure of God]:

Not of works, lest any man should boast. (Eph 2:8-9)

Nephi stated "that it is by grace that we are saved, after all we can do" (2 Ne 25:23), meaning that after doing all that we know how, the gift of eternal life will only come through the grace of God, "... and it shall be in his own time, and in his own way, and according to his own will" (D&C 88:68). Thus the Prophet Joseph admonished the saints to work diligently towards making their calling and election sure, and then to wait patiently until the promise come.

The One Hundred & Forty-Four Thousand

In the book of Revelation, John spoke concerning the last days in which there would be 144,000 sealed with "the seal of the living God":

And after these things I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree.

And I saw another angel [John the Revelator--see D&C 77: 9. 14] ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea, Saying, Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.

And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel. (Rev. 7:1-4)

The four angels spoken of are ".. . sent forth from God, to whom is given power over the four parts of the earth, to save life and to destroy; these are they who have the everlasting gospel to commit to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people; having power to shut up the heavens, to seal up unto life, or to cast down to the regions of darkness" (D&C 77:8). These angels were instructed to wait their destruction upon the earth, ". . . till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads [through the ordinance of the fulness of the priesthood]" (D&C 77:9). And "what are we to understand by sealing the one hundred and forty-four thousand, out of all the tribes of Israel---twelve thousand out of every tribe? We are to understand that those who are sealed are high priests, ordained unto the holy order of God, to administer the everlasting gospel; for they are they who are ordained out of every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, by the angels to whom is given power over the nations of the earth, TO BRING AS MANY AS WILL COME TO THE CHURCH OF THE FIRSTBORN' (D&C 77:11). The mission, then, of the 144,000 will be to bring as many people as are faithful, who are members of the church, into membership with the church of the Firstborn. It does not appear to have anything to do with the missionary work going on in the world today wherein non-members are being brought into The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, since the two churches are not synonymous.

The prophet Joseph explained what it meant to be "sealed in their foreheads":

Four destroying angels holding power over the four quarters of the earth until the servants of God are sealed in their foreheads, which signifies sealing the blessing upon their heads, meaning the everlasting covenant, thereby making their calling and election sure. (Teachings, p. 321)

These events which John saw were to take place during the 6th seal, or in other words, during the 6th 1,000 years of this earths temporal existence (D&C 77:10). We are currently living in the closing moments of the 6th seal. The four destroying angels which are required to wait will be loosed "during the seventh seal and before the Lord comes" (Rev. 9), for it is at this time that the voice said ". . . to the sixth angel which had the trumpet, Loose the four angels which are bound in the great river Euphrates" (Rev. 9:14).

Apparently there are other angels who ". . . are crying unto the Lord day and night, who are ready and waiting to be sent forth to reap down the fields; But the Lord saith unto them, pluck not up the tares while the blade is yet tender (for verily your faith is weak). lest you destroy the wheat also. Therefore, let the wheat and the tares grow together until the harvest is fully ripe; then ye shall first gather out the wheat from among the tares, and after the gathering of the wheat, behold and lo, the tares are bound in bundles, and the field remaineth to be burned" (D&C 86:5-7). President Wilford Woodruff said that these angels had already been sent to the earth as early as June of 1894, and they have been reaping the earth (Young Women's Journal, 5:512; Mill. Star, 56:643; 58:738-9). The mission of these angels is to first gather in the wheat from among the tares. later, they are to bind the tares in bundles.

In December of 1833. it was the Lord's desire that the harvest begin:

> That the work of the gathering together of my saints may continue, that I may build them up unto my name upon holy places; for the time of harvest is come, and my word must needs be fulfilled.
>
> Therefore, I must gather together my people, according to the parable of the wheat and the tares, that the wheat may be secured in the garners to possess eternal life, and be crowned with celestial glory. . . .
> While the tares shall be bound in bundles . . . that they may be burned with unquenchable fire. (D&C 101:64-65)

Towards that end the Lord commanded the saints to ". . . gather together unto the places which I have appointed" (D&C 101:67). Finally, by 1843. the sealing in the forehead commenced towards the selection of the 144,000. In February, 1844, Joseph Smith ". . . made some remarks respecting the hundred and forty-four thousand mentioned by John the Revelator, showing that the selection of persons to form that number had already commenced" (H.C. 6:196). Joseph could confidently say this now, since the ordinance of the fulness of the priesthood had been administered since September of 1843, and over 20 individuals had received the sealing. Since 1844, there have been literally thousands of Latter-day Saints who have received this holy sealing. The 12,000 needed from the tribe of Ephraim may already be achieved.

All Must Make Their Calling & Election Sure In Order To Gain Exaltation

While visiting Ramus, Illinois, during the month of May, 1843, the Prophet gave some instruction regarding the importance of the eternity of the marriage covenant as it related to one's ability to gain the highest degree of the celestial heaven. He said:

> In the celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees; and in order to obtain the highest, a man must enter into this order of the priesthood, [meaning the new and everlasting covenant of marriage;] and if he does not, he cannot obtain it. He may enter into the other, but that is the end of his kingdom: he cannot have an increase. (H.C. 5:392; D&C 131:1-4)

Without question the Prophet was introducing concepts that were still new to the saints, but which had an eternal significance upon their salvation. As he stated here, without eternal marriage, the person would not enter the highest degree of the celestial kingdom.

Two months later, the Prophet wrote down the revelation relating to the new and everlasting covenant of marriage, which included the concept of a plurality of wives (D&C 132). In this revelation Joseph not only confirmed the idea that a person must be married for time and all eternity by one in authority, but he added that the person must also be "sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, of him who is anointed" (v. 7, 19, 26).

The concept that a person must be sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise in order to inherit the celestial kingdom, and become a god, was expressed in a vision given to the Prophet in 1832. The Lord stated that all those who are "washed and cleansed from all their sins, and receive the Holy Spirit" must then overcome by faith and be "sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, which the Father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true". Such individuals are members of "the church of the Firstborn . . . into whose hands the Father has given all things. [They are] priests and kings, who have received of his fulness, and of his glory. * * * These are they whose names are written in heaven. . .[and] whose bodies are celestial" (D&C 76:51-70).

Concerning this concept, Elder Bruce R. McConkie said:

> Now, what Peter announces is that there is such a thing as making these conditional promises [of baptism & marriage] absolute. Obviously any person who gains exaltation, in the ultimate and in the end, has made his calling and election sure. So in one manner of speaking, no one will ever gain exaltation, no one will ever have the family unit continue in eternity unless his calling and his election has been made sure, or in other words, unless he has gained the promise that he shall inherit eternal life. (BYU Speech, March 25, 1969. p. 7)

Elder Marion G. Romney stated that the ". .. gift of eternal life in the world to come may not, of course, be fully realized during earth life. An assurance that it will be obtained in the world to come may, however, be had in this world. As a matter of fact, the blessings of the celestial kingdom are promised only to those who have such an assurance" (Oct Gen Conf, 1949; The Improvement Era (November 1949), p. 752).

Brigham Young said that none will "dwell with the Father and Son, unless they go through those ordeals that are ordained for the Church of the Firstborn" (J.D. 8:154-55).

"We are not going to be saved in the kingdom of God just because our names are on the records of the Church. It will require more than that. We will have to have our names written in the Lamb's Book of Life; that is the evidence we have kept the commandments. Every soul who will not keep the commandments shall have his name blotted out of that book. * * * Comparatively few of the children of men will find the salvation which is found in the celestial kingdom, or in other words the exaltation which will make of them heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ--even sons of God. Those who gain this exaltation receive the fulness of the power, might, and dominion of that kingdom. They overcome all things. They are crowned as priests and kings and become like Jesus Christ" (Joseph Fielding Smith, Doc. of Sal. 2:14, 24).

Joseph Fielding Smith indicated that:

> Those who gain exaltation in the celestial kingdom ARE those who are members of the Church of the Firstborn; in other words, those who keep ALL the commandments of the Lord. There will be many who are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day who shall NEVER become members of the Church of the Firstborn.

Thus, "in order for men to obtain exaltation they must not only receive the Gospel, they must receive the Melchizedek Priesthood, and not only the Melchizedek Priesthood, but the fulness of the Priesthood, meaning the fulness of the blessings of the Priesthood, which can be obtained only in the temples of the Lord through the holy endowment and the sealing ordinances of the Priesthood" (1973-74 Course of Study for the Melchizedek Priesthood Quorums of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, pp. 27, 49).

THE RELATIONSHIP OF THE TRUE ORDER OF PRAYER TO THE FULNESS OF THE PRIESTHOOD

The Keys of Prayer

At the April, 1844 General Conference of the Church, the Prophet Joseph said that it was ". . . the first principle of the Gospel to know for a certainty the Character of God, and to know that we may converse with him as one converses with another . . . " (Teachings, pp. 345-46; 6 April 1844). Joseph Smith learned the reality of this principle early in his life when still a boy of 14. He learned that the Father and the Son do actually exist, and that he could see them, and speak to them, and have his prayers answered. This concept, that one may converse with God, has been a true principle from the days of Adam down to the present time.

In this April General Conference address, Joseph went on to say that in order to approach God we must have a knowledge of God, and that we must know HOW to approach Him:

> Having a knowledge of God, we begin to know how to approach him, and how to ask so as to receive an answer. When we understand the character of God, and know how to come to him, he begins to unfold the heavens to us, and to tell us all about it. When we are ready to come to him, he is ready to come to us. (Teachings, pp. 349-50; 6 April 1844).

This knowledge of how to approach God existed with Adam,and was passed down from generation to generation to all the faithful saints. Prior to his first vision, Joseph had spent considerable time reading the Bible, and undoubtedly learned how the ancient prophets talked with God. It is very likely that Joseph knew more about how to approach God when he went to the grove to pray than what he was later willing to reveal. And because God is no respecter of persons, and desires all to come back to his presence, it is reasonable to assume that these same keys of communication were destined to be possessed by all the faithful. At the time these keys were first given to nine men on May 4, 1842, Joseph promised that ".. . there was nothing made known to these men but what will be made known to all the saints of the last days, so soon as they are prepared to receive, and a proper place [a temple] is prepared to communicate them, even the weakest of the Saints ..." (Teachings, p. 237; 4 May 1842). With these keys the Latter-day Saints are able, through the exercise of their faith, to approach God in the proper manner and learn to commune with heaven.

These keys, whereby an individual may "ask and receive an answer", were incorporated into, and made a part of, the endowment ceremony. All who receive their endowments also receive the keys of the priesthood, which are the signs and tokens used in prayer. These keys are associated with, and belong to, the fulness of the priesthood ((Harrison Burgess Journal; CHO/Ms/d/ 893; December 15, 1845), and are given in anticipation that the fulness of the priesthood will one day be received by the endowed person. With these keys, and the fulness of the priesthood, a person is able to commune with heaven.

Purpose of The Keys of The Priesthood

Brigham Young taught that the endowment (undoubtedly meaning the FULL endowment, which includes the fulness of the priesthood ordinance), would enable a person to walk back into the presence of the Father, "passing the angels who stand as sentinels, being enabled to give them the key words, the signs and tokens, pertaining to the Holy Priesthood, and gain your eternal exaltation in spite of earth and hell" (J.D. 2:31; See also 12:163; 2:315; 10:172; 6:63, 154-55).

Although the keys will be used after this life to gain our exaltation, Brigham Young also explained how the signs are used in this life (as they would be used by those who have already received the fulness of the priesthood):

> . . . the name that was given to Adam was more ancient than he was the first man--but his New Name pertained to the Holy Priesthood & as I before stated is more ancient than he was--there are 4 Penal Signs & 4 Penal Tokens and should I want to address the Throne to enquire after ancient things which transpired on Planets that rolled away before this Planet came into existence, I should use my New Name which is Ancient & refers to Ancient things--Should I wish to Enquire for Present things I should use my own Name which refers to present things & should I want to Enquire for Future things I would use the 3rd Name which refers to the first token of the Melchizedek Priesthood--or is the 3rd token that is given--& refers to the Son--the 2nd Token of the M. Priesthood is to be given only in one place and nowhere else--but these signs & tokens that pertain to the Priesthood should never be given any where only in such places as belong to the P.H. & that too by none but such as belong to the order of the Priesthood. (General Record of the Seventies, Book B, 28 Dec 1845; Typed w/o sic).

The use of the fourth sign and token was never mentioned by President Young in this discourse, as far as we have record. However, from several other sources and documents, we know that the fourth sign is used to petition the heavens for messengers--and to actually open the heavens, whereas the first three signs are used only to enquire about things past, present and future.

Restoration of The True Order

One of the earliest accounts, subsequent to the sacred grove, in which the prophet taught some of the saints concerning prayer, was in January of 1833. At the School of the Prophets Joseph taught the brethren how to pray so as to receive revelation. They would gather together in the morning about sunrise and engage ". . . in silent prayer, kneeling, with our hands uplifted each one praying in silence, no one whispered above his breath. . ." and on this occasion the Father and the Son appeared to them (Zebedee Coltrin, Minutes of the Salt Lake School of the Prophets, 3 Oct 1883).

In 1835 Joseph Smith taught the father of Lorenzo Dow Young how to get the power to heal his son. "Join in prayer," the prophet said, "one by mouth and the others repeat after him in unison. After prayer. . .anoint with oil; then lay hands on him, one being mouth and the other two repeating in unison after him. . .continuing the administration in this way until you receive a testimony that he will be restored (Ehat & Cook, The Words of Joseph Smith, p. 54.)

In October of 1840, the Prophet Joseph commented that the "keys of this priesthood [Melchizedek] consisted in obtaining the voice of Jehovah. . ." (Ibid, p. 42). In January of 1841, the Lord revealed to Joseph that He would restore the "fulness of the priesthood" in a temple built to his name [in this case the Nauvoo Temple]. In this revelation Joseph was also commanded to teach both Hyrum Smith and William Law how to pray, thereby giving them "the keys whereby [they] may ask and receive blessings (D&C 124:97; 19 Jan 1841). Although this revelation came in January of 1841, Joseph Smith did not actually extend these keys to Hyrum Smith and William Law until May 4, 1842 when he administered the endowment for the first time in this dispensation to nine brethren. William Law was one of the nine who received the keys on the 4th. Hyrum Smith received them the next day with Joseph.

On May 16, 1842 the Times & Seasons published facsimile #2, depicting Abraham upon the altar about to be sacrificed. Abraham's unusual position upon the altar, however, depicts him in prayer, calling for an angel to deliver him from certain death (T&S 3:783; H.C. 4:519; 1 Mar 1842). On April 28th, 1842, Joseph Smith addressed the Relief Society sisters in Nauvoo, and stated that women could anoint with oil and administer to the sick with the laying on of hands. This concept would be better understood once the sisters could be endowed in the temple. Then Joseph .. .

> . . . spoke of delivering the keys of the Priesthood to the Church, and said that the faithful members of the Relief Society should receive them in connection with their husbands, that the Saints whose integrity has been tried and proved faithful, might know how to ask the Lord and receive an answer. (Teachings, p. 226)

These same keys would also enable the brethren "to detect everything false" and that the keys would be given as soon as the Elders "shall prove their integrity" (Ibid). The Prophet was vitally concerned about this aspect of the keys of the priesthood, for he knew that once the brethren were able to commune with heaven, that they would also experience manifestations or revelations from evil sources. Many individuals in scriptural history were deceived by these appearances, and thought they were of God, when in fact they were of the devil. Hence, Joseph was quite vocal in cautioning the saints to not be deceived, and to learn how to detect true revelations from false. On May 1, 1842 (just three days away from administering the endowment) Joseph preached in the grove, and said that "the keys are certain signs and words by which false spirits and personages may be detected from true, which cannot be revealed to the Elders til the Temple is completed" (H.C. 4:608).

On May 4, 1842, the keys of the priesthood, were finally delivered to nine of the brethren who had assembled in the upper room of the store in Nauvoo. Joseph instructed ...

> . . . them in the principles and order of the Priesthood, attending to washings, anointings, endowments and the communication of keys pertaining to the Aaronic Priesthood, and so on to the highest order of the Melchizedek Priesthood, setting forth the order pertaining to the Ancient of Days, and all those plans and principles by which any one is enabled to secure the fullness of those blessings which have been prepared for the Church of the Firstborn, and come up and abide in the presence of the Eloheim in the eternal worlds. (Teachings, p. 237)

On the 27th of August, 1843, Brigham Young commented that "any person can ask the Lord for a witness concerning himself, and get an answer, but not to lead the Church" (H.C. 5:551).

These keys were given to Judge James Adams on May 4th, 1842. Said Joseph:

> I anointed him to the patriarchal power---to receive the keys of knowledge and power, by revelation to himself. He has had revelations concerning his departure, and has [now] gone to a more important work. (Teachings, p. 326; 9 Oct 1843).

In February, 1844. Joseph Smith met with the Twelve and discussed the Oregon and California Exploring Expedition, and stated that he wanted "every man that goes to be a king and a priest. When he gets on the mountains he may want to talk with his God" (H.C. 6:224; 23 Feb 1844).

In August of this same year, Brigham Young stated that he had "the keys and therefore the means of obtaining the mind of God upon [any] subject" (7 Aug 1844).

The Patriarchal Order Given To Adam & Eve And It's Relationship To The Fulness of The Priesthood And The True Order of Prayer

The divine system of government in the heavens is patriarchal in nature. The sealings which are done in temples today are organizing the faithful saints into that same type of government which they will live under in the eternities to come. This divine patriarchal system was given to Adam and Eve when they were placed upon the earth. (See, for instance, Abraham 1:26). They gave the spiritual and temporal guidance to their own children. They did not attend church services because there was no church on the earth until the days of Moses, when he organized an ecclesiastical structure to help in teaching and governing the children of Israel.

Adam and Eve were the ones who held all the authority necessary to initiate their children into the ordinances of the gospel, from baptism on to the fulness of the priesthood. It was Adam and Eve who were the first "temple president" and "matron" upon the earth. They administered the same ordinances to their children which we receive today.

Many of their children must have received the fulness of the priesthood which enabled them to come into the presence of the Lord. The scriptures state that "God revealed himself unto Seth, and he rebelled not, but offered an acceptable sacrifice, like unto his brother Abel" (Moses 6:3). After Cain committed murder, the Lord cursed him, and "shut [him] out from the presence of the Lord" (Moses 5:41). Cain felt this was more than he could bear, and he said: "Behold thou hast driven me out this day from the face of the Lord, and from thy face shall I be hid; and I shall be a fugitive and a vagabond in the earth" (Moses 5:39).

The patriarchal order which was possessed by Adam and Eve contained all of the following elements:

1. They were married for eternity. Before the fall Eve was called the WIFE of Adam (Moses 3:25).

2. Adam & Eve were commanded to multiply and replenish the earth (Moses 2:28).

3. Both Adam and Eve labored together for their sustenance (Moses 5:1).

4. They unitedly prayed in the true order. (Moses 5:4, 10, 16)

5. Adam kept a Book of Remembrance which contained his writings as he wrote by "the spirit of inspiration". He taught his children how to read from these revelations (Moses 6:5-8).

6. Adam taught his children the gospel of redemption, and many believed and became the sons of God (i.e., sealed up to eternal life) (Moses 6:58-62; 7:1).

7. Adam blessed his posterity, and before his death he blessed them again, that they might come into the presence of the Lord (D&C 107:53. 56-57).

8. Adam held the fulness of the priesthood. (Moses 5:59)

This is the patriarchal order that governed the children of Adam & Eve for many generation. But through wickedness, this order was finally lost among the people and there began to be kings and rulers who would govern the people, and soon the earth was filled with a diversity of types of governments.

However, whenever the gospel was restored to the earth after an apostasy, the patriarchal order was restored as well. This sacred system, however, was not given to the masses of people. It was given to the righteous who proved themselves worthy of such high blessings. The sacred ordinances which built the patriarchal order had to be restored only in sacred places, set apart from the world. In olden times such places were mountain tops, groves, wildernesses and caves---any place where the world was not. Today, those sacred portions which build up the patriarchal order through ordinance, are found only in temples. They include the fulness of the priesthood & the true order of prayer.

The Ordinances Help Prepare An Individual To Re-Enter God's Presence

The ordinances are all essential in order to return to Father's presence. Baptism cleanses a person of his own sins; the bestowal of the Holy Ghost allows a person to become sanctified and grow in the principle of revelation; the reception of the priesthood upon the brethren prepares them to become heirs to all that the Father has---ultimately a joint-heir with Christ, who is the Firstborn and who inherits all. Once these ordinances have been received, and a person has continued faithful, he will enter the temple to receive additional covenants. The washing cleanses the sisters, but only promises the brethren that they will become clean from the blood and sins of this generation, if faithful. The anointing foreshadows the blessings which will be given in the fulness of the priesthood ordinance. A garment is given to shield it's wearer from the darts of the adversary as he climbs into the presence of the Lord. The endowment bestows the keys of how to ask and receive an answer and instructs the participants on how to detect, and how to finally go through the real veil. The covenant of marriage is entered into, which bestows the fulness of the patriarchal priesthood upon the couple, but it does not bestow the fulness of the priesthood. After proving true and faithful in all things, the brethren and sisters are called up and anointed to the fulness of the priesthood. The brethren first receive the washing of feet which cleanses them from the blood and sins of this generation, and then the couple is sealed up unto eternal life---their own kingdom is now established for eternity.

The keys of the priesthood which were given in the endowment, are now operable for the benefit of the husband and wife, and they are able to receive all necessary revelations for themselves and their kingdom. All things are theirs, and they are Christ's.

The Relationship of The Keys To The Atonement

The significance of what the tokens and signs represent is deepened as one gains a greater awareness of their relationship to the atonement. The tokens relate to the wounds which the Savior received while upon the cross. The signs are the positions of the Savior's arms while on the cross, which would form both the square and compass. The penalties make reference to the ways in which the sacrifices were made in ancient times, and which referred to the crucifixion of Christ which was to come.

Through the endowment, the saints receive the wounds of the crucifixion in symbolic imagery into their own body. Thus Paul could say that he had the marks of the crucifixion in his body.

There are basically five wounds which the Savior received (Elder Neal A. Maxwell; The Ensign/ November, 1981, p. 9; Oct Gen Conf). Although Elder Maxwell did not mention them, they were probably the palms, wrists, side, feet and crown. President Kimball spoke of three of these wounds:

> He [Christ] goes his way alone. The nails are hammered into his hands and feet, through soft and quivering flesh. The agony increases. The cross is dropped in the hole; the flesh tears. What excruciating pain! Then new nails are placed in the wrist to make sure that the body will not fall to the ground and recover. The Ensign/December 1984. p. 7; Also The Ensign/December 1980, p. 8)

There were six places in the Savior's body where a nail passed through--2 hands, 2 feet, and 2 wrists, although there were only five nails used---one nail went through both feet. In addition, there was a circular crown of thorns and a sword wound in his side.

The Process of Going Through The Real Veil

For those who are truly desirous, the way has been opened whereby they might come back into the presence of the Lord, while they are still in the flesh (Moses 6:59; D&C 76:114-118; 93:1). This process has been symbolically portrayed in sacred places.

After we have proven ourselves true and faithful in all things, keeping all the commandments, and living up to the covenants which we have made, we are then ready to be called up to receive the fulness of the priesthood and be ordained kings and priests, queens and priestesses. In symbolic fashion this is what happens when the person is called up by "Peter", to come out of the endowment room. Peter represents, in this case, the president of the church. The fulness of the priesthood ordinance bestows the sealing power upon the person whereby he may now communicate with the Lord through the veil. Having received this power, the person can then step to the real veil, which can be found at any dedicated altar, and offer the signs of the priesthood. The three taps at the veil symbolically represent our own prayers which we should offer daily unto the Lord. Joseph suggested that we acquaint ourselves with men like Daniel who prayed thrice daily towards the temple.

Having been cleansed of all sins through the ordinance of washing of feet and baptism, and having been forgiven of the Lord, an individual can then approach Him, at the veil, in a state of cleanliness. Once at the real veil, Adam indicates that he has been true and faithful in all things and that he now desires further light and knowledge by conversing with the Lord through the veil. Here, the candidate feels the wounds of the Savior, perhaps sees the nail prints in his feet, and then embraces Him as he receives the last name, which the Father gave to Him, and which He gives to all the heirs, all whom the Father hath given Him. This last name represents in totality the 4th name given at the symbolic veil. The experience of embracing the Savior at the veil could very well be where the person receives the more sure word of prophecy, that his name has been written in the Lamb's Book of Life. After the person has received the last name, he can then knock again, three times at the veil (which is prayer at a dedicated altar). using the fourth sign. This time Adam says that he has conversed with the Lord through the veil and desires now to enter his presence. The veil is then parted, and he enters the Lord's presence. At this point he would have the opportunity of obtaining his seer stone which Joseph said was promised to all the faithful.

The Savior spoke of this wonderful experience when he said:

> Behold, I stand at the door [veil], and knock [he calls to us with his voice]: if any man hear my voice [by conversing with the Lord through the veil], and open the door [knocks the second time to open the veil], I will come in to him, and sup with him [sacrament?], and he with me. (Rev 3:20).

The Keys Must Be Used To Obtain Blessings

Elder Bruce R. McConkie stated that "the greatest blessings are reserved for those who obtain 'the fulness of the priesthood,' meaning the fulness of the blessings of the priesthood. These blessings are found only in the temples of God." Then, by quoting Joseph Smith, he stated that "there are certain key words and signs belonging to the priesthood which must be observed in order to obtain the blessing [of the fulness of the priesthood]." These key words and signs, "of course, are revealed only in the temples" and "are essential to enable one 'to secure the fulness of those blessings which have been prepared for the Church of the Firstborn, and come up and abide in the presence of Elohim in the Eternal worlds'" (Mormon Doctrine, p. 482). President Joseph F. Smith stated:

> The Lord Almighty has revealed unto us truths, and principles. He has given us commandments, shown and taught us the order of prayer, and how to worship in spirit and in truth. He has given us signs which it is our privilege to use to indicate our determination before him, to remember him, and to witness unto him that we are willing to keep the commandments that he has given, that we may always have his spirit to be with us, even unto the end. (The Improvement Era, IX (August, 1906). 812-815; Fashion and the Violation of Covenants and Duty.")

Apparently, use of the signs will assist the true seeker in his strivings to obtain the fulness of the priesthood blessings. Obviously, a person must repent of his sins and approach the Lord only with clean hands and a pure heart, for only they shall ascend unto the hill of the Lord.

CONCEPTS ASSOCIATED WITH THE ORDINANCE OF THE WASHING OF THE FEET

The Purpose of The Ordinance

The purpose of the ordinance of washing of feet, is to make a person clean from the blood and sins of this generation (D&C 88:138-139), or in the words of the Lord, to become "clean every whit" (John 13:10). The Lord has stated that no unclean thing can enter his presence (1 Ne 10:21; 15:34; Alma 7:21). Through the process of repentance, baptism, and forgiveness, a person becomes clean from his own sins. Then, the priesthood holder may become clean from the blood and sins of the generation he is called upon to serve, by being faithful in his particular priesthood assignments, through the washing of the feet. "Those who are not the first elders [meaning all of us, for the first elders were Joseph Smith & those who served with him]" are to "continue in the vineyard until the mouth of the Lord shall call them, for their time is not yet come; their garments are not clean from the blood of this generation" (D&C 88:85).

The Responsibility For The Blood and Sins of This Generation

Those who receive the Melchizedek Priesthood are called to minister to the inhabitants of the earth by (1) preaching the gospel; (2) perfecting the saints; and (3) redeeming the dead. Unless a priesthood holder magnifies his priesthood callings and assignments, he will retain the sins of those he was called upon to serve and his garments will not be clean from the blood of this generation. Therefore, he will remain filthy still at the last day, and consequently be unable to enter the Lord's presence in his sins.

The sisters, on the other hand, have not been ordained to the Melchizedek Priesthood and therefore do not have the charge to minister to the world, except as Auxiliaries to the Priesthood. Thus they are not accountable for the sins of this generation and therefore do not need the ordinance of the washing of feet. President Young said:

Pertaining to his children on this earth, she [the woman] is not accountable for the sins that are in the world. God requires obedience from man, he is Lord of Creation, and at his hands the sins of the world will be required (Unpublished Discourse by Brigham Young, October 8, 1861; "A Few Words of Doctrine", pp. 3-4; Ms/d/1234/Box 49/fd 8/CHO).

Therefore, although the sisters are accountable to the Priesthood for the labors they perform as Auxiliaries, they are "not accountable for the sins that are in the world", and can therefore be pronounced clean "every whit" in their washing ordinance. However, in the same ordinance, the brethren are only promised that they MAY BECOME clean, through their faithfulness. The promise becomes a reality in the washing of the feet ordinance.

This term "clean every whit" comes from the 13th chapter of John wherein Christ washed the feet of his apostles and told them the ordinance is necessary that they might be made clean. When Peter objected to the Master washing his feet, the Savior said: "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me" (John 13:8). thus showing that unless a person has been thus cleansed, he will have "no part" with the Savior. Missionary Work And The Ordinance of the Washing of The Feet

In August of 1831, the Lord revealed to the Prophet Joseph that several of the elders who were with him should preach the gospel to the wicked so that they might rid their garments:

> And now, concerning the residue, let them journey and declare the word among the congregations of the wicked, inasmuch as it is given;
>
> And inasmuch as they do this they shall rid their garments, and they shall be spotless before me. (D&C 61:33-34)

In June of 1835, Joseph Smith made a clear statement as to why each and every elder of the church should go on a mission:

> Now the Lord wants the tares and the wheat to grow together: for Zion must be redeemed with judgment, and her converts with righteousness. Every elder that can, after providing for his family (if he has any) and paying his debts, must go forth and clear his skirts from the blood of this generation (Teachings, p. 76).

Book of Mormon References Concerning Ridding Garments of the Blood and Sins of the People

Many of the Book of Mormon prophets took special care to make sure their garments had been cleansed from the sins of the people before they died. For instance, Jacob stated the following concerning him and his brother Nephi:

> And we did magnify our office unto the Lord, taking upon us the responsibility, answering the sins of the people upon our own heads if we did not teach them the word of God with all diligence; wherefore, by laboring with our might their blood might not come upon our garments; otherwise their blood would come upon our garments, and we would not be found spotless at the last day. (Jacob 1:19)

Later Jacob said:

> Now, my beloved brethren, I, Jacob, according to the responsibility I am under to God, to magnify mine office with soberness, and that I might rid my garment of.your sins, I come up into the temple this day that I might declare unto you the word of God. (Jacob 2:2)

King Benjamin assembled the people so that he might rid his garments:

> I say unto you that I have caused that you should assemble yourselves together that I might rid my garments of your blood, at this period of time when I am about to go down to my grave, that I may go down in peace and my immortal spirit may join the choirs above in singing the praises of a just God. (Mosiah 2:28)

Moroni indicated that he had written what he did on the plates so that he might be cleansed from the blood of the people:

> And these things are written that we may rid our garments of the blood of our brethren who have dwindled in unbelief. (Mormon 9:35; See also Ether 12:38)

In our dispensation, section 135 of the D&C states that Joseph Smith's garments were not spotted with the blood of this people (D&C 135:5). Just as the Book of Mormon prophets cleansed their garments before the people, just so today the leaders in Israel have the same responsibility to teach the people and the same need to cleanse their own garments of the blood of the people, by magnifying their callings within the priesthood, whether as home teachers, bishops, quorum presidents, stake, regional or general church leaders. Thus, we should continue serving in the vineyard (meaning within our priesthood assignments). "until the mouth of the Lord shall call". Those that are worthy will receive the ordinance of the washing of the feet "for unto this end was the ordinance of the washing of feet instituted" (D&C 88:139), that the priesthood holder might be cleansed from the blood and sins of this generation. Having been made clean, he is now worthy to enter the Lord's presence.

The Ordinance Precedes The Fulness of The Priesthood

There are a few quotations which seem to indicate that the ordinance of washing of feet precedes the second anointing ordinance. In the George Laub journal it indicates that the washing of the feet would be necessary "that we may Receive Our Endowment" so that "hands [might be] Laid on [us] to Exalt ourSelvs to the hiest glory and Exaltation[.]" (p.68) In the Times & Seasons, published in Nauvoo in 1844, John Taylor stated that through obedience individuals may receive "crowns for crosses", and be "ordained to eternal life after sin is overcome [through the washing of feet ordinance]. (5:670)

The ordinance of washing of feet was performed as early as 1833 in the School of the Prophets, preceding the second anointing ordinance which was not given until September, 1843. The washing of the feet was also performed in the Kirtland Temple along with the initiatory ordinances of washing & anointing, in 1836 and 1837.

Although this ordinance was not fully comprehended by the saints in 1836 as to it's proper place in temple ordinance work, still, from it's very inception, it was understood what the ordinance was for, and it would later be put into it's proper temple context, preceding the fulness ordinance.

There is some evidence to indicate that as late as 1905 the brethren were pronounced clean in the initiatory ordinance of washing, rather than in the washing of the feet ordinance. Another document indicates that individuals were washed clean prior to the endowment and fulness ordinance (George Laub journal, p. 68). Whether or not this was true, the initiatory ordinance today only promises that one day they will become clean if they are true and faithful, which ordinance foreshadows the washing of the feet.

Examples In Scripture Concerning The Washing of The Feet

In the early versions of the hymn "The Spirit of God" there was a verse which in part stated: "For he that receiveth his penny appointed, must surely be clean at the harvest of wheat" (H.C. 2:422, 426). This verse refers directly to Matthew 20 wherein the Savior gives the parable of those who are faithful in his vineyard, and says he will give them all one penny for their labors. The penny correlates with eternal life, for all who labor diligently at the time they are called, will receive the same gift. Being made "clean" correlates not only with baptism for personal sins, but also the ordinances which pronounce the brother and the sister "clean every whit", (the ordinance of washing for the sisters and the washing of the feet for the brethren), and they are thus harvested as wheat into the garners to possess eternal life (D&C 101:65).

In a profound parable, the Savior likened us to a man who fell among thieves and who was wounded and stripped of his raiment. For we came to earth and were stripped of our glory and became subject to good and evil, and our sins wounded our spiritual souls. Not being able to help ourselves we wait for someone who has the compassion and the power to help. Many ministers of the world pass us by, but the good samaritan (Christ) does not pass us by, but lifts us up, washes and anoints our wounds (sins), takes us to a place of rest and peace, and pays the full price of our wounds himself. All this is done that we might live with Heavenly Father once more. The parable says:

> And Jesus answering said, A certain man [who represents us] went down from Jerusalem [heaven] to Jericho [earth] and fell among thieves [the wicked], which stripped him of his raiment [our royal heavenly glory], and wounded him [tempting us to sin]. and departed, leaving him half dead [spiritually].
>
> And by chance there came down a certain priest [a minister representing a certain religious belief] that way: and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side.
>
> And likewise a levite [another minister], when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side.
>
> But a certain samaritan [the Savior], as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion upon him [he loved us],
>
> And went to him, and bound up his wounds [healed us spiritually of our sins],[by] pouring in oil [anointing us a king & priest] and wine [washing us clean every whit], and set him on his own beast [the burden of the sins of the people are placed upon the backs of His servants], and brought him to an inn [a place of inner spiritual peace and rest], and took care of him [became our second comforter].
>
> And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence [paid the full price for our sins], and he gave to the host [the law of justice], and said unto him, Take care of him [extend to us mercy]; and whatsoever thou spendest more [if we sin ignorantly, the atonement still covers us, even after the second anointings, but the law of justice will still demand payment], when I come again, I will repay thee [He will satisfy the demands of justice to the fullest, in our behalf] (Luke 10:30-35).

This parable is one of the most wonderful scriptural descriptions ever given of the manner in which the Savior will heal those who have fallen spiritually, and the relationship which justice, mercy and the atonement have to each other.

Another scripture prophetically reveals that in the last days the faithful saints will be made clean in preparation for the greater blessings which the Lord will pour out upon them:

> And it shall come to pass, they that are left in Zion and remain in Jerusalem shall be called holy [without spot, sinless, clean], every one that is written among the living in Jerusalem--
>
> When the Lord shall have washed away [through the washing ordinance for the sisters, and the washing of the feet for the brethren] the filth of the daughters [stakes] of Zion, and shall have purged the blood [and sins] of Jerusalem from the midst thereof by the spirit of judgment [of worthiness] and by the spirit of burning [the cleansing & sanctifying power of the spirit].

And the Lord will [then] create upon every dwelling-place of mount Zion meaning those who have received the fulness of the priesthood], and upon her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day and the shining of a flaming fire by night; for upon all the glory of Zion shall be a defence. (2 Ne. 14:3-5)

These blessings of a cloud by day and a flaming fire by night attended the exodus of the children of Israel when Moses led them forth from bondage. In the last days it will be so again, as the children of Israel are led again from the bondage of Babylon, only this time the Lord God will be our guide rather than the angels, as was the case in the days of Israel of old.

Must Be Clean To Build Zion And Receive The Fulness of The Priesthood

Only by becoming clean and pure can the Latter-day Saints qualify for the blessings of Zion, for Zion is the pure in heart, and blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God. Such a state of cleanliness can only come about through qualifying for that ordinance which makes a person clean from the sins of this generation. Then the Lord can bestow his choicest blessing, the fulness of the priesthood. And with this blessing, the recipient may open the heavens and know all things. Of this fact John the beloved said:

But ye have an unction [a second anointing] from the Holy One, and ye know all things. And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life. (See D&C 88:3-5)

But the [blessings of the second] anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him. (1 John 2:20, 25, 27; See also Moses 6:61)

In conclusion, we are like the prodigal son who is tired of living in the wicked world and who now desires to return to his Father, and so he sets out on his journey and travels the path which will lead him home once again. And when the Father sees him coming, he rushes forth to embrace him, and place a royal robe upon his shoulders, and sets him down at the feast. For he was once dead, but is now alive again. As a son he is a joint-heir with the firstborn Son who never strayed, and who inherits all that the Father hath. He is home, again, at last. May it so be with each and every one of us.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE GOSPEL ORDINANCES IN MAKING YOUR CALLING & ELECTION SURE

The Gospel Ordinances Are Essential

Reception of the gospel ordinances is essential in order for a person to regain the presence of God. Because mankind has fallen spiritually, it is now necessary for him to repent and make covenants which will allow him to one day regain the Father's presence.

The Lord revealed to the Prophet Joseph that man would have to receive the ordinances of the gospel and the authority of the greater priesthood in order to see the face of God and live:

> And this greater priesthood administereth the gospel and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God.
>
> Therefore, in the ordinances thereof, the power of godliness is manifest.
>
> And without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh;
> For without this no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live. (D&C 84:19-22)

The process of regaining the Father's presence was simply stated by Moses when he said that a man must be born again of water, and of the spirit, and be cleansed by the blood of his Only Begotten Son (Moses 6:59), or in other words, become clean "every whit" wherein his garments are made white, instead of being stained with the blood of this generation. The Lord again revealed this same concept in 1832 when He told the Prophet that individuals must be "washed and cleansed from all their sins, and receive the Holy Spirit" and then overcome by faith until they are "sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise" (D&C 76:51-53). Once an individual has been proven "true and faithful in all things", he is then eligible to be made clean every whit, and to be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise through the fulness of the priesthood ordinance.

In order to obtain the crowning ordinance of the fulness of the priesthood, a person must receive all of the ordinances preceding it. Each of the ordinances of the gospel give to a person blessings which the other ordinances do not give. By putting into perspective what the ordinances do for us in our quest to regain the Father's presence, we will see that all of them are necessary and essential for exaltation.

Baptism

Preceding this ordinance of the gospel are the principles of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and repentance. Before the full benefits of baptism can be realized, a person will have prepared himself by applying these two principles. The Lord said:

> All those who humble themselves before God, and desire to be baptized, and come forth with broken hearts and contrite spirits, and witness before the church that they have truly repented of all their sins, and are willing to take upon them the name of Jesus Christ, having a determination to serve him to the end, and truly manifest by their works that they have received of the spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins, shall be received by baptism into his church." (D&C 20:37)

The ordinance of baptism itself is a sign before heaven and earth, that the person is willing to take upon himself the name of Jesus Christ and to fulfill the terms and conditions of the covenant of baptism, which are mentioned in Mosiah 18:8-10.

Baptism is also symbolic of Christ's burial. Those who are baptized are buried "after the manner of his burial, being buried in the water in his name, and this according to the commandment which he has given." (D&C 76:51)

Through the ordinance of baptism an individual is promised a forgiveness of his or her personal sins upon conditions of repentance. Christ died for all those who repent and come unto him. Through him, and because of him, mercy can now be extended so that the person does not have to pay the full penalty of the laws which he has broken. The only benefit which the world will receive, who do not repent, will be the resurrection to immortality. But the blessings of eternal life will come only to those who repent and who are subsequently cleansed by the blood of the Savior of the world.

The ordinance of baptism also invokes the law of justification. It means that the person has been made clean, having complied with the laws of justice, and is now ready to begin the process of sanctification through the Holy Ghost.

Baptism is the gate which sets a person's foot on the strait and narrow path leading to eternal life. As the person travels the path, mists of darkness (or the temptations of the devil) will arise to try and cause him to lose his way. But by holding on to the word of God (the iron rod) he will be safely guided through the darkness into the light. Baptism does not, in and of itself, grant entrance into the.celestial kingdom, for the temple plainly teaches that.a person must be endowed before he can gain entrance into the celestial kingdom. Baptism is the GATE to the path which leads to the celestial kingdom, and the endowment is the door which allows entrance through the veil into that kingdom.

The Reception of The Holy Ghost

After the ordinance of baptism, hands are laid upon the head of the individual and he is confirmed a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and is commanded to receive the Holy Ghost. If diligently sought for, the Holy Ghost will begin the process of personal sanctification.

The following are the blessings and benefits of having received the Holy Ghost:

1. Through the power of the Holy Ghost, a person's blood is spiritually purged and it becomes the blood of Abraham (Teachings, pp. 149-150).

2. The Holy Ghost is the "first comforter" (Teachings, p. 150), and can comfort and bless in times of need. As the first comforter, it is his function to lead the person to the second comforter, even Jesus Christ.

3. The Holy Ghost is a revelator and will bear witness of the truth to the heart and mind of the individual, and this is the spirit of revelation (D&C 8:2-3).

4. The gifts of the spirit, as mentioned in D&C 46; 1 Cor 13; and Moroni 10, are made operable in the lives of those who love the Lord and who seek to do his will. These gifts further sanctify and bless the person with spiritual insight. Moroni even mentions that angelic visitations are a gift.

5. The attributes of godliness are developed by the Holy Ghost within the heart and soul of the truth seeker. These attributes are mentioned in 2 Peter 1:5-7, and again in D&C 4.

6. The Holy Ghost will also ratify all the ordinances which are performed in righteousness upon the head of the individual. In this capacity he operates as the "Holy Spirit of Promise" (D&C 132:7). 7. Operating as the Holy Spirit of Promise, the Holy Ghost is also the second comforter of the PROMISE of eternal life unto all those who have been sealed up (D&C 88:2-5; 132:19, 26).

The laws of justification and sanctification continually operate in the life of the repentant person, as he grows, develops and matures in the blessings of the spirit. The light of the spirit becomes more prevalent and the testimony which was once weak, is continually being strengthened by a multitude of.experiences, and by an increase of knowledge. By partaking of the sacrament regularly, he is able to renew the covenants which he has broken, so that he might have an ultimate claim upon the blessings through faithfulness. Because we are weak, time is needed to overcome our sins. This earth life is the time which has been allotted unto us to overcome the flesh and conquer our sins. The more perfect we become in living all the laws and covenants we have received, the closer we will come to God himself. It is the mission of the Holy Ghost to guide us, through personal revelation to where we can receive the Savior himself (2 Ne. 32:3-6). "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent (John 17:3)".

The Oath & Covenant of The Priesthood

After the person has traveled some distance on the strait and narrow path, he is now ready to take upon himself additional covenants. For the woman this next step lies in the temple. For the man, the next step is to take upon himself the Melchizedek priesthood through an oath and a covenant. This is also referred to as the covenant of eternal life, because it is the covenant which will make of him an heir, a joint-heir with Jesus Christ, to all that the Father hath. By faithfully magnifying the priesthood, the individual will be blessed with the fulness of the priesthood, and he will be a son of God, no longer a servant. Because of this covenant, the brethren will be able to receive and build their own patriarchal kingdoms throughout eternity. As the king and priest over his kingdom he will rule and reign eternally, with his queen and priestess by his side. Without this oath and covenant of the priesthood, the man would not receive eternal life, nor know the Father nor the Son, nor would he have an eternal kingdom.

Sons receive their inheritance from their father. But, servants do not inherit anything. They are not guaranteed anything. They do not share in the wealth, glory and power of the master of the house, or of the king. Sons, on the other hand, inherit all that the father, or king possesses. Since Christ is the only Son who never strayed, he will inherit all that the father has. But through obedience to the laws and ordinances of the gospel, a faithful priesthood bearer will be able to advance from the position of a "servant" to the position of a "son'', and thereby become an inheritor with Christ, a joint heir, of all that the Father has.

But whether or not the brethren actually become heirs to all that the Father has, depends upon whether or not they magnify their callings in the priesthood. As servants, they are called to minister (1) to their own families, and (2) to the whole earth, as assigned by priesthood leaders holding the keys.

By virtue of entering into the patriarchal order of marriage, which can only be received in temple marriage, the husband receives the keys to preside over his kingdom. These keys, however, make him responsible for the iniquity that might exist within his family. He must give an accounting to the Lord one day for the spiritual status of his family. His responsibility is to serve their temporal and spiritual needs, and to see that they return to the Father's presence. This is accomplished through many vehicles---family home evening, family prayer, personal interviews, family activities, and many more unmentioned aspects. Love and kindness must crown all his activities. Being a faithful father will bless him to be clean from the blood of his family.

The priesthood holder is also called to minister to others outside of his family, to the inhabitants of the earth, as his assignments designate. The three overall missions which the church has are to (1) preach the gospel; (2) perfect the saints; and (3) redeem the dead. As priesthood holders they are "servants" of the Lord. Sisters are scripturally called "handmaidens" until they qualify as a "daughter". As servants they become responsible for the blood and sins of those they are called upon to serve. "Handmaidens" are there to do the Lord's will, as he speaks to them through his priesthood servants, but they are not responsible for the blood of the people.

The first great mission of the priesthood is to gather in Israel---to seek for the honest in heart and to bring them home to Zion. The gospel net goes into all the world and gathers into the ship (the church) those who are desirous of returning to Father. Secondly, the priesthood has the responsibility of perfecting those who are brought into the church through the gospel net. This includes aiding them in obtaining, through righteousness, all the ordinances of the temple, including the fulness of the priesthood; and it includes inspiring the family to attend to all family and church duties. The quorums of the priesthood have the responsibility of teaching and training fathers concerning those things which are necessary in order to gain eternal life, including how to make one's calling and election sure, when the person has come to that point of righteousness where he is ready to continue further. Lastly, the priesthood must see to the redemption of the dead, for without them the sealing lines will be incomplete. All lines must be sealed so that all who are desirous will have access to the fulness of the gospel blessings.

Washings & Anointings In order to continue the quest for eternal life, the individual must go to the temple, and there receive the ordinances which lead to the highest degree of the celestial kingdom. These ordinances begin with washings and anointings. In the washing ordinance the brother is promised that if he is faithful he will BECOME clean from the blood and sins of this generation. He is not at this time made clean. The sisters, on the other hand, ARE pronounced clean "every whit", because they do not hold the priesthood responsibility which requires accountability for the sins of the people. Although the sisters assist the priesthood as auxiliaries, they do not hold the priesthood, nor the keys thereof, and consequently are not responsible for the sins of the people. Thus they can be pronounced clean, for they have no guilt. Then the anointing which follows foreshadows the future anointing which will take place, wherein he will be made a king and a priest unto the Most High God. In this same anointing the sisters are promised that they will be queens and priestesses unto their husbands. Both must prove their faithfulness within their family kingdom and in their assigned callings within the church before such blessings can come their way.

At this point the person is given a garment which is designed to be a shield and a protection to him against the unseen powers of the adversary. Thus each person is able to approach the Lord in mighty prayer without fear of being destroyed. It would have been well with Joseph had he been able to have such a blessing when he went to the grove to pray in 1820.

The Endowment

The endowment now bestows the great blessings of the keys of the priesthood upon both the men and women. These keys are the means by which an individual can "ask and receive an answer". With the shield for protection, and the keys of how to pray, the individuals are now endowed to where they may approach the Lord at the altar, and receive answers to their prayers. The endowment also instructs the people on the importance of detecting true from false messengers, and how that is to be done, so that when the keys of the priesthood are exercised, and revelations come their way, they will be able to detect true from false.

The endowment also promises that if the participants remain true and faithful, the day will come when they will be called up and anointed kings and priests, queens and priestesses, whereas they are now anointed only to become such. In order to realize such blessings, the individuals will have to remain true and faithful in all things.

Additionally, the endowment participants are given additional covenants, which, if observed, will prepare them for the fulness of the priesthood blessings. And they are given greater knowledge concerning the earth, and the Gods who dwell in the heavens.

New & Everlasting Covenant of Marriage

It is at this point in a person's life that a new kingdom is formed for time, with the promise that it will endure for eternity if the participating parties remain true and faithful to their covenants. The man and the woman have entered into the patriarchal order of marriage, which is the same marriage system which was first given to Adam and Eve, and which was subsequently handed down through the generations of time, until it has been restored again in our day and age.

It is in this ceremony where the husband and the wife receive, for the first time, the command from the Lord to bear children---to be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth. Up to this point in their lives they had no right to have sexual relations and to bear children, lawfully, before the Lord. however, because of the kind of a world we live in, the Lord tolerates the system we currently live under, and legally they are married. But if we were to do things the Lord's way, all on earth would be married in the temple, and it is there where they would receive the command from the Lord to bear children, and thus permission granted to have sexual relations. Those who are married in the temple are not only legally married (in the eyes of the land), but lawfully as well (in the eyes of God).

Here the husband receives the keys to preside in righteousness within his kingdom. By his side is his companion, sweetheart and counselor. He is now responsible, before the Lord, for his wife and children. He will be held accountable for the conduct of his family. They must account to him for their actions, and he must account to the Lord for his actions. Whenever the father is not at home it is the mother who presides, not the oldest son holding the priesthood.

Temple marriage also bestows upon the couple wonderful blessings pertaining to the resurrection which will be realized IF they are true and faithful to the end. If they go on and receive the fulness of the priesthood blessings contained in the second anointings, the IF clause will be removed, and they will now have the promise of God that they will receive these blessings in the resurrection, unless they commit the unpardonable sin. (D&C 132:19, 26).

Now that the couple has been endowed with the keys of the priesthood and have received a shield for protection, when they mightily pray, they have the Lord's promise that where two or more are gathered together, in his name, there will he be also.

The Washing of The Feet

When the brethren have proven true and faithful in all things, and they are called up to receive the fulness of the priesthood blessings, they then receive the ordinance of the washing of the feet. Having served his fellow man diligently, he has done all within his ability to serve the Lord. He is therefore made clean from the blood of this generation. His garments are now made white through the blood of the Lamb. The reception of this ordinance fulfills the promise given to the brother in the washing booth.

In order to assist the brethren to become clean, the sisters can encourage and inspire their husbands to magnify their priesthood callings. In this way she will assist him in obtaining the fulness of the Father's blessings, and thus become an inheritor of them herself, for she will inherit whatever her husband is worthy of receiving, for she receives of her blessings through her husband.

Having been thus cleansed, both the husband and the wife are now prepared to receive the fulness of the priesthood and enter the Lord's presence.

Fulness of The Priesthood

The kingdom which was formally organized in temple marriage now becomes permanent throughout all eternity. The husband is now actually made a king and a priest, which fulfills the promise given to him in the anointing booth. The wife is made a queen and priestess to her husband, which fulfills the promise given to her in the anointing booth. The reception of this ordinance also fulfills the promise given in the endowment wherein the individuals were promised that if they were true and faithful, the day would come when they would be called up and anointed kings and priests, queens and priestesses.

This ordinance seals the individuals up to eternal life, thus making their calling and election sure. This assurance becomes an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast and even "though the thunders might roll and lightnings flash, and earthquakes bellow, and war gather thick around, yet this hope and knowledge would support the soul in every hour of trial, trouble and tribulation" (Teachings, pp. 298-299). The keys of the priesthood which were given in the endowment, and the shield which was previously received, are now operable for the benefit of the husband and wife, and they are able to receive all necessary revelations for themselves and their kingdom, and all prayers are answered. With the fulness of the priesthood, the husband may now converse with the Lord through the veil. Once he has gone through the veil, he may in turn lift the veil from off the eyes of his wife and bring her through as well, as is symbolically portrayed in sacred places.

Remaining true and faithful "to the end" does not necessarily mean until death comes to us. We are to remain true and faithful to the end of our probationary period. Once we are ready, the Lord can move the day of judgement ahead and seal us up unto eternal life. Thus Nephi taught that if we will endure faithfully to the end, that the Father would say unto us: Ye shall have eternal life:

> Wherefore, ye must press forward with a steadfastness in Christ, having a perfect brightness of hope, and a love of God and of all men. Wherefore, if ye shall press forward, feasting upon the word of Christ, and endure to the end, behold, thus saith the Father: Ye shall have eternal life.
>
> And now, behold, my beloved brethren, this is the way; and there is none other way nor name given under heaven whereby man can be saved in the kingdom of God. And now, behold, this is the doctrine of Christ, and the only and true doctrine of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, which is one God, without end. Amen. (2 Ne. 31:20-21)

Such blessings can come to the faithful, even in this life.

In Summary

The Lord has revealed the ordinances necessary for exaltation, and has restored them and the priesthood to the earth. The priesthood administers the ordinances of salvation and exaltation to the whole earth. It is clear that no one will receive the higher temple ordinances until they have already complied with the requirements and received the ordinances of baptism, confirmation and the ordination to the priesthood. And no one can be married in the temple until he first receives his endowment. Each ordinance becomes a prerequisite for the next one.

But when it comes to exaltation, a person must be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise before he can receive exaltation (D&C 76:51-53; 132:19. 26). Elder McConkie explained that being sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise in the context of these scriptures indicates the person's calling and election has been made sure. It is not enough to be married in the temple for time and all eternity. The individuals must press forward, feasting upon the word of God, having a love of God and of all men, until he and she are able to be sealed up to eternal life by the Holy Spirit of Promise, and thus make their calling and election sure. The writings of the prophets and apostles are clear on this point. Thus, the ordinance of the second anointings, wherein a person is sealed up to eternal life by the Holy Spirit of Promise, is no optional ordinance, as some have speculated (See David Berger's article in Dialogue on the Fulness of the Priesthood). It is just as essential as temple marriage. If it were not so, why is it done by proxy for the deceased?

The Relationship of the Unpardonable Sin To the Ordinance of The Fulness of the Priesthood

Joseph Smith defined the unpardonable sin at a General Conference address, Sunday, April 7, 1844:

> All sins shall be forgiven [if you have been sealed up by the Holy Spirit of Promise--D&C 132:19, 26], except the sin against the Holy Ghost; for Jesus will save all except the sons of perdition. What must a man do to commit the unpardonable sin? He must receive the Holy Ghost, have the heavens opened unto him, and know God, and then sin against Him. After a man sinned against the Holy Ghost, there is no repentance for him. ["For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him in an open shame." _ Heb. 6:4-6. Those who sin against the light and knowledge of the Holy Ghost may be said to crucify more than the body of our Lord, they crucify the Spirit.--Footnote] He has got to say that the sun does not shine while he sees it; he has got to deny Jesus Christ when the heavens have been opened unto him, and to deny the plan of salvation with his eyes open to the truth of it; and from that time he begins to be an enemy. This is the case with many apostates of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.
> When a man begins to be an enemy to this work, he hunts me, he seeks to kill me, and never ceases to thirst for my blood. He gets the spirit of the devil---the same spirit that they had who crucified the Lord of Life---the same spirit that sins against the Holy Ghost. You cannot save such persons; you cannot bring them to repentance; they make open war, like the devil, and awful is the consequence. (Teachings, pp. 357-358; H.C. 6:313-315)

Not all who are members of the church are able to commit such a terrible sin because they have not received sufficient knowledge and experience in order to do so. President Young stated that a person has to have "received much of the power of God, visions and revelations" in order to fall to such a level. Only when a person has developed a great amount of light and blessings can he then have the power to commit this terrible sin. President George Q. Cannon explained:

> A man must have sufficient knowledge to make him a God in order to be a devil. Lucifer had to be a great and a powerful being. He stood high in the presence of God, and his fall was greater than it would have been if he had occupied an inferior station. Therefore, the more we know concerning God, the more power and the more gifts we get from God, if they are abused, the greater will be our condemnation and the greater will be the depth to which we shall fall when we do fall. (Millennial Star 53:577-580; May 10, 1891)

On November 29, 1893. Apostle Abraham H. Cannon, son of George Q. Cannon, wrote in his journal that the First Presidency had explained that only those "who receive a testimony of the Gospel---who receive the Holy Ghost, and the highest blessings of the Church [the second anointings], and then willfully deny the light they have obtained" will become sons of perdition, having committed the unpardonable sin.

Although brethren receive the Melchizedek priesthood and commit to do what the Lord would have them do, still many priesthood bearers break their part of the covenant. This does not qualify them, however, for the terrible penalty described in verse 41 concerning the oath and covenant of the priesthood. Elder Marion G. Romney said:

> Now, I do not think this means that all who fail to magnify their callings in the priesthood will have committed the unpardonable sin, but I do think that priesthood bearers who have entered into the covenants that we enter into---in the waters of baptism, in connection with the law of tithing, the Word of Wisdom, and the many other covenants we make---and then refuse to live up to these covenants will stand in jeopardy of losing the promise of eternal life. (The Ensign/July 1972, p. 99; April General Conference, Priesthood Session; "The Covenant of the Priesthood".)

Only when a person has come to the point in his life where he is worthy to continue his progression and receive the fulness of the priesthood blessings, will be able to commit such a sin. "On the other hand there is glory and exaltation in proportion to faithfulness, to knowledge and to gifts and opportunities enjoyed," said Pres. Cannon. Where much is given, much is required.

Women and The Priesthood

Those who receive the Melchizedek Priesthood are to be ministers to the inhabitants of the whole earth in (1) preaching the gospel; (2) perfecting the saints within the church; and (3) redeeming the dead. Women, however, are not ordained to the Melchizedek Priesthood and therefore do not have the charge to minister to the world---only as an auxiliary to those who hold the keys. The Lord has determined that He will hold the brethren responsible for the sins that are in the world, not the women.

Within the family kingdom, however, the mother and father hold patriarchal authority, for they have jointly entered into that "order of the priesthood" called the new and everlasting covenant of marriage (D&C 131:1-4). Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained:

Joseph Smith says that in the temple of God there is an order of the priesthood. 'Go to the temple,' he says, 'and find out about this order.' So I went to the temple, and I took my wife with me, and we kneeled at the altar. There on that occasion we entered, the two of us, into an 'order of the priesthood.' When we did it, we had sealed upon us, on a conditional basis, every blessing that God promised Father Abraham---the blessings of exaltation and eternal increase. The name of that order of priesthood, because Abraham was a natural patriarch to his posterity, is the New and Everlasting Covenant of Marriage. (BYU Genealogical Devotional Addresses, 1967, Provo, BYU Press, 1968, p. 91; "The Eternal Family Concept")

Through temple marriage the husband becomes a natural patriarch to his family, as was Abraham of old. The wife is sealed to him and becomes a part of the kingdom which was given to him in temple marriage. The father holds the keys of salvation for his family, and will be held responsible for the iniquity of his family. Apostle Erastus Snow said:

> Every man in Israel is responsible in a certain degree for conduct of his wives and children. He has covenanted that he will assume that responsibility; that is, he will assume the responsibility of the sins of his wives, if he fails to discharge his duties towards them in teaching and leading them in the ways of life and salvation. (J.D. 5:289; October 4. 1857)

Both the husband and the wife possess the promise that they will be kings and queens for eternity if they remain true and faithful. The wife holds authority within the kingdom, under the direction of the father. She is his counselor, companion, and best friend. They counsel together for the benefit of the family, and deal with all aspects of family living--all things temporal and spiritual. The keys give the father the right to direct the labors of his own kingdom, but they do not extend beyond to other families, nor to the church. The patriarchal authority holds no authority outside the realms of the family. The blessings of the fulness of the priesthood are enjoyed by both the husband and the wife. The father labors within the realm of his calling, and the wife labors in the calling to which she has been appointed by the Lord.

The Sealing Power

In the Inspired Version of Genesis, chapter 14, the Prophet Joseph spoke about the fulness of the priesthood, that it came from God and not by the will of man. And the right to such priesthood was not by lineage---from father or mother. Rather it is delivered unto men by the calling of God's own voice. Associated with this priesthood is the sealing power. Joseph describes here what that power will do:

> Thus, having been approved of God, he [Melchizedek] was ordained an high priest after the order of the covenant which God made with Enoch, it being after the order of the Son of God; which order came, not by man, nor the will of man; neither by father, nor mother; neither by beginning of days, nor end of years; but of God. And it was delivered unto men by the calling of his own voice, according to his own will, unto as many as believed on his name. For God having sworn unto Enoch and unto his seed with an oath by himself, that every one being ordained after this order and calling should have power, by faith, to break mountains, to divide the seas, to dry up waters, to turn them out of their course, to put at defiance the armies of nations, to divide the earth, to break every band, to stand in the presence of God; to do all things according to his will, according to his command, subdue principalities and powers; and this by the will of the Son of God, which was from before the foundation of the world. And men having this faith, coming up unto this order of God, were translated and taken up into heaven. (vs. 27-32)

Concerning this sealing power, President John Taylor reviewed several scriptures and detailed how many of the prophets used it:

> The principle of power also over the varied creations of God, above spoken of, pertaining to the Holy Priesthood after the order of the Son of God, has, by faith, been manifested to the world in the lives and actions of numbers of the servants of the Most High. The power of Enoch, wherein he caused the earth to tremble, whilst mountains fled at his command, and rivers were turned out of their course, has already been referred to. By this power, exercised in mighty faith, Melchizedek stopped the mouths of lions and quenched the violence of fire [I.V. Gen 14:26]; by it the waters of the Red Sea were divided by Moses, and the children of Israel passed through dry shod [Exo 14:21]; by it Elijah [2 Kings 2:7-8] and Elisha [2 Kings 2:14] smote the waters of the Jordan and crossed on dry land; by it Daniel escaped the ferocity of the lions [Dan 6:16-23], and the three Hebrew children were delivered from the fiery furnace [Dan 3:19-27].
>
> By this same power in.the Messianic dispensation the Apostles were delivered from bonds and imprisonment; by it Paul shook off the viper that had fastened upon his hand [Acts 28: 3-6]; by it Philip [Acts 8:39] was caught away by the Spirit of the Lord after he had baptized the Ethiopian eunuch; by it John was preserved when he was cast into a cauldron of boiling oil, that it did not hurt him; by it the dead were raised, the lepers cleansed, the sick healed, devils cast out, and other mighty works performed by Jesus and His disciples; and by it Christ broke the bands of death and became the resurrection and the life, the first fruits of them that slept, the conqueror of death, the Savior of the world and Redeemer of mankind.

Again, on this continent, one of the Nephite Prophets, Jacob, the son of Lehi, records: "We truly can command in the name of Jesus, and the very trees obey us, or the mountains, or the waves of the sea." (Jacob, 4:6). By faith the brother of Jared, who held this power, said unto the mountain Zerin, Remove; and it was removed [Ether 12:30]; by it Alma and Amulek caused the walls of the prison in Ammonihah to tumble to the ground [Alma 14:26-29]; by it Nephi and Lehi wrought the surpassing change upon the Lamanites that they were baptized with fire and the Holy Ghost [Helaman 5:43-49]; by it Ammon and his brethren wrought so great a miracle in the conversion of the Lamanites [Alma 17-27]; and by it also the disciples of Jesus who tarried amongst the Nephites showed forth the power spoken of in the following passage:

"Therefore they did exercise power and authority over the disciples of Jesus who did tarry with them, and they did cast them into prison: but by the power of the word of God, which was in them, the prisons were rent in twain, and they went forth doing mighty miracles among them. Nevertheless, and notwithstanding all these miracles, the people did harden their hearts, and did seek to kill them, even as the Jews at Jerusalem sought to kill Jesus, according to his word; and they did cast them into furnaces of fire, and they came forth receiving no harm; and they also cast them into dens of wild beasts even as a child with a lamb; and they did come forth from among them, receiving no harm." (4 Ne. 1:30-33)

This same power has also been abundantly manifested in these latter days in the midst of the Saints of God, in deliverances from evil, in escapes from enemies, in the quelling of mobs, in the stilling of the angry waves of the sea, in the healing of the sick, in the casting out of unclean spirits, and in many other miraculous manifestations of the power and goodness of God, and of the authority with which He has invested His servants who are endowed and clothed upon with the Priesthood, which is endless and after the order of the Son of God. (President John Taylor, Mediation and Atonement, Deseret News Co., 1882, pp. 84-87)

Moses held the sealing power prior to his delivering the children of Israel from bondage. Here the Lord tells Moses that he will "be made stronger than many waters." Indeed, Moses parted the waters of the Red Sea while the children of Israel passed over on dry ground:

And calling upon the name of God, he beheld his glory again, for it was upon him; and he heard a voice saying: Blessed art thou, Moses, for I, the Almighty, have chosen thee, and thou shalt be made stronger than many waters; for they shall obey thy command as if thou wert God. (Moses 1:25)

To assist Enoch in the work to which he had been called, the Lord gave to him the power to control the elements. Enoch later used this power as he protected the inhabitants of Zion when their enemies came up against them:

Behold my Spirit is upon you, wherefore all thy words will I justify; and the mountains shall flee before you, and the rivers shall turn from their course; and thou shalt abide in me, and I in you; therefore walk with me. (Moses 6:34; See Moses 7:13-14 where this actually happened)

To the original twelve apostles the Lord declared:

Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven. (Matt. 18:18; See also Matt. 16:19 where Peter received the sealing power) About 20 years prior to the birth of Christ, Nephi preached to the people as he had been commanded by God to do. But because of the wickedness of the people, Nephi was "much cast down". While he was pondering, the voice of the Lord came to him and told him that he would have power over the people which would enable him to do many mighty things:

> And it came to pass that there arose a division among the people, insomuch that they divided hither and thither and went their ways, leaving Nephi alone, as he was standing in the midst of them.
>
> And it came to pass that Nephi went his way towards his own house, pondering upon the things which the Lord had shown unto him.
>
> And it came to pass as he was thus pondering--being much cast down because of the wickedness of the people of the Nephites, their secret works of darkness, and their murderings, and their plunderings, and all manner of iniquities--and it came to pass as he was thus pondering in his heart behold, a voice came unto him saying:
>
> Blessed art thou, Nephi, for those things which thou hast done; for I have beheld how thou hast with unwearyingness declared the word, which I have given unto thee, unto this people. And thou hast not feared them, and hast not sought thine own life, but hast sought my will, and to keep my commandments.
>
> And now, because thou hast done this with such unwearyingness, behold, I will bless thee forever; and I will make thee mighty in word and in deed, in faith and in works; yea, even that all things shall be done unto thee according to thy word, for thou shalt not ask that which is contrary to my will.
>
> Behold, thou art Nephi, and I am God. Behold, I declare it unto thee in the presence of mine angels, that ye shall have power over this people, and shall smite the earth with famine, and with pestilence, and destruction, according to the wickedness of this people.
>
> Behold, I give unto you power, that whatsoever ye shall seal on earth shall be sealed in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven; and thus shall ye have power among this people.
>
> And thus, if ye shall say unto this temple it shall be rent in twain, it shall be done.
>
> And if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou cast down and become smooth, it shall be done.
>
> And behold, if ye shall say that God shall smite this people, it shall come to pass. (Helaman 10:1-10)

Such blessings came to Nephi because he served the Lord without weariness, and because the Lord could trust him to do what he was commanded to do.

The sealing power is received by those who are blessed with the fulness of the priesthood. Such power would be used, as Joseph Smith said, to first save yourself and your family, and secondly to save your dead. Then you will want to serve the people and help save as many as you can.

The Concept of Gathering To Zion For the Fulness of The Priesthood

The concept of the gathering of the saints to Zion is a subject that is closely inter-twined with whether or not a person receives the highest blessings of the temple: the fulness of the priesthood.

In several statements made by the First Presidency between 1902 and 1922, it was very apparent that the fulness of the priesthood, with few exceptions, was only administered to those who had united with the body of the Church.

In 1902 President Joseph F. Smith recorded in his letterbook that the fulness of the priesthood ordinances are given "to those who have gathered to Zion." In 1905 the First Presidency of the Church, composed of Joseph F. Smith, John R. Winder and Anthon H. Lund, stated that the fulness ordinances "are administered only to people who have gathered with the body of the Church" (Ltr to Pres. S.L. Chipman, June 16, 1905). Additional statements made by the First Presidency are as follows:

14 March 1907

> And indeed, so particular have the Presidencies been at administering second anointings, that they drew the line between faithful members of the Church who died without gathering with the Church, and faithful members who gathered with the body of the Church and remained faithful afterwards, leaving the faithful people who have died in a scattered condition to be dealt with by the authority on the other side of the veil. (Ltr to Pres. L. Anderson, Manti, 14 March 1907)

22 May 1908

> People who are not members of the Church during their lifetime are not eligible to receive second blessings. They should not only have been members of the Church, but their faithfulness and worthiness to receive these blessings should be unquestioned, and besides the line has been drawn in favor of those who have either gathered with the body of the Church or died on their way to the gathering place, all others are left to be dealt with by the authority on the other side of the veil. (Ltr to Pres. 0. H. Stohl, Brigham City, 22 May 1908)

22 May 1908

> We have just informed President Stohl that a rule of the temple forbids deceased women who were not members of the Church prior to their demise, or who did not gather with the body of the Church, being anointed to men, therefore, we could not endorse the recommends of the sisters referred to. (Ltr to Pres. W. Budge, Logan Temple, 22 May 1908)

16 February 1909

> The general rule adopted by the First Presidency in regard to the second anointing, is in effect that those blessings should be confined to the faithful members of the Church who have gathered with the body of the Church, or who died on the way in an effort to do so. (Ltr to Pres. I. Smith, Logan, 16 Feb 1909)

18 March 1922

> Referring to yours of the 15th inst. we would say that President Woodruff's instructions to Stake Presidents on the subject of recommending for second anointing limited them to persons who had gathered with the Church, whether dead or alive, and this was the policy adopted by President Snow, although he may have made exceptions to it. And it is our mind that faithful men who have gathered with the Church, who can be recommended as worthy to receive these higher blessings, but who through death were deprived of them, should receive them by proxy. (Ltr to Pres. J. B. Keeler, Provo, 18 March 1922)

Apparently the concept of "gathering to Zion" or gathering "with the Church" never did mean "gathering to Utah", because several individuals were given the fulness of the priesthood who lived outside of Utah. Many were recommended from Idaho and Arizona stakes as well as Utah stakes. Rather, the concept of the gathering meant that the members were to gather to the "stakes of Zion," wherever they might be found.

In the early days of the Church there were very few stakes in existence, and those who lived in the mission fields of the Church were not considered to be a part of "Zion" unless the branch or ward was a part of a stake. Therefore all the saints who desired to receive their full temple blessings had to gather to a stake of Zion.

During the lifetime of the Prophet Joseph Smith, the stakes of Zion were located in Kirtland, Missouri and Nauvoo. When the saints moved west and settled in the Utah Basin, the Salt Lake stake was organized to which all the saints were to gather. Later, President Brigham Young organized new settlements from upper Idaho, throughout Utah, and south to Mesa, Arizona. Each of these settlements became a stake, and any individual who gathered to one of these stakes fulfilled the rule that he must gather to Zion in order to be worthy to receive the full temple blessings. Eventually the stakes of the Church spread out into other states and to other continents so that today stakes are located around the world, and members of the Church are strongly counseled everywhere to not gather to Utah, but rather to gather to the stakes within their own lands (The Ensign/May 1977. pp. 115-118; Elder Bruce R. McConkie). If they are faithful and meet all the requirements necessary, they can receive the fulness ordinances without moving to Utah.

With this concept in mind, it becomes easier to understand what Joseph Smith was saying in his discourse on the gathering of the saints, when he addressed a large assembly of saints at the Temple stand on June 11, 1843:

> This subject [Matt 23:37] was presented to me since I came to the stand. What was the object of the gathering the Jews, or the people of God in any age of the world? * * *
>
> The main object was to build unto the Lord a house whereby He could.reveal unto His people the ordinances of His house and the glories of His kingdom, and teach the people the way of salvation; for there are certain ordinances and principles that, when they are taught and practiced, must be done in a place or house built for that purpose. * * *
>
> It was the design of the councils of heaven before the world was, that the principles and laws of the priesthood should be predicated upon the gathering of the people in every age of the world. Jesus did everything to gather the people, and they would not be gathered, and He therefore poured out curses upon them. * * *
>
> It is for the same purpose that God gathers together His people in the last days, to build unto the Lord a house to prepare them for the ordinances and endowments, washings and anointings, etc. * * *
>
> If a man gets a fulness of the priesthood of God he has to get it in the same way that Jesus Christ obtained it, and that was by keeping all the commandments and obeying all the ordinances of the house of the Lord. * * *
>
> All men who become heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ will have to receive the fulness of the ordinances of his kingdom; and those who will not receive all the ordinances will come short of the fulness of that glory, if they do not lose the whole. * * *
>
> Why gather the people together in this place? For the same purpose that Jesus wanted to gather the Jews---to receive the ordinances, the blessings, and glories that God has in store for His Saints. (Teachings, pp. 307-312)

Then, six months before the Prophet was martyred, he urged the saints to gather so that they could be sealed and saved:

> The Saints have not too much time to save and redeem their dead, and gather together their living relatives, that they may be saved also, before the earth will be smitten, and the consumption decreed falls upon the world.

I would advise all the Saints to go with their might and gather together all their living relatives to this place, that they may be sealed and saved, that they may be prepared against the day that the destroying angel goes forth. . .and my only trouble at the present time is concerning ourselves, that the Saints will be divided, broken up, and scattered, before we get our salvation secure. . . . (Teachings, pp. 330-331)

Joseph Smith was concerned that the saints gather to Nauvoo so that they could receive the fulness of the temple blessings before the destroying angel was sent forth. Many of the saints did gather to Nauvoo, and hundreds of the faithful saints received the fulness of the priesthood blessings for themselves, and were thereby able to "secure their salvation" before they were driven away from the temple.

VI.
CONCLUSIONS

_____Visions and revelations such as the Prophet experienced are centered in the operation of eternal law, and they bear the imprint of an infinite intelligence. This fact, along with the evidence of perfect consistency and inner union within the profound body of thought that came to him through his visions and revelations, argues strongly that Joseph Smith was in communion with God. Spiritual communion such as he received comes not to the natural man. Only those who put off the natural man, exercise true and living faith, and achieve a life of unfeigned righteousness can claim the right to such communion. a revelation explained that a "Natural man [cannot] abide the presence of God, neither [he who is] after the carnal mind."(1)

Joseph Smith contended that "it is the first principle of the gospel to know for a certainty the character of God and to know that we may converse with Him as one man converses with another."(2) Power to do so is inseparably associated with the true gospel of Christ. To enjoy the full blessings of the kingdom of God" and come "unto the spirits of just men made perfect, and unto an innumerable company of angels, unto God the Father of all, and to Jesus Christ the Mediator of the new covenant."(3) But one does not attain unto such communion without great spiritual and character development. To quote the Prophet:

> We consider that God has created man with a mind capable of instruction, and a faculty which may be enlarged in proportion to the heed and diligence given to the light communicated from heaven to the intellect; and that the nearer man approaches perfection, the clearer are his views, and the greater his enjoyments, till he has overcome the evils of his life and lost every desire for sin; and like the ancients, arrives at that point of faith where he is wrapped in the power and glory of his maker and is caught up to dwell with Him. But we consider that this is a station to which no man ever arrived in a moment: he must have been instructed in the government and laws of that kingdom by proper degrees, until his mind is capable in some measure of comprehending the propriety, justice, equality, and consistency of the same.(4)

> To receive such communion, ordinarily one must be justified, sanctified, and sealed by the powers of the gospel unto eternal life. In justification, the individual is freed from the demands of justice insofar as punishment for personal sins is concerned. Justification can be attained only by the grace of Jesus Christ, but to receive saving grace it is necessary to exercise true and living faith in Christ and in his atonement. That faith must be sufficient to motivate the individual to repent of all sin and to enter into covenant with Christ through baptism under his authority, for the remission of sins. These principles are termed the "preparatory gospel."(5) When one complies with them, the barriers between man and God are erased, and man is vindicated or acquitted of all sin. The individual is then in a position where the enlightening, purifying, and sealing power of the gospel, as administered by the Holy Ghost through the higher ordinances thereof, can be extended unto him.

To be sanctified is to be purified and made holy "by the reception of the Holy Ghost."(6) These powers are administered only through the channels of the Melchizedek Priesthood. Worthy recipients of the priesthood and of its powers are "sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies,"(7) "which sanctification cometh because of their yielding their hearts to God."(8) Or, as a revelation to Joseph Smith explained, "Sanctification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is just and true, to all those who love and serve God with all their mights, minds, and strength."(9) Says the Book of Mormon of those who, by the powers of the priesthood, were thus cleansed, "Now they, after being sanctified by the Holy Ghost, having their garments made white, being pure and spotless before God, could not look upon sin save it were with abhorrence; and there were many, exceeding great many, who were made pure and entered into the rest of the Lord their God."(10)

At a conference held October 25, 1831, "President Joseph Smith, Jun. said that the order of the Holy Priesthood was that they have power given them to seal up the Saints unto eternal life." But, he explained, "until the Saints had perfect love they were liable to fall. When they had a testimony that their names were sealed in the Lamb's book of life, they had perfect love, and then it was impossible for false Christ to deceive them."(11) Such love is made possible only when one receives and responds to the power of the Holy Ghost. Among other things, the comforter fills worthy recipients of his power "with hope and perfect love."(12)

To Joseph Smith, the gospel of Jesus Christ rests essentially upon a power principle - power to justify repentant man before the bar of God, power to sanctify and enlighten him, and power to develop him in love and in righteousness to where his calling and election is made sure; and then power to seal him up unto eternal life. Said the Prophet, "The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood."(13) [Also D&C 131:5-6.] To a worthy colleague who had received the sealing powers and ordinances of the priesthood, Joseph said, "Nothing but the unpardonable sin can prevent you from inheriting eternal life for you are sealed up by the power of the Priesthood unto eternal life, having taken the step necessary for that purpose."(14)

One who is spiritually mature enough to make his calling and election sure is entitled to receive what the Prophet referred to as the Second Comforter. Said he:

> There are two Comforters spoken of. One is the Holy Ghost, the same as given on the day of Pentecost, and that all Saints receive after faith, repentance, and baptism. This first Comforter or Holy Ghost has no other > effect than pure intelligence....

> The other Comforter spoken of is a subject of great interest, and perhaps understood by few of this generation. After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and receives the Holy Ghost, (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve Him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter, which the Lord hath promised the Saints, as is recorded in the testimony of St. John, in the 14th chapter, from the 12th to the 27th verses....
> Now what is this other Comforter? It is no more nor less than the Lord Jesus Christ Himself; and this is the sum and substance of the whole matter; that when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him or appear unto him from time to time, and even He will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him, and the Lord will teach him face to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of the Kingdom of God; and this is the state and place the ancient Saints arrived at when they had such glorious visions - Isaiah, Ezekiel, John upon the Isle of Patmos, St. Paul in three heavens, and all the Saints who held communion with the general assembly and Church of the Firstborn.(1)5

In emphasizing that spiritual maturity is necessary for one to receive the personal visitation of Christ, Joseph Smith was largely speaking out of the background of his own experience. He, like the ancient prophets, was one who had been foreordained to fill a mission of great importance in life; he was one of the great and noble spirits whom God chose to be his rulers.(1)6 And, like his predecessors in the prophetic line, the power of God was manifested in abundance through his ministrations.

To experience spiritual manifestations such as Joseph Smith and other prophets before him received, sanctified men must be quickened by the powers of God at the time of the given experience. A revelation explained, "No man has seen God at any time in the flesh, except quickened by the Spirit of God."(1)7 Moses, for example, was enveloped in the power and glory of God when he talked with that divine Personage, and later testified, "Now mine own eyes have beheld God; but not my natural, but my spiritual eyes, for my natural eyes could not have beheld; for I should have withered and died in his presence, but his glory was upon me; and I beheld his face, for I was transfigured before him."(1)8 While in the presence of God on another occasion, Moses absorbed the heavenly element in such degrees than "the skin of his face shone" with the glory of God, and he found it necessary to veil his face that he might speak to the Israelites.(1)9 Enoch, Abraham, and the brother of Jared had similar experiences.(2)0 The most widely known and accepted incident of this kind occurred to Jesus on the has since been called the Mount of TRansfiguration. Of it the Now Testament record:

> And after six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themselves: and he was transfigured before them. And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them. And there appeared unto them Elias with Moses: and they were talking with Jesus.(2)1

> The visions and revelations given to Joseph Smith were also accompanied by an overshadowing power and glory visible to those present - not merely a change of facial expression resulting from a given mood or altitude of mind, but a thrilling, intelligent power both felt and seen by others. Orson Pratt testified that he saw the Prophet's "countenance light up as the inspiration of the Holy Ghost rested upon him dictating the great."(2)2

History of the Church, V, p. 392. The Prophet said on another occasion: Now for the secret and grand key. Though they might hear the voice of God and know that Jesus was the Son of God, this would be no evidence that their election and calling was made sure, that they had part with Christ, and were joint heirs with Him. They then would want that more sure word of prophecy, that they were sealed in the heavens and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God. Then, having this promise sealed unto them, it was an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast. Though the thunders might roll and lightnings flash, and earthquakes bellow, and war gather thick around, yet this hope and knowledge through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is the grand key that unlocks the glories and mysteries of the kingdom of heaven... and puts in our possession the glories of the celestial world.... Then I would exhort you to go on and continue to call upon God until you make your calling and election sure for yourselves, by obtaining this more sure word of prophecy, and wait patiently for the promise until you obtain it, Etc.-Ibid., pp. 388-389.

Ibid., p. 391. When a person develops to this point through the gospel. there are but two final alternatives before him. He might commit the unpardonable sin which would make of him a Son of Perdition. The Prophet explained: "According to the Scripture, if men have received the good word of God, and tasted of the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, it is impossible to renew them again, seeing they have crucified the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame; so there is a possibility of falling away; you could not be renewed again, and the power of Elijah cannot seal against this sin, for this is a reserve made in the seals and powers of the Priesthood."-Ibid., VI, p. 253. (Italics by the writer.) But if the individual continues, after being sealed by the power of the priesthood, without committing the unpardonable sin, he will enter into his exaltation in the celestial kingdom. Should he, after being thus sealed, commit serious transgressions short of the unpardonable sin, the demands of eternal justice will be required at his hands, for the atonement of Christ will no longer cover his sins, but after making the necessary payment himself, he may then enter into his exaltation. The Prophet explained:

"The unpardonable sin [as it applies to individuals who are thus sealed] is to shed innocent blood, or be accessory thereto. All other sins will be visited with judgment in the flesh, and the spirit being delivered to the buffetings of Satan until the day of the Lord Jesus." - Ibid., V. pp. 391-392.
For another statement on this matter, see Doctrine and Covenants 132:26-27. In the writer's opinion, the sealing power here referred to are only bestowed in conjunction with what the Latter-day Saints commonly term the "Second Anointing." A study of the historical context in which the Prophet recorded the above revelation and of statements he made on the subject during that period tends to support this conclusion. 15. "IS IT WORTH IT?"
ELDER M. RUSSELL BALLARD
FIRESIDE ADDRESS GIVEN AT BYU
September 2, 1979
Pages 153-159

Elder M. Russell Ballard, Junior, of the First Quorum of Seventy of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints exemplified the ability to be successful in business ventures and at the same time to handle well all spiritual assignments. He has excelled in the automotive and real estate areas, is the owner of Ballard and Company, and was a principal developer of the Valley Music Hall.

As a young man, Elder Ballard served in the British Mission where he was a counselor to the mission president. He has also been a bishop's counselor, a bishop twice, and a stake high councilor in two stakes. He was serving as a president of the Canada Toronto Mission when he was called to the First Quorum of Seventy in April of 1976.

He is married to Barbara Bowen. They are the parents of two sons and five daughters.

This fireside address was given in the Marriott Center at Brigham Young University on September 2, 1979.

My brothers and sisters, I am honored to be here tonight. I would seek an interest in your faith and prayers that what I say might be meaningful and might touch your hearts and cause you to want to be better tomorrow than you have ever been before. It is an awesome responsibility-I think that all of you can sense that-for anyone to take the time of this large audience of wonderful young Latter-day Saints. I assume this assignment with fear and trembling, seeking that the will of the Lord may be done.

I received the BYU football schedule with an invitation to attend the football games, but was disappointed to find that my travel schedule prevents me from attending any of the games this fall. Still, I thought I would share with you the Ballard family's involvement in BYU athletics.

My father, who is in his eighty-third year, was assigned here during World War I as an Army officer. While he was in Provo and assigned to this campus, he felt that Brigham Young University should have a football team. He secured permission from the university officials to organize a team but was informed that no funds were available to buy uniforms or other necessary equipment. My father, being the enterprising young man that he was-and still is-went about raising money through the communities of Utah county and was successful in raising enough money to buy the first uniforms for the first football team at BYU. He still takes great pleasure in talking about that involvement with this great University. I hope that we have a successful season this year-playing in better uniforms.

We have had an interesting experience in our family during the last few days. One of our married children and her husband decided to but a home, and they spent a long time looking everywhere in the valley for a home that they could afford and that would meet their needs. I watched their search with interest. When they came to me for counsel and we went out and looked at the home that they had chosen, I had but one comment to my son-in-law. I would like to have that comment become my theme tonight. I asked him, "Is it worth it?"

How many times in life do you and I have to ask the question: "Is it worth it?"? I suppose that many of you have purchased auto mobiles or stereo sets or televisions or something else that you felt was very important. I would guess that as you struggled with the question of whether or not to part with your hard-earned dollar you wrestled in your mind with the question, "Is it worth it?"

Every day we wrestle with this same question, my dear brothers and sisters. I understand that fifty percent of you are on this campus for the first time, beginning your college career at Brigham Young University. You will in the throes of academic classwork beginning next week, and some of you are in for some surprises. Some of you are going to find that school at Brigham Young University is a little different from high school. You are going to find that the expectations are higher. You are probable going to find that the opportunities for learning are greater and wider and broader than you ever dreamed possible. I believe I can predict with safety that many times you will go back to your apartment with that question in your mind: "Is it worth It?"

What are your goals as you enter this great University? Will you pay the price for excellence? Are you willing to become the very best in the field you choose? Have you missionaries who are here from the Missionary Training Center made the commitment in your hearts and in your minds that you are going to be the very best missionaries that you are capable of being? Are some of you students or missionaries just walking through this experience-putting in the time, so to speak? Or have you gotten right down to the heart and core of the purpose of being a student here or being in training at the Missionary Training Center? I would hope that every one of us is wise enough to realize that we can be excellent, that we can reach the top, that we can be the very best if we are willing to pay the price. we must be willing to establish in our minds this fact: In order to be great in whatever we attempt to do in life, we have to decide in advance that it is all worth it.

Have you set your priorities? are they solidly and clearly defined in your minds? Were they clear when your got up this morning, and will they be clear tomorrow morning and each morning while you are on this campus? each morning as you are serving in the mission field, is it clear in your mind what your first priority is? Are your priorities established clearly in relationship to the scriptures? What I would like to convey to you is that we are the sons and daughters of god. We have a great destiny, a great challenge, and a great work to do. Our number one priority could well be: Am I doing and living and acting each day as a candidate for the highest degree of glory in the celestial kingdom? If I asked you to raise your hand if you are interested in entering the highest degree of the celestial kingdom, I would be very surprised if every person's hand did not go up. I think that this is our ultimate long-range goal and our number one priority. I believe that as we think about this, and as we understand a few of the insights that the Lord has given us in the scriptures, we can easily come to the conclusion: Yes, it is worth it.

If you have brought your scriptures with you, you might like to join me in reading a few verses that demonstrate what I have just said. I invite you to turn to the seventy-sixth section of the doctrine and covenants, the fiftieth verse. I will read several verses of scripture, skipping through the section in the interest of time; but I would encourage each of you to read these instructions carefully as you try to answer in your mind the question, "Is it worth It?" Beginning with verses fifty and fifty-one:

> And again we bear record-for we saw and heard and this is the testimony of the gospel of Christ concerning them who shall come forth in the resurrection of the just-
> They are they who received the testimony of Jesus and believed on his name and were baptized after the manner of his burial, being buried in the water in his name, and this according to the commandment which he has given.
> I will pause here for jus a moment. I would guess that most of you were baptized into the Church when you turned eight years of age. I was; and as I read that scripture and contemplate the kind of decision I made I conclude that I really did not make much of a decision on that day. My mother and father, to whom I am grateful, felt that I should be baptized. I can remember my interview with the bishop when I was eight, and I can remember the coaching from my mother before the interview. I remember her telling me, "Now, the bishop is going to ask you why you want to be baptized,"-and I listened to her with great interest to hear what answer I should give the bishop. She also told me that I would be asked about receiving the Holy Ghost and being confirmed; she taught me why that was important. I went to my interview and passed it with flying colors for an eight-year-old; all of the questions were exactly as my mother had said they would b, and I gave all the right answers. But I really did not make much of a decision.

Many of you are converts to the Church and have had to ponder the question of whether or not you would be baptized-whether or not you would receive this sacred ordinance of the holy priesthood. But all of us, converts or not, have to deal with verse fifty-two every single day, if not every minute, of our lives. The Lord said: "That by keeping the commandments, they might be washed and cleansed from all their sins, and receive the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hands of him who is ordained and sealed unto this power."

"That by keeping the commandments..." We are faced at this moment with the question, "Is it worth it?" Is it worth keeping all of the commandments? Is it worth being morally clean? Is it worth living the Word of Wisdom? Is it worth being honest-honest in our business and in our dealings here on the campus in classes and test? Is it worth paying tithes and fast offerings? Is it worth serving faithfully wherever we are called?

Each moment of each day we are faced with the decision-making based on the evaluation system that we have developed through training in our homes and the training of the Church. The guidelines are clear, and our vision should be riveted on the long-range goal of qualifying to inherit the highest degree of glory in the glory int he celestial kingdom.

I do not believe for a minute that simply wanting the great and glorious blessings will bring it to you, unless you are willing to repent were necessary and keep the commandments. I wish that somehow, by some gift, I could reach into your hearts and minds and build a sensitivity and love the Lord. I would unite the force of the spirit within you with his spirit, so that you could rivet your eyes on that great goal and be willing to pay the price and keep the commandments.

Verse fifty-three: "And who overcome by faith, and are sealed buy the Holy Spirit of promise, which the Father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true." Just a word about that: it is possible to fool your bishop, your mother and your father, your stake president-and even your mission president, you elders and sisters. But you cannot fool the Holy Ghost.
Oftentimes when we had a question-and-answer session in my mission, and invariably during such sessions in the missions that I have toured since becoming a General Authority, this question is asked" "Brother Ballard, what must we do to have our calling and election made sure?"
The answer seems relatively simple-perhaps too simple for some of us-but as I have studied that question I feel safe in answering it by saying, "Live your life in such a way that the Holy Spirit, or the Holy Ghost, can testify to the Father on your behalf that you have in very deed been just and true in keeping all of the commandments." You and I cannot fool the Holy Ghost. It is not wisdom to try that. It is safety just to strive to keep the commandments every day by riveting our goal in our minds.
Is it worth the commitment that is necessary? Let me read to you verse fifty-five: "They are they into whose hands the Father has given all things." I want to explain that because I am not sure that it has completely penetrated your mind yet, and it must in order for you to keep in focus the question I am placing before you tonight: Is it worth it? This means those who keep all of the commandments, those who are just and true in the eyes of the Holy Ghost and on whose behalf the Holy Ghost can testify before the father,-"they are they into whose hands the Father has given all things." Ponder for a moment the meaning of the statement that all our father has will be given you and me if we will keep all the commandments.
When I ponder that our Heavenly father, through his great and glorious and exalted understanding and mastery of the holy priesthood, organized this world on which we live with the assistance of his beloved Son, Jesus Christ: when I contemplate that matter unorganized was organized into a world upon which you and I could dwell; when I contemplate that by the power of almighty God daylight was separated from darkness and the land from the sea, and the fishes where placed in the sea and the fowls in the air; when I contemplate the creation process-reread i in the book of Genesis-and realize that the Father promises to all his sons and daughters who are willing to pay the price of keeping all his commandments that he will give unto them all he has, I feel that it is indeed worth the price.
Verse fifty-eight describes further those who learn to be obedient, to master themselves, to set priorities, and not to lose sight of the long-range priority in the process of life: "Wherefore, as it is written, they are Gods, even the sons of God." Oh, my brothers and sisters, if you could only contemplate and really understand, while you are here at this great University at your young age, what that means! And then, if you could just place that priority properly in your life and live up to it, you would never have any difficulty making the right decisions. You would always have tucked in the back of your mind this concept: "It is worth it. I am not going to compromise; I am not going to shortcut; I am going to go all the way, because it is worth it."
Verse sixty-two: "These shall dwell in the presence of God and his Christ forever and ever." Is that where you wan to go? Is that where you want to be?
May I take a moment and share with you the feeling of Melvin J. Ballard, my grandfather and an apostle of the Lord? His recorded testimony is one of the great witnesses of this generation. He stood in the presence of the Savior of this world and was embraced by him and blessed by him, and he recorded in his testimony before the Quorum of the Twelve and the First Presidency in the temple on January 9, 1919, "Oh: if I could live worthy, though it would require four-score years, so that in the end when I have finished I could go into His presence and receive the feeling that I then had in His presence, I would give everything that I am and ever hop to be!" (Melvin R. Ballard, Melvin J. Ballard... Crusader for Righteousness [Salt Lake City; Bookcraft, 1966], p. 66.) That is where we are talking about trying to go. We are trying to qualify for that blessing and that honor.

> [Verse seventy:] These are they whose bodies are celestial, whose glory is that of the sun, even the glory of God, the highest of all, whose glory the sun of the firmament is written of as being typical...
> [Verse ninety-two:] And thus we saw the glory of the celestial, which excels in all things-where God, even the Father, reigns upon his throne forever and ever....
> [Then we have these powerful words in verses ninety-five and ninety-six-let them penetrate:] And he makes them equal in power, and in might, and in dominion. And the glory of the celestial one, even as the glory of the sun is one.
> My brothers and sisters, that is a lofty goal and a great objective; but it is a promised objective, and real objective obtainable by you and me if we are willing to pay the price.

Could you turn quickly to the eighty-fourth section of the doctrine and Covenants, the thirty third through thirty-eight verses? This, you young men all know, is the oath and covenant of the holy priesthood. There are some words here, though, that I would like you to hear to fortify what the Lord taught earlier in the seventy-sixth section.

> For whoso is faithful unto the obtaining these two priesthoods of which I have spoken [listen carefully to the next few words because I think that this is the key], and the magnifying their calling, are sanctified by the Spirit unto the renewing of their bodies.
> They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, the church and kingdom, and the elect of God.
> And also all they who receive this priesthood receive me, saith the Lord; For he that receiveth me receiveth my Father receiveth my Father's kingdom; therefore all that my Father hath shall be given unto him.
> Is it worth it? is it worth giving all the attention and all the energy that we can to the building of this great Kingdom here upon the earth? I say yes, it is.

Now, you missionaries and returned missionaries, let me talk to you for a minute or two about one of the keys that I think is important in keeping the highest degree of the celestial kingdom foremost in our objectives. It will also help keep in our minds the thought, "It is worth it; I am not going to weaken; I am going to go forward; I am going to make it-because that's the promise of the Father to me, his child."

You and I must learn, as we walk through this life, how to become powerful spiritually. The spirit that dwells within this tabernacle of flesh and bone is the literal offspring of our eternal heavenly parents. We know that; we have all talked about it in Sunday School and priesthood meeting. Because of that spiritual side of our existence, we have a spark of divinity within us; for we trace our common parentage back to our heavenly parents, thus making us all brothers and sisters. we all understand that concept, I am sure. But our great struggle in life (and I must tell you that I have had my struggles and continue to have them, and I believe that everyone else does too-I would be concerned for someone who did not) is to learn this principle of obedience and reliance upon the spirit at this University every bit as much as we build our academic side, or our temporal or physical side. The spirit has to be powerful and magnified in order to qualify for these great blessings. Section eighty-eight of the Doctrine and Covenants gives us helpful insight on the subject in verses fifteen through twenty-two:

> And the spirit and the body are the soul of man.
> And the resurrection form the dead is the redemption of the soul.
> And the redemption of the soul is through him that quickeneth all things, in whose bosom it is decreed that the poor and the meek of the earth shall inherit it.
> Therefore, it must needs be sanctified from all unrighteousness, that it may be prepared for the celestial glory;
> For after it hath filled the measure of its creation, it shall be crowned with glory, even with the presence of God the father;
> That bodies who are of the celestial kingdom may possess it forever and ever; for, for this intent was it made and created, and for this intent are they sanctified.
> And they who are not sanctified thought eh law which I have given unto you, even the law of Christ [or the commandments], must inherit another kingdom, even that of a terrestrial kingdom, or that of a telestial kingdom.
> For he who is not able to abide the law of a celestial kingdom cannot abide a celestial glory.

I do not know whether I can totally bring into focus what this means to me, but let me try.

I think that we should be trying to live the celestial law today. Is there any use in waiting until we are dead to try to live the celestial law? What difference should there be in the way we behave today and the way we will behave when the body and the spirit are separated-is there going to be a difference?

Grandfather Ballard taught with great power and I have enjoyed studying his sermons. I believe that he spoke with great insight as an apostle and a prophet. He said that when we die we will not even know that we are dead until we try to do something that requires a body and find that we cannot do it when the body and the spirit have been separated. Then, He said, would come our full realization of and great appreciation for the ministry and the atoning sacrifice of the Christ. Then we would all look forward in great anticipation to the day of resurrection, when the body and the spirit could be reunited once again, never to be parted.

If you have a bad habit, do you think death is going to change it? Do you think that habit will simply dissolve in some miraculous way and will no longer be with you? I believe that the Lord impresses upon you and me the need to repent and live the law, keep the commandments, and keep our lives aligned to the celestial goal; because it is when we are here in mortality that the body and the spirit can learn together.

For example, when a man who smokes dies and his body is placed six feet into the ground, is there any reason for us to believe that when his body comes back up out of the ground it will no longer have the desires that it had when it was laid down? I do not think so. I think that the body will rise in the resurrection with the same desires and that the body and the spirit together must work out this matter of eternal salvation. This is why you and I must be believing enough and willing enough while we are here on this earth to strive with all our power to keep the commandments. "Is it worth it?" We need to ask ourselves; and I hope that I have made the point clear that it certainly is worth it.

To receive all that our Father has to give unto his sons and his daughters-by any reasonable standard of thinking, my brothers and sisters, we would have to come away from this meeting tonight saying, "Yes, certainly it's worth it." "But," you might say, "It's hard, Brother Ballard. There are so many things out there that I have to conquer." Heavenly Father knows that; he knows that it is difficult. But he is getting to know you and me. I used to tell my missionaries-and I will tell you great young men and women the same-that I do not think there will be a time in your life when the Lord will get better acquainted with you than he will on your mission. do not tamper with mission rules; do not tamper with the commandments. Just do it because it is right, because that is what the handbook says, because that is what your mission president counsels you to do. Why? Because there is safety in it. They will not counsel you to do anything that will not help exalt you and prepare you to become celestial.

The importance of such obedience comes home hard to me when President Benson telephoned with an assignment to speak at a funeral service for a missionary who had lost his life in the mission field. do you have any feeling, brothers and sisters, for what it is like to speak at a service for a missionary who was serving well and lost his life on his mission-who was called home, in effect, to continue to another mission? I was impressed to tel that family that he had been transferred to a greater work, a higher work; but can you sense the feeling that goes through a General Authority's mind in that position? Oh, how grateful I was that I could call the mission president and ask him this brief question: What kind of and elder was he?

"Outstanding," the president said. "He could have been an assistant. He could have had any assignment in our mission. Brother Ballard, I just didn't have any finer missionary than this young man."

What a thrill it was to know that that missionary was living the celestial law on his mission. I am sure that he did not expect to be called home. I am sure that he did not expect that accident to occur. But it happened. He was alive and well in the morning and gone in the afternoon. Gone where? Back to the presence of our Father in Heaven.

Do you think that it was important that he was living the celestial law to the best of his ability? Will you ponder and determine as you walk through this experience at Brigham Young University or on your mission that you are going to live as close to that celestial law as you know how? Determine that you will strive to keep the commandments and strive to build the power of your spirit. Oh, that every one of us might have the power and the feeling of the great prophet Nephi! I love these words in the second chapter of 1 Nephi, the sixteenth verse:

> And it came to pass that I, Nephi, being exceeding young [I believe that he was younger than most of you], nevertheless being large in stature, and also having [the key words; listen:] great desires to know of the mysteries of God,...

Do you have to desire, a great desire to know of the mysteries of God? do you desire it enough to pay the price? Nephi did.

> Wherefore I did cry unto the Lord; [he said,] and behold he did visit me [When I read those words, chills run up and down my spine], and did soften my heart that I did believe all the words which had been spoken by my father; wherefore, I did not rebel against him like unto my brothers.
>
> [Adam, Nephi, Alma remember the words of their fathers.... this is who the should remember the words of their fathers and mothers. We must make it so. Dave J.]

Oh, the power there is in having a desire to know with all your heart the things of God! Do not permit your quest to become a doctor, lawyer, scientist, educator, salesman, or marketing executive overshadow your quest for a testimony of the divine mission of Jesus Christ, the divine mission of Joseph Smith, the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon, and the knowledge that we are led by a prophet of God, even Spencer W. Kimball. Oh, that that assurance would burn in our hearts! Oh, that we would have the desire burning in our hearts, with all of the power we are capable of mustering, to know the mysteries of God! That the spirit might be educated and prepared for that great day of promise when we will go back into the presence of our Heavenly Father!

May I close my remarks, with a few great words form our prophet, and may I say to you that we desperately need every single one of you young people prepared-spiritually prepared and with all question out of your mind as to whether or not it is worth it. we need you fully resolved and solidly entrenched, certain that it is worth the goal, worth the quest, and worth the effort; because here is your job, and it is going to be a bigger job for you, I think, than it is for us. The job was given to you and me by President Kimball last April as he closed that great general conference:

> Now, my brothers and sisters, it seems clear to me-indeed this impression weighs upon me-that the Church is at a point in its growth and maturity when we are at last ready to move forward in a major way. But the basic decisions needed for us to move forward [listen carefully] as a people must be made by the individual members of the Church....
> We have paused on some plateaus long enough. Let us resume our journey forward and upward. Let us quietly put an end to our reluctance to reach out to others, whether in our own families, wards, or neighborhoods. We have been diverted at times from fundamentals on which we must now focus in order to move forward as a person and as a people. [Spencer W. Kimball, "Let Us Move Forward and Upward," Ensign, May 1979, p. 82.]

Oh, brothers and sisters, it is worth it! May God bless each one of you that in your individual lives you will find peace in your hearts and your minds. If there is transgression holding you back, seek out your bishop and get your life righted to the celestial path, and then commit yourself to that course if you have not already done so. Commit tonight as you write your goals: "I am going to do my part. I am going to be ready when the brethern need me, whether it is to be a Sunday School teacher or president of the stake or a General Authority. I will be ready because it is worth it."

I leave my witness and testimony that Jesus is the Christ. He lives; this is his church. How blessed we are to know that! We are on the road back into his holy presence. I testify that, if we will listen to the voice of the prophets and the apostles and strive to keep the commandments, all the blessings of eternity will in very fact become ours. May the Lord bless us to that end. May his peace be in your lives and in your activities on this campus this coming year. Having a great year, have a lot of fun, and in it all find yourself spiritually-find the real, deep roots of your own spirituality. May they be fed and nourished as never before, I pray humbly int eh sacred and beloved name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Speeches of the Year - BYU

What I shall do if I am properly guided by the Spirit--and I devoutly hope and pray that such may be the case both for me and for all of you--is express some views and summarize some concepts relative to the doctrine of making our calling and election sure. This may sound like a hard and difficult subject. It is one which is not fully known or understood by everyone, but easily understood doctrine. There is nothing complex or mysterious about it. Rather it is a doctrine we should understand; one out of which determinations should grow to do the things that assure us of peace and satisfaction in this life and eternal rewards in the realms ahead.

Peter's Summation of the Doctrine

And so now, if I may be properly guided by the Spirit and your hearts also may be enlightened I shall take the first chapter of the second epistle of Peter as a text and try to bring before you some of the basic and fundamental concepts involved in this glorious doctrine. It happens to be a doctrine to which the Prophet Joseph Smith made frequent reference, particularly during the latter years of his ministry. And so I read:

Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us...

These words thus are addressed to the saints. They are addressed to the people who understand and know the doctrines of salvation.

...through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ Grace and peace by multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord...

So we are starting out on the promise that this doctrine is based on a true and correct concept of God and his laws and of the saving power that is in Christ.

According as his (that is Christ's) divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness...

That is, Christ has given us the way to gain life, meaning eternal life, to gain the attributes of godliness , to gain all things, to be exalted, to be like God.

... through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue:... We are called to something. We will try and determine what our calling is in order to specify what it means to make that calling absolute and sure.

Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises:...

These are the promises of glory and exaltation of having eternal life, of being like God our Father.

...that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature,...

If someone is a partaker of the divine nature, he becomes like God. He receives, inherits, and possesses the characters and perfections and attributes that Deity has. He has the same nature that God has.

...having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust....

We have forsaken the world, we have come into the kingdom of God, we have been called to spiritual things, to forsake carnality, to inherit glory and honor, we now have the aim and the goal to make that calling, that is, ours sure--to get the full blessings and benefits which flow from it.

And beside this, giving all diligence (and this is addressed to members of the Church), add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge,
And to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness,
And to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity.

So a number of the attributes of godliness are noted, and we are exhorted to obtain them.

For if these things be in you...

That is, after you join the Church, if you pursue a course that causes you to acquire the attributes of godliness--those listed and related ones--to acquire them in measurable degree.

...If these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ....

And, of course, it is life eternal to know God and Christ.

But he that lacketh these things is blind....

We may think we have great insight, that we know a very great deal, that our intellectual standing gives us power to comprehend eternal truths. But what Peter is saying here is that people are blind, even in the Church, unless they have acquired the attributes of godliness. And so, the more of these perfected attributes we possess, the more accurate and proper our views will be on spiritual things and the less blindness will exist in our lives.

But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. (Purged, of course, through baptism.)
Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure, for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall:
For so (that is, in doing these things) and entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ....

Now and abundant entrance has obvious reference to exaltation in the highest heaven of the celestial world.

The Testimony of Peter

Peter, having thus summarized and outlined the doctrine of making our calling and election sure, now gives his testimony and witness as to what occurred on the Mount of Transfiguration--how Christ was transfigured before them, now the voice of God was heard, and he rejoices in the privilege that had there come to him along with James and John. And having said that God's voice came from heaven and that they heard it when they were with Christ in the holy mount, he says this:

We have also (now this is something in addition to standing on the mount and hearing the voice of God and seeing the Lord Jesus transfigured before them)--we have also a more sure word of prophecy (and it is this more sure word that is the great thing, it is greater than the great spiritual experience they had with Christ and God on the mount). (2 Peter 1:1-11.)

The Prophet's Interpretation

Now, the Prophet, by the spirit of inspiration, gave this interpretation of Peter's statement:

The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that his is sealed up unto eternal life, by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood. (D&C 131:5.)

Some Foundation Doctrine

Well, let us now consider some very basic and fundamental things, let us lay the cornerstones and build the foundation on which this great doctrine rests. To begin with, there is a God in heaven who is infinite and eternal, and everlasting, glorified, exalted Being. He has a tabernacle of flesh and bones. He is a resurrected and holy and perfected man, and we are his offspring. We are his spirit children. He lives in the family unit. We are members of his family. We lived in this premortal life with him for an infinite period of time. We were on probation. We were being schooled and tested and examined. We were given the laws and the circumstances so that we could progress and advance. What he them did for us was to ordain a plan of salvation. The plan originated with the Father, it is God's gospel--Christ became its chief advocate and supporter, but God ordained the plan.

The Plan of Salvation

Now, this plan was to enable his spirit children to grow from their primeval spirit state to a state of glory and dignity and exaltation so that they would be like him--like the Father. The name of the kind of life that God the Father lives is eternal Life. This name describes wholly and completely the nature and kind of life he possesses: his life includes having power and dominion, might and glory and omnipotence, and also it includes living in the family relationship. In God's instance, we were among his spirit offspring.

Well, this plan was ordained. This system was given to us, and for an infinite period of time, we advanced and progressed and did things that enabled us to go along the course leading to exaltation and dominion and godhood. The whole system and philosophy of true and revealed religion consists in progressing toward exaltation.

In this prior life, this premortal existence, this preexistence, we developed various capacities and talents. Some developed them in one field and some in another. The most important of all fields was the field of spirituality--the ability, the talent, the capacity to recognize truth. Those segregated out from among the whole hosts of men, the hosts of all the spirit offspring of God, who had the greatest spiritual talents got themselves in a state and a condition where they were foreordained to receive certain blessings when in due course they came down into mortality.

We are quite well aware that Joseph Smith and Jeremiah and the apostles and prophets, the wise, the great, and the good were foreordained to particular ministries. But that really is a very insignificant or partial part of the doctrine of foreordination. The great and glorious thing about foreordination is that the whole House of Israel was foreordained, the millions upon millions--comparatively few compared to the total preexistent host--but millions of people were foreordained to get certain blessings in this life.

It is our habit and it is our custom to talk about foreordination, it is not a difficult concept for us to understand. But in the day of Peter and Paul and these ancient brethren, they were faced with a little different social circumstance and a little different educational climate, and so, although they did talk about foreordination to some extent, primarily they talked about being called and elected. They talked about callings and elections--about elections, that came, that made people members of the House of Israel.

Called to Eternal life

For instance, without reading the revelations to find them, let us just summarize. Paul taught and said that people in this life were called to be holy, without spot and blameless. He said that people in this life were called and elected to be the sons of God by adoption--to be adopted into the family of God the Father. He said that people were called and elected in this life to be joint-hers with Christ, receiving, possessing, and inheriting equally with him. He said that people were called to glory and dignity and honor and reward, and, in summation, what he taught was that people were called to eternal life.

From our knowledge gained from the ancient records and from what has been revealed in our day, we are well aware that if someone has been called to be pure and clean and spotless, to be holy and without blame, and necessity he has been called and elected to be baptized, because baptism is the gate to purity and perfection. If someone is called to be a son of God and a joint-heir with Christ and to have eternal life, he has been called to receive the blessings of the priesthood. He has been called to enter into the order of celestial marriage. So, people are in effect foreordained, or in other words, they are called and elected to join the Church, to get the blessings of baptism, and the blessings of marriage, and the blessings of conformity to all of the laws and ordinances of the gospel. This then is what is meant by being called and elected. I suppose everyone in our congregation today has been called and elected, that is, the door has been opened and the blessings of eternal life are available on certain conditions.

Conditional Promises

Now, Peter talks about making our calling and election sure, and all in the world that means is that we pursue the appointed course to the point that we get a guarantee that we will receive the things to which we have been called--that we will inherit the promised foreordained blessings. And so, what is involved is three things; one is baptism, two is celestial marriage, and three is then so living that in fact our calling and election does become sure.

Baptism

What happens when we are baptized? Baptism is the gate to eternal life. Baptism puts us on a path leading to eternal life, or leading, in other words to the glory and might and dominion, the exaltation that God our Father possesses. Celestial marriage does in essence the same thing. Celestial marriage also puts us on the path leading to exaltation and glory in the eternal worlds. And so, to have our calling and election made sure means that we get baptized and get on the straight and narrow path that leads to eternal life, and that we then traverse the length of the path and go upward and onward, through righteousness and devotion, through acquiring, as our text passage said, the attributes of godliness.

The thing about baptism is this: In it we get a conditional promise of eternal life. We get the promise:

Son, thou shalt have eternal life, if you will now keep my commandments.

Celestial Marriage

In principle and in essence the same thing applies to celestial marriage. We enter into that order of the priesthood, which is a patriarchal order, and the door is again opened to eternal life-- the door to the highest heaven within the celestial world, that being the only place where the family unit continues. And so, we get married in the temple, we become husband and wife for eternity, we are married by the sealing power that Elijah the prophet restored, and again, we have the promise given of eternal life. We are assured again of exaltation, but it is given in terms and in essence as it was with baptism. The Lord says to us in effect:

Son, thou shalt be exalted, if you now keep the terms and conditions of this everlasting covenant of marriage.

We get conditional promises in baptism. We get conditional promises in celestial marriage.

Making Conditional Promises Absolute

Now, what Peter announces is that there is such a thing as making these conditional promises absolute. Obviously any person who gains exaltation, in the ultimate and int he end, has made his calling and election sure. So in one manner of speaking, no one will ever gain exaltation, no one will ever have the family unit continue in eternity unless his calling and his election has been made sure, or in other words, unless he has gained the promise that he shall inherit eternal life.

But, on the other hand, when we talk about this, what we ordinarily mean is that for some individuals who pursue a course of righteousness and devotion, the day of judgement is in effect advanced so that sometime along the line, as they are pursuing the course leading to exaltation, the Lord says to them "Son, thou shalt be exalted." And at that time, they then have their calling and election made sure; they have for all practical purposes worked out their salvation; they have the assurance of eternal life in the kingdom of God.

Pursue a Steadfast Course

Thus, making one's calling and election sure grows out of baptism for one thing, and it grows out of celestial marriage for another. There is no such thing as gaining exaltation and eternal life except in and through the continuation of the family unit in eternity. Since making one's calling and election sure grows out of celestial marriage, the Lord took occasion to reveal the doctrine relative to it in connection with the revelation on marriage. If we enter in at this gate of marriage and then pursue a steadfast course, we gain eternal life. Making our calling and election sure is thus a matter of being married in the temple and of keeping the terms and conditions of the new and everlasting covenant of marriage. After entering in at the gate of celestial marriage, if we keep the commandments, then at some subsequent time, after great devotion and righteousness, after the Lord has proved us at all hazards, then he says:

> ...Ye shall come forth in the first resurrection... and shall inherit thrones, kingdoms, principalities, and powers, dominions, all heights and depths--(D&C 132:19).
>
> In other words God, by revelation, tells us that our calling and election is made sure, that we are sealed up unto eternal life. Of such the revelation Says:
>
> ... They shall pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to their exaltation and glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads, which glory shall be (and this next now is a definition of what is involved in exaltation, or in other words in eternal life, and in consist of two things:) a fullness (that is one thing--the fullness of the glory of the Father;) and (and this is the second thing) a continuation of the seeds forever and ever.
> Then shall they be gods. (D&C 132:19-20.)
> That is, they have eternal life, they have exaltation, and exaltation consists in being like God our Father. The whole purpose of our creation is to progress from our first spirit estate to the final glorious dominion and exaltation that God our Father has so that we become like him. This is what life is about. Some of us get a patriarchal blessings which say, "You shall fill the full measure of your creation." If we fill the full measure of our creation, we go on along this course of progression and advancement until we gain eternal life in the kingdom of God.

Now, may I read this statement from the Prophet:

> After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost, (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proven him, and finds that the man is determined to serve Him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and election made sure. (TPJS, p. 150.)

The Pattern of the Prophet Joseph Smith

One illustration of this, of a person making his calling and election sure, is the Prophet Joseph Smith. For us in our day and dispensation, he as a follower of Christ has marked the way and set the pattern of what we ought to do. To him the Lord said:

> For I am the Lord thy God, and will be with thee even unto the end of the world, and through all eternity; for verily I seal upon you your exaltation, and prepare a throne for you in the kingdom of my Father, with Abraham your father. (D&C 132:49.)

Thus, Joseph Smith had his calling and election made sure. For him the day of judgement was advanced to a point in this life where he, having been proved and tried in all hazards, was accounted worthy. He had done the things that qualified him to go on to eternal life in the kingdom of God.

Within Our Spiritual Potential

This, then, without amplifying, without saying more, is the doctrine that is involved. It is a true doctrine; it a sound doctrine. What does it mean to us? It is not something that is beyond us; it is something that is beyond us; it is not outside the realm of our capabilities. The Lord would not offer baptism to a people and say, "be baptized and you can be saved in my kingdom," unless He knew that the people had it within their power to enter into baptism and do the things that will result in the promised salvation. And Lord would not offer to a people celestial marriage and say to them, "Now enter this order of matrimony and keep the covenant and you will have eternal life," unless he knew that the people had the talent and the spiritual capacity and ability to gain the promised reward. And the same thing applies to making our calling and election made sure. The Lord wouldn't say to us, "Make your calling and election sure," unless he knew it was within our spiritual potential--unless we had the capacity and ability to press forward in steadfastness and devotion until that desired eventuality occurred.

Now, I am suggesting that this is within the realm of possibility and probability, for the members of the Church today. Many in this dispensation have obtained such a status. This ought to cause us to make a firm and unshakenable determination to gain the blessings and benefits of baptism; to gain the blessings and benefits of celestial marriage; and in each instance those blessings accrue on condition that we keep the covenants that we make in connection with those holy ordinances. And then we ought to press forward with a steadfastness in Christ, keeping the commandments and living by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God, so that our calling and election shall be made sure. In one manner of speaking, this is the most glorious doctrine that there is in the Chruch. It is the doctrine that assures people of eternal reward in the kingdom of God. By the grace and glory and goodness of a merciful Father, he has restored in this, our day, the knowledge, the doctrine, the keys, the priesthood, the powers--everything that is needed to seal men up unto eternal life. Our objective, our goal, our aim, our determination in this life is to press forward with that steadfastness and devotion which will give us complete peace and satisfaction and joy in this life and assure us of eternal life in the world to come.

> ...He who doeth the works of righteousness shall receive his reward, even peace in this world, and eternal life in the world to come. (D&C 59:23.)

In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

CALLING AND ELECTION SURE

Those members of the Church who devote themselves wholly to righteousness, living by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God, making their calling and election sure. That is, they receive the more sure word of prophecy, which means that the Lord seals their exaltation upon them while they are yet in this life. Peter summarized the course of righteousness which the saints must pursue to make their calling and election sure and then (referring to his experience on the Mount of Transfiguration with James and John) said that those three had received this more sure word of prophecy. (2 Pet. 1.)

Joseph Smith taught: "After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter." To receive the other Comforter is to have Christ appear to him and to see the visions of eternity. (Teachings, pp. 149-151.)

Thus, as the Prophet also said, "The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that his is sealed up unto eternal life, by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood." (D. & C. 131:5.) Those so favored of the Lord are sealed up against all manner of sin and blasphemy except the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost and the shedding of innocent blood. That is, their exaltation is assured; their calling and election is made sure, because they have obeyed the fulness of God's laws and have overcome the world. Though such persons "shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder wherein they shed innocent blood, yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter in to their exaltation." (D. & C. 132:26.)

The Lord says to them: "Ye shall come forth in the first resurrection; . . . and shall inherit thrones, kingdome, principalities, and powers, dominions, all hights and depths." (D. & C. 132:19.) The Prophet, for one, had this seal placed upon him. That is, he knew "by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood," that he would attain godhood in the world to come. To him Deity said: "I am the Lord thy God, and will be with thee even unto the end of the world, and through all eternity; for verily I seal upon you your exaltation, and prepare a throne for you in the kingdom of my Father, with Abraham your father." (D. & C. 132:49.)

It should be clearly understood that these high blessings are not part of celestial marriage. "Blessings pronounced upon couples in connection with celestial marriage are conditioned upon the subsequent faithfulness of the participating parties." (Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 2, pp. 46-47.)

Those Whose Calling and Election Is Sure May See the Lord

It is the privilege of all those who have made their calling and election sure to see God; to talk with him face to face; to commune with him on a personal basis from time to time. These are the ones upon whom the Lord sends the Second Comforter. Their inheritance of exaltation and eternal life is assured, and so it becomes with them here and now in this life as it will be with all exalted being in the life to come. They become the friends of God and converse with him on a friendly basis as one man speaks to another.

It is not our present purpose to discuss what it means to have one's calling and election made sure nor to recite the things that must be done so to obtain. A full discussion of these matters is found in my Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, volume 3, pages 323 to 355. For our present needs we shall simply quote this one sentence found on pages 330 and 331: "To have one's calling and election made sure is to be sealed up unto eternal life; it is to have the unconditional guarantee of exaltation in the highest heaven of the celestial world; it is to receive the assurance of godhood; it is, in effect, to have the day of judgment advanced, so that an inheritance of all the glory and honor of the Father's kingdom is assured prior to the day when the faithful actually enter into the divine presence to sit with Christ in his throne, even as he is 'set down' with his 'Father in his throne.' (Rev. 3:21.)"

In one of his greatest doctrinal expositions, the Prophet Joseph Smith equated the making of one's calling and election sure, spoken of by Peter, with "the sealing power spoken of by Paul." He said that those who were sealed up unto eternal life were the ones of whom Jeremiah spoke when he said that the Lord "will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah." In the day the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah." In the day of this new covenant the Lord promised: "I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people." Then comes the glorious promise that those who receive the covenant and keep its terms and conditions shall see the Lord. "And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all man, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more." (Jer. 31:31-34.) Having referred to this promise, the Prophet Joseph Smith asked: "How is this to be done?" How will it not be necessary for men to continue to teach one another the doctrines of the kingdom? The Prophet answers: "It is to be done by this sealing power, and the other Comforter spoken of, which will be manifest by revelation." Building on that foundation, he then proceeds to give forth his discourse on the Two Comforters. He tells how converted persons receive the Holy Ghost, are born again, become new creatures, and, if they are of gentile lineage, how they are adopted into the house of Israel. "The other comforter spoken of is a subject of great interest, and perhaps understood by few of this generation. After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized fro the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost, (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve Him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling an his election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter, which the Lord hath promised the saints....

"Now what is this other Comforter? It is no more nor less than the Lord Jesus Christ Himself; and this is the sum and substance of the whole matter; that when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him, or appear unto him from time to time, and even he will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him, and the Lord will teach him fact to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of the kingdom of God; and this is the state and place the ancient saints arrived at when they had such glorious visions - Isaiah, Ezekiel, John upon the Isle of Patmos, St. Paul in the three heavens, and all the saints who held communion with the general assembly and Church of the Firstborn." (Teachings, pp. 149-51.)

There are, of course, those whose callings and election have been made sure who have never exercised the faith nor exhibited the righteousness which would enable them to commune with the Lord on the promised basis. There are even those who neither believe nor know that it is possible to see the Lord in this day, and they therefore are without the personal incentive that would urge them onward in the pursuit of this consummation so devoutly desired by those with spiritual insight.

The Second Epistle General of Peter

In his Second Epistle, the Chief Apostle discusses three doctrines of transcendent import:

Gospel Mysteries

1. Making our calling and election sure;
. . .Peter knew the doctrines of his Lord and had a blunt, rugged, emphatic way of presenting them that is marvelous to behold.

Nowhere else in ancient writ do we find the door so frankly opened to a knowledge of the course men must pursue to have their calling and election made sure; . . . .

"MAKE YOUR CALLING AND ELECTION SURE"

II PETER 1:1-19

1 Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ:
2 Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our lord,
3 According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue:
4 Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.
5 And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge;
6 And to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness;
7 And to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity.
8 For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.
9 But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. 10 Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall:
11 For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.
12 Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, through ye know them, and be established in the present truth.
13 Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance;
14 Knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath showed me.
15 Moreover I will endeavor that ye may be able after my decease to have these things always in remembrance.
16 For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty.
17 For he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased.
18 And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount.
19 We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take head, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts:

I.V. II PETER 1:19.

19 We have therefore a more sure knowledge of the word of prophecy, to which word of prophecy ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light which shineth in a dark place, until the day-dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts;

"MAKING YOUR CALLING AND ELECTION SURE"

Among those who have received the gospel, and who are seeking diligently to live its laws and gain eternal life, there is an instinctive and determined desire to make their calling and election sure. Because they have tasted the good things of God and sipped from the fountain of eternal truth, they now seek the divine presence, where they shall know all things, have all power, all might, and all dominion, and in fact be like Him who is the great Prototype of all saved beings - God our Heavenly and Eternal Father. (D. & C. 132:20.) This is the end objective, the chief goal of all the faithful, and there is nothing greater in all eternity, "for there is no gift greater than the gift of salvation." (D. & C. 6:13.)

It is little wonder then that the Prophet Joseph Smith, particularly during the latter and crowing years of his mortal ministry, repeatedly exhorted the saints to press forward with that steadfastness in Christ which would enable them to make their calling and election sure. "I am going on in my progression for eternal life," he said of himself; and then in fervent pleading to all the saints, he exclaimed: "Oh! I beseech you to go forward, go forward and make your calling and your election sure." (Teachings, p. 366.)

As a prelude to analyzing Peter's words on this subject-and they rank in spiritual grandeur and insight with those himself-as a prelude to this analysis, let us define and outline what is involved in having one's calling and election made sure, taking cautious heed the while to anchor each thought and concept to the revealed word and prophetic utterances.

Of necessity we must define some words and phrases in most pointed terms. Unless we know what they mean, in their scriptural contexts, we cannot comprehend what the Holy Spirit was teaching by the mouths of the prophets as he inspired those preachers o righteousness to use them. And since there is so much misunderstanding and misinformation where these glorious concepts are concerned, it will not be amiss to approach the subject in an organized and intelligent manner, building our house of understanding, brick upon brick, precept upon precept. The fact is that the doctrinal concepts in this field are fully set forth in the revelations, and all that is needed is to put the whole subject together in one well built structure, so that it becomes clear how each separate part fits into the one united whole. One brick or one window by itself does not show forth what the whole house is like; but each part fitly framed together with its fellow parts soon becomes a marvelous mansion which is gratifying to behold.

What is meant by calling? And who are the called of God

To be called is to be a member of the Church and kingdom of God on earth; it is to be numbered with the saints; it is to accept the gospel and receive the everlasting covenant; it is to have part and lot in the earthly Zion: it is to be born again, to be a son or a daughter of the Lord Jesus Christ; to have membership in the household of faith; it is to be on the path leading to eternal life and to have the hope of eternal glory; it is to have a conditional promise of eternal life; it is to be an inheritor of all of the blessings of the gospel, provided there is continued obedience to the laws and ordinances thereof.

Within this over-all framework, there are individual calls to positions of trust and responsibility, but these are simply assignments to labor on the Lord's errand, in particular places, for a time and a season. The call itself is to the gospel cause; it is not reserved for apostles and prophets or for the great and mighty in Israel; it is for all the members of the kingdom. The call originates with God, is available because of his grace and goodness, and is offered to various peoples and nations according to his will and on his divine timetable. from the day of Jacob to the coming of Christ the house of Israel was the called and chosen people of the Lord. During the day of his mortal ministry our Lord limited the call to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. (Matt. 10:5-7.) After his resurrection he commanded his ministers to make the call available to all men. (Mark 16:15-16.) But only those who actually receive the gospel, who make the everlasting covenant, who cleave unto the truth and strive to live in harmony with the revealed word, only these are numbered among those whom the scriptures name as the called of the Lord.

Thus we find hosts of statements in holy writ telling who is called and what they have and may yet receive as a result thereof. For instance: On the day of Pentecost itself, as he began the ministry which would take the gospel from the house of Israel to the ends of the earth, Peter announced that the repentant, baptized converts "shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For," said he, "the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

Later the chief apostle told members of the Church that they had been "called...out of darkness" into the "marvelous light" of the gospel (1 Pet. 2:9); that they were "called" to suffer in the cause of righteousness, that thereby they "should inherit a blessing" (1 Pet. 2:21; 3:9); that their call came from God, by his grace, through "Christ Jesus," and was a call unto "eternal glory." (1 Pet. 5:10.) And accordingly Peter exhorted the saints to be holy "as he which hath called you is holy." (1 Pet. 1:15.)

Our friend Paul proclaims the same principles. He speaks of members of the Church a s "the called of Jesus Christ," as those who are "called to the saints" (Rom. 1:6-7; 1 Cor. 1:2; he says they are "called...into the grace of Christ" (Gal. 1:6); "called unto liberty" (Gal. 5:13); "called...to peace" (1 cor. 7:15, 17); "called" to "holiness" (1 Thess. 4:7; Heb. 3:1); :called: to the Lord's "kingdom and glory" (1 Thess. 2:12); and that all these calls come by "grace." (Gal. 1:15.)

Like Peter he teaches that the saints are called to "eternal life: (1 Tim. 6:12), called to "the promise of eternal inheritance" (Heb. 9:15), but he explains also that the Lord's calls are the result of foreordination and grow out of faithfulness in pre-existence. (2 Tim. 1:8-9.) "God hath from the beginning," that is, form before the foundations of the world, "chosen you [his saints] to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit of belief of the truth: Whereunto he called you by our gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Thess. 2:13-14.) That is, the saints were foreordained in the councils of eternity to believe the truth, to be sanctified, and to save their should; and then in this life they are called to that gospel whereby these eternal promises can be fulfilled.

In another glorious passage, Paul says: "We know that all things work together for good to them that love god, to them who are the called according to his purpose." That is, the Lord's hand governs and controls in the lives of those whom he, in his infinite foreknowledge, hath called to be his people. and then: "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethern,: which is to say that god in his infinite wisdom foreordained the noble and great spirits in pre-existence to become like Christ, to gain glory, power and might like unto the Son of God, so that the son becomes the firstborn, as it were, among many exalted sons. And then in glorious conclusion: "Moreover whom he did predestinate [foreordain], them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified." (Rom. 8:28-30.) Thus " the noble and great ones," who were chosen before they were born (Abra. 3:22-23), who were foreordained to have exaltation, are the ones whom God hath called in this life to be glorified through the gospel in due course.

With such a glorious hope before them, surely the saints should be encouraged to gain the promised rewards, and so Paul joins Peter in using the doctrine of calling as an occasion for exhortation. Let all the saints so "work" as to be "worthy of this calling," he says, in that day when the Lord "shall come to be glorified in his saints", (2 Thess. 1:10-11), and even of such a great one as himself he says: "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Philip. 3:14.)

In modern revelation the Lord confirms the doctrine of his ancient apostles, speaks of our "calling and election in the church" (D. & C. 53:1; 41:2.) Since men are foreordained to gain exaltation, and since no man can be exalted without the priesthood, it is almost self-evident that worthy brethren were foreordained to receive the priesthood. And so we find Alma teaching that those who hold the Melchizedek Priesthood in this life were "called and prepared from the foundation of the world according to the foreknowledge of God." (Alma 13:1-12.) And Joseph Smith said, "Every man who has a calling to minister to the inhabitants of the world," and this includes all who hold the Melchizedek Priesthood, "was ordained to that very purpose in the Grand Council of heaven before this world was. I suppose that I was ordained to this very office in that Grand Council." (Teachings, p. 365.)

Now what is meant by making a calling sure?

All blessings promised in connection with the callings of God are conditional; they are offered to men provided they obey the laws upon which their receipt is predicated. (D. & C. 130:20-21.) "For all who will have a blessing at my hands," the Lord says, "shall abide the law which was appointed for that blessing, and the conditions thereof, as were instituted from before the foundation of the world." (D. & C. 132:5.)

It follows, then, that when the law has been lived to the full, the promised blessing is guaranteed. "I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say; but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise." (D. & C. 82:10.) Accordingly, when a man lives the law that qualifies him for eternal life, the Lord is bound by his own law to confer that greatest of all gifts upon him. And if by a long course of trial and obedience, while yet in this life, a man proves to the Lord that he was and will abide in the truth, the Lord accepts the exhibited devotion and issues his decree that the promised blessings shall be received. The calling, which up to that time was provisional, is then made sure. The receipt of the promised blessings are no longer conditional; they are guaranteed. Announcement is made that every gospel blessing shall be inherited.

What is meant by election? Who are the elect of God? To what have they been elected? And Why?

Election is akin to a synonymous with calling, and in a general sense the elect comprise the whole house of Israel. (Isa. 45:4; 65:9.) Jesus and Paul and Peter speak of the elect as the saints, as the faithful believers, as those who love the Lord and are seeking righteousness. (Matt. 24:22; Mark 13:20; Luke 18:7; Col. 3:12; 2 Tim. 2:10; Titus 1:1.) And the Lord in our day has promised to gather and save his elect. (D. & C. 29:7; 33:6; 35:20.) Paul speaks of the elect along with the called, setting forth that they are foreordained to be like Christ, that their conduct here is justified, and that they shall be glorified hereafter. (Rom. 8:28-30.) Peter specifies their high status is "according to the foreknowledge of God the Father: (1 Pet.

1:2), and Isaiah assures us that great blessings shall flow to them during the Millennial Era. (Isa. 65:22.)
But in the most express and proper usage of terms, "The elect of God comprise a very select group, an inner circle of faithful members of the Church.... They are the portion of church members who are striving with all their hearts to keep the fulness of the gospel law in this life so that they can become inheritors of the fulness of gospel rewards in the life to come.
"As far as the male sex is concerned, they are the ones, the Lord says, who have the Melchizedek Priesthood conferred upon them and who thereafter magnify their callings and are sanctified by the Spirit. In this way, 'They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom, and the elect of God.'" (Mormon Doctrine, 2nd ed., p. 217.) See commentary II, pp. 267–269, 271–278, 283–285.

What is meant by making an election sure?

It is with election as with calling: the chosen of the Lord are offered all of the blessings of the gospel on condition of obedience of the Lord's laws; and they, having been tried and tested and found worthy in all things, eventually have a seal placed on their election which guarantees the receipt of the promised blessing.

What is meant by having one's calling and election made sure?

To have one's calling and election made sure is to be sealed up unto eternal life; it is to have the unconditional guarantee of exaltation in the highest heaven of the celestial world; it is to receive the assurance of godhood; it is, in effect, to have the day of judgment advanced, so that an inheritance of all the glory and honor of the Father's kingdom is assured prior to the day when the faithful actually enter into the divine presence to sit with Christ in his throne, even as he is "set down" with his "Father in his throne." (Rev. 3:21.)

What is the relationship between baptism and having one's calling and election made sure?

Baptism is the beginning of personal righteousness; it opens the door to celestial exaltation; it puts us on the path leading to eternal life. As Nephi expressed it, when we enter "the gate" of "repentance and baptism" and receive "a remission" of our sins "by fire and by the Holy Ghost," we are then on the " straight and narrow path which leads to eternal life."
Nephi then asks if we have thereby done all that is necessary to gain that glorious reward, and answers with an emphatic, No! "Ye must press forward with a steadfastness in Christ," he says, "having a perfect brightness of hope, and a love of God and of all men. Wherefore, if ye shall press forward, feasting upon the word of Christ, and endure to the end, behold, thus saith the Father: Ye shall have eternal life." (2Ne. 31:17–21.)
That is to say, after baptism, after being called out of darkness into the light of the gospel; after having been numbered with the elect of god, we must receive the guarantees to which we have been called, and the assurances that appertain to our election, and which are given on a conditional basis only in baptism. We must have our calling and election made sure, and this high achievement grows out of and is the crowning reward of baptism.

What is the relationship between celestial marriage and having one's calling and election made sure?

In the same sense that baptism opens the door and starts repentant persons traveling on the path leading to eternal life, so also does celestial marriage. This holy order of matrimony also opens a door leading to celestial exaltation. "In the celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees; And in order to obtain the highest, a man must enter into this order of the priesthood [meaning the new and everlasting covenant of marriage]; And if he does not, he cannot obtain it. He may enter into the other, but that is the end of his kingdom; he cannot have an increase." (D. & C. 131:1-4.)

As everyone who has been married in the temple knows, those so united - by the power and authority of the holy priesthood and by virtue of the sealing power restored by Elijah - are promised an inheritance of glory, honor, power, and dominion in the kingdom of God. But, as with baptism, all the promises are conditional; they are specifically and pointedly stated as being contingent upon the subsequent faithfulness of the participating parties. If they keep the commandments after celestial marriage, their union continues in the life to come; if they do not conform to the standards of personal righteousness involved, their marriage is not of force when they die and they revert to their separate and single status.

Unfortunately some are confused on this point because of a misunderstanding of some of the truths revealed in the revelation on marriage. Because no person can gain exaltation or eternal life alone; because exaltation includes the continuation of the family unit in eternity; because the whole thrust of revealed religion is to perfect and center everything in the family; and because having one's calling and election made sure is the receipt of a guarantee of eternal life - it was the most natural thing in the world for the Lord to reveal both the doctrine of eternal marriage and the doctrine of being sealed up unto eternal life (meaning having one's calling and election made sure) in one and the same revelation. In effect one grows out of the other. The one is a conditional promise of eternal life; the other is an unconditional promise.

Thus in Section 132, verse 19 begins by talking of celestial marriage in these words: "If a man marry a wife by my word, which is my law, and by the new and everlasting covenant, and it is sealed unto them by the Holy Spirit of promise, by him who is anointed, unto whom I have appointed this power and the keys of this priesthood," but then proceeds to consider the matter of having their callings and elections made sure by saying: "and it shall be said unto them [meaning that in addition to the marriage sealing, it shall be said unto them] - Ye shall come forth in the first resurrection;...and shall inherit thrones, kingdoms, principalities, and powers, dominions, nd heights nd depths - then...they shall pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to their exaltation and glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads, which glory shall be a fulness and a continuation of the seeds forever and ever."

That is to say, after celestial marriage; after entering into sacred covenants in the house of the Lord; after receiving the conditional promise of the continuation of the family unit in eternity; after receiving power to gain kingdoms and thrones - we must so live as to receive the guarantees to which we have thus been called, and the assurances that appertain to our election, and which are given on a conditional basis only in celestial marriage. as with baptism, so with celestial marriage; after the glorious promise of eternal life that is part of each of these covenants, we must press forward in righteousness until our calling and election is made sure; and this high achievement grows out of and is the crowing reward of celestial marriage.

What is the relationship between holding the holy Melchizedek Priesthood and having one's calling and election made sure?

The Melchizedek Priesthood is conferred with an oath and a covenant - a covenant on man's part that he will receive the priesthood and magnify his calling therein, and an oath on God's part that man shall, as a consequence, be "made like unto the son of God, abiding a priest continually." (Inspired Version, Heb. 7:3; D. & C. 84:33-44.) See Heb. &:1-3; 7:18-22. In other words, those who magnify their callings shall gain eternal life. But one cannot keep a covenant before it is made; a calling in the priesthood cannot be magnified until it is received. The covenant is the contract which sets forth the terms and conditions by obedience to which eternal life may be won; the obedience comes after the call; and when it is whole and complete, the worthy son has his calling and election made sure, and he inherits the promised reward.

Is having one's calling and election made sure the same as being sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise?

The Holy Ghost is the Holy Spirit; he is the Holy Spirit promised the saints at baptism, or in other words the Holy Spirit of Promise, this exalted name-title signifying that the promised receipt of the Holy Spirit, as on the day of Pentecost, is the greatest gift man can receive in mortality.
The gift of the Holy Ghost is the right to the constant companionship of that member of the Godhead based on faithfulness; it is bestowed with a promise that we shall receive revelation and be sanctified if we are true and faithful and so live as to qualify for the companionship of that Holy Spirit who will not dwell in an unclean temple. (1 Cor. 3:16-17; 6:19; Mosiah 2:37; Hela. 4:24.) The receipt of the promise is conditional! If after we receive the promise, we then keep the commandment, we gain the companionship of this member of the Godhead, and not otherwise.
One of the functions assigned and delegated to the Holy spirit is to seal, and the following expressions are identical in thought content:
To be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise;
To be justified by the Spirit;
To be approved by the Lord; and
To be ratified by the Holy Ghost.
Accordingly, any act which is sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise is one which is justified by the Spirit, one which is approved by the Lord, one which is ratified by the Holy Ghost. One of Paul's great concerns was that the saints in his day should be justified by faith, through grace, because of the shedding of the blood of Christ. (Commentary II, pp. 224-249.) In other words, he sought to perfect the lives of those souls put into his care and custody so that, as a result of good works, all their acts would have divine approval and be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise.
As revealed to Joseph Smith, the Lord's law in this respect is: "All covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations, that are not made and entered into and sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, of him who is anointed, both as well for time and for all eternity, and that too most holy, by revelation and commandment through the medium of mine anointed, whom I have appointed on the earth to hold this power (and I have appointed unto my servant Joseph to hold this power in the last days, and there is never but one on the earth at a time on whom this power and the keys of this priesthood are conferred), are of no efficacy, virtue, or force in and after the resurrection from the dead; for all contracts that are not made unto this end have and end when men are dead." (D. & C. 132:7.)
By way of illustration, this means that baptism, partaking of the sacrament, administering to the sick, marriage, and every covenant that man ever makes with the Lord - plus all other "contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, associations, or expectations" - must be preformed in righteousness by and for people who are worthy to receive whatever blessing is involved, otherwise whatever is done has no binding and sealing effect in eternity.

Since "the Comforter knoweth all things" (D. & C. 42:17), it follows that it is not possible "to lie to the Holy Ghost" and thereby gain an unearned or undeserved blessing, as Ananias and Sapphira found out to their sorrow. (Acts 5:1-11.) And so this provision that all things must be sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, if they are to have "efficacy, virtue, or force in and after the resurrection from the dead" (D. & C. 132:7), is the Lord;s system for dealing with absolute impartiality with all men, and for giving all men exactly what they merit, neither adding to nor diminishing from. See Commentary II, pp. 493-495.
When the Holy Spirit of Promise places his ratifying seal upon a baptism, or a marriage, or any covenant, except that of having one's calling and election made sure, the seal is a conditional approval or ratification; it is binding in eternity only in the event of subsequent obedience to the terms and conditions of whatever covenant is involved.
But when the ratifying seal of approval is placed upon someone whose calling and election is thereby made sure - because there are no more conditions to be met by the obedient person - this act of being sealed up unto eternal life is of such transcendent import that of itself it is called being sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise, which means that in this crowing sense, being so sealed is the same as having one's calling and election made sure. Thus, to be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise is to be sealed up unto eternal life; and to be sealed up unto eternal life is to be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise. and of this usage of terms, a usage which is wholly misunderstood unless the whole concept of the sealing power of the Spirit is understood, the scriptures and other prophetic utterances bear repeated witness.
Thus Joseph Smith says that when Peter "exhorts us to make our calling and election sure," it is the same thing as "the sealing power spoken of by Paul in other places." (Teachings,;. 149.) The illustrative quotation from Paul which the Prophet then quotes is: "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory," that we may be sealed up unto the day of redemption. (Eph. 1:13-14.) That is, the calling and election of Ephesian saints and been made sure because they were sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise.
Those who gain exaltation in the celestial kingdom are described in the Vision of the degrees of glory in these words: "They are they who received the testimony of Jesus, and believed on his name and were baptized after the manner of his burial, being buried in the water in his name, and this according to the commandment which he has given - That by keeping the commandments they might be washed and cleansed from all their sins, and receive the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hands of him who is ordained and sealed unto this power; An who overcome by faith, and are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, which the Father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true." D. & C. 76:51-53.) That is, they first believed the gospel, received all the conditional promises of eternal life, including the gift of the Holy Ghost, and then having "overcome by faith," having kept the commandments, having proved themselves worthy, they finally had their calling and election made sure.
"This principle" - that of having ones calling and election made sure and of being sealed with that Holy Spirit of Promise - "ought (in its proper place) to be taught," the Prophet said, "for God hath not revealed anything to Joseph, but what he will make known unto the Twelve, and even the least saint may know all things as fast as he is able to bear them, for the day must come when no man need say to his neighbor, know ye the Lord; for all shall know him (who remain) from the least to the greatest. How is this to be done? It is to be done by this sealing power, and the other Comforter spoken of , which will be manifest by revelation." (Teachings, p. 149.)

The scriptural passage alluded to by the Prophet in this statement is from Jeremiah and is as follows: "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord: But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them to unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for i will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more." (Jer. 31:31-34.) Complete realization of the blessings here promised is Millennial, and the knowledge of God spoken of shall be manifest by the receipt of the Second comforter, as the Prophet then proceeds to state, and as we shall now consider.

Is having one's calling and election made sure the same as receiving the Second Comforter?

It is the privilege of those who have their calling and election made sure, meaning those who are sealed up unto eternal life, meaning those who are "sealed with that holy Spirit of promise" (Eph. 1:13), to receive the Second Comforter.
"there are two Comforters spoken of," says the Prophet in one of his most profound and enlightening discourses. "One of these is the Holy Ghost, the same as given on the day of Pentecost, and that all saints receive after faith, repentance, and baptism. The first Comforter or Holy Ghost has no other effect that pure intelligence. It is more powerful in expanding the mind, enlightening the understanding, and storing the intellect with present knowledge, of a man who is of the literal seed of Abraham, than one that is a Gentile, thought it may not have half as much visible effect upon the body; for as the Holy Ghost falls upon one of the literal seed of Abraham, it is calm and serene; and his whole soul and body are only exercised by the pure spirit of intelligence; while the effect of the Holy Ghost upon a Gentile, is to purge out the old blood, and make him actually of the seed of Abraham. That man that has none of the blood of Abraham (naturally) must have a new creation by the Holy Ghost. In such a case, there may be more of a powerful effect upon the body, and visible to the eye, that upon an Israelite, while the Israelite at first might be far before the Gentile in pure intelligence. "The other Comforter spoken of is a subject of great interest, and perhaps understood by few of this generation. after a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost, (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of god, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and his election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter, which the Lord hath promised the saints, as is recorded in the testimony of St. John, in the 14th chapter, from the 12th to the 27th verses." (Teachings, p. 149-150.) The Prophet then quotes verses 16, 17, 18, 21, 23, and asks that they be noted in particular.
In a revelation to certain selected saints in this dispensation, the Lord said that the alms of their prayers were "recorded in the book of the names of the sanctified, even them of the celestial world" (D. & C. 88:2), which is to say that they were among those who had " overcome by faith," and were "sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, which the father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true." (D. & C. 76:53.)

"Wherefore," the Lord said to them, "I now send upon you another Comforter, even upon you my friends, that it may abide in your hearts, even the Holy Spirit of promise; which other Comforter is the same that I promised unto my disciples, as is recorded in the testimony of John. This Comforter is the promise which I give unto you of eternal life, even the glory of the celestial kingdom; Which glory is that of the church of the Firstborn, even of God, the holiest of all, through Jesus Christ his Son." (D. & C. 88:3-5.)

These saints, like the Ephesian Brethren before them, had been called and chosen "before the foundation of the world" that they "should be holy and without blame" before the Lord, through baptism and obedience (Eph. 1:4-7), which is the sole course by which men can sanctify their souls (3 Ne. 27:19-20), thereby qualifying to have their names recorded "in the book of the names of the sanctified." (D. & C. 88:2.) They had then earned the right by faith and devotion to have the seal of divine acceptance placed on the conditional promises which they had theretofore made. They now had the sure "promise...of eternal life" (D. & C. 88:4), which eternal life is the name of the kind of life which God our Heavenly and Eternal Father lives, and they were prepared to receive the Second Comforter.

As set forth by the Lord Jesus himself to the ancient Twelve, in one of his most loving and gracious sermons, the doctrine of the Second comforter, noting particularly the verses quoted by the Prophet, is this:

Verse 16: "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever." That is in their case they are going to receive a Comforter in addition to the Holy Ghost already promised, and this Comforter will abide with them forever, for they shall have membership in the Church of the Firstborn in celestial exaltation.

Verse 17: "Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you." All that is said in this verse, if taken out of context, could apply to the Holy Ghost, whom the world cannot receive, and who figuratively dwells in the hearts of the righteous, for the title, "Spirit of truth," applies to this Spirit member of the Godhead. (John 16:13.)

But as spoken by Jesus, as recorded by the Beloved John, and as interpreted by the Prophet Joseph Smith, the verse has application to Jesus Himself. "I am the Spirit of truth,: is his latter-day declaration (D. & C. 93:26), which is but another of the many instances in which the same name-title applies to more that one member of the Godhead. Thus the Lord Jesus is telling his ancient apostles that he will dwell in them in the figurative sense stated three sentences later in the same sermon: "I am in the Father, and ye in me, and I in you." (Verse 20.)

Verse 18: "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you." I will come! The Lord Jesus Christ himself will do it! He will appear to them and be with them! And what an eternal comfort it will be, in days and years to come, to see the face of their Beloved Lord! And verses 19 and 20 then reaffirm that when the world no longer sees him, yet because he continues to live in glorious immortality, his beloved disciples shall continue to see him - "Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: because I live, ye shall live also. At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you." Verse 21: "he that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that liveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him." Again the Master Teacher affirms that because of love and obedience he personally will hereafter manifest himself to his disciples. And then, one of the Twelve, hearing the words but not comprehending the deep spiritual truths they convey, asks Jesus: "Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?" (Verse 22.)

Verse 23: "Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." Can this be possible that the Father and the son, as resurrected, glorified persons, will come to and make their abode with those who love and serve God with all their hearts? (D. & C. 93:1.) such seems almost beyond comprehension, but so gracious and infinite is God's grace that such is verily the case, and so wo find the Prophet, writing by the spirit of prophecy and revelation: "John 14:23 - The appearing of the Father and the Son, in that verse is a personal appearance; and the idea that the Father and the Son dwell in a man's heart is an old sectarian notion, and is false." (D. & C. 130:3.)

Having thus set forth the doctrine that he and his father will manifest themselves to those who are sealed up unto eternal life - and for that matter, why should they not come to such persons, since all who gain eternal life shall dwell in their presence and be like them? - having so taught, Jesus says: "These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost" - the First Comforter, the initial Comforter, the one "that all saints receive after faith, repentance, and baptism," the one that "has no other effect than pure intelligence" (Teachings, p. 149) - this Comforter, "whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." (Verses 25 and 26.)

After quoting the names verses from the 14th chapter of John, the Prophet continues his won inspired analysis: "Now what is this other Comforter?" he asks. "It is no more nor less than the Lord Jesus Christ himself; and this is the sum and substance of the whole matter; that when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him or appear unto him form time to time, and even he will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him, and the Lord will teach him face to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of Kingdom of God; and this is the state and place the ancient saints arrived at when they had such glorious visions - Isaiah, Ezekiel, John upon the Isle of Patmos, St. Paul in the three heavens, and all the saints who held communion with the general assembly and Chruch of the Firstborn." (Teachings, pp. 150-151.)

Speaking in November, 1831, to those whose calling and election would in due course be made sure, and whose "privilege" it would then be to receive the Second Comforter, the Lord said: "verily I say unto you that it is your privilege, and a promise I give unto you that have been ordained unto this ministry, that inasmuch as you strip yourselves from jealousies and fears,and humble yourselves before me, for ye are not sufficiently humble, the veil shall be rent and you shall see me." (D. & C. 67:10-14.)

What if those whose calling and election has been made sure thereafter commit grievous sins? Suppose they backslide and walk in the ways of wickedness? Or fight the truth and rebel against God - what then?

That all men commit sin, before and after baptism, and for that matter, before and after their calling and election is made sure, is self-evident. There has been only one Sinless One - the Lord Jesus who was God's own Son.

Thus in the revelation announcing the sitting up of the restored church in this day, the Lord says: "there is a possibility that man may fall from grace and depart from the living god; Therefore let the church take heed and pray always, lest they fall into temptation; Yea, and even let those who are sanctified take heed also." (D. & C. 20:32-34.)

The prophets and apostles from Adam and Enoch down, and all men, whether cleansed and sanctified from sin or not, are yet subject to and do in fact commit sin. This is the case even after men have seen the visions of eternity and been sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise which makes their calling and election sure. Since these chosen ones have the sure promise of eternal life, and since "no unclean thing can enter into" the Father's "kingdom" (3 Ne. 27:19), "or dwell in his presence" (Moses 6:57), what of sins committed after being sealed up into eternal life?

Obviously the laws of repentance still apply, and the more enlightened a person is, the more he seeks the gift of repentance, and the harder he strives to free himself form sin as often as he falls short to the divine will and becomes subject in any degree to the Master of Sin who is Lucifer. It follows that the sins of the godfearing and righteous are continually remitted because they repent and seek the Lord anew every day and every hour.

And as a matter of fact, the added blessing of having one's calling and election made sure is itself and encouragement to avoid sin and a hedge against its further commission. By that long course of obedience and trial which enabled them to gain so great a blessing the sanctified saints have charted a course and developed a pattern of living which avoids sin and encourages righteousness. Thus the Lord said: "I give unto you Hyrum smith to be a patriarch unto you, to hold the sealing blessings of my church, even the Holy Spirit of promise, whereby ye are sealed up unto the day of redemption, that ye may not fall notwithstanding the hour of temptation that may come upon you." (D. & C. 124:124.)

But suppose such persons become disaffected and the spirit of repentance leaves them - which is a seldom and almost unheard of eventuality - still, what them? The answer is - and the revelations and teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith so recite! - they must then pay the penalty of their own sins, for the blood of Christ will not cleanse them. Or if they commit murder or adultery, they lose their promised inheritance because these sins are exempt from the sealing promises. Or if they commit the unpardonable sin, they become sons of perdition.

As we have already seen, making one's calling and election sure comes after and grows out of celestial marriage. Eternal life does not and cannot exist for a man or a woman alone, because in its very nature it consists of the continuation of the family unit in eternity. Thus the revelation on marriage speaks both of celestial marriage (in which the conditional promises of eternal life are given) and of making one's calling and election sure (in which the unconditional promise of eternal life are given) in one and the same sentence - which sentence also says that those who commit sins (except "Murder whereby to shed innocent blood") after being sealed up unto eternal life shall still gain exaltation. This is the language: "Then" - that i, after their calling and election has been made sure - "shall it be written in the Lamb's Book of Life. that he shall commit no murder whereby to shed innocent blood, and if ye abide in my covenant, and commit no murder whereby to shed innocent blood, it shall be done unto them in all things whatsoever my servant hath put upon them, in time, and through all eternity; and shall be of full force when they are our of the world; and they shall pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to their exaltation and glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads, which glory shall be a fullness and a continuation of the seeds forever and ever. Then shall they be gods," because they have eternal life. (D. & C. 132:19-20.)

Then the revelation speaks of that obedience out of which eternal life grows, and still speaking both of celestial marriage and of making one's calling and election sure: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, if a man marry a wife according to my word, and they are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, according to mine appointment" - that is, if they are both married and have their calling and election made sure - "And he or she shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder wherein they shed innocent blood, yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter into their exaltation: but they shall be destroyed in the flesh, and shall be delivered unto the buffetings of Satan unto the day of redemption, saith the Lord God." (D. & C. 132:26.)

This matter of being destroyed in the flesh and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until the day of redemption is the doctrine of blood atonement, whereunder those here involved are not cleansed by the blood of Christ, but must pay the penalty for their own sins. This principle can only operate in a day, as that of Moses, when there is no separation of Church and state and when the Church has power to take life. Of conditions in our day. and as to how this law applies to us, President Joseph Fielding Smith says: "We cannot destroy men in the flesh, because we do not control the lives of men and do not have power to pass sentences upon them which involve capital punishment. In the days when there was a theocracy on the earth, then this decree was enforced. What the Lord will do in lieu of this, because we cannot destroy in the flesh, I am unable to say, but it will have to be made up in some other way." (Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 2, p. 97.)

As to the shedding of innocent blood, within the meaning of this revelation, the Lord says: "The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, which shall not be forgiven in the world nor out of the world, is in that ye commit murder wherein ye shed innocent blood, and assent unto my death, after ye have received my new and everlasting covenant, saith the Lord God; and he that abideth not this law can in nowise enter into my glory, but shall be damned, saith the Lord." (D. & C. 132:27.) That is, the innocent blood is that of Christ; and those who commit blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, which is the unpardonable sin (Matt. 12:31-32), thereby "crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." (Heb. 6:6.) They are, in other words, people who would have crucified Christ, having the while a perfect knowledge that he was the Son of God.

Following the pattern set by the Lord of speaking both of celestial marriage and of being sealed up unto eternal life in the same context, Joseph Smith said: "Putting my hand on the knee of william Clayton, I said: Your life is hid with Christ in God, and so are many others. Nothing but the unpardonable sin can prevent you from inheriting eternal life for you are sealed up by the power of the priesthood unto eternal life, having taken the step necessary for that purpose. Except a man and his wife enter into an everlasting covenant and be married for eternity, while in this probation, by the power and authority of the Holy Priesthood, they will cease to increase when they die; that is, they will not have any children after the resurrection. But those who are married by the power and authority of the priesthood in this life, and continue without committing sin against the Holy Ghost, will continue to increase and have children in the celestial glory. The unpardonable sin is to shed innocent blood, or be accessory thereto. All other sins will be visited with judgment in the flesh, and the spirit being delivered to the buffetings of Satan until the day of the Lord Jesus." (History of the Church, vol. 5, pp. 391-392.)

Perhaps this matter of being "visited with judgment in the flesh" - whatever it may be in an individual case - is the Lord's way of handling things when it is not possible for a person to be "destroyed in the flesh." (D. & C. 132:26.) In this connection, also - and having in mind that the sealing power was given by Elijah to Peter, James, and John on the Mount of Transfiguration (Teachings, p. 158), and again to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery in the Kirtland Temple (D. & C. 110:13-16) - we should note these words of the Prophet: "This spirit of Elijah was manifest in the days of the Apostles, in delivering certain ones to the buffetings of Satan, that they might be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. They were sealed by the spirit of Elijah unto the damnation of hell until the day of Lord, or revelation of Jesus Christ."

(Teachings, p. 338.) As to the fact that the sealing power cannot seal a man up so as to keep him from being a son of perdition, if that is the course he chooses to follow, the Prophet says: "The doctrine that the Presbyterians and Methodists have quarreled so much about - once in grace, always in grace, or falling away from grace, I will say a word about. They are both wrong. Truth takes a road between them both, for while the Presbyterians says: 'Once in grace, you cannot fall;' the Methodist says: 'You can have grace today, fall from it tomorrow, next day have grace again; and so follow on, changing continually.' But the doctrine of the scriptures and the spirit of Elijah would show them both false, and take a road between them both; for, according to the scripture, if men have received the good word of God, and tasted of the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, it is impossible to renew them again, seeing they have crucified the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame; so there is a possibility of falling away; you could not be renewed again, and the power of Elijah cannot seal against this sin, for this is a reserve made in the seals and power of the priesthood." (Teachings, pp. 338-339.) Thus, even though a man's calling and election has been made sure, if he then commits blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, he becomes a son of perdition, because when he was sealed up unto eternal life it was with a reservation. the sealing was not to apply in the case of the unpardonable sin.
As to the fact that the sealing power cannot seal a man up unto eternal life if he thereafter commits murder and thereby sheds innocent blood (not in this case the blood of Christ, but the blood of any person slain unlawfully and with malice) the Prophet says: "A murderer, for instance, one that sheds innocent blood, cannot have forgiveness. David sought repentance at the hand of God carefully with tears, for the murder of uriah; but he could only get it through hell; he got a promise that his soul should not be left in hell. "Although David was a king, he never did obtain the spirit and power of Elijah and the fullness of the priesthood; and the priesthood that he received, and the throne and kingdom of David is to be taken from him and given to another by the name of David in the last days, raised up out of his lineage." (Teachings, p. 339.) Thus, even though a man's calling and election has been made sure, if he then commits murder, all of the promises are of no effect, and he goes to a telestial kingdom (Rev. 21:*; D. & C. 76:103), because when he was sealed up unto eternal life, it was with a reservation. The sealing was not to apply in the case of murder.
And as to the fact that the sealing power cannot seal a man up unto eternal life if he thereafter commits adultery, the Prophet says: "If a man commit adultery, he cannot receive the celestial kingdom of God. Even if he is saved in any kingdom, it cannot be the celestial kingdom." (History of the Church, vol. 6, p. 81.) Thus, even though a man's calling and election has been sure, if he then commits adultery, all of the promises are of no effect, and he goes to a telestial kingdom, because when he was sealed up unto eternal life, it was with a reservation. The sealing was not to apply in the case of subsequent adultery. In other cases, through repentance, there is forgiveness for this sin which is second only to murder in the category of personal sins. (1 Cor. 6:9-11; 3 Ne. 30; d. & c. 42:24-26.)

Who has had their calling and election made sure and how can they be identified?

In the providence of the Lord, there is no question that many of the saints of all ages and dispensations have attained this high status, a fact which can be known in individual cases by applying the principles above set forth to the individual situation.
In this present discussion we have named Isaiah, Ezekiel, John the revelator, Paul, William Clayton and "many others" of the Prophet's day, the Ephesian Saints, and "all the saints who held communion with the general assembly and Church of the Firstborn." (Teachings, p. 151.)

For our day, the Prophet Joseph Smith is the classical example of one who was sealed up unto eternal life, Of him the revelation states: "I am the Lord thy God, and will be with thee even unto the end of the world, and through all eternity; for verily I seal upon you your exaltation, and prepare a throne for you in the kingdom of my Father, with Abraham your father." (D. & C. 132:49.) Obviously if it applies to Isaiah and Ezekiel, it applies also to Jeremiah, Samuel, Moses, Joshua and all of the prophets; if it applies to Joseph Smith and william Clayton and "many others" in the Prophet's day, certainly a great many of the later worthies of this dispensation are also included; and if a sizeable number of the Ephesian Saints were so classified, then surely the same applies to like groups of the saints in Rome, Corinth, Galatia, Philippi, Colosse, Thessalonica, and in all the places where the Meridian Saints were congregated, If Paul and John are part of the group, so also are Peter, james, Titus, Jude, Matthew, the other apostles, and many of the preachers of righteousness of the ancient day.
And can there be any question that the same was true among the Nephites? And Jaredites? That it included all of the City of Zion and those who were thereafter caught up to heaven to dwell with Enoch and his translated brethren? And if this glorious principle has always operated in days of past, is it beyond reason that it is still sealing blessings upon the heads of the Latter-day Saints? Verily, such is the case now - a situation which we anticipate shall be increasingly so as the Millennium approaches, during which period the sealing power and all its attendant blessings will abound on every side.
As with all the blessings of the gospel, the glorious reality of having one's calling and election made sure is within the power of the faithful saints to obtain, including both men and women.

How many of the saints have or shall make their calling and election sure?
There is no more an answer to this question that there was to the query put to Jesus: "Lord, are there few that be saved?" to which he answered: "Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able" (Luke 13:23-24), by which he meant to teach that though the total saved will be many they are few as compared to the masses of men. And so it is among the saints with reference to being sealed up unto eternal life: though many shall so obtain, they will be few compared to the total population of the Church.
It is in this sense that Jesus used the enigmatic expression, "Many are called, but few are chosen." (Matt. 22:14.) Called to what? Chosen for what? Called into the Church, called to the holy priesthood, called to receive all the blessings of the gospel, including the crowing blessings of eternal life. Chosen to inherit the blessings offered through the gospel and the priesthood; chosen for eternal life and exaltation. Called to the Church, but chosen to be sealed up unto eternal life and to have one's calling and election made sure.
"How many will be able to abide a celestial law, and go through and receive their exaltation," the Prophet said, "I am unable to say, as many are called, but few are chosen." (Teachings, p. 331.)
And from the Lord himself we have these words: "There are many who have been ordained among you, whom I have called but few of them are chosen. They who are not chosen have sinned a very grievous sin, in that they are walking in darkness at noon-day.
... If you keep not my commandments, the love of the Father shall not continue with you, therefore you shall walk in darkness." (D. & C. 95:5-6, 12.) Also: "There has been a day of calling, but the time has come for a day of choosing; and let those be chosen that are worthy. And it shall be manifest unto my servant, by the voice of the Spirit, those that are chosen; and they shall be sanctified." (105:35-36.)

And, finally, as to reason why so few of the saints shall be saved, we have this great and inspired utterance of the Prophet: "Behold, there are many called, but few are chosen. And why are they not chosen? Because their hearts are set so much upon the things of this world, and aspire to the honors of men, that they do not learn this one lesson - That the rights of the priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven, and that the powers of heaven cannot be controlled nor handled only upon the principles of righteousness. That they may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, or vain ambition, or to exercise control or dominion or compulsion upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold, the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn, Amen to the priesthood or the authority of that man. Behold, ere he is aware, he is left unto himself, to kick against the pricks, to persecute the saints, and to fight against God. We have learned by sad experience that it is the nature and disposition of almost all men, as soon as they get a little authority, as they suppose, they will immediately begin to exercise unrighteous dominion. Hence many are called, but few are chosen." (D. & C. 121:35-40.)
And now to return to Peter's pleading that the saints make their calling and election sure.
1-19. "There are three grand secrets lying in this chapter," the Prophet said, "which no man can dig out, unless by the light of revelation, and which unlock the whole chapter, as the things that are written are only hints of things which exist in the prophets mind, which are not written concerning eternal glory. I am going to take up this subject by virtue of the knowledge of God in me, which I have received from heaven." (Teachings, p. 304.) And it is these teachings of Joseph Smith which we have essayed to put forth in the foregoing discussion.
These are the three secrets: "1st key: Knowledge is the power of salvation. 2nd key: Make your calling and election sure: 3rd key: It is one thing to be on the mount and hear the excellent voice, etc., and another to hear the voice declare to you, You have a part and lot in that kingdom." (Teachings p. 306.)
1. Like precious faith with us] Peter is writing to those who believe as he and the other apostles believe. The doctrines he is about to present are beyond the comprehension of uninspired men; they can only be understood by the power of the Spirit which the saints receive at baptism.
2-10. The Prophet taught: "It is not wisdom that we should have all knowledge at once presented before us; but that we should have a little at a time; then we can comprehend it....Add to your faith knowledge, etc. The principle of knowledge is the principle of salvation. This principle can be comprehended by the faithful and diligent; and every one that does not obtain knowledge sufficient to be saved will be condemned. The principle of salvation is given us through the knowledge of Jesus Christ." (Teachings, p. 297.)
Also: "contend earnestly for the like precious faith with the Apostle Peter, 'and add to your faith virtue,' knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity; 'for if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.' Another point, after having all these qualifications, he lays this injunction upon the people 'to make your calling and election sure.' He is emphatic upon this subject - after adding all this virtue, knowledge, etc., 'Make your calling and election sure.' What is the secret - the starting point? 'According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness.' How did he obtain all things? Through the knowledge of him who hath called him. There could not anything be given, pertaining to life an godliness, withou8t knowledge. Woe! woe! woe to Christendom! - especially the divines and priests if this be true.

"Salvation is for a man to be saved from all his enemies; for until a man can triumph over death, he is not saved. A knowledge of the priesthood alone will do this." (Teachings, p. 305.)
3. All things that pertain unto life and godliness] The true saints have every doctrine, law, key, and power needed to gain eternal life and become like God.
Called us to glory and virtue] Called us to that eternal life which none but the clean can inherit, for "no unclean thing can enter into his kingdom." (3 Ne. 27:19.)
4. Exceeding great and precious promises] Promises of eternal life, which is "the greatest of all the gifts of God." (D. & C. 14:7.)
Partakers of the divine nature] Become as God is, enjoying to the full every characteristic, perfection, and attribute which he possesses and which dwell in him independently.
5-19. Joseph Smith said: "Now, there is some grand secret here, and keys to unlock the subject. Notwithstanding the apostle exhorts them to add to their faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, etc., yet he exhorts them to make their calling and election sure. And though they had heard an audible voice from heaven bearing testimony that Jesus was the Son of god; yet he says we have a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed as unto a light shining in a dark place. Now, wherein could they have a more sure word of prophecy that to hear the voice of God saying, this is my beloved Son.
"Now for the secret and grand key. Though they might here the voice of God and know that Jesus was the Son of God, this would be no evidence that their election and calling was made sure, that they had part with Christ, and were joint-heirs with him. They then would want that more sure word of prophecy, that they were sealed in the heavens and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God. Then, having this promise sealed unto them, it was an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast. Though the thunders might roll and lightnings flash, and earthquakes bellow, and war gather thick around, yet this hope and knowledge would support the soul in every hour of trial, trouble and tribulation. Then knowledge through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is the grand key that unlocks the glories and mysteries of the kingdom of heaven.
"Compare this principle once with Christendom at the present day, and were are they, with all their boasted religion, piety and sacredness while at the same time they are crying out against prophets, apostles, angels, revelations, prophesying and visions, etc. Why, they are just ripening for the damnation of hell. They will be damned, for they reject the most glorious principle of the Gospel of Jesus Christ and treat with disdain and trample under foot the key that unlocks the heavens and puts in our possession the glories of the celestial world. Yes, I say, such will be damned, with all their professed godliness. Then I would exhort you to go on and continue to call upon God until you make your calling and election sure for yourselves, by obtaining this more sure word of prophecy, and wait patiently for the promise until you obtain it." (Teachings, pp. 298-299.)
5-7. The attributes of godliness here listed are the ones which qualify the Lord's ministers for effective service on his errand, and all his saints for eternal life in his kingdom. Salvation must be won, and to go where God is, we must be like him; and to be like him we must possess the character, perfections, and attributes which he possesses. "And faith, hope, charity and love, with an eye single to the glory of God, qualify him for the work. Remember faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence." (D. & C. 4:5-6.)
5. Faith] See Commentary I, pp. 523-525; Mormon doctrine, 2nd ed., pp. 261-267.
Virtue] Moral excellence and rectitude in every field, including personal chastity. To his saints the lord decrees: "Ye must practice virtue and holiness before me continually." (D. & C. 46:33.)

Knowledge] An understanding of and familiarity with gospel truth; a clear perception of eternal truth; enlightenment and learning about God and his laws. Thus, "A man is saved no faster than he gets knowledge" (Teachings, p.217), of God and his laws; and "It is impossible for a man to be saved in ignorance" (D. & C. 131:6), of Jesus Christ and the saving principles of the gospel. Accordingly, "the word of knowledge" (1 Cor. 12:8) is one of the gifts of the Spirit.
6. Temperance] See Commentary ii, pp. 482-484.
Patience] See Jas. 5:7-11.
Godliness] See 2 Tim. 2:14-26.
7. Brotherly kindness] "In their pursuit of godly graces the saints are exhorted, 'And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.' (Eph. 4:32; D. & C. 4:6; 121:42.) Kindness embraces an interest in another's welfare and a disposition to be helpful. The kind are tender, gracious, benevolent, well-disposed, and exhibit sympathy and humanness toward their fellow men." (Mormon doctrine, 2nd ed., pp. 413-414.)
Charity] See Commentary II, pp. 377-380.
8. None can comprehend the knowledge of God, of Christ, and of the gospel unless he himself possesses the attributes of godliness, for the knowledge of spiritual things comes only by revelation, and until a person gains godly attributes he cannot receive the Spirit from whom revelations comes.
9. Purged from his old sins] By baptism and the receipt of the gift of the Holy Ghost.
10. Those who keep the commandments shall be saved; they cannot fall; and every saint who walks continually in paths of truth and righteousness shall have his calling and election made sure.
11. Those saints who keep the commandments shall gain an inheritance in the highest heaven in the celestial kingdom.
13. I am in the tabernacle] 14. Shortly I must put off this tabernacle] Peter here recounts his experience with James and John on the Mount of Transfiguration when those chosen three were eyewitnesses of our Lord's transfiguration and when they heard the voice of the Father, and then says there is something even greater than this. "And what could be more sure? When he was transfigured on the mount, what could be more sure to them?" the Prophet asks. (Teachings, p. 303.) The answer is to gain the personal revelation that one is sealed up unto eternal life.
19. "The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life, by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood." (D. & C. 131:5.) "The anointing and sealing is to be called, elected and made sure." (Teachings, p. 323.) "Let us suppose a case," the Prophet says. "Suppose the great God who dwells in heaven should reveal himself to Father Cutler here, by the opening heavens, and tell him, I offer up a decree that whatsoever you seal on earth with your decree, I will seal it in heaven; you have the power then; can it be taken off? No. Then what you seal on earth, by the keys of Elijah, is sealed in heaven; and this is the power of Elijah, and this is the difference between the spirit and power of Elias and Elijah; for while the spirit of Elias is a forerunner, the power of elijah is sufficient to make our calling and election sure; and the same doctrine, where we are exhorted to go on to perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of laying on of hands, resurrection of the dead, etc.... Here is the doctrine of election that the world has quarreled so much about; but they do not know anything about it." (Teachings, p. 338.)
Until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts] Until the Second Coming of the Lord; until the Millennial day dawns; until the day when "the root and the offspring of David" who is "the bright and morning star" (Rev. 22:16) shall rein personally on earth and be the companion, confidant, and friend of those whose calling and election is sure and who are thus called forth as "kings and priests" to live and "reign on earth" (Rev. 5:10) with him a thousand years.

The Millennial Messiah

The Day of the Second Comforter

There is a divine outpouring of heavenly grace and power that exceeds anything else known to men or angels. There is a Spirit-conferred gift that is greater than anything else of which the human mind can conceive. There is a spiritual endowment so wondrous and great, so beyond comprehension and understanding, so divine and godlike in its nature, that it cannot be described in words. It can only be felt by the power of the Spirit. Those only who are the peers of the prophets and who mingle with seers on equal terms; those only who like Isaiah and Ezekiel and John and Paul have laid their all on the altar and have risen above every carnal desire; those only who are in harmony with the Lord and his Spirit and who keep his commandments as they are kept by the angels of God in heaven - they alone can receive this gift. It is called the Second comforter.

Our blessed Lord - alone with the Twelve in the upper room a few hours before he went to Gethsemane, were great gouts of blood would drop from every pore as he bore the sins of all men; and a few hours before, on the cross of Calvary, he would cry, "It is finished," and permit his spirit to leave the body - our blessed Lord gave his beloved friends this promise: "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you. Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: because I live, ye shall live also." Christ after his death will come to them. They will see him, and he will comfort them. Yea, they will both see him and feel the nail marks in his hands and in his feet and thrust their hands into his riven side. He will eat before them, and their sorrow will be turned into joy. And because of his glorious rising from the Arimathean's tomb, they too shall conquer death and break the shackles of the grave.

"At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you." They will be one with him as he is one with his Father. "He tat hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved by my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him." The promise is not theirs alone - the Twelve are but the pattern; all that they receive will come also to every faithful person who abides the law that entitles him to receive the same gifts and blessings. Jesus, after his death and resurrection, will manifest himself to all who have faith enough to rend the veil and see their Lord.

Jesus was then asked: "Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?" His reply: "If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." (John 14:18-23.) Not only will the Lord Jesus appear to the faithful, but he, in his goodness and grace, will also manifest the Father. Mortal man will see the Father and the Son. And that there will be no doubt as to the meaning of our Lord's words, it is written in our revelations: "John 14:23-The appearing of the Father and the Son, in that verse, is a personal appearance: and the idea that the Father and the Son dwell in a man's heart is an old sectarian notion, and is false." (D&C 130:3.)

There are, of course, two Comforters. The Holy Ghost is the Comforter offered the saints in connection with baptism. He is a revelator and a sanctifier; he is the Holy Spirit. The gift of the Holy Ghost is the right to the constant companionship of this member of the Godhead based on faithfulness. "Now what is this other Comforter?" the Prophet Joseph Smith asked. He answer: "It is no more nor less that the Lord Jesus Christ Himself; and this is the sum and substance of the whole matter; that when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him, or appear unto him from time to time, and even He will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him, and the Lord will teach him face to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of the Kingdom of God; and this is the state and place the ancient Saints arrived at when they had such glorious visions - Isaiah, Ezekiel, John upon the Isle of Patmos, St. Paul in the three heavens, and all the Saints who held communion with the general assembly and Church of the Firstborn." (Teachings, pp. 150-51.)

Those who receive the Second Comforter shall see the Lord. He will attend them, appear to them from time to time, and teach them face to face. It was so with the ancient Twelve after Jesus arose from the dead; it will be so with all who attain like spiritual heights, for God is no respecter of persons. Obedience to the same laws always brings the same blessings. Thus the divine word acclaims: "Verily, thus saith the Lord: It shall come to pass that every soul who forsaketh his sins and cometh unto me, and calleth on my name, and obeyeth my voice, and keepeth my commandments, shall see my face and know that I am." (D&C 93:1.)

Those who receive the Second Comforter see the visions of eternity and have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of the kingdom. " And to them will I reveal all mysteries, yea, all the hidden mysteries of my kingdom from days of old," saith the Lord, "and for ages to come, will I make known unto them the good pleasure of my will concerning all things pertaining to my kingdom. Yea, even the wonders of eternity shall they know, and things to come will I show them, even the things of many generations. and their wisdom shall be great, and their understanding reach to heaven; and before them the wisdom of the wise shall perish, and the understanding of the prudent shall come to naught. For by my Spirit will I enlighten them, and by my power will I make known unto them the secrets of my will - yea, even those things which eye has not seen, nor ear heard, nor yet entered into the heart of man." (D&C 76:7-10.) Among those who received the Second comforter are the three Nephites, whom we have been using as a pattern and type of what men will be like in the millennium. These three American apostles "were caught up into heaven, and saw and heard unspeakable things. And it was forbidden them that they should utter; neither was it given unto them power that they could utter the things which they saw an heard: and whether they were in the body of out of the body, they could not tell; for it did seem unto them like a transfiguration of them, that they were changed from this body of flesh into an immortal state, that they could behold the things of God." (3 Ne. 28:13-15.)

Now, having in mind these concepts about the Second Comforter, and knowing that all those who so obtain have their callings and elections made sure, let us catch the vision, if we can, of one of the great prophetic utterances of Jeremiah. "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord" - and we shall soon show that the days involved are millennial - "that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah." Hear it and mark it well: it will be a new covenant, and new and an everlasting covenant; it will be the fulness of the everlasting gospel, not in name only, but in fact and in deed, in active operation in the lives of men. It will be "not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they bake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord." When the Lord brought Israel out of Egypt he offered them the fulness of the gospel. Moses held the Melchizedek Priesthood, and his people could have lived the higher gospel law had they chosen to do so. But they broke not only the gospel covenant but also the Mosaic or lesser covenant, at least in large measure.

"But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people." There will be a day when latter-day Israel will serve the Lord with all their hearts and make themselves worthy of the fulness of his glory. "And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more." (Jer. 31:31-34.)

Joseph Smith tells us that Jeremiah's prophecy will be fulfilled during the Millennium. The Prophet speaks of making one's calling and election sure and of the sealing power whereby "we may be sealed up unto the day of redemption." Then he says: "This principle ought (in its proper place) to be taught, for God hath not revealed anything to Joseph, but what He will make known unto the Twelve, and even the least Saint may know all things as fast as he is able to bear them, for the day must come when no man need say to his neighbor, Know ye the Lord; for all shall know Him (who remain) from the least to the greatest." These are the very words of Jeremiah's prophecy; nd they will find their complete fulfillment among those "who remain," those who abide the day, those who gain and inheritance on the new earth when it receives its paradisiacal glory again. "How is this to be done?" the Prophet asks. How shall men come to know the Lord and understand all the hidden mysteries of his Kingdom without a teacher? His answer: "It is to be done by this sealing power, and the other Comforter spoken of, which will be manifest by revelation." (Teachings, p. 149.)

Men will know God in the millennial day because they see him. He will teach them face to face. They will know the mysteries of his kingdom because they are caught up to the third heaven, as was Paul. They will receive the Second Comforter. The millennial day is the day of the Second Comforter, and whereas but few have been blessed with this divine association in times past, great hosts will be so blessed in times to come.

What, then, will be the nature of worship during the Millennium? It will be pure and perfect, and through it men will become inheritors of eternal life. And in this connection, be it known that it is the privilege of the saints today to separate themselves from the world and to receive millennial blessings in their lives. and any person who today abides the laws that will be kept during the Millennium will receive, here and now, the spirit and blessings of the Millennium in his life, even though he is surrounded by a world of sin and evil. And so we say, in the language of Joseph Smith as he finished the record of the vision of the three degrees of glory: "Great and marvelous are the works of the Lord, and the mysteries of his kingdom which he showed unto us, which surpass all understanding in glory, and in might, and in dominion; Which he commanded us we should not write while we were yet in the Spirit, and are not lawful for man to utter; Neither is man capable to make them known, for they are only to be seen and understood by the power of the Holy Spirit, which God bestows on those who love him, and purify themselves before him; To whom he grants this privilege of seeing and knowing for themselves; That through the power and manifestation of the Spirit, while in the flesh, they may be able to bear his presence in the world of glory. And to God and the Lamb be glory, and honor, and dominion forever and ever. Amen." (D&C 76:114-119.)

THE DOCTRINE OF MAKING YOUR CALLING AND ELECTION SURE
(Lesson Notes)

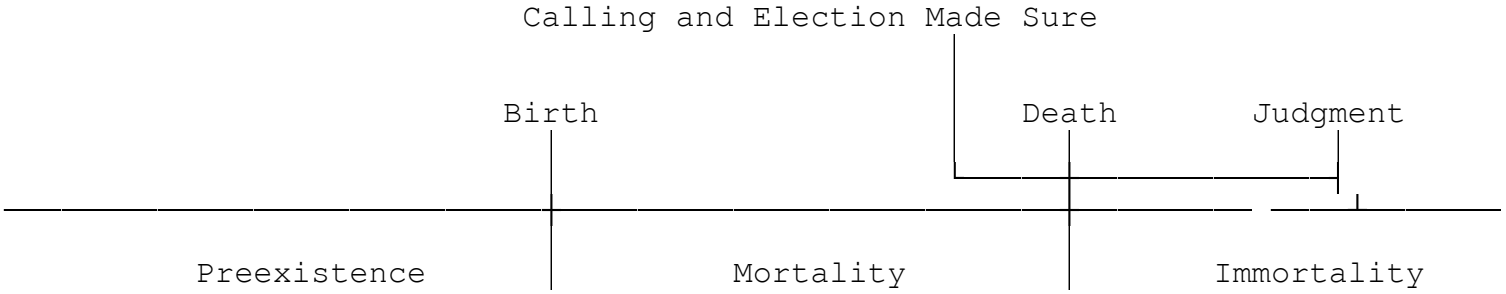
Scriptural reference

> Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things ye shall never fall:
> For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. (2 Peter 1:10-11.)

Definition

> "To have one's calling and election made sure is to be [1] sealed up unto eternal life; [2] it is to have the unconditional guarantee of exaltation in the highest heaven of the celestial world; [3] it is to receive the assurance of godhood; [4] its is, in effect, to have the day of judgment advanced, so that an inheritance of all glory and honor of the Father's kingdom is assured prior to the day when the faithful actually enter into the divine presence to sit with Christ in his throne, even as he is 'set down' with his 'Father in his throne.'" (Bruce R. McConkie, Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, 3:331.)



Two Ways to Make Your Calling and Election Sure

> By obtaining the more sure word of prophecy, through personal revelation and hearing the voice of God declare that you are sealed up to eternal life.
>
> Through the power of the priesthood, by receiving the fulness of the ordinances of the priesthood wherein the Prophet of God (or his designated representative) seals you up to eternal life with the Holy Spirit of Promise.
>
> The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life, by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, though the power of the priesthood. (D&C 131:5.)

The More Sure Word of Prophecy

We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your heart. (2 Peter 1:19.)

"There are three grand keys to unlock the whole [first] chapter [of 2 Peter]. First, what is [the] knowledge of God. Second, what is it to make your calling and election sure. Third and last is how to make our calling and election sure. Ans[wer], it is to obtain a promise from God for myself that I have eternal life, that is the more sure word of prophecy." (WJS, 209.)

"Now, there is some grand secret here [in first chapter of 2 Peter], and keys to unlock the subject. Notwithstanding the apostle exhorts them to add to their faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, etc., yet he exhorts them to make their calling and election sure. And through they heard an audible voice from heaven bearing testimony that Jesus was the Son of God, yet he says we have a more sure word of prophecy. . . . Now for the secret and grand key. Though they might hear the voice of God and know that Jesus was the Son of God, this is no evidence that their calling and election was made sure, that they were sealed in the heavens and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God." (TPJS, 208.)

"After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and election made sure, and then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter, which he Lord hath promised the Saints. . . ." (TPJS, 150.)

"[What then is] making your calling and election sure. [It is to hear] the voice Jesus saying, My beloved thou shalt have eternal life. Brethren never cease struggling until you have this evidence. Take heed both before and after obtaining this more sure word of prophecy." (WJS, 208.)

Examples of the More Sure Word of Prophecy

Enos (Enos 5, 27.)

Alma (Mosiah 26:20.)

Nephite Twelve (3 Nephi 28:1-3.)

Moroni (Ether 12:37.)

Paul (2 Timothy 4:6-8.)

Joseph Smith (D&C 132:49.)

Being Sealed up to Eternal Life by the Power of the Priesthood:

In whom ye also trusted, that after ye heard the word of truth, the Gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with the Holy Spirit of Promise
Which is the ernest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of His glory, that we may be sealed up unto the day of redemption. (Ephesians 1:13-14.)

Joseph Smith holds the sealing keys of the priesthood, he is the one "who is anointed both as well for time and for all eternity, and that too most holy, by revelation and commandment, through the medium of mine anointed, whom I have appointed on the earth to hold this power." (D&C 132:9.)

Hyrum Smith receives sealing blessings of the priesthood, "even the Holy Spirit of Promise, whereby ye are sealed up unto the day of redemption, that ye may not fall notwithstanding the hour of temptation may come upon you." (D&C 124:124.)

". . . Joseph Smith used many times the phrase 'Holy Spirit of promise' [in] reference to the concept of 'making your calling and election sure' or 'being sealed up to eternal life.' Thus, when the Holy Spirit (who was the one appointed by the Father to give final sanctioning authority to all priesthood blessings) receives authori-zation from Jesus Christ to unmistakably 'seal' the promise of eternal life on a worthy individual, he is placing the seals of the highest gospel ordinances in his office as Holy Spirit of Promise. The Prophet [Joseph Smith] expressed this concept in his poetic rendition of D&C 76 (vs. 53):

For these overcome, by their faith and their works, Being tried in their life-time, as purified gold, And seal'd by the [Holy] Spirit of promise, to life [eternal]By men called of God, as was Aaron of old. (Times and Seasons, 4 [Feb. 1843]: 84.) (WJS, 26.)

". . .the servants of God are sealed in their foreheads which signifies sealing the blessing upon their heads, meaning the everlasting covenant, thereby making their calling and election sure." (TPJS, 231.)

"The anointing and sealing is to be called, elected and made sure." (TPJS, 323.) President Spencer W. Kimball modified this statement as follows: "The anointing and sealing is to be called, elected, and the election made sure." (Ensign [May 1978]: 48.)

The ordinances of the Priesthood lead to being sealed up to eternal life.

And this greater priesthood administereth the gospel and holdeth the keys of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God.

Therefore, in the ordinances thereof, the power of godliness is manifest.

And without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest in the flesh;

For without this no man can see the face of God and live, even the Father, and live. (D&C 84:19-22.)

The power and authority of the higher, or Melchizedek Priesthood, is to hold the keys of all spiritual blessings of the church ---

To have the privilege of receiving the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, to have the heavens opened unto them, to commune with the general assembly and the Church of the Firstborn, and to enjoy the communion and presence of God the Father, and Jesus the mediator of the new covenant. (D&C 107:18-19.)

Baptism: Cleanse us from our own sins; take upon us the name of Jesus Christ; become his sons and daughters. (Romans 5:1-2; Titus 3:5; 2 Nephi 31:17; D&C 19:31; 20:30; 39:6; 68: 27; 76:52.)

Confirmation: Receive the Holy Ghost; membership in the Church of Jesus Christ. (Alma 13:11-12; Moroni 6:4; D&C 20:41; 33:15; 39:6; 84:34; 103:17.)

Melchizedek Priesthood ordination: Man becomes a servant of the Lord -- threefold responsibility: missionary work; perfect the Saints; and redeem the dead. (Ezekiel 3:17-21; Romans 6:22; D&C 11:30; 43:25; 84:31-39; 93:46.)

Washing: Man to become clean from the blood and sins of this generation; woman pronounced clean every whit as long as she remains faithful. (Ezekiel 3:17-12; D&C 124:37, 39.)

Anointing: Man to become a king and a priest unto the Most High God; woman to become a queen and priestess to her husband. (Acts 10:38; 1 John 2:20, 27; D&C 76:56-57.)

Garment and New Name: Men and women receive the Garment of the Holy Priesthood and a new name. (Genesis 3:21; 2 Corinthians 4:10; Galatians 6:17; Ephesians 6:16; Revelations 2:17; D&C 27:17; 130:10-11.)

Endowment: To receive instructions, enter into certain covenants; clothed in the robes of the priesthood; obtain the keys of the priesthood; participate in the true order of prayer; learn how to approach God and be recognized. (Mark 11:25; Ephesians 6:13-18; 1 Timothy 2:-9; D&C 27:15-18; 38:32; 43:16; 105:11-12; 124:34,95,9 7.)

Sealing in Marriage: Woman sealed to a man; man establishes his claim to a wife; man receives the keys of his kingdom; couple charged to multiply and replenish the earth; both promised the first resurrection, but only if faithful. (Genesis 2:24; 1 Corinthians 11:11; Hebrews 13:4; D&C 131:1-4; 132:19-120, 26-27.)

Washing of Feet: Man cleansed from the blood and sins of this generation and pronounced clean every whit. (Ezekiel 3:17-21; John 13:4-10; Acts 20:25-27; 2 Nephi 9:44; Jacob 1:19; D&C 88:138-141.)

Second Anointing: Man ordained a king and a priest and woman a queen and a priestess; both receive the fulness of the priesthood; both sealed up to eternal life with the Holy Spirit of Promise; become a son or daughter of God; entrance into the Church of the First Born. (2 Peter 1:10; 1 John 2:20, 25-27; Revelations 1:6; 5:10; D&C 76:56-57; 124:28, 124; 132:19-20.)

Washing and Anointing for Burial: Wife establishes her claim on her husband; prepares him for burial. The couple are now one flesh and heirs together of the grace of eternal life. (Genesis 2:24; Luke 7:36-39; John 12:1-7; Ephesians 5:31; 1 Peter 3;7.)

The More Sure Word of Prophecy and the ordinances of the priesthood.

Although a man may obtain the More Sure Word of Prophecy, he stills need to receive all of the ordinances of the priesthood, in order to receive the fulness of the priesthood and to establish his kingdom in the eternities.

Example of a man receiving not only the More Sure Word of Prophecy, but also being sealed up to eternal life by the power of the priesthood and the seal of the Holy Spirit of Promise --- Heber C. Kimball:

Revelation to Heber C. Kimball, dated 6 April 1839: ". . . thy name is written in heaven, no more to be blotted out." That is, Elder Kimball was assured eternal life in the Celestial kingdom, receiving the More Sure Word of Prophecy. (O.F. Whitney, Life of Heber C. Kimball, p. 241.)

Heber C. Kimball washed, anointed and endowed on 4 May 1842. (History of the Church, 5:1-2.)

Heber C. Kimball and Vilate Kimball were sealed as husband and wife in Spring of 1842. (Whitney, Kimball, p. 325.)

Heber C. Kimball and Vilate Kimball received the fulness of the priesthood ordinances on 20 January 1844. (Wilford Woodruff Journal, 20 Jan. 1844, CA.)

Vilate Kimball washed and anointed feet Heber C. Kimball on 1 April 1844. (Heber C. Kimball Journal, 1 April 1844, CA.)

Conclusion

"I know it is possible for men to so live that they may hear his voice and know his words and to receive 'the Holy Spirit of Promise' while here in mortality is possible. ". . . I. . . exhort you to go on and continue to call upon God until (by the more sure word of prophecy) you make your calling and election sure for yourselves." (Marion G. Romney, Improvement Era, [December 1965]: 1116.)

"I should think that all faithful Later-day saints would want that more sure word of prophecy, that they are sealed in the heavens and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God. . . . And I bear further witness that such person who, having come this far, will follow the Prophet's admonition to 'continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God,' may obtain the more sure word of prophecy. That the Lord will bless all of us priesthood bearers that we will so understand these great truths, that in the end we shall, by making our calling and election sure, enjoy the full light of Christ, I humbly pray." (Marion G. Romney, Ensign, [May 1977]: 45.)

"Then I would exhort you to go on and continue to call upon God until you make your calling and election sure for yourselves, by obtaining this more sure word of prophecy, and wait patiently for the promise [of eternal life] until you obtain it." (TPJS, 299.)

MAKING OUR CALLING AND ELECTION SURE.

Those who press forward in righteousness, living by every word of revealed truth, have power to make their calling and election sure. they receive the more sure word of prophecy and knowing by revelation and the authority of the priesthood that they are sealed up unto eternal life. They are sealed up against all manner of sin and blasphemy except the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost and the shedding of innocent blood. But the mere fact of being married fro time and eternity in the temple, standing alone, does not give them this guarantee. blessings pronounced upon couples in connection with celestial marriage are conditioned upon the subsequent faithfulness of the participating parties. [Also, read D&C 131:5-6; 132:7,18-19,26.] Peter tells how the saints may make their calling and election sure in these words: "Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of god, and of Jesus our Lord, According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. "And beside this, giving all diligence, add to you faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; And to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; And to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity.
"For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.

"Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ....
"We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts." (Smith, op. cit., pp. 149-151, 298, 305; 2 Pet. 1:2-19; eph. 1:13-14; John 14:12-27; d. & c. 88:4; 124:124; 130:3; 131:5; 132:19-27, 49; 3 Ne 28:10.)

CHAPTER XX.

Salvation Through Knowledge
p. 388-389

It is not wisdom that we should have all knowledge at once presented before us; but that we should have al little at a time; then we can comprehend it. President Smith then read the 2nd Epistle of Peter, 1st chapter, 16th to the last verses, and dwelt upon the 19th verse with some remarks.

Add to your faith Knowledge, &c. The principle of knowledge is the principle of salvation. This principle can be comprehended by the faithful and diligent: and every one that does not obtain knowledge sufficient to be saved will be condemed. [Calling and Election sure. Priesthood or Christ, Holy Ghost, Father and self.....] The principle of salvation is given us through the knowledge of Jesus Christ.
Salvation is nothing more nor less than to triumph over all our enemies and put them under our feet in this world, and then are we saved, of Jesus, who was to reign until He had put all enemies under His feet, and the last enemy was death.
[Overcome the world: Dream of David O'Mckay's, knowledge through second annointing and Holy Ghost. Why is this necessary in this world, because we can't have victory over death, we can't be resurrected to a glory, this is why it has to be done in this earth. Nothing is sealed in heaven, Even when the Father took Mary the Mother of Jesus his Son to wive he descended to be sealed on earth, because there is no sealing or giving in marriage in heaven...]
Perhaps there are principles here that few men have thought of. No person can have this salvation except through a tabernacle.
Now, in this world, mankind are naturally selfish, ambitious and striving to excell one above another; yet some are willing to build up others as well as themselves. So in the other world there are a varity of spirits. Some seek to excel. And this was the case with Lucifer when he fell. He sought for things which were unlawful. Hence he was sent down, and it is said he drew many away with him; and the greatness of his punishment is that he shall not have a tabernacle. This is his punishment. So the devil, thinking to thwart the decree of God, by going up and down in the earth, seeking whom he may destroy--any person that he can find that will yield to him, he will bind him, and take possession of the body and reign there, glorying in it mightily, not caring that he had got merely a stolen body; and by-and-by some one having authority will come along and cast him out and restore the tabernacle to its rightful owner. The devil steals a tabernacle because he has not one of his own: but if he steals one, he is always liable to be turned out of doors. Now, there is some grand secret here, and keys to unlock the subject. Notwithstanding the apostle exhorts them to add to their faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, &c., yet he exhorts them to make their calling and election sure. And though they had heard and audible voice from heaven bearing testimony that Jesus was the Son of God, yet he says we have a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed as unto a light shining in a dark place. Now, wherein could they have a more sure word of prophecy than to hear the voice of God saying, This is my beloved Son, &c. Now for the secret and grand key. Though they might hear the voice of God and know that Jesus was the Son of God, this would be no evidence that their election and calling was made sure, that they had a part with Christ, and were joint heirs with Him. They then would want that more sure word of prophecy, that they were sealed in the heavens and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God. Then, having this promise sealed unto them, it was an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast. Though the thunders might roll and lightnings flash, and earthquakes bellow, and war gather thick around, yet this hope and knowledge would support the soul in every hour and trial, trouble and tribulation. Then knowledge through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is the grand key that unlocks the glories and mysteries of the kingdom of heaven.

Calling and Election to be Made Sure
p. 402-403

Contend earnestly for the like precious faith and the Apostle Peter, "and add to your faith virtue," knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity; "for if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." Another point, after having all these qualifications, he lays this injunction upon the people "to make your calling and election sure." He is emphatic upon this subject--after adding all this virtue knowledge, &c., "Make your calling and election sure." What is the secret--the starting point? "According as His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness." How did he obtain all things? Through the knowledge of Him who hath called him. there could not anything be given, pertaining to life and godliness, without knowledge. Woe! woe! woe to Christendom!--especially the divines and priests if this be true. Salvation is for a man to be saved from all his enemies; for until a man can triumph over death, he is not saved. [Dave: you need all the ordinances to be saved, you need to have your second anointing to be able to be resurrected and triumph over death, and this is a fulness of the priesthood, otherwise you have to lie in your grave until you get this because there is nothing sealed in heaven.....] A knowledge of the priesthood alone will do this..... [A fulness of the priesthood, a knowledge of hearing the than you shall come forth in the morning of the first or next resurrection clothed in.....] The spirits in the eternal world are like the spirits in this world. When those have come into this world and received tabernacles, then died and again have risen and received glorified bodies, they will have an ascendancy over the spirits who have received no bodies, or kept not their first estate, like the devil. The punishment of the devil was that he should not have a habitation like men. The devil's retaliation is, he comes into this world, binds up men's bodies, and occupies them himself. When the authorities come along, they eject him from a stolen habitation.

The design of the great God in sending us into this world, and organizing us to prepare us for the eternal worlds, I shall keep in my own bosom at present. We have no claim in our eternal compact, in relation to eternal things, unless our actions and contracts and all things tend to this end. [D&C 132:7, 18, 19, 26] But after all this, you have got to make your calling and election sure. If this injunction would lie largely on to whom it was spoken, how much more those of the present generation!
1st key: Knowledge is the power of salvation. [Priesthood ordinances ie baptism by water, endowments, anointings, sealings????, the priesthood???] 2nd key: Make your calling and election sure. [Holy Ghost and Priesthood. see Abraham facsimile] 3rd key: It is one thing to be on the mount and hear the excellent voice. &c., &c., and another to hear the voice declare to you, You have a part and lot in that kingdom. CALLING AND ELECTION MADE SURE

Another doctrine that has to do with the Fulness of the priesthood is that, by faithful obedience in daily living, after having received the laws and ordinances of the Priesthood by promise first in the temple, we are given instruction, agreeable to holy writ and modern prophets, that it is possible for us in this world to make our calling and election sure. We shouldn't suppose that in some vague inexplainable way that that will all be taken care of in the next world, and that we don't need to be concerned about it now. Consistent with the plan of eternal life as explained thoroughly by the Prophet Joseph Smith, the attaining of the magnificent objective should be the magnetic goal of every true Latter-day Saint, as the crowning achievement of his mortal life. He should fasten his mind upon it and nurture the hope of it within his bosom, as the most powerful motivating force of his whole soul.

Included in a discourse given by the prophet Joseph Smith, on may 12, 1844, (Documentary History of the Church, vol.6, pp. 363-7) are these striking statements:

> "The Savior has the words of eternal life. Nothing else can profit us... I advise all to go on to perfection, and search deeper and deeper into the mysteries of Godliness."

Then he immediately explains himself by giving the proper direction to tat search:

"A man can do nothing for himself unless God direct him in the right way; and the priesthood is revealed for that purpose... Oh! I beseech you to go forward, go forward and make your calling and election sure."

Second Peter 1: 10 reads: "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall:"
And in verse 19 he adds:
"We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts."

Joseph Smith's commenting on this first Chapter of II Peter says: (Joseph Smith's Teachings, pp. 298-301)

"Notwithstanding the apostle exhorts them to add to their faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance etc., yet he exhorts them to make their calling and election sure. And though they had heard an audible voice from heaven bearing testimony that Jesus was the Son of God, yet he says we have a more sure word of prophecy, 'whereunto ye do well that ye take heed as unto a light shining in a dark place.' Now, wherein could they have a more sure word of prophecy than to hear the voice of God saying, This is my beloved Son?
"Now for the secret and grand key. Though they might hear the voice of God and know that Jesus was the Son of God, this would be no evidence that their election and calling was made sure, that they had part with Christ and were joint heirs with Him. They then would want that more sure word of prophecy that they were sealed in the heavens and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God. Then, having this promise sealed unto them it was an anchor sure and steadfast. Through the thunders might roll, and lightnings flash, and earthquakes bellow, and war gather thick around, yet this hope and knowledge would support the soul in every hour of trial, trouble, and tribulation. Then knowledge through our Lord and savior Jesus Christ is the grand key that unlocks the glories and mysteries of the kingdom of heaven."

The Prophet adds, (p. 301, Teachings),

"The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the holy priesthood. It is impossible for a man to be saved in ignorance." [See also D&C 131:5-6.]

Accompanying a man's knowledge that his calling and election are made sure is a special and sacred privilege, as indicated again by the Prophet Joseph (pp. 150-151, Teachings):

"When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter, which the Lord hath promised the Saints, as is recorded in the testimony of St. John, in the 14th Chapter, from the 12th to the 27th verse.- Now what is this other Comforter? It is no more or less than the Lord Jesus Christ himself; and this is the sum and substance of the whole matter; that when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him, or appear unto him from time to time, and even He will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him, and the Lord will teach him face to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of the kingdom of God and this is the state and place the ancient Saints arrived at when they had such glorious visions-Isaiah, Ezekiel, John upon the Isle of Patmos, St. Paul in the three heavens, and all the Saints who held communion with the general assembly and Church of the Firstborn."

The knowledge that a man's calling and election had been made sure, to come by the more sure word of prophecy, then, was to be by revelation and the spirit of prophecy through the power of the Holy Priesthood, according to the words of Prophet Joseph Smith. Who but God possesses power sufficient to search completely a human soul? Who but the Prophet, endowed with the power of God and filled with the spirit of revelation and prophecy and holding all the keys of the Holy Priesthood, could discern the worthy and bestow such a mighty blessing? Yet the faithful Saints are promised this when they have been thoroughly proven, and have shown conclusively that they are "determined to serve Him at all hazards." (Teachings, p. 150) But until they have purified themselves, have perfect love and are sealed up to eternal life, they may fall. We live by the power inherent in the ordinances, within the limits of our repentance and faith, in hope only, until we have the final assurance that we are wholly cleansed and acceptable before Him. and if we should struggle and sacrifice and labor our whole lives through the still not be called by revelation and the spirit of prophecy in this world, we should now weary, or faint or lose hope until our final breath, for God will surely recognize and accept every righteous effort on our part. And each noble thought or word or deed that bears witness of the Savior will bring us closer to that eventual goal, which can be realized by us beyond the veil, with the necessary ordinances performed for us in a holy place prepared.

View of Conditions in the Present Dispensation

And now, let us take a quick look at the immediate situation in the dispensation of the fulness of Times. We, as young temple workers, have come so far along the way that we have now received by covenant the ordinances and keys of the Fulness of the Priesthood by promise, and that promise sealed upon us by authority, that through a life of continued diligence and faithfulness in God's Kingdom here on earth, we will one day be sealed up as actual kings and priests, queens and priestesses in the household of God, to inherit our exaltation-the highest blessings of the Celestial Kingdom-throughout all eternity, as indicated int eh Doctrine and Covenants 76:53-56. These sacred blessings are the things the Lord has said He has kept hid from the world, from the foundation of the world.

MAKING ONE'S CALLING AND ELECTION SURE

I. Objective of this Paper

In my opinion, the group of revelations found in the Doctrine and Covenants contains some of the most important information that has ever been revealed throughout the history of the world. In one of the shorter sections of the Doctrine and Covenants, section 131, there are two verses containing only forty-three words, that I feel carry a wealth of meaning; two verses that all too few people understand and appreciate; two verses that have a message of vital importance to every Latter-day Saint. These verses are verses five and six of Section 131 and read as follows"

> The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life, by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood. It is impossible for a man to be saved in ignorance.(1)

> The objective of this paper is to analyze, research, and bring together materials which will aid in the understanding and meaning of the above verses in the hope that with an increase of understanding and appreciation, the reader will have as one of his goals in life the desire to receive the more sure word of prophecy.

II. Importance of This Scripture

Dr. Sidney B. Sperry, of the religion faculty of the Brigham Young University, in his book, Doctrine and Covenants Compendium, says the following:

> In verses 5 and 6 [of section 131] the prophet reveals some things so important the EVERY LATTER-DAY SAINT should take them to heart.(2)

> Dr. Sperry then quotes verses 5 and 6 of the 131st section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

> The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life, by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood. It is impossible for a man to be saved in ignorance.

Dr. Sperry then goes on to Say:

> A proper understanding of this scripture will go far to convince one that it is ONE OF THE GREATEST PASSAGES IN ALL OF HOLY WRIT. Nor will it be hard to understand why the prophet thought Peter's writings to be the most sublime of all the ancient Apostles.(3)
>
> After discussing the principal found in the above quoted verses, Dr. Sperry concludes by saying:
>
> The prophet urged our people to understand the "Sure word of prophecy" and obtain it. Unfortunately, today most of us do not pay the spiritual price necessary to obtain the absolute assurance that we are sealed up unto eternal life. We are the losers, and we have no one to blame but ourselves.(4)
>
> Just what do these verses mean? Is there a way to "know" you are "sealed up unto eternal life?" Is it possible for a person to "know", even before death, that he will become exalted and become even as God? Do the Latter-day Saints have a teaching which is, in some respects, similar to many Christian denominations in which a person may reach a "saved" condition? Or is this Christian Doctrine a perversion of a correct principle? I feel that the answers to these questions is an emphatic "Yes." In my opinion, not only is it possible to know one is sealed up unto eternal life, but it is the duty and obligation (and should be the goal) of every Latter-day Saint.

III.A Doctrine that Should be Taught

I am of the opinion that this doctrine should be taught to the members of the Church much more than it is. I feel that many Church members believe that if they have been in the waters of baptism, been confirmed, and [receive their] temple ordiances that that's about all there is to [salvation] as long as they don't commit any great sin and still remain active in the Church. I feel that all too few members of the Church have any definite spiritual goals or objectives, such as becoming sanctified, or being sealed up unto eternal life. In face, how many members of the Church know anything about such doctrines? I feel that being "sealed up" should be the goal of every Latter-day Saint.

The Prophet Joseph Smith felt that the doctrine of election, or being sealed up unto eternal life, should be taught. He said:

> The Doctrine of Election. St. Paul exhorts us to make our calling and election sure. This is the sealing power spoken of by Paul in other places.
>
> The prophet then continues:
>
> This principle ought (in its proper place) to be taught, for God hath not revealed anything to Joseph, but what He will make known unto the Twelve, and even the least Saint may know all things as fast as he is able to bear them, for the day must come when no man need say to his neighbor, Know ye the Lord: for all shall know Him (who remain) from the least to the greatest. How is this to be done? It is to be done by this sealing power, and the other

> Comforter spoken of, which will be manifest by revelation. (Italics Added)(5)
>
> This statement by the prophet gives us three very important principles:

1.The doctrine of being "sealed up unto eternal life" should be taught, in its proper place.

2.The "least saint" within the Church can enjoy the same blessings and know "all things" as much as the Twelve Apostles, or General Authorities, or even the President and Prophet of teh Church as fast as he gains knowledge and prepares himself for these blessings.
3.That one being sealed up unto eternal life, or making ones calling and elections sure, gives this person, according to the will of the Lord, the right and priciledge of receiving the second comforter, which we will discuss later on.

Apparently, this promise of being sealed up is still with the saints today as well as in olden time, for I have read a patriarchal blessing in which a person was promised his "calling and election" would be made sure.

IV.Many Exhortations to Make One's Calling and Elections Sure

It seems that in the dispensation of the Meridian of Time, as well as in our own dispensation, the Church leaders have constantly encouraged and exhorted the saints to reach a point in their perfection that they could come to the knowledge that they were sealed up unto eternal life.
We have already quoted the Prophet Joseph Smith, as well as Paul the Apostle, ehorting the saints to be sealed up unto eternal life. May I quote now Peter of old as he encouraged the saints to make their calling and election sure. This particular sermon by Peter seems to be the basis of most all sermons given in our dispensation.

[Dave:Here we see Peter who next to Christ will judge all the twelve tribes and other twelve apostles of nephites who is the President and holds the keys of the Miderian of time, and also Joseph Smith who holds the Keys of the fulness of the dispensation of time two these two great prophets all others will report to.... Both enfatically said that we Saints should make our calling and election sure as soon as we were able from the Prophets and twelve to the least Saint. This must mean something...]

After reading the saints of the blessings they enjoy he then encoruages them in the following way:

> 5. And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge;
> 6. And to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; ant to patience godliness;
> 7. And to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity.
> 8. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.
> 9. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was pruged from his old sins.

10. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall:... (Italics added)

[Dave: One question was asked to President Harold be Lee can one see the Savior without having this anointing (Second). Then answer is definetly, Joseph Smith did-God is no respecter of persons.... See if Abraham did... Samuel the Lamenite talked with the Lord in his youth. Paul saw the Lord on the road to tarses before he joined the true Church of Jesus Christ, Alma the Younger, The King of the Lamenites. Etc. Etc. What does this mean and how do the two link together. I did....]

Peter, continuing, made mention of teh fact that He had heard the voice of God while on the Mount of Transfiguration:

17. ...when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.
18. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him on the holy mount.
19. We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed,... (Italics added)(6)

TEACHINGS

PROPHET JOSEPH SMITH

COMPILED BY

JOSEPH FIELDING SMITH

The Second Comforter

The other Comforter spoken of is a subject of great interest, and perhaps understood by few of this generation. After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost, (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve Him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and his election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other comforter, which the Lord hath promised the Saints, as is recorded int he testimony of St. John, in the 14th Chapter, from the 12th to the 27th verses.

Note the 16, 17, 18, 21, 23, verses:

"16. And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever;
"17. Even the Spirit of Truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him; for he dwelleth within you, and shall be in you.

"18. I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you.
"21. He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.
"23. If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and will come unto him, and make our abode with him."

Now what is this other Comforter. It is no more nor less than the Lord Jesus Christ Himself; and this is the sum and substance of the whole matter: that when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him, or appear unto him from time to time, and even He will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him, and the Lord will teach him face to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of the Kingdom of God; and this is the state and place the ancient Saints arrived at when they had such glorious visions-Isaiah, Ezekiel, John upon the Isle of Patmos, St. Paul in the three heavens, and all the Saints who held communion with the general assembly and Church of the First Born. (TPJS P. 150-151.)

Calling and Election

Now, there is some grand secret here, and keys to unlock the subject. Notwithstanding the apostle exhorts them to add to their faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, etc., yet he exhorts them to make their calling and election sure. And though they had heard an audible voice from heaven bearing testimony that Jesus was the Son of God, yet he says we have a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed as unto a light shining in a dark place. Now, wherein could they have a more sure word of prophecy than to here the voice of God saying, This is my beloved Son.

Now for the secret and grand key. Though they might hear the voice of God and know that Jesus was the Son of God, this would be no evidence that their election and calling was made sure, that they had part with Christ, and were joint heirs with Him. They then would want that more sure word of prophecy, that they were sealed in the heavens and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God. Then, having this promise sealed unto them, it was an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast. Though the thunders might roll and lightnings flash, and earthquakes below, and war gather thick around, yet this hope and knowledge would support the soul in every hour of trial, trouble and tribulation. Then knowledge though the Lord an Savior Jesus Christ is the grand key that unlocks the glories and mysteries of the kingdom of heaven.

Compare this principle once with Christendom at the present day, and where are they, with all their boasted religion, piety and sacredness while at the same time they are crying out against prophets, apostles, angels, revelations, prophesying and visions, etc. Why, they are just ripening for the damnation of hell. They will be damned, for they reject the most glorious principle of the Gospel of Jesus Christ and treat with disdain and trample under foot the key that unlocks the heavens and puts in our possession the glories of the celestial world. Yes, I say, such will be damned, with all their professed godliness. Then I would exhort you to go on and continue to call upon God until you make your calling and election sure for yourselves, by obtaining this more sure word of prophecy, and wait patiently for the promise until you obtain it, etc. (TPJS P. 228-299.)

Calling and Election to be made Sure contend earnestly for the like precious faith with the Apostle Peter, "and add to your faith virtue," knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity; "for if these things ge in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." Another point, after having all these qualifications, he lays this injunction upon the people "to make your calling and election sure." He is emphatic upon this subject-after adding all this virtue, knowledge, etc., "Make your calling and election sure." What is the secret-the starting point? "According as His Divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness." How did he obtain all things? Through the knowledge of Him who hath called him. There could not anything be given, pertaining to life and godliness, without knowledge. Woe! woe! woe to Christendom!-especially the divines and priests if this be true.

Salvation is for a man to be saved from all his enemies; for until a man can triumph over death, he is not saved. A knowledge of the priesthood alone will do this. (TPJS P. 305.)

CALLING AND ELECTION MADE SURE-TWO SEALS-MORE SURE WORD OF PROPHECY

The "sealing power" had reference to the early Mormon practice of "electing" certain members of the Church to be candidates to the celestial kingdom by the power of the priesthood. Beqinning in 1831, High Priest were given the authority to seal up individuals that were identified to them by revelation (D&C 68:12, and Far West Record: Minutes of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1830-1844 Donald Q. Cannon and Lyndon W. Cook, eds, [Salt Lake City: Deseret Book Company, 1983], pp. 20-21: "Br. Joseph Smith Jr. said that the order of the Highpriesthood is that they have power given them to seal up the Saints unto eternal life. And said it was the privilege of every Elder present to be ordained to the Highpriesthood"). This practice was discontinued sometine in 1835 not resumed until the Nauvoo period, and then only by express permission and direction of the Prophet. The Mormon doctrine of election differend form that of other religious groups in that the Saints believed that a person could fall from grace (by sin) after achieving grace (D&C 20:32) even though he might have been elected or "sealed" up unto eternal life. Such wilful sin would result in being delivered over to the buffetings of Satan.

Note that the use of the word "seal" as it relates to the anointings mentioned above meant that the promises or ordiances were being bound by the holy priesthood, not that these brethren were being sealed up unto eternal lifs. (Kirtland Elders' Quorum Record, 19 March 1836, footnotes.)

CALLING AND ELECTION SURE

Those members of the Church who devote themselves wholly to righteousness, living by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God, making their calling and election sure. That is, they receive the more sure word of prophecy, which means that the Lord seals their exaltation upon them while they are yet in this life. Peter summarized the course of righteousness which the saints must pursue to make their calling and election sure and then (referring to his experience on the Mount of Transfiguration with James and John) said that those three had received this more sure word of prophecy. (2 Pet. 1.)
Joseph Smith taught: "After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter." To receive the other Comforter is to have Christ appear to him and to see the visions of eternity. (Teachings, pp. 149-151.)
Thus, as the Prophet also said, "The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that his is sealed up unto eternal life, by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood." (D. & C. 131:5.) Those so favored of the Lord are sealed up against all manner of sin and blasphemy except the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost and the shedding of innocent blood. That is, their exaltation is assured; their calling and election is made sure, because they have obeyed the fulness of God's laws and have overcome the world. Though such persons "shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder wherein they shed innocent blood, yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter in to their exaltation." (D. & C. 132:26.)

The Lord says to them: "Ye shall come forth in the first resurrection; . . . and shall inherit thrones, kingdome, principalities, and powers, dominions, all hights and depths." (D. & C. 132:19.) The Prophet, for one, had this seal placed upon him. That is, he knew "by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood," that he would attain godhood in the world to come. To him Deity said: "I am the Lord thy God, and will be with thee even unto the end of the world, and through all eternity; for verily I seal upon you your exaltation, and prepare a throne for you in the kingdom of my Father, with Abraham your father." (D. & C. 132:49.)

It should be clearly understood that these high blessings are not part of celestial marriage. "Blessings pronounced upon couples in connection with celestial marriage are conditioned upon the subsequent faithfulness of the participating parties." (Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 2, pp. 46-47.)

The Second Epistle General of Peter

In his Second Epistle, the Chief Apostle discusses three doctrines of transcendent import:

1. Making our calling and election sure;

. . .Peter knew the doctrines of his Lord and had a blunt, rugged, emphatic way of presenting them that is marvelous to behold.

Nowhere else in ancient writ do we find the door so frankly opened to a knowledge of the course men must pursue to have their calling and election made sure; . . . .

"MAKE YOUR CALLING AND ELECTION SURE"

II PETER 1:1-19

1 Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ:

2 Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our lord,

3 According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue:

4 Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.

5 And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge;
6 And to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness;
7 And to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity.
8 For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.
9 But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.
10 Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall:
11 For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.
12 Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth.
13 Yea, I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by putting you in remembrance;
14 Knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath showed me.
15 Moreover I will endeavor that ye may be able after my decease to have these things always in remembrance.
16 For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty.
17 For he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased.
18 And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount.
19 We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take head, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts:
I.V. II PETER 1:19.

19 We have therefore a more sure knowledge of the word of prophecy, to which word of prophecy ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light which shineth in a dark place, until the day-dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts;

"MAKING YOUR CALLING AND ELECTION SURE"

Among those who have received the gospel, and who are seeking diligently to live its laws and gain eternal life, there is an instinctive and determined desire to make their calling and election sure. Because they have tasted the good things of God and sipped from the fountain of eternal truth, they now seek the divine presence, where they shall know all things, have all power, all might, and all dominion, and in fact be like Him who is the great Prototype of all saved beings - God our Heavenly and Eternal Father. (D. & C. 132:20.) This is the end objective, the chief goal of all the faithful, and there is nothing greater in all eternity, "for there is no gift greater than the gift of salvation." (D. & C. 6:13.)
It is little wonder then that the Prophet Joseph Smith, particularly during the latter and crowing years of his mortal ministry, repeatedly exhorted the saints to press forward with that steadfastness in Christ which would enable them to make their calling and election sure. "I am going on in my progression for eternal life," he said of himself; and then in fervent pleading to all the saints, he exclaimed: "Oh! I beseech you to go forward, go forward and make your calling and your election sure." (Teachings, p. 366.)

As a prelude to analyzing Peter's words on this subject-and they rank in spiritual grandeur and insight with those himself-as a prelude to this analysis, let us define and outline what is involved in having one's calling and election made sure, taking cautious heed the while to anchor each thought and concept to the revealed word and prophetic utterances.
Of necessity we must define some words and phrases in most pointed terms. Unless we know what they mean, in their scriptural contexts, we cannot comprehend what the Holy Spirit was teaching by the mouths of the prophets as he inspired those preachers o righteousness to use them. And since there is so much misunderstanding and misinformation where these glorious concepts are concerned, it will not be amiss to approach the subject in an organized and intelligent manner, building our house of understanding, brick upon brick, precept upon precept. The fact is that the doctrinal concepts in this field are fully set forth in the revelations, and all that is needed is to put the whole subject together in one well built structure, so that it becomes clear how each separate part fits into the one united whole. One brick or one window by itself does not show forth what the whole house is like; but each part fitly framed together with its fellow parts soon becomes a marvelous mansion which is gratifying to behold.

What is meant by calling? And who are the called of God

To be called is to be a member of the Church and kingdom of God on earth; it is to be numbered with the saints; it is to accept the gospel and receive the everlasting covenant; it is to have part and lot in the earthly Zion: it is to be born again, to be a son or a daughter of the Lord Jesus Christ; to have membership in the household of faith; it is to be on the path leading to eternal life and to have the hope of eternal glory; it is to have a conditional promise of eternal life; it is to be an inheritor of all of the blessings of the gospel, provided there is continued obedience to the laws and ordinances thereof.
Within this over-all framework, there are individual calls to positions of trust and responsibility, but these are simply assignments to labor on the Lord's errand, in particular places, for a time and a season. The call itself is to the gospel cause; it is not reserved for apostles and prophets or for the great and mighty in Israel; it is for all the members of the kingdom.
The call originates with God, is available because of his grace and goodness, and is offered to various peoples and nations according to his will and on his divine timetable. from the day of Jacob to the coming of Christ the house of Israel was the called and chosen people of the Lord. During the day of his mortal ministry our Lord limited the call to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. (Matt. 10:5-7.) After his resurrection he commanded his ministers to make the call available to all men. (Mark 16:15-16.) But only those who actually receive the gospel, who make the everlasting covenant, who cleave unto the truth and strive to live in harmony with the revealed word, only these are numbered among those whom the scriptures name as the called of the Lord.
Thus we find hosts of statements in holy writ telling who is called and what they have and may yet receive as a result thereof. For instance: On the day of Pentecost itself, as he began the ministry which would take the gospel from the house of Israel to the ends of the earth, Peter announced that the repentant, baptized converts "shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For," said he, "the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."
Later the chief apostle told members of the Church that they had been "called...out of darkness" into the "marvelous light" of the gospel (1 Pet. 2:9); that they were "called" to suffer in the cause of righteousness, that thereby they "should inherit a blessing" (1 Pet. 2:21; 3:9); that their call came from God, by his grace, through "Christ Jesus," and was a call unto "eternal glory." (1 Pet. 5:10.) And accordingly Peter exhorted the saints to be holy "as he which hath called you is holy." (1 Pet. 1:15.)

Our friend Paul proclaims the same principles. He speaks of members of the Church a s "the called of Jesus Christ," as those who are "called to the saints" (Rom. 1:6-7; 1 Cor. 1:2; he says they are "called...into the grace of Christ" (Gal. 1:6); "called unto liberty" (Gal. 5:13); "called...to peace" (1 cor. 7:15, 17); "called" to "holiness" (1 Thess. 4:7; Heb. 3:1); :called: to the Lord's "kingdom and glory" (1 Thess. 2:12); and that all these calls come by "grace." (Gal. 1:15.)

Like Peter he teaches that the saints are called to "eternal life: (1 Tim. 6:12), called to "the promise of eternal inheritance" (Heb. 9:15), but he explains also that the Lord's calls are the result of foreordination and grow out of faithfulness in pre-existence. (2 Tim. 1:8-9.) "God hath from the beginning," that is, form before the foundations of the world, "chosen you [his saints] to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit of belief of the truth: Whereunto he called you by our gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ." (2 Thess. 2:13-14.) That is, the saints were foreordained in the councils of eternity to believe the truth, to be sanctified, and to save their should; and then in this life they are called to that gospel whereby these eternal promises can be fulfilled.

In another glorious passage, Paul says: "We know that all things work together for good to them that love god, to them who are the called according to his purpose." That is, the Lord's hand governs and controls in the lives of those whom he, in his infinite foreknowledge, hath called to be his people. and then: "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethern,: which is to say that god in his infinite wisdom foreordained the noble and great spirits in pre-existence to become like Christ, to gain glory, power and might like unto the Son of God, so that the son becomes the firstborn, as it were, among many exalted sons. And then in glorious conclusion: "Moreover whom he did predestinate [foreordain], them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified." (Rom. 8:28-30.) Thus " the noble and great ones," who were chosen before they were born (Abra. 3:22-23), who were foreordained to have exaltation, are the ones whom God hath called in this life to be glorified through the gospel in due course.

With such a glorious hope before them, surely the saints should be encouraged to gain the promised rewards, and so Paul joins Peter in using the doctrine of calling as an occasion for exhortation. Let all the saints so "work" as to be "worthy of this calling," he says, in that day when the Lord "shall come to be glorified in his saints", (2 Thess. 1:10-11), and even of such a great one as himself he says: "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Philip. 3:14.)

In modern revelation the Lord confirms the doctrine of his ancient apostles, speaks of our "calling and election in the church" (D. & C. 53:1; 41:2.) Since men are foreordained to gain exaltation, and since no man can be exalted without the priesthood, it is almost self-evident that worthy brethren were foreordained to receive the priesthood. And so we find Alma teaching that those who hold the Melchizedek Priesthood in this life were "called and prepared from the foundation of the world according to the foreknowledge of God." (Alma 13:1-12.) And Joseph Smith said, "Every man who has a calling to minister to the inhabitants of the world," and this includes all who hold the Melchizedek Priesthood, "was ordained to that very purpose in the Grand Council of heaven before this world was. I suppose that I was ordained to this very office in that Grand Council." (Teachings, p. 365.)

Now what is meant by making a calling sure?

All blessings promised in connection with the callings of God are conditional; they are offered to men provided they obey the laws upon which their receipt is predicated. (D. & C. 130:20-21.) "For all who will have a blessing at my hands," the Lord says, "shall abide the law which was appointed for that blessing, and the conditions thereof, as were instituted from before the foundation of the world." (D. & C. 132:5.)
It follows, then, that when the law has been lived to the full, the promised blessing is guaranteed. "I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say; but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise." (D. & C. 82:10.) Accordingly, when a man lives the law that qualifies him for eternal life, the Lord is bound by his own law to confer that greatest of all gifts upon him. And if by a long course of trial and obedience, while yet in this life, a man proves to the Lord that he was and will abide in the truth, the Lord accepts the exhibited devotion and issues his decree that the promised blessings shall be received. The calling, which up to that time was provisional, is then made sure. The receipt of the promised blessings are no longer conditional; they are guaranteed. Announcement is made that every gospel blessing shall be inherited.

What is meant by election? Who are the elect of God? To what have they been elected? And Why?

Election is akin to a synonymous with calling, and in a general sense the elect comprise the whole house of Israel. (Isa. 45:4; 65:9.) Jesus and Paul and Peter speak of the elect as the saints, as the faithful believers, as those who love the Lord and are seeking righteousness. (Matt. 24:22; Mark 13:20; Luke 18:7; Col. 3:12; 2 Tim. 2:10; Titus 1:1.) And the Lord in our day has promised to gather and save his elect. (D. & C. 29:7; 33:6; 35:20.) Paul speaks of the elect along with the called, setting forth that they are foreordained to be like Christ, that their conduct here is justified, and that they shall be glorified hereafter. (Rom. 8:28-30.) Peter specifies their high status is "according to the foreknowledge of God the Father: (1 Pet. 1:2), and Isaiah assures us that great blessings shall flow to them during the Millennial Era. (Isa. 65:22.)
But in the most express and proper usage of terms, "The elect of God comprise a very select group, an inner circle of faithful members of the Church.... They are the portion of church members who are striving with all their hearts to keep the fulness of the gospel law in this life so that they can become inheritors of the fulness of gospel rewards in the life to come. "As far as the male sex is concerned, they are the ones, the Lord says, who have the Melchizedek Priesthood conferred upon them and who thereafter magnify their callings and are sanctified by the Spirit. In this way, 'They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the church and kingdom, and the elect of God.'" (Mormon Doctrine, 2nd ed., p. 217.) See commentary II, pp. 267-269, 271-278, 283-285.

What is meant by making an election sure?

It is with election as with calling: the chosen of the Lord are offered all of the blessings of the gospel on condition of obedience of the Lord's laws; and they, having been tried and tested and found worthy in all things, eventually have a seal placed on their election which guarantees the receipt of the promised blessing.

What is meant by having one's calling and election made sure?

To have one's calling and election made sure is to be sealed up unto eternal life; it is to have the unconditional guarantee of exaltation in the highest heaven of the celestial world; it is to receive the assurance of godhood; it is, in effect, to have the day of judgment advanced, so that an inheritance of all the glory and honor of the Father's kingdom is assured prior to the day when the faithful actually enter into the divine presence to sit with Christ in his throne, even as he is "set down" with his "Father in his throne." (Rev. 3:21.)

What is the relationship between baptism and having one's calling and election made sure?

Baptism is the beginning of personal righteousness; it opens the door to celestial exaltation; it puts us on the path leading to eternal life. As Nephi expressed it, when we enter "the gate" of "repentance and baptism" and receive "a remission" of our sins "by fire and by the Holy Ghost," we are then on the " straight and narrow path which leads to eternal life."
Nephi then asks if we have thereby done all that is necessary to gain that glorious reward, and answers with an emphatic, No! "Ye must press forward with a steadfastness in Christ," he says, "having a perfect brightness of hope, and a love of God and of all men. Wherefore, if ye shall press forward, feasting upon the word of Christ, and endure to the end, behold, thus saith the Father: Ye shall have eternal life." (2Ne. 31:17-21.)
That is to say, after baptism, after being called out of darkness into the light of the gospel; after having been numbered with the elect of god, we must receive the guarantees to which we have been called, and the assurances that appertain to our election, and which are given on a conditional basis only in baptism. We must have our calling and election made sure, and this high achievement grows out of and is the crowning reward of baptism.

What is the relationship between celestial marriage and having one's calling and election made sure?

In the same sense that baptism opens the door and starts repentant persons traveling on the path leading to eternal life, so also does celestial marriage. This holy order of matrimony also opens a door leading to celestial exaltation. "In the celestial glory there are three heavens or degrees; And in order to obtain the highest, a man must enter into this order of the priesthood [meaning the new and everlasting covenant of marriage]; And if he does not, he cannot obtain it. He may enter into the other, but that is the end of his kingdom; he cannot have an increase." (D. & C. 131:1-4.)
As everyone who has been married in the temple knows, those so united - by the power and authority of the holy priesthood and by virtue of the sealing power restored by Elijah - are promised an inheritance of glory, honor, power, and dominion in the kingdom of God. But, as with baptism, all the promises are conditional; they are specifically and pointedly stated as being contingent upon the subsequent faithfulness of the participating parties. If they keep the commandments after celestial marriage, their union continues in the life to come; if they do not conform to the standards of personal righteousness involved, their marriage is not of force when they die and they revert to their separate and single status.
Unfortunately some are confused on this point because of a misunderstanding of some of the truths revealed in the revelation on marriage. Because no person can gain exaltation or eternal life alone; because exaltation includes the continuation of the family unit in eternity; because the whole thrust of revealed religion is to perfect and center everything in the family; and because having one's calling and election made sure is the receipt of a guarantee of eternal life - it was the most natural thing in the world for the Lord to reveal both the doctrine of eternal marriage and the doctrine of being sealed up unto eternal life (meaning having one's calling and election made sure) in one and the same revelation. In effect one grows out of the other. The one is a conditional promise of eternal life; the other is an unconditional promise.

Thus in Section 132, verse 19 begins by talking of celestial marriage in these words: "If a man marry a wife by my word, which is my law, and by the new and everlasting covenant, and it is sealed unto them by the Holy Spirit of promise, by him who is anointed, unto whom I have appointed this power and the keys of this priesthood," but then proceeds to consider the matter of having their callings and elections made sure by saying: "and it shall be said unto them [meaning that in addition to the marriage sealing, it shall be said unto them] - Ye shall come forth in the first resurrection;...and shall inherit thrones, kingdoms, principalities, and powers, dominions, nd heights nd depths - then...they shall pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to their exaltation and glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads, which glory shall be a fulness and a continuation of the seeds forever and ever."

That is to say, after celestial marriage; after entering into sacred covenants in the house of the Lord; after receiving the conditional promise of the continuation of the family unit in eternity; after receiving power to gain kingdoms and thrones - we must so live as to receive the guarantees to which we have thus been called, and the assurances that appertain to our election, and which are given on a conditional basis only in celestial marriage. as with baptism, so with celestial marriage; after the glorious promise of eternal life that is part of each of these covenants, we must press forward in righteousness until our calling and election is made sure; and this high achievement grows out of and is the crowing reward of celestial marriage.

What is the relationship between holding the holy Melchizedek Priesthood and having one's calling and election made sure?

The Melchizedek Priesthood is conferred with an oath and a covenant - a covenant on man's part that he will receive the priesthood and magnify his calling therein, and an oath on God's part that man shall, as a consequence, be "made like unto the son of God, abiding a priest continually." (Inspired Version, Heb. 7:3; D. & C. 84:33-44.) See Heb. &:1-3; 7:18-22. In other words, those who magnify their callings shall gain eternal life. But one cannot keep a covenant before it is made; a calling in the priesthood cannot be magnified until it is received. The covenant is the contract which sets forth the terms and conditions by obedience to which eternal life may be won; the obedience comes after the call; and when it is whole and complete, the worthy son has his calling and election made sure, and he inherits the promised reward.

Is having one's calling and election made sure the same as being sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise?

The Holy Ghost is the Holy Spirit; he is the Holy Spirit promised the saints at baptism, or in other words the Holy Spirit of Promise, this exalted name-title signifying that the promised receipt of the Holy Spirit, as on the day of Pentecost, is the greatest gift man can receive in mortality.

The gift of the Holy Ghost is the right to the constant companionship of that member of the Godhead based on faithfulness; it is bestowed with a promise that we shall receive revelation and be sanctified if we are true and faithful and so live as to qualify for the companionship of that Holy Spirit who will not dwell in an unclean temple. (1 Cor. 3:16-17; 6:19; Mosiah 2:37; Hela. 4:24.) The receipt of the promise is conditional! If after we receive the promise, we then keep the commandment, we gain the companionship of this member of the Godhead, and not otherwise.

One of the functions assigned and delegated to the Holy spirit is to seal, and the following expressions are identical in thought content:

To be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise;
To be justified by the Spirit;
To be approved by the Lord; and
To be ratified by the Holy Ghost.

Accordingly, any act which is sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise is one which is justified by the Spirit, one which is approved by the Lord, one which is ratified by the Holy Ghost. One of Paul's great concerns was that the saints in his day should be justified by faith, through grace, because of the shedding of the blood of Christ. (Commentary II, pp. 224-249.) In other words, he sought to perfect the lives of those souls put into his care and custody so that, as a result of good works, all their acts would have divine approval and be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise.

As revealed to Joseph Smith, the Lord's law in this respect is: "All covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations, that are not made and entered into and sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, of him who is anointed, both as well for time and for all eternity, and that too most holy, by revelation and commandment through the medium of mine anointed, whom I have appointed on the earth to hold this power (and I have appointed unto my servant Joseph to hold this power in the last days, and there is never but one on the earth at a time on whom this power and the keys of this priesthood are conferred), are of no efficacy, virtue, or force in and after the resurrection from the dead; for all contracts that are not made unto this end have and end when men are dead." (D. & C. 132:7.)

By way of illustration, this means that baptism, partaking of the sacrament, administering to the sick, marriage, and every covenant that man ever makes with the Lord - plus all other "contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, associations, or expectations" - must be preformed in righteousness by and for people who are worthy to receive whatever blessing is involved, otherwise whatever is done has no binding and sealing effect in eternity.

Since "the Comforter knoweth all things" (D. & C. 42:17), it follows that it is not possible "to lie to the Holy Ghost" and thereby gain an unearned or undeserved blessing, as Ananias and Sapphira found out to their sorrow. (Acts 5:1-11.) And so this provision that all things must be sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, if they are to have "efficacy, virtue, or force in and after the resurrection from the dead" (D. & C. 132:7), is the Lord;s system for dealing with absolute impartiality with all men, and for giving all men exactly what they merit, neither adding to nor diminishing from. See Commentary II, pp. 493-495.

When the Holy Spirit of Promise places his ratifying seal upon a baptism, or a marriage, or any covenant, except that of having one's calling and election made sure, the seal is a conditional approval or ratification; it is binding in eternity only in the event of subsequent obedience to the terms and conditions of whatever covenant is involved.

But when the ratifying seal of approval is placed upon someone whose calling and election is thereby made sure - because there are no more conditions to be met by the obedient person - this act of being sealed up unto eternal life is of such transcendent import that of itself it is called being sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise, which means that in this crowing sense, being so sealed is the same as having one's calling and election made sure. Thus, to be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise is to be sealed up unto eternal life; and to be sealed up unto eternal life is to be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise. and of this usage of terms, a usage which is wholly misunderstood unless the whole concept of the sealing power of the Spirit is understood, the scriptures and other prophetic utterances bear repeated witness.

Thus Joseph Smith says that when Peter "exhorts us to make our calling and election sure," it is the same thing as "the sealing power spoken of by Paul in other places." (Teachings,;. 149.) The illustrative quotation from Paul which the Prophet then quotes is: "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory," that we may be sealed up unto the day of redemption. (Eph. 1:13-14.) That is, the calling and election of Ephesian saints and been made sure because they were sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise.
Those who gain exaltation in the celestial kingdom are described in the Vision of the degrees of glory in these words: "They are they who received the testimony of Jesus, and believed on his name and were baptized after the manner of his burial, being buried in the water in his name, and this according to the commandment which he has given - That by keeping the commandments they might be washed and cleansed from all their sins, and receive the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hands of him who is ordained and sealed unto this power; An who overcome by faith, and are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, which the Father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true." D. & C. 76:51-53.) That is, they first believed the gospel, received all the conditional promises of eternal life, including the gift of the Holy Ghost, and then having "overcome by faith," having kept the commandments, having proved themselves worthy, they finally had their calling and election made sure.
"This principle" - that of having ones calling and election made sure and of being sealed with that Holy Spirit of Promise - "ought (in its proper place) to be taught," the Prophet said, "for God hath not revealed anything to Joseph, but what he will make known unto the Twelve, and even the least saint may know all things as fast as he is able to bear them, for the day must come when no man need say to his neighbor, know ye the Lord; for all shall know him (who remain) from the least to the greatest. How is this to be done? It is to be done by this sealing power, and the other Comforter spoken of , which will be manifest by revelation." (Teachings, p. 149.)
The scriptural passage alluded to by the Prophet in this statement is from Jeremiah and is as follows: "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord: But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. and they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them to unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for i will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more." (Jer. 31:31-34.) Complete realization of the blessings here promised is Millennial, and the knowledge of God spoken of shall be manifest by the receipt of the Second comforter, as the Prophet then proceeds to state, and as we shall now consider.

Is having one's calling and election made sure the same as receiving the Second Comforter?

It is the privilege of those who have their calling and election made sure, meaning those who are sealed up unto eternal life, meaning those who are "sealed with that holy Spirit of promise" (Eph. 1:13), to receive the Second Comforter.

"there are two Comforters spoken of," says the Prophet in one of his most profound and enlightening discourses. "One of these is the Holy Ghost, the same as given on the day of Pentecost, and that all saints receive after faith, repentance, and baptism. The first Comforter or Holy Ghost has no other effect that pure intelligence. It is more powerful in expanding the mind, enlightening the understanding, and storing the intellect with present knowledge, of a man who is of the literal seed of Abraham, than one that is a Gentile, thought it may not have half as much visible effect upon the body; for as the Holy Ghost falls upon one of the literal seed of Abraham, it is calm and serene; and his whole soul and body are only exercised by the pure spirit of intelligence; while the effect of the Holy Ghost upon a Gentile, is to purge out the old blood, and make him actually of the seed of Abraham. That man that has none of the blood of Abraham (naturally) must have a new creation by the Holy Ghost. In such a case, there may be more of a powerful effect upon the body, and visible to the eye, that upon an Israelite, while the Israelite at first might be far before the Gentile in pure intelligence.

"The other Comforter spoken of is a subject of great interest, and perhaps understood by few of this generation. after a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost, (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of god, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and his election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter, which the Lord hath promised the saints, as is recorded in the testimony of St. John, in the 14th chapter, from the 12th to the 27th verses." (Teachings, p. 149-150.) The Prophet then quotes verses 16, 17, 18, 21, 23, and asks that they be noted in particular.

In a revelation to certain selected saints in this dispensation, the Lord said that the alms of their prayers were "recorded in the book of the names of the sanctified, even them of the celestial world" (D. & C. 88:2), which is to say that they were among those who had " overcome by faith," and were "sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, which the father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true." (D. & C. 76:53.)

"Wherefore," the Lord said to them, "I now send upon you another Comforter, even upon you my friends, that it may abide in your hearts, even the Holy Spirit of promise; which other Comforter is the same that I promised unto my disciples, as is recorded in the testimony of John. This Comforter is the promise which I give unto you of eternal life, even the glory of the celestial kingdom; Which glory is that of the church of the Firstborn, even of God, the holiest of all, through Jesus Christ his Son." (D. & C. 88:3-5.)

These saints, like the Ephesian Brethren before them, had been called and chosen "before the foundation of the world" that they "should be holy and without blame" before the Lord, through baptism and obedience (Eph. 1:4-7), which is the sole course by which men can sanctify their souls (3 Ne. 27:19-20), thereby qualifying to have their names recorded "in the book of the names of the sanctified." (D. & C. 88:2.) They had then earned the right by faith and devotion to have the seal of divine acceptance placed on the conditional promises which they had theretofore made. They now had the sure "promise...of eternal life" (D. & C. 88:4), which eternal life is the name of the kind of life which God our Heavenly and Eternal Father lives, and they were prepared to receive the Second Comforter.

As set forth by the Lord Jesus himself to the ancient Twelve, in one of his most loving and gracious sermons, the doctrine of the Second comforter, noting particularly the verses quoted by the Prophet, is this:

Verse 16: "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever." That is in their case they are going to receive a Comforter in addition to the Holy Ghost already promised, and this Comforter will abide with them forever, for they shall have membership in the Church of the Firstborn in celestial exaltation.
Verse 17: "Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you." All that is said in this verse, if taken out of context, could apply to the Holy Ghost, whom the world cannot receive, and who figuratively dwells in the hearts of the righteous, for the title, "Spirit of truth," applies to this Spirit member of the Godhead. (John 16:13.)
But as spoken by Jesus, as recorded by the Beloved John, and as interpreted by the Prophet Joseph Smith, the verse has application to Jesus Himself. "I am the Spirit of truth,: is his latter-day declaration (D. & C. 93:26), which is but another of the many instances in which the same name-title applies to more that one member of the Godhead. Thus the Lord Jesus is telling his ancient apostles that he will dwell in them in the figurative sense stated three sentences later in the same sermon: "I am in the Father, and ye in me, and I in you." (Verse 20.)
Verse 18: "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you." I will come! The Lord Jesus Christ himself will do it! He will appear to them and be with them! And what an eternal comfort it will be, in days and years to come, to see the face of their Beloved Lord! And verses 19 and 20 then reaffirm that when the world no longer sees him, yet because he continues to live in glorious immortality, his beloved disciples shall continue to see him - "Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me: because I live, ye shall live also. At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you."
Verse 21: "he that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that liveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him." Again the Master Teacher affirms that because of love and obedience he personally will hereafter manifest himself to his disciples. And then, one of the Twelve, hearing the words but not comprehending the deep spiritual truths they convey, asks Jesus: "Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world?" (Verse 22.)
Verse 23: "Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." Can this be possible that the Father and the son, as resurrected, glorified persons, will come to and make their abode with those who love and serve God with all their hearts? (D. & C. 93:1.) such seems almost beyond comprehension, but so gracious and infinite is God's grace that such is verily the case, and so wo find the Prophet, writing by the spirit of prophecy and revelation: "John 14:23 - The appearing of the Father and the Son, in that verse is a personal appearance; and the idea that the Father and the Son dwell in a man's heart is an old sectarian notion, and is false." (D. & C. 130:3.)
Having thus set forth the doctrine that he and his father will manifest themselves to those who are sealed up unto eternal life - and for that matter, why should they not come to such persons, since all who gain eternal life shall dwell in their presence and be like them? - having so taught, Jesus says: "These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost" - the First Comforter, the initial Comforter, the one "that all saints receive after faith, repentance, and baptism," the one that "has no other effect than pure intelligence" (Teachings, p. 149) - this Comforter, "whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." (Verses 25 and 26.)

After quoting the names verses from the 14th chapter of John, the Prophet continues his won inspired analysis: "Now what is this other Comforter?" he asks. "It is no more nor less than the Lord Jesus Christ himself; and this is the sum and substance of the whole matter; that when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him or appear unto him form time to time, and even he will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him, and the Lord will teach him face to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of Kingdom of God; and this is the state and place the ancient saints arrived at when they had such glorious visions - Isaiah, Ezekiel, John upon the Isle of Patmos, St. Paul in the three heavens, and all the saints who held communion with the general assembly and Chruch of the Firstborn." (Teachings, pp. 150-151.)
Speaking in November, 1831, to those whose calling and election would in due course be made sure, and whose "privilege" it would then be to receive the Second Comforter, the Lord said: "verily I say unto you that it is your privilege, and a promise I give unto you that have been ordained unto this ministry, that inasmuch as you strip yourselves from jealousies and fears,and humble yourselves before me, for ye are not sufficiently humble, the veil shall be rent and you shall see me." (D. & C. 67:10-14.)

What if those whose calling and election has been made sure thereafter commit grievous sins? Suppose they backslide and walk in the ways of wickedness? Or fight the truth and rebel against God - what then?
That all men commit sin, before and after baptism, and for that matter, before and after their calling and election is made sure, is self-evident. There has been only one Sinless One - the Lord Jesus who was God's own Son.

Thus in the revelation announcing the sitting up of the restored church in this day, the Lord says: "there is a possibility that man may fall from grace and depart from the living god; Therefore let the church take heed and pray always, lest they fall into temptation; Yea, and even let those who are sanctified take heed also." (D. & C. 20:32-34.)
The prophets and apostles from Adam and Enoch down, and all men, whether cleansed and sanctified from sin or not, are yet subject to and do in fact commit sin. This is the case even after men have seen the visions of eternity and been sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise which makes their calling and election sure. Since these chosen ones have the sure promise of eternal life, and since "no unclean thing can enter into" the Father's "kingdom" (3 Ne. 27:19), "or dwell in his presence" (Moses 6:57), what of sins committed after being sealed up into eternal life?
Obviously the laws of repentance still apply, and the more enlightened a person is, the more he seeks the gift of repentance, and the harder he strives to free himself form sin as often as he falls short to the divine will and becomes subject in any degree to the Master of Sin who is Lucifer. It follows that the sins of the godfearing and righteous are continually remitted because they repent and seek the Lord anew every day and every hour.
And as a matter of fact, the added blessing of having one's calling and election made sure is itself and encouragement to avoid sin and a hedge against its further commission. By that long course of obedience and trial which enabled them to gain so great a blessing the sanctified saints have charted a course and developed a pattern of living which avoids sin and encourages righteousness. Thus the Lord said: "I give unto you Hyrum smith to be a patriarch unto you, to hold the sealing blessings of my church, even the Holy Spirit of promise, whereby ye are sealed up unto the day of redemption, that ye may not fall notwithstanding the hour of temptation that may come upon you." (D. & C. 124:124.)

But suppose such persons become disaffected and the spirit of repentance leaves them - which is a seldom and almost unheard of eventuality - still, what them? The answer is - and the revelations and teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith so recite! - they must then pay the penalty of their own sins, for the blood of Christ will not cleanse them. Or if they commit murder or adultery, they lose their promised inheritance because these sins are exempt from the sealing promises. Or if they commit the unpardonable sin, they become sons of perdition.

As we have already seen, making one's calling and election sure comes after and grows out of celestial marriage. Eternal life does not and cannot exist for a man or a woman alone, because in its very nature it consists of the continuation of the family unit in eternity. Thus the revelation on marriage speaks both of celestial marriage (in which the conditional promises of eternal life are given) and of making one's calling and election sure (in which the unconditional promise of eternal life are given) in one and the same sentence - which sentence also says that those who commit sins (except "Murder whereby to shed innocent blood") after being sealed up unto eternal life shall still gain exaltation. This is the language: "Then" - that i, after their calling and election has been made sure - "shall it be written in the Lamb's Book of Life. that he shall commit no murder whereby to shed innocent blood, and if ye abide in my covenant, and commit no murder whereby to shed innocent blood, it shall be done unto them in all things whatsoever my servant hath put upon them, in time, and through all eternity; and shall be of full force when they are our of the world; and they shall pass by the angels, and the gods, which are set there, to their exaltation and glory in all things, as hath been sealed upon their heads, which glory shall be a fullness and a continuation of the seeds forever and ever. Then shall they be gods," because they have eternal life. (D. & C. 132:19-20.)

Then the revelation speaks of that obedience out of which eternal life grows, and still speaking both of celestial marriage and of making one's calling and election sure: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, if a man marry a wife according to my word, and they are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, according to mine appointment" - that is, if they are both married and have their calling and election made sure - "And he or she shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder wherein they shed innocent blood, yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter into their exaltation: but they shall be destroyed in the flesh, and shall be delivered unto the buffetings of Satan unto the day of redemption, saith the Lord God." (D. & C. 132:26.)

This matter of being destroyed in the flesh and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until the day of redemption is the doctrine of blood atonement, whereunder those here involved are not cleansed by the blood of Christ, but must pay the penalty for their own sins. This principle can only operate in a day, as that of Moses, when there is no separation of Church and state and when the Church has power to take life. Of conditions in our day. and as to how this law applies to us, President Joseph Fielding Smith says: "We cannot destroy men in the flesh, because we do not control the lives of men and do not have power to pass sentences upon them which involve capital punishment. In the days when there was a theocracy on the earth, then this decree was enforced. What the Lord will do in lieu of this, because we cannot destroy in the flesh, I am unable to say, but it will have to be made up in some other way." (Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 2, p. 97.)

As to the shedding of innocent blood, within the meaning of this revelation, the Lord says: "The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, which shall not be forgiven in the world nor out of the world, is in that ye commit murder wherein ye shed innocent blood, and assent unto my death, after ye have received my new and everlasting covenant, saith the Lord God; and he that abideth not this law can in nowise enter into my glory, but shall be damned, saith the Lord." (D. & C. 132:27.) That is, the innocent blood is that of Christ; and those who commit blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, which is the unpardonable sin (Matt. 12:31-32), thereby "crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." (Heb. 6:6.) They are, in other words, people who would have crucified Christ, having the while a perfect knowledge that he was the Son of God.

Following the pattern set by the Lord of speaking both of celestial marriage and of being sealed up unto eternal life in the same context, Joseph Smith said: "Putting my hand on the knee of william Clayton, I said: Your life is hid with Christ in God, and so are many others. Nothing but the unpardonable sin can prevent you from inheriting eternal life for you are sealed up by the power of the priesthood unto eternal life, having taken the step necessary for that purpose. Except a man and his wife enter into an everlasting covenant and be married for eternity, while in this probation, by the power and authority of the Holy Priesthood, they will cease to increase when they die; that is, they will not have any children after the resurrection. But those who are married by the power and authority of the priesthood in this life, and continue without committing sin against the Holy Ghost, will continue to increase and have children in the celestial glory. The unpardonable sin is to shed innocent blood, or be accessory thereto. All other sins will be visited with judgment in the flesh, and the spirit being delivered to the buffetings of Satan until the day of the Lord Jesus." (History of the Church, vol. 5, pp. 391-392.)

Perhaps this matter of being "visited with judgment in the flesh" - whatever it may be in an individual case - is the Lord's way of handling things when it is not possible for a person to be "destroyed in the flesh." (D. & C. 132:26.) In this connection, also - and having in mind that the sealing power was given by Elijah to Peter, James, and John on the Mount of Transfiguration (Teachings, p. 158), and again to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery in the Kirtland Temple (D. & C. 110:13-16) - we should note these words of the Prophet: "This spirit of Elijah was manifest in the days of the Apostles, in delivering certain ones to the buffetings of Satan, that they might be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. They were sealed by the spirit of Elijah unto the damnation of hell until the day of Lord, or revelation of Jesus Christ." (Teachings, p. 338.)

As to the fact that the sealing power cannot seal a man up so as to keep him from being a son of perdition, if that is the course he chooses to follow, the Prophet says: "The doctrine that the Presbyterians and Methodists have quarreled so much about - once in grace, always in grace, or falling away from grace, I will say a word about. They are both wrong. Truth takes a road between them both, for while the Presbyterians says: 'Once in grace, you cannot fall;' the Methodist says: 'You can have grace today, fall from it tomorrow, next day have grace again; and so follow on, changing continually.' But the doctrine of the scriptures and the spirit of Elijah would show them both false, and take a road between them both; for, according to the scripture, if men have received the good word of God, and tasted of the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, it is impossible to renew them again, seeing they have crucified the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame; so there is a possibility of falling away; you could not be renewed again, and the power of Elijah cannot seal against this sin, for this is a reserve made in the seals and power of the priesthood." (Teachings, pp. 338-339.) Thus, even though a man's calling and election has been made sure, if he then commits blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, he becomes a son of perdition, because when he was sealed up unto eternal life it was with a reservation. the sealing was not to apply in the case of the unpardonable sin.

As to the fact that the sealing power cannot seal a man up unto eternal life if he thereafter commits murder and thereby sheds innocent blood (not in this case the blood of Christ, but the blood of any person slain unlawfully and with malice) the Prophet says: "A murderer, for instance, one that sheds innocent blood, cannot have forgiveness. David sought repentance at the hand of God carefully with tears, for the murder of uriah; but he could only get it through hell; he got a promise that his soul should not be left in hell. "Although David was a king, he never did obtain the spirit and power of Elijah and the fullness of the priesthood; and the priesthood that he received, and the throne and kingdom of David is to be taken from him and given to another by the name of David in the last days, raised up out of his lineage." (Teachings, p. 339.) Thus, even though a man's calling and election has been made sure, if he then commits murder, all of the promises are of no effect, and he goes to a telestial kingdom (Rev. 21:*; D. & C. 76:103), because when he was sealed up unto eternal life, it was with a reservation. The sealing was not to apply in the case of murder.

And as to the fact that the sealing power cannot seal a man up unto eternal life if he thereafter commits adultery, the Prophet says: "If a man commit adultery, he cannot receive the celestial kingdom of God. Even if he is saved in any kingdom, it cannot be the celestial kingdom." (History of the Church, vol. 6, p. 81.) Thus, even though a man's calling and election has been sure, if he then commits adultery, all of the promises are of no effect, and he goes to a telestial kingdom, because when he was sealed up unto eternal life, it was with a reservation. The sealing was not to apply in the case of subsequent adultery. In other cases, through repentance, there is forgiveness for this sin which is second only to murder in the category of personal sins. (1 Cor. 6:9-11; 3 Ne. 30; d. & c. 42:24-26.)

Who has had their calling and election made sure and how can they be identified?

In the providence of the Lord, there is no question that many of the saints of all ages and dispensations have attained this high status, a fact which can be known in individual cases by applying the principles above set forth to the individual situation.

In this present discussion we have named Isaiah, Ezekiel, John the revelator, Paul, William Clayton and "many others" of the Prophet's day, the Ephesian Saints, and "all the saints who held communion with the general assembly and Church of the Firstborn." (Teachings, p. 151.)

For our day, the Prophet Joseph Smith is the classical example of one who was sealed up unto eternal life, Of him the revelation states: "I am the Lord thy God, and will be with thee even unto the end of the world, and through all eternity; for verily I seal upon you your exaltation, and prepare a throne for you in the kingdom of my Father, with Abraham your father." (D. & C. 132:49.) Obviously if it applies to Isaiah and Ezekiel, it applies also to Jeremiah, Samuel, Moses, Joshua and all of the prophets; if it applies to Joseph Smith and william Clayton and "many others" in the Prophet's day, certainly a great many of the later worthies of this dispensation are also included; and if a sizeable number of the Ephesian Saints were so classified, then surely the same applies to like groups of the saints in Rome, Corinth, Galatia, Philippi, Colosse, Thessalonica, and in all the places where the Meridian Saints were congregated, If Paul and John are part of the group, so also are Peter, james, Titus, Jude, Matthew, the other apostles, and many of the preachers of righteousness of the ancient day.

And can there be any question that the same was true among the Nephites? And Jaredites? That it included all of the City of Zion and those who were thereafter caught up to heaven to dwell with Enoch and his translated brethren? And if this glorious principle has always operated in days of past, is it beyond reason that it is still sealing blessings upon the heads of the Latter-day Saints? Verily, such is the case now - a situation which we anticipate shall be increasingly so as the Millennium approaches, during which period the sealing power and all its attendant blessings will abound on every side.

As with all the blessings of the gospel, the glorious reality of having one's calling and election made sure is within the power of the faithful saints to obtain, including both men and women.

How many of the saints have or shall make their calling and election sure?

There is no more an answer to this question that there was to the query put to Jesus: "Lord, are there few that be saved?" to which he answered: "Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able" (Luke 13:23-24), by which he meant to teach that though the total saved will be many they are few as compared to the masses of men. And so it is among the saints with reference to being sealed up unto eternal life: though many shall so obtain, they will be few compared to the total population of the Church.
It is in this sense that Jesus used the enigmatic expression, "Many are called, but few are chosen." (Matt. 22:14.) Called to what? Chosen for what? Called into the Church, called to the holy priesthood, called to receive all the blessings of the gospel, including the crowing blessings of eternal life. Chosen to inherit the blessings offered through the gospel and the priesthood; chosen for eternal life and exaltation. Called to the Church, but chosen to be sealed up unto eternal life and to have one's calling and election made sure.
"How many will be able to abide a celestial law, and go through and receive their exaltation," the Prophet said, "I am unable to say, as many are called, but few are chosen." (Teachings, p. 331.)
And from the Lord himself we have these words: "There are many who have been ordained among you, whom I have called but few of them are chosen. They who are not chosen have sinned a very grievous sin, in that they are walking in darkness at noon-day.
... If you keep not my commandments, the love of the Father shall not continue with you, therefore you shall walk in darkness." (D. & C. 95:5-6, 12.) Also: "There has been a day of calling, but the time has come for a day of choosing; and let those be chosen that are worthy. And it shall be manifest unto my servant, by the voice of the Spirit, those that are chosen; and they shall be sanctified." (105:35-36.) And, finally, as to reason why so few of the saints shall be saved, we have this great and inspired utterance of the Prophet: "Behold, there are many called, but few are chosen. And why are they not chosen? Because their hearts are set so much upon the things of this world, and aspire to the honors of men, that they do not learn this one lesson - That the rights of the priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven, and that the powers of heaven cannot be controlled nor handled only upon the principles of righteousness. That they may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, or vain ambition, or to exercise control or dominion or compulsion upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold, the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn, Amen to the priesthood or the authority of that man. Behold, ere he is aware, he is left unto himself, to kick against the pricks, to persecute the saints, and to fight against God. We have learned by sad experience that it is the nature and disposition of almost all men, as soon as they get a little authority, as they suppose, they will immediately begin to exercise unrighteous dominion. Hence many are called, but few are chosen." (D. & C. 121:35-40.)
And now to return to Peter's pleading that the saints make their calling and election sure.

1-19. "There are three grand secrets lying in this chapter," the Prophet said, "which no man can dig out, unless by the light of revelation, and which unlock the whole chapter, as the things that are written are only hints of things which exist in the prophets mind, which are not written concerning eternal glory. I am going to take up this subject by virtue of the knowledge of God in me, which I have received from heaven." (Teachings, p. 304.) And it is these teachings of Joseph Smith which we have essayed to put forth in the foregoing discussion.
These are the three secrets: "1st key: Knowledge is the power of salvation. 2nd key: Make your calling and election sure: 3rd key: It is one thing to be on the mount and hear the excellent voice, etc., and another to hear the voice declare to you, You have a part and lot in that kingdom." (Teachings p. 306.)
1. Like precious faith with us] Peter is writing to those who believe as he and the other apostles believe. The doctrines he is about to present are beyond the comprehension of uninspired men; they can only be understood by the power of the Spirit which the saints receive at baptism.
2-10. The Prophet taught: "It is not wisdom that we should have all knowledge at once presented before us; but that we should have a little at a time; then we can comprehend it....Add to your faith knowledge, etc. The principle of knowledge is the principle of salvation. This principle can be comprehended by the faithful and diligent; and every one that does not obtain knowledge sufficient to be saved will be condemned. The principle of salvation is given us through the knowledge of Jesus Christ." (Teachings, p. 297.)
Also: "contend earnestly for the like precious faith with the Apostle Peter, 'and add to your faith virtue,' knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity; 'for if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.' Another point, after having all these qualifications, he lays this injunction upon the people 'to make your calling and election sure.' He is emphatic upon this subject - after adding all this virtue, knowledge, etc., 'Make your calling and election sure.' What is the secret - the starting point? 'According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness.' How did he obtain all things? Through the knowledge of him who hath called him. There could not anything be given, pertaining to life an godliness, withou8t knowledge. Woe! woe! woe to Christendom! - especially the divines and priests if this be true.
"Salvation is for a man to be saved from all his enemies; for until a man can triumph over death, he is not saved. A knowledge of the priesthood alone will do this." (Teachings, p. 305.)
3. All things that pertain unto life and godliness] The true saints have every doctrine, law, key, and power needed to gain eternal life and become like God.
Called us to glory and virtue] Called us to that eternal life which none but the clean can inherit, for "no unclean thing can enter into his kingdom." (3 Ne. 27:19.)
4. Exceeding great and precious promises] Promises of eternal life, which is "the greatest of all the gifts of God." (D. & C. 14:7.)
Partakers of the divine nature] Become as God is, enjoying to the full every characteristic, perfection, and attribute which he possesses and which dwell in him independently.
5-19. Joseph Smith said: "Now, there is some grand secret here, and keys to unlock the subject. Notwithstanding the apostle exhorts them to add to their faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, etc., yet he exhorts them to make their calling and election sure. And though they had heard an audible voice from heaven bearing testimony that Jesus was the Son of god; yet he says we have a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed as unto a light shining in a dark place. Now, wherein could they have a more sure word of prophecy that to hear the voice of God saying, this is my beloved Son. "Now for the secret and grand key. Though they might here the voice of God and know that Jesus was the Son of God, this would be no evidence that their election and calling was made sure, that they had part with Christ, and were joint-heirs with him. They then would want that more sure word of prophecy, that they were sealed in the heavens and had the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God. Then, having this promise sealed unto them, it was an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast. Though the thunders might roll and lightnings flash, and earthquakes bellow, and war gather thick around, yet this hope and knowledge would support the soul in every hour of trial, trouble and tribulation. Then knowledge through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is the grand key that unlocks the glories and mysteries of the kingdom of heaven. "Compare this principle once with Christendom at the present day, and were are they, with all their boasted religion, piety and sacredness while at the same time they are crying out against prophets, apostles, angels, revelations, prophesying and visions, etc. Why, they are just ripening for the damnation of hell. They will be damned, for they reject the most glorious principle of the Gospel of Jesus Christ and treat with disdain and trample under foot the key that unlocks the heavens and puts in our possession the glories of the celestial world. Yes, I say, such will be damned, with all their professed godliness. Then I would exhort you to go on and continue to call upon God until you make your calling and election sure for yourselves, by obtaining this more sure word of prophecy, and wait patiently for the promise until you obtain it." (Teachings, pp. 298-299.)

5-7. The attributes of godliness here listed are the ones which qualify the Lord's ministers for effective service on his errand, and all his saints for eternal life in his kingdom. Salvation must be won, and to go where God is, we must be like him; and to be like him we must possess the character, perfections, and attributes which he possesses. "And faith, hope, charity and love, with an eye single to the glory of God, qualify him for the work. Remember faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence." (D. & C. 4:5-6.)

5. Faith] See Commentary I, pp. 523-525; Mormon doctrine, 2nd ed., pp. 261-267.

Virtue] Moral excellence and rectitude in every field, including personal chastity. To his saints the lord decrees: "Ye must practice virtue and holiness before me continually." (D. & C. 46:33.)

Knowledge] An understanding of and familiarity with gospel truth; a clear perception of eternal truth; enlightenment and learning about God and his laws. Thus, "A man is saved no faster than he gets knowledge" (Teachings, p.217), of God and his laws; and "It is impossible for a man to be saved in ignorance" (D. & C. 131:6), of Jesus Christ and the saving principles of the gospel. Accordingly, "the word of knowledge" (1 Cor. 12:8) is one of the gifts of the Spirit.

6. Temperance] See Commentary ii, pp. 482-484.

Patience] See Jas. 5:7-11.

Godliness] See 2 Tim. 2:14-26.

7. Brotherly kindness] "In their pursuit of godly graces the saints are exhorted, 'And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.' (Eph. 4:32; D. & C. 4:6; 121:42.) Kindness embraces an interest in another's welfare and a disposition to be helpful. The kind are tender, gracious, benevolent, well-disposed, and exhibit sympathy and humanness toward their fellow men." (Mormon doctrine, 2nd ed., pp. 413-414.)

Charity] See Commentary II, pp. 377-380.

8. None can comprehend the knowledge of God, of Christ, and of the gospel unless he himself possesses the attributes of godliness, for the knowledge of spiritual things comes only by revelation, and until a person gains godly attributes he cannot receive the Spirit from whom revelations comes.

9. Purged from his old sins] By baptism and the receipt of the gift of the Holy Ghost.
10. Those who keep the commandments shall be saved; they cannot fall; and every saint who walks continually in paths of truth and righteousness shall have his calling and election made sure.
11. Those saints who keep the commandments shall gain an inheritance in the highest heaven in the celestial kingdom.
13. I am in the tabernacle] 14. Shortly I must put off this tabernacle] Peter here recounts his experience with James and John on the Mount of Transfiguration when those chosen three were eyewitnesses of our Lord's transfiguration and when they heard the voice of the Father, and then says there is something even greater than this. "And what could be more sure? When he was transfigured on the mount, what could be more sure to them?" the Prophet asks. (Teachings, p. 303.) The answer is to gain the personal revelation that one is sealed up unto eternal life.
19. "The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that he is sealed up unto eternal life, by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood." (D. & C. 131:5.) "The anointing and sealing is to be called, elected and made sure." (Teachings, p. 323.) "Let us suppose a case," the Prophet says. "Suppose the great God who dwells in heaven should reveal himself to Father Cutler here, by the opening heavens, and tell him, I offer up a decree that whatsoever you seal on earth with your decree, I will seal it in heaven; you have the power then; can it be taken off? No. Then what you seal on earth, by the keys of Elijah, is sealed in heaven; and this is the power of Elijah, and this is the difference between the spirit and power of Elias and Elijah; for while the spirit of Elias is a forerunner, the power of elijah is sufficient to make our calling and election sure; and the same doctrine, where we are exhorted to go on to perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of laying on of hands, resurrection of the dead, etc.... Here is the doctrine of election that the world has quarreled so much about; but they do not know anything about it." (Teachings, p. 338.)
Until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts] Until the Second Coming of the Lord; until the Millennial day dawns; until the day when "the root and the offspring of David" who is "the bright and morning star" (Rev. 22:16) shall rein personally on earth and be the companion, confidant, and friend of those whose calling and election is sure and who are thus called forth as "kings and priests" to live and "reign on earth" (Rev. 5:10) with him a thousand years.

Calling And Election
Those members of the Church who devote themselves wholly to righteousness, living by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God, making their calling and election sure. That is, they receive the more sure word of prophecy, which means that the Lord seals their exaltation upon them while they are yet in this life. Peter summarized the course of righteousness which the saints must pursue to make their calling and election sure and then (referring to his experience on the Mount of Transfiguration with James and John) said that those three had received this more sure word of prophecy. (2 Pet. 1.)
Joseph Smith taught: "After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter." To receive the other Comforter is to have Christ appear to him and to see the visions of eternity. (Teachings, pp. 149-151.)

Thus, as the Prophet also said, "The more sure word of prophecy means a man's knowing that his is sealed up unto eternal life, by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood." (D. & C. 131:5.) Those so favored of the Lord are sealed up against all manner of sin and blasphemy except the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost and the shedding of innocent blood. That is, their exaltation is assured; their calling and election is made sure, because they have obeyed the fulness of God's laws and have overcome the world. Though such persons "shall commit any sin or transgression of the new and everlasting covenant whatever, and all manner of blasphemies, and if they commit no murder wherein they shed innocent blood, yet they shall come forth in the first resurrection, and enter in to their exaltation." (D. & C. 132:26.)
The Lord says to them: "Ye shall come forth in the first resurrection; . . . and shall inherit thrones, kingdome, principalities, and powers, dominions, all hights and depths." (D. & C. 132:19.) The Prophet, for one, had this seal placed upon him. That is, he knew "by revelation and the spirit of prophecy, through the power of the Holy Priesthood," that he would attain godhood in the world to come. To him Deity said: "I am the Lord thy God, and will be with thee even unto the end of the world, and through all eternity; for verily I seal upon you your exaltation, and prepare a throne for you in the kingdom of my Father, with Abraham your father." (D. & C. 132:49.)
It should be clearly understood that these high blessings are not part of celestial marriage. "Blessings pronounced upon couples in connection with celestial marriage are conditioned upon the subsequent faithfulness of the participating parties." (Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 2, pp. 46-47.) (Mormon Doctrine, p 109-110)

Children of the covenant
According to the terms of the covenant which God made with Abraham, all of the literal seed of that great prophet are entitled to receive the gospel, the priesthood, and all the ordiances [even the crowning ordinaces] of salvation and exaltation. (Abra. 2:9-11; D. & C. 86:8-11.) When any of those descendants do receive all of these things, "They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, adn the church and kingdom, and the elect of God." (D. & C. 84:34.) [1. This means they are called and elected through priesthood ordiances, 2. They then need to make this calling and election sure with the seal of the Holy Ghost.....] They are then children of the covenant, that is, they are inheritors of the fulness of the blessings appertaining to the new and everlasting covenant which is the gospel. [This means that they receive all the fulness of the priesthood and have received all even the ordince, anointing, election, sealing of kings and queens, priests and priestesses and have the crowning blessings of the new and everlasting covenant of marriage sealed upon them.] "Ye are the children fo the covenant" (3 Ne. 20:24-27), our Lord told the Nephites among whom he ministered, a distinction which the faithful saints of this dispensation also enjoy. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 126.)

Church of Enoch
Their callings and elections were made sure, and they were all assured of membership in the Church of the Firstborn and of an inheritance of exaltation in the eternal worlds. Those so favored were, of course, with Christ in his resurrection. (D. & C. 133:54-56.)

Election

The elect are chosen even "before the foundation of the world,: yet no one is unconditionally elected to eternal life. Each must, for himself, harken to the gospel and receive its ordiances and covenants from the hands of the servants of the Lord in order to obtain salvation. If one is elected but does not serve, his election could be said to have been in vain, as Paul expressed in 2 Cor. 6:1.

...Those who are faithful and diligent in the gospel in mortality receive an even more desirable election in this life, and become the elect of God. These receive the promise of a fulness of God's glory in eternity (D&C 84:33-41). The concept held by many that God unconditionally elected some to be saved and some to be damned without any effort, action, or choice on their part is not correct, for the scriptures teach that it is only by faith and obedience that one's calling and election is made sure (2 Pet. 1; D&C 131:5). (Bible Dictionary, p. 662-663).

Election of Grace ...if the full blessings of salvation are to follow, the doctrine of election must operate twice. First, righteous spirits are elected or chosen to come to mortality as heirs of special blessings. Then, they must be called and elected again in this life, an occurrence which takes place when they join the true Chruch. (D. & C. 53:1.)

Finally, in order to reap eternal salvation, they must press forward in obedient devotion to the truth until they make their "calling and election sure" (2 Pet. 1), that is, are "sealed up unto eternal life." (D. & C. 131:5.) (Mormon Doctrine p. 217).

Elect Lady

An elect lady is a female member of the Church who has already received, or who through obedience is qualified to receive, the fulness of gospel blessings. This includes [1] temple endowments, [2] celestial marriage, and [3] the fulness of the sealing power. She is one who has been elected or chosen by faithfulness as a daughter of God in this life, and heir of God, a member of his household. Her position is comparable to that of the elders who magnify their callings in the preisthood and thereby receive all that the Father hath. (D. & C. 84:38.)

In the early days of this dispensation Emma Smith, the Prophet's wife, was in such complete harmony with the Lord's porgram that he forgave her of her sins and addressed her as an elect lady. (D. & C. 25:1-3; History of the Chruch, vol. 4, p. 552.) John the Beloved used a similar salutation to certain chosen women in his day. (2 John 1, 13.) Just as it is possible for the very elect to be deceived, and to fall from grace through disobedience, so an elect lady, by failing to endure to the end, can lose her chosen status. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 217).

[Emma, Fanny, apostles, buffitings of saintan.....]

Elect of God

The elect of God comprise a very select group, an inner circle of faithful members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. They are the portion of church members who are striving with all their hearts to keep the fulness of the gospel law in this life so that they can become inheritors of the fulness of gospel rewards in the life to come.

As far as a male sex is concerned, they are the ones, the Lord says, who have the Melchizedek Priesthood conferred upon them and who thereafter magnify their callings and are sanctified by the Spirit. In this way, "They become the sons of Moses and of Aaron and the seed of Abraham, and the chruch and kingdom, and the elect of God." [Temple Endowment] They keep "the oath and covenant which belongeth to the priesthood," and are rewarded with the fulness of the Father's kingdom. (D. & C. 84:33-41) [New and everlasting Covenant of marriage].

To gain this elect status they must [1] be endowed in the temple of the Lord (D. & C. 95:8), [2] enter that "order of the priesthood" named "the new and everlasting covenant of marriage" (D. & C. 131:1-4), and [3] overcome by faith until, as the sons of God, they merit membership in the Church of the Firstborn. (D. & C. 76:50-70, 94-96.) The elect of God are the chosen of God; and he has said: "There are many who have been ordained among you, whom I have called but few of them are chosen." (D. & C. 95:5; 121:34-40.)
This is the day in which the Lord is gathering his elect, those who hear his voice and harden not their hearts (D. & C. 29:7), from the four quarters of the earth (D. & C. 33:6), so that if they continue to abide in his word, they shall have an eventual salvation in his presence. This is the day of which the Lord spoke: "I will bring forth a seed out of Jacob, and out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains: and mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands" (Isa. 65:22), for the earth and the fulness thereof shall then be theirs. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 217-218).

Elijah the Prophet
His latter-day mission was to "restore the authority and deliver the keys of the priesthood, in order that all the ordances may be attended to in righteousness.... Why send Elijah? Because he holds the keys of the authority to administer in all the ordinances of the priesthood; and without the authority is given, the ordinances could not be administered in righteousness." (Teachings, p. 172.)
"The spirit, power, and calling of Elijah is," the Prophet also taught, "that ye have power to hold the key of the revelations, ordiances, oracles, powers and endowments of the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood and of the kingdom of God on the earth; and to receive, obtain, and perform all the ordinances belonging to the kingdom of God, even unto the turning of the hearts of the fathers unto the children, and the hearts of the children unto the fathers, even those who are in heaven....
"This is the spirit of Elijah, [1] that we redeem our dead, and [2] connect ourselves with our fathers which are in heaven, and [3] seal up our dead to come forth in the first resurrection; and here is the power of Elijah to seal those who dwell on earth to those who dwell in heaven. This is the power of Elijah and the keys of the kingdom of Jehovah." (Teachings, pp. 337-338.)
"How shall God come to the rescue of this generation?" the Prophet asked. "He will send Elijah the Prophet....Elijah shall reveal the covenants to seal the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the children to the fathers. The anointing and sealing is to be [1] called, [2] elected, and [3] made sure." (Teachings, p. 323.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 224-225).

[Here we see a number of significant things:
1. The spirit, power, and calling of Elijah is to bestow the Fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood-which is to receive all the ordiances of the temple.

"...to seal those who dwell on earth to those who dwell in heaven" (Teachings, pp. 337-338.)

3. We learn that it is the power in the to seal up our dead [and ourselves to come forth in the first resurrection which is a joint sealing contained in the New and Everlasting Covenant of Celestial mariage. (D & C 132:19.)

4."It is to seal the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the children to the fathers." (Teachings, p. 323.)
This is contained as part of the joint blessing that husband and wife receive together or not at all; That of sealing children to parents all the way back to Adam and Eve and from them to Our heavenly Father and Mother for this is a Joint blessing or not at all.
5. The Power of Elijah which is fulfilled within the New and Everlasting Covenant contains the following:
" The anointing and sealing is to be [1] called [to join the church and receive the fulness of the priesthood], [2] elected [to receive the Melchizedek Priesthood and the New and everlasting covenant of Celestial Marriage, and [3] the crowning ordinance of the Fulness of the Melchizedek Preisthood in the New and Everlasting Covenant of Marriage is to receive the fulness of the priesthood to be annointed and made a king and priest and queen and preistess and become a member of the Church of the Firstborn and all these are then to be sealed] and made sure [by 1. the sealing power of the Priesthood and 2. the ratifing seal of the Holy Ghost..." (Teachings, p. 323.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 224).

July 30, 1989
Explained to my dear sweet bride the principle of calling and election made sure.
1. We are called to join the church and keep all the commandments.
2. We are elected together, jointly, when we receive the preisthood and the New and everlasting covenant of marriage
3. We then press forward in faithfulness until we become king and queen, priest and priestess and calling and election is sealed upon us or made sure by the priesthood.
4. As in all higher priesthood ordiances of the gospel the Crowning one in Celestial marriage is held jointly by the bride and bridegroom together neither trully hold it separatle it is a joint sealing as with all the sealings in the New and ever lasting covenant of Celestial Marriage...
These are the priesthood ordiances or Christ puting his priesthood seal apon us and presenting us to the Father. And then the Holy Ghost putting his ratifing Seal (the holy seal of promise upon the priesthood sealing that it is in force.)

Holy Spirit of Promise
The Holy Spirit of Promise is the Holy Spirit promised the saints, or in otherwords the Holy Ghost. This name-title is used in connection with the sealing and ratifying power of the Holy Ghost, that is, the power given him to ratify and approve the righteous acts of men so that those acts will be binding on earth and in heaven. "All covenants, contracts bonds, obligations, oaths vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations must be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise, if they are to have "efficacy, virtue, or force in and after the resurrection from the dead; for all contracts that are not made unto this end have an end when men are dead." (D. & C. 132:7.) To seal is to ratify, to justify, or to approve. Thus an act which is sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise is one which is ratified by the Holy Ghost; [How can something be ratified or approved if it has not already occurred... It can't. It first has to be preformed by the priesthood-thus the words "by him who is anointed" then ratifing seal that its right and correct by the Holy Ghost is put on the Priesthood ordiance and sealing.]is is one which is aproved by the Lord; and the person who has taken the obligation upon himself is justified by the Spirit in the thing he has done. The ratifying seal of approval is put upon an act only if those entering the contract are worthy as a result of personal righteousness to receive the the divine approbation. [Approbation means approval] They "are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, which the Father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true." (D. & C. 76:53.) If they are not just and true and worthy the ratifing seal is withheld.

When any ordiance or contract [Something entered into by the authority of the Priesthood or Name of Christ] is sealed by the Spirit, it is approved with a promise of reward, provided unrighteousness does not thereafter break the seal, remove the ratifying approval, and cause loss of the promised blessing [by the Priesthood (Christ) and the Holy Spirit]. (Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 1, p. 55; vol. 2, pp 94-99.) Seals are palced on contracts through righteousness.

The operation and power of the Holy Spirit of Promise is best illustrated by teh ordinance and contract of baptism. An unworthy candidate for baptism might deceive the elders and get the ordiance performed, but no one can lie to the Holy Ghost and get by undetected. Accordingly, the baptism of an unworthy and unrepentant person whold not be sealed by the Spirit; it would not be ratified by the Holy Ghost; the unworthy person would not be justified by the Spirit in his actions. If therafter he vecame worthy through repentance and obedience, the seal would then be put in force. Somilarly, if a worthy person is baptized, with the ratifying approval of the Holy Ghost attendin the performance, yet the seal may be broken by subsequent sin.

These principles also apply to every other ordiance and performance int he Church. Thus if both parties are "just and true," if they are worthy, a ratifying seal is placed on their temple marriage; if they are unworthy, they are not justified by the Spirit and the ratification of teh Holy Ghost is withheld. Subsequent worthiness will put the seal in force, and unrighteousness will break any seal.

Even if a person progresses to the state of near-perfection in which his calling and election is made sure, in which he is "sealed up unto eternal life" (D. & C. 131: 5; 132:18-26), in which he receives "the promise...of eternal life" (D. & C. 88:3-4), in which he is "sealed up unto the day of redemption" (D. & C. 124:124; Eph. 1:13)--yet with it all, these great promises are secured only if the "performances" are sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 361-362.)

A good illistration of this is a double signiture checking system.
The check represents the ordiance or act.
The two persons singing the Check are [1] Christ (or his priesthood representitives) and [2] The Holy Ghost.
The Bank represents heaven.
The Casier represents the Father.

A person, you or me, performs some act whereby we to receive the blessings of heaven from the bank. We get the Preisthood brethren who holds the keys to fill out the check with all the limits of the ordiance and sign it. He sings it and puts his seal or name upon it and give it to us. If we took it to the bank the Cashier who represents the Father bounce the check and would say you cannot receive the blessings of the Kingdom because you don't have the ratifing seal of the other signiture.

When you receive both signitures then the Cashier, the Father will say you may enter into the kingdom, he cashes the check and gives you the promised reward.

If the holy Ghost puts his seal upon you and your spouce and says you have received and accepted your calling and elections and they have been made sure, and you have a part in the kingdom of heaven. You have only one signiture on the check or the ordiance and the Father will bounce it until you receive the priesthood performance or sealing making your calling and election sure.

How does one know if they are sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise: "I will tell you in your mind and in your heart, by the Holy Ghost which shall come upon you and which shall dwell in hour heart," And then the Lord how all things will be known unto us "Now, behold, this is the spirit of revelation." (D&C 8:2-3.)

Justification What is the law of justification? It is simply this: "All covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations" (D. & C. 132:7), in which men must abide to be saved and exalted, must be entered into and performed in righteousness so that the Holy Spirit can justify the canidate for salvation in what has been done. (1 Ne. 16:2; Jac. 2:13-14; Alma 41:15; D. & C. 98: 132:1, 62.) An act that is justified by the Spirit is one that is sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise, or in other words, ratified and approved by the Holy Ghost. This law of justification is the provision the Lord has placed in the gospel to assure that no unrighteous performance will be binding on earth and in heaven, and that no person will add to his position or glory in the hereafter by gaining an unearned blessing. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 408.)

Keys of Salvation
The President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints holds the keys of salvation for all men now living because he is the only one by whose authorization the sealing power of the priesthood can be used to seal men up to salvation and exaltation in the kingdom of God. (D. & C. 132:7.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 132:7.)

Whenever the fulness of the gospel is on the earth, the Lord has agents to whom he gives power to bind on earth and seal eternally in the heavens. (Matt. 16:19; 18:18; Hela. 10:3-10; D. & C. 132:46-49.) This sealing power, restored in this dispensation by Elijah the Prophet (D. & C. 2: 1-3; 110:13-16), is the means whereby "All covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations" attain "efficacy, virtue, or force in and after the resurrection from the dead." (D. & C. 132:7.)
All things that are not sealed by this power have an end when men are dead. Unless baptism has this seal, it will not admit a person to the celestial kingdom; unless an eternal marriage covenant is sealed by this authority, it will not take the participating parties to an exaltation in the highest heaven within the celestial world.
All things gain enduring force and validity because of the sealing power. So comprehensive is this power that it embraces ordiances performed for the living and the dead, seals the children on earth up to their fathers who went before, and forms the enduring patriarchal chain that will exist eternally among exalted beings. (Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 2, pp. 115-128.) (Mormon Doctrine, p. 684.)

Gospel Mysteries

Jesus Discourses on the Two Comforters

These statements about the two Comforters climax and crown the teachings of the Son of God. We have no record of anything he ever said which can completely withdraw the curtain of eternity and open to the faithful a vision of the glories of God. Based on love, born of obedience, Jesus promises the saints that they can have, here and now in this life, the following:
(1) The gift and constant companionship of the Holy Ghost;

[a] the comfort and peace which it is the function of the Holy Spirit to bestow;

[b] the revelation and th sanctifying power which alone will prepare men for the companionship of gods and angels here after;

(2) Personal visitations from the Second Comforter, the Lord Jesus Christ himself, the resurrected and perfected being who dwells with his Father in the mansions on high; and
(3) God the Father--mark it well Phillip!--shall

[a] visit man in person,

[b] take up his abode with him, as it were, and [c] reveal to him all the hidden mysteries of his kingdom.

Joseph Smith, as the Holy Ghost poured light and revelation into his soul, said this about the two Comforters: "There are two Comforters spoken of. One is the Holy Ghost, the same as given on the day of Pentecost, and that all Saints receive after faith, repentance, adn baptism. This first Comforter or Holy Ghost has no other effect than pure intelligence. It is more powerful in expanding the mind, enlightening the understanding, and storing the intellect with present knowledge, of a man who is of the literal seed of Abraham, than one that is a Gentile, though it may not have half as much visible effect upon the body; for as the Holy Ghost falls upon one of the literal seed of Abraham, it is calm and serene; and his whole soul and body are only exercised by the pure spirit of intelligence; while the effect of the Holy Ghost upon a Gentile, is to purge out the old blood, and make him actually of the seed of Abraham. That man that has none of the blood of Abraham (naturally) must have a new creation by the Holy Ghost. In such a case, there may be more of a powerful effect upon the body, and visible to the eye, than upon an Israelite, while the Israelite at first might be far before the Gentile in pure intelligence.
"The other Comforter spoken of is a subject of great interest, and perhaps understood by few of this generation. After a person has faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost (by the laying on of hands), which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and his election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter, which the Lord hath promised the saints, as is recorded in the testimony of St. John, in the 14th chapter, from the 12th to the 27the verses. Note the 16, 17, 18, 21, 23 verses....

"Now what is this other Comforter. It is no more nor less than the Lord Jesus Christ himself; and this is the sum and substance of the whole matter; that when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him, or appear unto him from time to time, and even he will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him, and the Lord will teach him face to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of the kingdom of God; and this is the state and place the ancient saints arrived at when they had such glorious visions--Isaiah, Ezekiel, John upon the Isle of Patmos, St. Paul in the three heavens, and all the saints who held communion with the general assembly and Church of the First Born." (Teachings, pp. 149-151.) (DNTC 1, p. 735-736.)

Ephesians 1:13-14
In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of yur salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise,
Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory.

The Holy Spirit of Promise is the Holy Spirit promised the saints, or in otherwords the Holy Ghost. This name-title is used in connection with the sealing and ratifying power of the Holy Ghost, that is, the power given him to ratify and approve the righteous acts of men so that those acts will be binding on earth and in heaven. "All covenants, contracts bonds, obligations, oaths vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations must be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise, if they are to have "efficacy, virtue, or force in and after the resurrection from the dead; for all contracts that are not made unto this end have an end when men are dead." (D. & C. 132:7.) To seal is to ratify, to justify, or to approve. Thus an act which is sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise is one which is ratified by the Holy Ghost; [How can something be ratified or approved if it has not already occurred... It can't. It first has to be preformed by the priesthood-thus the words "by him who is anointed" then ratifing seal that its right and correct by the Holy Ghost is put on the Priesthood ordiance and sealing.]is is one which is aproved by the Lord; and the person who has taken the obligation upon himself is justified by the Spirit in the thing he has done. The ratifying seal of approval is put upon an act only if those entering the contract are worthy as a result of personal righteousness to receive the the divine approbation. [Approbation means approval] They "are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, which the Father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true." (D. & C. 76:53.) If they are not just and true and worthy the ratifing seal is withheld.
When any ordiance or contract [Something entered into by the authority of the Priesthood or Name of Christ] is sealed by the Spirit, it is approved with a promise of reward, provided unrighteousness does not thereafter break the seal, remove the ratifying approval, and cause loss of the promised blessing [by the Priesthood (Christ) and the Holy Spirit]. (Doctrines of Salvation, vol. 1, p. 55; vol. 2, pp 94-99.) Seals are palced on contracts through righteousness.
The operation and power of the Holy Spirit of Promise is best illustrated by teh ordinance and contract of baptism. An unworthy candidate for baptism might deceive the elders and get the ordiance performed, but no one can lie to the Holy Ghost and get by undetected. Accordingly, the baptism of an unworthy and unrepentant person whold not be sealed by the Spirit; it would not be ratified by the Holy Ghost; the unworthy person would not be justified by the Spirit in his actions. If therafter he vecame worthy through repentance and obedience, the seal would then be put in force. Somilarly, if a worthy person is baptized, with the ratifying approval of the Holy Ghost attendin the performance, yet the seal may be broken by subsequent sin.

These principles also apply to every other ordiance and performance int he Church. Thus if both parties are "just and true," if they are worthy, a ratifying seal is placed on their temple marriage; if they are unworthy, they are not justified by the Spirit and the ratification of teh Holy Ghost is withheld. Subsequent worthiness will put the seal in force, and unrighteousness will break any seal.
Even if a person progresses to the state of near-perfection in which his calling and election is made sure, in which he is "sealed up unto eternal life" (D. & C. 131: 5; 132:18-26), in which he receives "the promise...of eternal life" (D. & C. 88:3-4), in which he is "sealed up unto the day of redemption" (D. & C. 124:124; Eph. 1:13)--yet with it all, these great promises are secured only if the "performances" are sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise. (Mormon Doctrine, p. 361-362.)

Joseph Smith said that the particular seal placed upon these Ephesians Saints was that their calling and elections had been made sure. (Teachings, pp. 149-151.) Theirs was the same promise and assurance given certain worthy persons in this dispensation to whom the Lord said: "Wherefore, I now send upon you another Comforter, even upon you my friends, that it may abide in your hearts, even the Holy Spirit of promise; which other Comforter is the same that I promised unto my disciples, as is recorded in the testimony of John. This Comforter is the promise which I give unto you of eternal life, even the glory of the celestial kingdom; Which glory is that of the church of the Firstborn, even of God, the holiest of all, through Jesus Christ his Son." (D.& C. 88:3-5)

Earnest of our inheritance Earnest is something of value given to bind a bargain. Here God himself, by giving the ratifying seal of the Spirit, is guaranteeing campliance with his own covenant and promise, the promise of an inheritance of eternal life.

The redemption of the purchased possession
Christ has pruchased his saints, that is, those who are his have been "bought with a price" (1 Cor. 6:20), the price being his own "precious blood." (1 Pet. 1:19.) Now, these Ephesian Saints, building upon the foundation of our Loud's atoning sacrifice, having made their callings and elections sure; they have, in effect, worked out their salvation; they have pruchased, by good works, an everlasting inheritance with him who purchased them with his blood. (D. & C. 132:26.) (DNTC 2, p. 493-495.)

Colossians 3:1-4
If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.
Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth.
For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God.
When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory.

Gospel Mysteries

Your life is hid with Christ in God
'Your calling and election has been made sure; you have been sealed up unto eternal life; the Lord has said unto you, "Son thou shalt be exalted" [did the Lord say this to Joseph Smith before or after his second annointing][good point- he said it to me before]; you have received the more sure word of prophecy.'
On May 16, 1843, Joseph Smith gave the following interpretation of Paul's phrase: "Putting my hand,: the Prophet said, "on the knee of William Clayton, I said: 'Your life is hid with Christ in God, and so are many others. Nothing but the unpardonable sin can prevent you from inheriting eternal life for you are sealed up by the power of the priesthood unto eternal life, haven taken the step necessary for that purpose. (History of the Chruch, vol. 5, p 391.) (DNTC 3, p 34-35.)

Here we see:
1. We are sealed up by the priesthood as was Clayton
2. We are sealed up by the words of the Father by the power of the Holy Ghost as was Joseph Smith and this can come one before the other..... But must have both - it is like a two signiture check...
3. Sealed up by and act from the priesthood
4. Sealed up by the power of the Holy Ghost....

We which have believed do enter into rest
"True saints enter into the rest of the Lord while in this life and by abiding in the truth, they continue in tht blessed state until they rest with the Lord in heaven. (Moro. 7:3; D. & C. 84:17-25; Matt. 11:28-30; Heb. 3:7-19; 4:1-11.) The rest of the Lord, where mortals are concerned, is to gain a perfect knowledge of the divinity of the great latter-day work. 'It means entering into the knowledge and love of God, having faith in his purpose and in his plan, to such an extent that we know we are right, and that we are not hunting for something else; we are not distrubed by every wind of doctrine, or by the cunning and craftiness of men who lie in wait to deceive." It is "rest from the religious turmoil of the world; from the cry that is going forth, here and there--lo, here is Christ; lo, there is Christ." (Gospel Doctrine, 5th ed., pp. 58, 121-126.) The rest of the Lord, in eternity, is to inherit eternal life, to gain the fulness of the Lord's glory. (D. & C. 84:24.)" (Mormon Doctrine, 2nd ed., p. 633.) (DNTC 3, p. 151.)

Hebrews 6:10-20
He sware by himself] "By himself have I sworn, saith the Lord," was the language used by Deity in giving the promise of eternal life "unto Abraham." (Gen 22:15-16.) That is, God swore with an oath in his won name that Abraham would be saved, which divine assertation absolutely guaranteed the eventuality. Abraham's calling and election was thus made sure.
14. The Lord's oath to Abraham was: "In blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore.... And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." (Gen. 22:17-18.) By way of interpretation, the Lord said to Joseph Smith: "Abraham received promises concerning his seed, and of the fruit of his loins--from whose loins ye are, namely, my servant Joseph--which were to continue so long as they were in the world; and as touching Abraham and his seed, out of the world they should continue; both in the world and out of the world whould they continue as innumerable as the stars; or, if ye were to count the sand upon the seashore ye could not number them." (D. & C. 132:30.)

15. He obtained the promise] Abraham's seed, the house of Israel, the children of the prophets, those who are natural inheritors of the promises made to Abraham. (3 Ne. 20:25-26.) These heirs have the "right" to the priesthood. Speaking of this the Lord said to Abraham concerning his seed: "Igive unto thee a promise that this right shall continue in thee, and in thy seed after thee (that is to say, the literal seed, or the seed of the body) shall all the families of the earth be blessed, even with the blessings of th Gospel, which are the blessings of salvation, even of life eternal." (Abra. 2:11.)

The elect lady
"An elect lady is a female member of the Church who has already received, or who through obedience is qualified to receive, the fulness of gospel blessings. This includes [1] temple endowments, [2] celestial marriage, and [3] the fulness of the sealing power. She is one who has been elected and chosen faithfulness as a daughter of God in this life, an heir of God, a member of his household. Her position is comparable to that of the elders who magnify their callings in the priesthood and thereby receive all that the Father hath. (D. & C. 84:38.) (DNTC 3, p. 410.)

And now we learn that after the converts are made, after there kindreds of the earth, there will be those among them who advance and progress until they become kings and priests. See Rev. 1:1-6; 5:1-14; 20:4-6. John here sees 144,000 of these kings and priests, 12,000 from each tribe, converted, baptized, endowed, married for eternity, and finally sealed up unto eterhal life, having their callings and elections made sure. See 2 Pet. 1:1-19. (DNTC 3, p. 491.)

Rev. 7:3
Saying, Hurt not the earth, niether the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads.

Sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads] Of this sealing the Prophet Joseph Smith said: "Four destroying angels holding power over the four quarters of the earth until the servants of God are sealed in their foreheads, which signifies sealing the blessing upon their heads, meaning the everlasting covenant, thereby making their calling and election made sure, none so involved shall be lost [guaranteed]; all shall come forth to an inheritance of glory and exaltation in the kingdom of God. [Also, an unnumbered multitude.] (DNTC 3, p. 492.)

The keys and power to restore the Ten Tribes to their former high status in Israel, and to lead them from their unknown places of lodgement in the lands north of Canaan and Assyria, where given by Moses to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery on April 3, 1836. (D. & C. 110:11.) These keys now reside in the President of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. That the remnants of Israel shall be restroed before the Second Coming of the Son of Man is evident from the fact that 12,000 from each tribe are to receive the restored gospel, and theat through the ordiances of the Lord's house they are to become kings and priets, who shall administer the blessings of the everlasting gospel to the Lord's elect. (D. & C. 77:9-11.) [Those who have been called and elected these shall seal them up and make their callings and ellections sure, this work shall be done for the living and the dead as they shall dwell do their work in the temple's day and night. Probable sealers...]

Gospel Mysteries

As the servants of God have their calling and election made sure when they are "sealed...in their foreheads" (Rev. 7:2-8), (DNTC 3, p. 524.)
A perfect description of exalted beings! For, as with the 144,000, so with all of whom the glorified Lord says, "Ye shall be even as I am." (3 Ne. 28:10.) (DNTC 3, p. 527.)

Christ is king of kings and lord of lords.
Revelation 19:16
And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.

A name written, that no man knew] As with all glorified beings, our Lord has a new name in celestial exaltation, a name [1] known to and [2] comprehended by those only who know God in the sense that they have become as he is and have eternal life. See Rev. 2:12-17. Thus, Christ's "new name" shall be written upon all those who are joint-heirs with him (Rev. 3:12), and shall signify that they have become even as he is and he is even as the Father. (3 Ne. 28:10.) [In otherwords our names shall also become KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.] (DNTC 3, p. 567.)

All men of whatever rank, status or position are now and everlastingly shall be subject to Christ our Lord who is King over all. But in the great and eternal plan of salvation, as joint heirs with the Father's natural Son, all exalted beings shall become kings, priests, lords and gods. Christ thus becomes a King of Kings, a Priest of Priests, a Lord of Lords, a God of Gods. (Mormon Doctrin, 2nd ed., pp. 322-323; 424; 451.) (DNTC 3, p. 568.).

Rev 22:4-5
And they shall see his face; and his name shall be in their foreheads.
And their shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveht them lighe: and they shall riegn for ever and ever.

They shall see his face] They shall dwell in the presence of God and the Lamb and have personal communion and intercourse with them. Man shall converse with God, as when " a man speaketh unto his friend." (Ex. 33:11.)

They shall reign for ever and ever] "Then shall they be gods." (D. & C. 132:20.) "Every man who reigns in celestial glory is a God to his dominions." (Teachings, p. 374.) (DNTC 3, p. 589.)

The "fulness of the gospel" refers to all of the laws and commandments of God. The Lord said that the scriptures were given for "the salvation of mine own elect; for they will hear my voice, and shall see me...." (D & C 35:20-21)

> The chosen vessels unto God are the kings and priests that are placed at the head of these kingdoms. These have received their washings and anointings in the time of god on this earth; they have been chosen, ordained, and anointed kings and priests, to reign as such in the resurrection of the just. Such as have not received the fulness of the priesthood, and have not been anointed an ordained in the temple of the Most High, may obtain salvation in the celestial kingdom, but not a celestial crown. Many are called to enjoy a celestial glory, yet few are chosen to wear a celestial crown or rather, to be rulers in the celestial kingdom. (Mill. Star 9:23-24)

Brigham H. Roberts

"Make your calling and election sure. This is more important than plural marriage or any other principle of the Gospel--make your calling and election sure! See to it that you KNOW the Savior while in this life. You must know Jesus Christ, perorally, while in this probation."

THE CREATION. FALL & REDEMPTION OF THE EARTH

Compiled by Richard Ware

1. The earth was organized near the throne of God and fell from there and took up its present orbit around the sun. (5.9,12)

2. This earth was baptized with water (flood), and at the second coming will receive its baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost. Then throughout the Millennium it will be endowed with Terrestrial glory. Finally it will die and resurrect and become a celestial orb. (4)

3. This earth has the potential of becoming exalted to one of the highest kingdoms ever exalted in the eternities. (6)

4. This earth was created out of the fragments of other planets.

5. Several fragments have left this earth over the period of mortal time. These fragments will return to the earth in the reverse order of which they left. (1.2,3,7,8.10.11.12.13)

THE CREATION. FALL & REDEMPTION OF THE EARTH

1. Journal of Samuel Holister Rogers. p. 8; BYU Archives; 1840

The winter following [1840] I attended a public meeting held in Vincent Knight's house. at which the Prophet Joseph Smith gave the following instructions:
When this world was first made it was a tremendous big thing. The Lord concluded it was too big. We read in the Scriptures that in the days of Peleg the earth was divided. so the Lord divided the earth. When the ten tribes of the children of Israel went into the north country he divided it again, so the earth has been divided and subdivided. We also read in the scriptures that the earth shall reel to and fro like a drunken man. What shall cause this earth to reel to and fro like a drunken man? We read that the stars shall fall to the earth like a fig falling from a fig tree. When these stars return to the place where they were taken from. it will cause the earth to reel to and fro. Not that the planets will come squarely against each other in such a case both planets would be broken to pieces; but in their rolling motion they will come together where they were taken from, which will cause the earth to reel to and fro.

2. Millennial Star No 10 Vol 1:258; Feb 1841; Questions by Elder Joseph Fielding answered by Elder Parley P. Pratt.

Question: How can the stars fall from heaven to earth when they (as far as we know) are much larger than the earth?

Answer. We are nowhere given to understand that all the stars will fall or even many of them; but only "as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken with a mighty wind." The stars which will fall to the earth, are fragments which have been broken off from the earth from time to time, in the mighty convulsions of nature. Some in the days of Enoch, some perhaps in the days of Peleg, some with the ten tribes, and some at the crucifixion of the Messiah. These all must be restored again at the "times of restitution of all things." This will restore the ten tribes of Israel; and also bring again Zion, even Enoch's city. It will bring back the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God: that you and I may partake of it. (See Revelations 2:7) When these fragments (some of which are vastly larger than the present earth) are brought back and joined to this earth, it will cause a convulsion of all nature: the graves of the saints will be opened and they will rise from the dead; while the mountains will flow down, the valleys rise, the sea retire to its own place, the islands and continents will be removed, and the earth be rolled together as a scroll. The earth will be many times larger than it is now. "If I have told you of earthly things and ye believe not: what would you think if you were to be told of heavenly things?"

3. Journal of Wandle Mace. 1809-1890; Typescript. p. 48-50; May 2. 1842.

I took my skiff and crossed the river to Nauvoo. to attend meeting, Joseph addressed the congregation, and as if for my special benefit, touched upon this subject which opened a new field for reflection to me. His subject was, the "restitution of all things spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began", quoting the 21st verse of the third chapter of Acts of the apostles. In the course of his remarks he spoke of the earth being divided at various times. He said "When Enoch and his city was taken away, a portion of the earth was taken and would again be restored. Also in the days of Peleg, the earth was divided, see Genesis lOth chapter, 25th verse." He then referred to the 'ten tribes', saying "You know a long time ago in the days of Salmanezer, king of Assyria when the ten tribes were taken away, and never been heard of since." He said the earth will be restored as at the beginning, and the last taken away will be the first to return, for the last shall be first, and the first shall be last in all things." He illustrated the return by saying "some of you brethren have been coming up the river on a steamboat, and while seated at the table, the steamboat ran against a snag which upset the table and scattered the dishes; so it will be when these portions of earth return. It will make the earth reel to and fro like a drunken man" quoting the 24th chapter of Isaiah 20th verse. When speaking of the return of the ten tribes, he said "the mountains of ice shall flow down at their presence," and a highway shall be cast up in the midst of the great deep.
These remarks satisfied me, it was no longer necessary to hunt the place on this earth where the ten tribes were so long hidden, for the earth was divided and taken away, and it will be the first to return, as it was the last taken away.

"He shall command the great deep, and it shall be driven back into the north countries, and the islands shall become one land."
"And the land of Jerusalem and the land of Zion shall be turned back into their own place, and the earth shall be like as it was in the days before it was divided. See appendix. Doctrine & Covenants.
I will introduce a poem upon this subject, by sister E. R. Snow, as it was published in the Millennial Star 1852. Entitled An Address To The Earth

Thou, earth, was once a glorious sphere of noble magnitude,
And didst with majesty appear, among the worlds of God.
But thy dimensions have been torn asunder, piece by piece,
And each dismembered fragment born abroad to distant space.
When Enoch could no longer stay amid corruption here,
Part of thyself was born away to form another sphere.
That portion where the city stood He gained by right approved;
And nearer to the Throne of God His planet upward moved.

And when the Lord saw fit to hide the "ten lost tribes" away,
Thou, earth, was severed to provide the orb on which they stay. And thus, from time to time thy size has been diminished, till Thou seem'st the law of sacrifice created to fulfill.

The curse of God on man was place: that curse thou didst partake,
And thou hast been by turns disgraced and honored for his sake. The vilest wretches hell will claim now breathe thy atmosphere, The Noblest spirits heaven can name have been embodied here.

Jesus the Lord thy surface graced; he fell a sacrifice;
And now within thy cold embrace the martyred Joseph lies.
When Satan's hosts are overcome, the martyred princely race,
Will claim thee their celestial home thy royal dwelling place.

A "restitution" yet must come, that will to them restore,
By the grand law of worlds, thy sum of matter heretofore.
And thou, 0 earth. will leave the track thou hast been doomed to trace
The Gods with shouts will bring thee back to fill thy native place.

4. J.D. 1:332; not dated, but abt 1854; Orson Pratt

Righteousness will abide upon its [the earth] face, during a thousand years, and the Saviour will bless it with his personal presence: after which the end soon comes, and the earth itself will die, and its elements be dissolved through the agency of a fire. This death, or dissolution of the earth is a penalty of the original sin....But all mankind are made alive from the first death through the resurrection, so that the earth will again be renewed, its elements will again be collected, they will be recombined and reorganized as when it first issued from the womb of chaos.

Sun., July 13 ... in the p.m. Br. Brigham spoke...said that when this world was first made it was in a close proximity to God. When man sinned it was hurled millions of miles away from its first position and that was why it was called the Fall. Spoke of the goodness of God in providing Salvation for all the human race that had not sinned against the Holy Ghost.

6. J.D. 10:175; Brigham Young; May 24, 1863

I suppose this is one of the lowest kingdoms that ever the Lord Almighty created and on that account is capable of becoming exalted to be one of the highest kingdoms that has ever had an exaltation in all the eternities. In proportion as it has been reduced so it will be exalted, with that portion of its inhabitants who in their humiliation have cleaved to righteousness and acknowledged God in all things.

7. The Life and Labors of Wilford Woodruff, by Matthias F. Cowley, p. 448; September, 1867.

The leaders on their return from Provo made a visit to Logan. Here, President Young is quoted as saying that the ten tribes of Israel are on a portion of the earth, -- a portion separated from the main land. This view is also expressed in one of the sacrificial hymns written by Eliza R. Snow:

And when the Lord saw fit to hide
The ten lost tribes away,
Thou, earth, was severed to provide
The orb on which they stay.

8. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; March 30, 1873; CHO/Ms/f/115

30. President Young said Joseph the Prophet told me that the garden of Eden was in Jackson Co., Missouri, and when Adam was driven out of the garden of Eden he went about 40 miles to the place which we named Adam-Ondi-Ahman, and there built an alter of stone and offered sacrifice. That alter remains to this day. I saw it as Adam left it, as did many others, and through all the revolutions of the world that alter had not been disturbed. Joseph also said that when the city of Enoch fled and was translated it was where the gulf of Mexico now is, it left that gulf a body of water.

9. J.D. 17:143; Brigham Young; July 19, 1874; 14th Ward Assembly Room; Funeral services of Elder Thomas Williams.

This earth is our home, it was framed expressly for the habitation of those who are faithful to God, and who prove themselves worthy to inherit the earth when the Lord shall have sanctified, purified and glorified it and brought it back into his presence, from which it fell far into space. Ask the astronomer how far we are from the nearest of those heavenly bodies that are called the fixed stars. Can he count the miles? It would be a task for him to tell us the distance. When the earth was framed and brought into existence and man was placed upon it. it was near the throne of our Father in heaven. And when man fell -- though that was designed in the economy, there was nothing about it mysterious or unknown to the Gods, they understood it all, it was all planned -but when man fell, the earth fell into space, and took up its abode in this planetary system, and the sun became our light. This is the glory the earth came from, and when it is glorified it will return again unto the presence of the Father, and it will dwell there, and these intelligent beings that I am looking at, if they live worthy of it, will dwell upon this earth.

MORMON GEOLOGY

How the School Superintendent Deals with World Making.

John Taylor, the ruffianly apostle and newly elected Territorial school superintendent, has been trying his 'aprentice hand' at lecturing on geology, or rather, upon worlds and world making. According to Brother Taylor, the generally accepted theory about the formation of this world is wrong; the geologic periods are all humbug, as the fossiliferous remains found on the earth do not, properly considered, belong to it. He says the fossil remains of extinct animals and vegetables, do not belong to our planet. Originally the universe was made up of little worlds, which became violently agitated and flew to pieces. In the general wreck God conceived the notion of patching up a new footstool from the detached pieces of the defunct worlds, which he had hurled back into chaos by a thundering storm of his divine wrath. This world is much larger than any of those little fellows who were used to swing around the circle and play hide-and go-seek through space. It is made up, at least, our new apostolic Territorial superintendent says so, of the ends and sides and small fragments of those broken worlds tumbled together promiscuously by our Great Creator. The remains of the mastodon belonged to some other world originally, and not to our planet; the pterodactyl to another world; the dinotherium to yet another, and so on to the end of the list.
We understand this apostolic school superintendent intends to direct the affairs of the Territorial schools by inspiration--on a high spiritual basis; adopt the Book of Mormon and other Church works as text books, and generally make the course of instruction at the public schools as much of a spiritual nature as possible. Now, we like John's practical notions of geology, because they are so essential to qualify the young Saints for future usefulness. Light matters like common schools and an English education are not of so much consequence.

11. History of the Organization of the Seventies, p. 12; 1878
Joseph Young, President of First Council of Seventy

Joseph Smith said, on another occasion, in the hearing of some of the saints still surviving, that the City of Enoch would again take its place in the identical spot from which it had been detached, now forming that chasm of the earth, filled with water, called the Gulf of Mexico.

12. Journal of Charles L. Walker; Monday, October 18, 1880; Typescript, p. 35

Mon., Oct. 18, 1880. . .Bro. Everett said that he heard Joseph say that the earth had been divided and parts taken away but the time would come when all would be restored and the earth again would revolve in its original orbit next to Kolob and would be second in size to it.

13. Journal of Charles L. Walker, 1881

Feb 11. Some remarks were made by sister Green stating that she heard Eliza

Snow speak of the 9 1/2 lost tribes being on an orb and would eventually come back to their former place and we should know when they came by certain signs &c. &c.

Sun., Mar 6, 1881. At night we went to meeting. Bro. Jacob Gates spoke. . . said he heard Joseph Smith say when he was at Bishop Partridges house in Far West Missouri, concerning the lost ten tribes, they are hid from us by land and air, said bishop Partridge, I guess they are by land and water in a doubting manner as if Joseph did not know what he was talking about. Yes, said Joseph, by land and air they are hid from us in such a manner and at such an angle that the astronomers cannot get their telescopes to bear on them from this earth.

Thurs, Mar 10, 1881. At night paid sister Eliza R. Snow a short visit and had some conversation with her on the dividing of the earth. She told me that she heard the prophet say that when the ten tribes were taken away the Lord cut the earth in two, Joseph striking his left hand in the center with the edge of his right to illustrate the idea and that they (the ten tribes) were on an orb or planet by themselves and when they return with the portion of this earth that was taken away with them the coming together of these 1 bodies or orbs would cause a shock and make the "earth reel to and fro like a drunken man." She also stated that he said the earth was now 90 times smaller now than when first created or organized.

14. The Contributor, Vol 10:265; Brigham H. Roberts; 1889

The Prophet Joseph Smith is credited with having said that our planet was made up of the fragments of a planet which previously existed; some mighty convulsions disrupted that creation and made it desolate. Both its animal and vegetable life forms were destroyed. And when those convulsions ceased, and the rent earth was again consolidated, and it became desirable to replenish it, the work was begun by making a mist to rise that it might descend in gentle rain upon the barren earth, that it might again be fruitful. Then came one of the sons of God to the earth---Adam. A garden was planted in Eden and the man placed in it.

15. A Compendium of the Doctrines of the Gospel. p. 271; by Franklin D. Richards & James A. Little; 1925 ed.

The world and the earth are not synonymous terms. The world is the human family. This earth was organized or formed out of other planets which were broken up and remodeled and made into one on which we live. The elements are eternal....In the translation "without form and void," it should read "empty and desolate." The word created should be "formed or organized." (Joseph Smith)

2. History of the Church, Vol. 2:197, Oliver Cowdery, Sunday, February 15, 1835.

He (O. Cowdery) then read again, from the revelation, what the Lord said unto the Twelve. Brethren, you have had your duty presented in this revelation. You have been ordained to this holy Priesthood, you have received it from those who have the power and authority from an angel....

Never cease striving until you have seen God face to face. Strengthen your faith; cast off your doubts, your sins, and all your unbelief; and nothing can prevent you from coming to God. Your ordination is not full and complete till God has laid His hand upon you. We require as much to qualify us as did those who have gone before us; God is the same. If the Savior in former days laid His hands upon His disciples, why not in latter days? * * *

Remember, you are not to go to other nations till you receive your endowments. Tarry at Kirtland until you are endowed with power from on high. You need a fountain of wisdom, knowledge and intelligence such as you never had. Relative to the endowment, I make a remark or two, that there may be no mistake. The world cannot receive the things of God. He can endow you without worldly pomp or great parade. He can give you that wisdom, that intelligence, and that power, which characterized the ancient saints, and now characterizes the inhabitants of the upper world.

3. History of the Church, Vol. 2:218, Joseph Smith, March 1835.

The school in Kirtland closed the last week in March, to give the Elders an opportunity to go forth and proclaim the Gospel, preparatory to the endowment.

4. History of the Church, Vol. 2:307-310, Joseph Smith, Thursday, November 12, 1835.

This evening, at 6 o'clock, met with the Council of the Twelve, by their request. Nine of them were present. Council opened by singing and prayer. And I made some remarks as follows---

The Prophet's Remarks to the Twelve

....I supposed I had established this Church on a permanent foundation when I went to Missouri, and indeed I did so, for if I had been taken away, it would have been enough, but I yet live, and therefore God requires more at my hands. The item to which I wish the more particularly to call your attention to-night, is the ordinance of washing of feet. This we have not done as yet, but it is necessary now, as much as it was in the days of the Savior; and we must have a place prepared, that we may attend to this ordinance aside from the world.

We have not desired as much from the hand of the Lord through faith and obedience, as we ought to have done, yet we have enjoyed great blessings, and we are not so sensible of this as we should be....The house of the Lord must be prepared, and the solemn assembly called and organized in it, according to the order of the house of God; and in it we must attend to the ordinance of washing of feet. It was never intended for any but official members. It is calculated to unite out hearts, that we may be one in feeling and sentiment, and that our faith may be strong, so that Satan cannot overthrow us, nor have any power over us here.

The endowment you are so anxious about, you cannot comprehend now, nor could Gabriel explain it to the understanding of your dark minds; but strive to be prepared in your hearts, be faithful in all things, that when we meet in the solemn assembly, that is, when such as God shall name out of all the official members shall meet, we must be clean every whit. Let us be faithful and silent, brethren, and if God gives you a manifestation, keep it to yourselves; be watchful and prayerful, and you shall have a prelude of those joys that God will pour out on that day. Do not watch for iniquity in each other, if you do you will not get an endowment, for God will not bestow it on such...

You need an endowment, brethren, in order that you may be prepared and able to overcome all things; and those that reject your testimony will be damned....But let me tell you that you will not have power, after the endowment to heal those that have not faith, nor to benefit them, for you might as well expect to benefit a devil in hell...

pp. 4-5 (Jan 16, 1836): the Postscript, "met in the evening with bro. Joseph Smith, Jr. at his house, in company with bro. John Corrill, and after pure water was prepared, called upon the Lord (p. 5) and proceeded to wash each other's bodies, and bathe the same with whiskey, perfumed with cinnamon. This we did that we might be clean before the Lord for the Sabbath, confessing our sins and covenanting to be faithful to God. While performing this washing unto the Lord with solemnity, our minds were filled with many reflections upon the propriety of the same, and how the priests anciently used to wash always before ministering before the Lord. As we had nearly finished this purification, bro. Martin Harris came in and was also washed."

--p. 7 (Jan 21, 1836): This morning, at 15 minutes past nine my little daughter is 5 months old. O Lord, I thank thee that thou hast thus been merciful and spared my only child. At about three o'clock p.m. I assembled in our office garret, having all things prepared for the occasion, with presidents Joseph Smith, Jr. F. G. Williams, Sidney Rigdon, Hyrum Smith, David Whitmer, John Whitmer and elder John Corrill, and washed our bodies with pure water before the Lord, preparatory to the anointing with the holy oil. After we were washed, our bodies were perfumed with a sweet smelling oderous wash. At evening the presidents of the church, with the two bishops and their counsellors, and elder Warren Parrish, met in the president's room, the high councils of Kirtland and Zion in their rooms. Those named in the first room were annointed with the same kind of oil and in the man[ner?] that were Moses and Aaron, and those who stood before the Lord in ancient days, and those in the other room with anointing oil prepared for them. The glorious scene is too great to be described in this book, therefore, I only say, that the heavens were opened to many, and great and marvelous things were shown.

21st. Having previously washed once or twice, the presidency with Bishop Whitney and his counsel, myself & my counsellors met for the purpose of being annointed with Holy oil. Meeting was opened by Prest. Joseph Smith, Jun., in behalf of the Presidency, Bishop Whitney in behalf of himself and counsellors, and myself in behalf of myself & counsellors. Then the presidency proceeded to sanctify the oil. Br. Joseph Smith, Jun., first anointed his father, pronouncing blessings upon him; then all the presidents beginning at the oldest rubbed their hand over his head & face, which had been annointed. Then Br. J. prayed to the Lord to accept of the anointing and all the Presidency with right hand uplifted to Heaven said Amen. Father Smith then proceeded to take the lead and pour on the oil; then Br. J. followed and then in rotation as before described, prophesying, &c., on one anothers heads. After the presidents, Bishop Whitney & his counsel were annointed after the same manner, then myself and counsel, then Br. Parrish as scribe for the presidency. After this Hyrum Smith annointed Father John Smith who annointed the rest of the High Council of Kirtland. Br. David Whitmer annointed Br. Simeon Carter, who annointed the High Council from Zion. Hymns were sung & a number saw visions & others were blessed with the outpouring of the Holy Ghost, and we shouted Hosanna to the Most High. The meeting was dismissed (p. 3) Br. J. S. Jun, conferring the benedictions of Heaven upon us.

The 22d. The forenoon was taken up in telling the visions of the preceding evening. We met in the evening for the purpose of anointing the traveling High Council, and the 7 Presidents of the 70. The Presidents of the Church anointed Br. Carlos Smith as President of the High Priests in Kirtland. Prest. J. S. Jun., requested Prest. Sidney Rigdon to ask the Lord to accept the performances of the evening, and instructed us, when he was done, to shout Hosannah, Blessed be the name of the Most High God. These things were performed; the shout & speaking in unknown tongues lasted 10 or 15 minutes. During the evening, more especially at the time of shouting, a number saw visions as they disclosed unto us.

8. History of the Church, Vol. 2:385; Joseph Smith; Sunday, January 24, 1836.

In the evening met the Presidency in the chamber over the printing room, and counseled on the subject of endowment, and the preparation for the solemn assembly, which is to be called when the house of the Lord is finished.

9. Edward Partridge Journal; Meetings - Kirtland 1836; d.1423/- f.159; typescript; 26 Jan - 6 Feb 1836.

The 26th. Mr. J. Seixas, our Hebrew teacher, met with us for the first time. After about 4 or 5 days he divided the class. I was taken into the first class.

The Priests, Teachers, and Deacons met 2 or 3 evenings, about the last of Jan., for the purpose of being anointed.

Bishop Whitney and counsel and myself and my counsel met and anointed them. After the anointing was over, each man asked the Lord to bless them and seal upon them the blessings that had been pronounced upon their heads by the Bishops and their counsellors. Bishop Whitney then asked the Lord to seal the blessings that had been pronounced upon the heads of his brethren. After he was through we shouted Hosanna 3 times, to God and the Lamb, Amen, Amen, and Amen.

The 6th. Evening all the quorms met, and had all the blessings sealed by the Presidency of the Church; at the close of the ceremony we all shouted, agreeably to the above described order.

--p. 12 (Feb 6, 1836): In the evening met with the presidency any (sic?) quorums in the Lord's house, when their anointing blessings were sealed by uplifted hands and praises to God. Many saw visions, many prophesied, and many spake in tongues. Closed a little before 12 o'clock.

--pp. 21-22 (Mar 27, 1836): Sunday the 27th attended on the dedication of the Lord's house. For the particulars of this great event see my account written by myself and printed in the March No. of the Messenger and Advocate, signed C. In the evening I met with the officers of the church in the Lord's house. The Spirit poured out--I saw the glory of God, like a great cloud, come down and rest upon the house, and fill the same like a mighty rushing wind. I also saw [p. 22] cloven tongues, like as of fire rest upon many. (for there were 316 present,) while they spake with other tongues and prophesied.

11. Edward Partridge Journal; Meetings - Kirtland 1836; d.1423/ f.159; typescript; 27 - 31 March 1836.

Sunday the 27th. Met and dedicated the House of the Lord. Prest. Rigdon preached in the forenoon. Prest. J. Smith, Jun., made many remarks and delivered the dedication prayer. Meet at 8 morn & dismissed 1/4 past 4 afternoon. Met again in the evening, that is, the Authorities of the Church. Many spoke in tongues; some saw visions, &c. Doct. F. G. Williams saw an angel or rather the Savior, during the forenoon service.

Tuesday the 29th. The 9 presidents, the two Bishops and their counsel met in the afternoon in the House of the Lord. We cleansed our hands and faces and feet, after which we had our feet washed in the name of the Lord; this took till dusk. We then partook of bread and wine, a feast. We prophesied and spoke in tongues & shouted Hosannas. The meeting lasted till daylight.

Wednesday all the officers of the Church met at 9 o'clock in the Lord's House, the Priests, Teachers & Deacons in one corner, the vails having been let down, and the other officers occupied the rest of the lower room. The washing of feet was performed by noon, then they began to prophecy and speak in tongues adding shouts of Hosannas to God and the Lamb with Amen and Amen. This continued till dark, when they partook of a feast of bread and wine. The meeting was kept up till morning, the shouts were omitted during the night.

Thursday 31st. We met from 8 to 9 to accommodate those who could not get in at the Sunday dedication. The house was about filled and similar ceremonies performed that were performed on Sunday. This meeting rather surpassed the Sunday meeting, both in length & goodness. Wednesday the 6th we had a prayer meeting from 9 to 4.

13. Journal of Jeremiah Willey; CHO/d.1422/ f.159/Copy 1; pp. 10-12; 1836.

I spent the night in the temple in prayer and fasting; the spirit of the Lord rested upon us, April 6 the presidency of the Church, the Twelve Apostles, and other quorums met in solemn assembly and sealed upon us our washings, anointings and blessings - with a loud shout of Hosannah to God and the Lamb, the Spirit of the Lord rested upon us after spending three hours in the upper room, the quorums rejoined to the lower court. The Veils were lowered and the ordinance of washing of feet was administered. After this ordinance the veils of the temple were pulled up and the prophet addressed the Elders for three hours. Clothed with the power and spirit of God he unbosomed his feelings in the House of his friends and gave much instruction. He urged upon us the absolute necessity of giving strict heed to his teachings and counsel and the revelations of the Lord to the Church and us in all things, that Zion and her stakes may be redeemed and established no more to be thrown down. He said that the kings of the earth would yet come to behold the glory of Zion and that great and glorious blessings would be bestowed upon the Saints in the Last Days. Hyrum Smith bore testimony and was followed by Oliver Cowdery, who exhorted the Elders to keep within the bounds of their knowledge and let the mystery of the kingdom alone, for the Gentiles had not a knowledge even of the first principles of the Gospel. He said it is far better to preach what the people would call the small of the kingdom than to enter into the visions of Isaiah, Ezekiel and John. The Twelve broke bread, which was distributed to the multitude who eat and were filled. Thanks were returned and the meeting closed. The house was again filled at Candle Light. Pres. Joseph Smith requested the Elders to speak their feelings freely and sing, exhort and pray as the spirit would give utterance. The meeting continued during the whole night. Many of the gifts were poured out upon the people; at Break of Day we were dismissed. I also spent the night of the Y in the Temple with several of the Elders in prayer and praise. Before the Lord the Holy Ghost rested upon us and the spirit of prophecy was given and many things were shown by the Holy Spirit.

14. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; Tuesday, April 4, 1837.

Met at the house of Elder Hales at one o'clock in the afternoon, in the company of twenty-three Elders for the purpose of attending to the ordinance of washing. President Joseph Young, who was one of the number, opened the meeting by prayer and we then proceeded with the ordinance. Myself and Elder G. Meeks were the first washed under the hands of President Joseph Young, and we then assisted him in washing our brethren, the Elders. Much of the Holy Spirit rested upon us.

At early candle light we again met together in the quorum of Seventies at the upper part of the Lord's House to receive our anointing. The quorums of the Priests, Teachers, and Deacons occupied one apartment, the Elders another and the Seventies a third; each quorum met for their anointings.

Three of the Presidents met with the Seventies, namely, Joseph Young, Hazen Aldrich and Zebedee Coltrin. After the meeting was opened by prayer those who were to be anointed were suitably addressed, and then the Presidency proceeded to the ordinance by first consecrating the oil. The person then presented for the anointing took a seat and the Presidency laid their hands upon his head and pronounced such blessings upon him as the testimony of Jesus directed. We had truly a glorious season in this solemn ordinance of the House of God. There were fifteen anointed in our quorum. President Coltrin anointed me and pronounced upon my head great blessings which were sealed upon my head in the name of Jesus Christ and responded to by a loud Amen from all present. The meeting closed about 10 o'clock p.m.

15. History of the Church, Vol 5:1-2; Wednesday, 4 May 1842; with footnote at the end of the entry by B. H. Roberts.

Wednesday, 4.--I spent the day in the upper part of the store, that is in my private office (so called because in that room I keep my sacred writings, translate ancient records, and receive revelations) and in my general business office, or lodge room (that is where the Masonic fraternity meet occasionally, for want of a better place) in council with General James Adams, of Springfield, Patriarch Hyrum Smith, Bishops Newell K. Whitney and George Miller, and President [p. 2] Brigham Young and Elders Heber C. Kimball and Willard Richards, instructing them in the principles and order of the Priesthood, attending to washings, anointings, endowments and the communication of keys pertaining to the Aaronic Priesthood, and so on to the highest order of the Melchisedek priesthood, setting forth the order pertaining to the Ancient of Days, and all those plans and principles by which any one is enabled to secure the fullness of those blessings which have been prepared for the Church of the First Born, and come up and abide in the presence of the Eloheim in the eternal worlds. In this council was instituted the ancient order of things for the first time in these last days. And the communications I made to this council were of things spiritual, and to be received only by the spiritual minded; and there was nothing made known to these men but what will be made known to all the Saints of the last days, so soon as they are prepared to receive, and a proper place is prepared to communicate them, even the weakest of the Saints; therefore let the Saints be diligent in building the Temple, and all houses which they have been, or shall hereafter be, commanded of God to build; and wait their time with patience in all meekness, faith, perseverance unto the end, knowing assuredly that all these things referred to in this council are always governed by the principle of revelation.

Footnote: This is the Prophet's account of the introduction of the Endowment ceremonies in this dispensation, and is the foundation of the sacred ritual of the temples. There has been some controversies as to the time when these ceremonies were introduced into the Church. A sect styling itself the "Re-organized Church," even goes so far as to claim that these ceremonies were not introduced into the Church by the Prophet Joseph Smith at all, but on the contrary claim that they had their origin with Brigham Young and the Apostles who followed him in the migration from Nauvoo to Great Salt Lake Valley in Utah. The evidence, however, against such claims, is overwhelming. First, the statement of the Prophet in the text above. Second, a previous allusion to the same thing in his remarks at Nauvoo, on the 6th of January, 1842. (See History of the Church, Vol. IV p. 492) Third, the same ceremonies are referred to in the Revelation of Jan. 19, 1841, in which washings, anointings, conversations, statutes, judgments, etc., are explicitly referred to. (History of the Church, Vol. IV, p. 277.) In addition to this evi- [p. 3] dence also Ebenezer Robinson, associate editor of the Times and Seasons when that periodical was founded by Don Carlos Smith and himself, and who at the death of Don Carlos Smith, 1841, became editor-in-chief of that periodical, and so continued until the 15th of March, 1842--declares that such ceremonies as are alluded to in the text were inaugurated by special action of the Prophet as early as 1843. Mr. Robinson subsequently left the Church, but when in 1890, the aforesaid self- styled "Re-organized Church" persisted in claiming that Joseph Smith the Prophet did not inaugurate these Temple ceremonies, he published an article in the magazine he was then conducting, called the Return, in which he bears emphatic testimony to the effect above stated, namely, that all these ceremonies were introduced into the Church by the Prophet Joseph Smith at least as early as 1843. (See The Return, Vol. II, No. 4, p. 252.)

May 4.--I met with Joseph, Hyrum, Heber, Willard, Bishops Whitney and Miller, and Gen. James Adams, in Joseph's private office, where Joseph taught the ancient order of things for the first time in these last days, and received my washings, anointings and endowments.

I have in my possession a daily journal, writen by my father, of events which transpired in Nauvoo in 1842, 1843 and 1844, from which I extract the following:

`Strange Events'

"In June 1842, I was invited [initiated] into the ancient order--was washed and anointed, sealed and ordained a Priest, etc., in company with nine others, viz: Joseph Smith, Hyrum Smith, William Law, William Marks, Judge Adams, Brigham Young, Willard Richards, George Miller and N. K. Whitney.

"January, 1844, my wife, Vilate and many females were received into the Holy order and were washed and anointed by Emma Smith."

Brigham Young speaking at the 14th Ward Meeting in Salt Lake City, 26 July 1872:

Gospel Mysteries

(BY) Showed that the old members of the Church were fast passing away, that lived when the Prophet Joseph was alive Said that he was the only one alive out of seven that the prophet revealed the Endowments and sealing to viz Hyrum Smith Heber C. Kimball Bishop Whitney, Willard Richards and himself; the others I do not recollect. [B. Young mentions there were only 7 who received the endowment on May 4, 1842 instead of the correct number of 9, because he wanted to forever delete the names of Wm Law and Wm Marks from the records of the Church since they were apostates and caused persecution to come upon the saints.]

41. Statement by Bathsheba W. Smith; quoted in Temples of the Most High, by N. B. Lundwall; 1952 edition, p. 286; c. end of 1843-beginning of 1844.

I was a resident of Nauvoo, State of Illinois, from 1840 to 1846, I was married to George A. Smith July 25, 1841, Elder Don Carlos Smith performing the ceremony. Near the close of the year 1843, or in the beginning of the year 1844, I received the ordinance of anointing in a room in Sis. Emma Smith's house in Nauvoo, and the same day, in company with my husband, I received my endowment in the upper room over the Prophet Joseph Smith's Store. The endowments were given under the direction of the Prophet Joseph Smith, who afterwards gave us lectures or instructions in regard to the endowment ceremonies. There has been no change, to my certain knowledge, in these ceremonies. They are the same today as they were then. A short time after I received my anointing, I was sealed to my husband, George A. Smith for time and eternity, by Pres. Brigham Young, in the latter's house, according to the plan taught, to my knowledge, by the Prophet Joseph Smith. When I was married in 1841, I was married for time, and not for eternity.

42. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, pp. 362-363; April 8, 1844.

The declaration this morning is, that as soon as the Temple and baptismal font are prepared, we calculate to give the Elders of Israel their washings and anointings, and attend to those last and more impressive ordinances, without which we cannot obtain celestial thrones. But there must be a holy place prepared for that purpose. There was a proclamation made during the time that the foundation of the Temple was laid to that effect, and there are provisions made until the work is completed, so that men may receive their endowments and be made kings and priests unto the Most High God, having nothing to do with temporal things, but their whole time will be taken up with things pertaining to the house of God. These [sic] must, however, be a place built expressly for that purpose, and for men to be baptized for their dead. It must be built in this central place; for every man who wishes to save his father, mother, brothers, sisters and friends, must go through all the ordinances for each one of them separately, the same as for himself, from baptism to ordination, washing and anointings and receive all the keys and powers of the Priesthood, the same as for himself.

53. Millennial Star, Vol 5:104; Orson Hyde; March 1845.

Before I went east on the 4th of April, we were in council with Brother Joseph almost every day for weeks. Says Brother Joseph, in one of those councils, "There is something going to happen; I don't know what it is, but the Lord bids me to hasten, and give you your endowment before the temple is finished." He conducted us through every ordinance of the holy priesthood, and when he had gone through with all the ordinances he rejoiced very much, and says, "now if they kill me you have got all the keys, and all the ordinances, and you can confer them upon others, and the hosts of Satan will not be able to tear down the kingdom as fast as you will be able to build it up; and now," says he, "on your shoulders will rest the responsibility of leading this people, for the Lord is going to let me rest a while." Now why did he say to the Twelve "on your shoulders will this responsibility rest," why did he not mention Brother Hyrum? The spirit knew that Hyrum would be taken with him, and hence he did not mention his name; Elder Rigdon's name was not mentioned, although he was here all the time, but he did not attend our councils.

54. Millennial Star, Vol. 5:109; Wilford Woodruff; March 1845.

Has the Prophet Joseph found Elder Rigdon in his councils, when he organized the quorum of the Twelve a few months before his death, to prepare them for the endowment? And when they received their endowment, and actually received the keys of the Kingdom of God, and oracles of God, keys of revelation, and the pattern of heavenly things, and thus addressing the Twelve, exclaimed: "Upon your shoulders the kingdom rests, and you must round up your shoulders and bear it, for I have had to do it until now. But now the responsibility rests upon you. It mattereth not what becomes of me." I say, has this been the case with Elder Rigdon in any wise?

55. Millennial Star, Vol. 6:9-10, Appendix; P. P. Pratt, editor; Written in New York; April 6, 1845.

The despised and degraded son of the forest, who has wandered in dejection and sorrow, and suffered reproach, shall then drop his disguise and stand forth in manly dignity, and exclaim to the Gentiles who have envied and sold him---"I am Joseph; does my father yet live?" or, in other words, I am a descendant of that Joseph who was sold into Egypt. You have hated me, and sold me, and thought I was dead; but lo! I live and am heir to the inheritance, titles, honors, priesthood, scepter, crown, throne, and eternal life and dignity of my fathers, who live for evermore.

He shall then be ordained, washed, anointed with holy oil, and arrayed in fine linen, even in the glorious and beautiful garments and royal robes of the high priesthood, which is after the order of the Son of God; and shall enter into the Holy of Holies, there to be crowned with authority and power which shall never end.

The spirit of the Lord shall then descend upon him like the dew upon the mountains of Hermon, and like refreshing showers of rain upon the flowers of Paradise.

His heart shall expand with knowledge, wide as eternity, and his mind shall comprehend the vast creations of his God, and his eternal purpose of redemption, glory, and exaltation, which was devised in heaven before the worlds were organized; but made manifest in these last days, for the fulness of the Gentiles, and for the exaltation of Israel.

He shall also behold his Redeemer, and be filled with His presence, while the cloud of His glory shall be seen in His temple.

A large number of the saints assembled to witness the laying of the capstone on the south-east corner of the Temple.

At six o'clock and eight minutes a.m. Brother Wm. Player commenced spreading the mortar, perfect silence prevailing; the stone being lifted to its place. I stepped on the same and fitted it precisely to its position with the large beetle, at twenty-two past six a.m. the capstone was pronounced set. . . I said: The last stone is now laid upon the Temple and I pray the Almighty in the name of Jesus to defend us in this place and sustain us until the Temple is finished and we have all got our endowments.

On Sunday the 30th. of November 1845 I met with the brethren of ^<the> Quorum, not only of the Twelve but others who had received an endowment during the life-time of Joseph Smith, in the upper room of the Temple for the purpose of dedicating it preparatory to receiving or giving the endowments. The large Room for giving the endowments in is 100 one hundred ^<ninety> feet long and eighty ^<28> feet wide--it was well fitted up and carpeted all over. The brethren had sent in their carpets from all part [sic] the day before. There were also twelve rooms six on each side for that were well fitted up carpeted and furnished for the purposes of the priesthood those rooms were all of a size & were fourteen feet by fourteen feet five inches. The Room on the south East corner was the one occupied by President Brigham Young-the next room next west Br. Heber C. Kimball & President Young ^<together H. C. Kimball & Willard Richards. Willard Richards is Historian which necessarily throws him into that position> the first one being intended partly for an office The third room from the East corner was occupied by Orson Hyde & Parley P. Pratt the fourth by ^<John E. Page> John Taylor &/ George A. Smith & Amasa Lyman-The fifth room by Joseph Young the President of the whole seventies & his council. The sixth room is for a preparation rooms to wash & annoint preparatory to the annointing. All of these rooms were on the south side of the building. [p. 2]

The first room on the north east corner was appropriated to Bishop Whitney & ^<Miller> his coun their Council being intended for the bishopric. the second for the President of the Stake, & the High Priesthood & their Quorum. A number of those were present at the dedication who had heretofore received their endowment. The fifth room was appropriated for the president of the Elders & his Council. the sixth for a preparation Room

The order of the rooms so far as the two east corners is concerned is according to the order of the priesthood in buildings & Temples. It is the order that the first ^<or south East> corner stone ^<viz the south east> that be laid in a Temple should be laid by the president of the ^<whole> Church if present or (see revelation)---

67. History of the Church, Vol. 7:544-545; Brigham Young; Saturday, December 13, 1845.

We continued officiating in the Temple; twenty-five males and twenty females were administered unto.
I drafted rules for the preservation of order in the House of the Lord.

68. History of the Church, Vol. 7:545; Brigham Young; Sunday, December 14, 1845.

The Twelve and others with our wives met in the attic story of the Temple.
After prayer and singing, Elders Isaac Morley and Charles C. Rich administered, and we partook of the sacrament.
I introduced the subject of establishing rules for the preservation of order in the House of the Lord which were agreed to and ordered to be printed. * * *
There is too much covetousness in the church, and too much disposition amongst the brethren to seek after power and has been from the beginning, but this feeling is diminishing and the brethren begin to know better. In consequence of such feelings Joseph (Smith) left the people in the dark on many subjects of importance and they still remain in the dark. We have got to rid such principles from our hearts.
I referred to the manner in which the corner stones of this Temple were laid as published in the Times and Seasons and said that the perfect order would have been for the presidency of the stake to lay the first or southeast corner; the high council the second or southwest corner; the bishops the northeast corner; but the high priests laid the southwest corner, though they had no right to do it.
I spoke of the brethren making objections to persons being permitted to receive the ordinances, and added, that when objections were made I should feel bound to determine whether the person making the objections was a responsible person, and if he is not, I should do as I pleased about listening to the objections; but if he was a responsible person I should listen to them.

To constitute a man responsible he must have the power and ability not only to save himself but to save others; but there are those who are not capable of saving themselves and will have to be saved by others.

When a man objects to another receiving the ordinances he becomes responsible to answer to God for that man's salvation; and who can tell but if he received the ordinances he would be saved, but if we refuse to give him the means he cannot be saved and we are responsible for it.

There is no law to prevent any man from obtaining all the blessings of the priesthood if he will walk according to the commandments, pay his tithes and seek after salvation, but he may deprive himself of them.

After much profitable instruction we united in prayer, Orson Hyde being mouth.

Meeting adjourned for one week.

69. History of the Church, Vol. 7:547-548; Brigham Young; Monday to Saturday, December 15-20, 1845.

Monday, 15---the ordinances of endowment were administered to sixty- four brethren and sisters.

The Twelve and others officiated.

Tuesday, 16---Sixty-nine brethren and sisters received their endowments.

Wednesday, 17---We continued our labors in the Temple, administered the ordinances of endowment to sixty-nine brethren and sisters.

Thursday, 18---Sixty-six persons were administered to in the Temple.

In consequence of the great pressure of business during the past week, it had been decided to devote Saturday to the purpose of washing robes and garments used, but there being a general desire in the minds of all those officiating in the ordinances that the work should not cease; it was determined that the clothes should be washed during the night.

Friday, 19---Ninety-eight persons received ordinances.

Saturday, 20---Ninety-five persons received their ordinances.

One hundred and six persons received ordinances.

Tuesday, 23,---Eighty-seven persons received the ordinances.

Wednesday, 24---All the Twelve have been absent from the Temple the greater part of this day except Orson Pratt. One hundred twenty-two persons received the ordinances.

At 11:20, Elder Heber C. Kimball and I returned to the Temple and remained all night.

Thursday, 25---Six p.m., the high council met for prayer in room No. 4; the high priests met in room No. 8.

One hundred seven persons received their ordinances. The business of the day closed at twenty minutes past ten o'clock, and notice was given that no more washings and anointings would be attended to at present. Brother Kimball and I, with some few others, remained in the Temple all night.

Friday, 26---Elders Heber C. Kimball, Orson Pratt and I were present in the Temple this morning and a few of those who had been officiating: I called them together in the east room about 11:30 a.m., and told them there would be no business done today and that they were all dismissed except the two Brothers Hanson, and three brethren for officers.

I said we shall have no more anointing at present, and if the brethren do not get anything more than they have already received, they have got all they have worked for in building this house; and if there is any more to be received it is because the Lord is merciful and gracious.

The high council and high priests will meet together once a day as usual for prayer.

Two hundred sixty-eight high priests were reported to have received their endowments.

I further remarked, that when we begin again we should pay no respect to quorums. Every man that comes in, is washed and anointed by good men and it makes no difference. Every man that gets his endowments, whether he is a high priest or seventy may go into any part of the world and build up the kingdom if he has the keys. We have been ordained to the Melchizedek priesthood which is the highest order of the priesthood, and it has many branches or appendages.

I said, my feelings were to rest a few days and let the Temple rest, and when we commenced work again I would make a selection of hands who will remain and officiate daily. No persons will be allowed to come in unless they are invited, and I shall feel insulted if they remain here. I felt it impressed upon me to rest a few days and make these regulations, and as our oil is done we cannot do much anyway.

Saturday, 27---Orson Pratt was the only one of the Twelve present in the temple.

72. History of the Church, Vol. 7:564-567; Brigham Young; Monday to Saturday, 5-10 January, 1846.

Monday, 5---8:45 a.m., commenced washing and anointing (i.e. in the Temple). Seventeen bottles of oil were consecrated.

One hundred four persons received their endowments.

Tuesday, 6---Seventeen bottles of oil were consecrated.

Ninety persons received ordinances.

Wednesday, 7---This morning there was an immense crowd at the reception room waiting for admission.

One hundred twenty-one persons received ordinances.
This afternoon, the new altar was used for the first time, and four individuals and their wives were sealed. The altar is about two and one- half feet high and two and one-half feet long and about one foot wide, rising from a platform about 8 or 9 inches high and extending out on all sides about a foot, forming a convenient place to kneel upon. The top of the altar and the platform for kneeling upon are covered with cushions of scarlet damask cloth; the sides of the upright part or body of the altar are covered with white linen.
The Twelve and presiding bishops with their wives were present at the dedication of the altar this afternoon.
Thursday, 8---Eighty-one persons received ordinances.
Friday, 9---One hundred and five persons received ordinances in the Temple. I attended to ordinances at the altar.
Saturday, 10---One hundred and eighteen received ordinances.

On the 12th of January 1846 I received the first degree of my endowment under the hand of the Presidency of the Seventies, was washed anointed with oil ordained to be a King and Priest unto God, in his own due time and introduced through the signs and orders of the Priesthood.

74. History of the Church, Vol. 7:567-569; Brigham Young; Monday to Saturday, 12-17 January 1846.

Monday, 12---One hundred and forty-three persons received their endowments in the Temple. I officiated at the altar. Such has been the anxiety manifested by the saints to receive the ordinances of the Temple, and such the anxiety on our part to administer to them, that I have given myself up entirely to the work of the Lord in the Temple night and day, not taking more than four hours sleep, upon an average, per day, and going home but once a week.
Tuesday, 13---A council was held in the Temple. The captains of fifties and tens made reports of the number in their respective companies, who were prepared to start west immediately, should the persecutions of our enemies compel us to do so.
Friday, 16---A company of about forty saints including a portion of Elder Woodruff's family, consisting of his wife, Phebe, and two children, left Liverpool. . . for New Orleans.
Saturday, 17---Thirty-six persons received ordinances in the Temple.

75. History of the Church, Vol. 7:570-576; Brigham Young; Monday to Saturday, 19-24 January 1846.

Monday, 19---I administered at the altar all day with the exception of thirty minutes in which I took some refreshments.
Tuesday, 20---One hundred and ninety-five persons received ordinances in the Temple.
Public prejudice being so strong against us, and the excitement becoming alarming we determined to continue the administration of the ordinances of endowment night and day.

Wednesday, 21---Two hundred and eight persons received ordinances.

Thursday, 22---One hundred and ninety-eight persons received ordinances in the Temple.

Friday, 23---One hundred and twenty-eight persons received ordinances in the Temple.

Saturday, 24---One hundred and fifty-one persons received ordinances in the Temple. I attended a general meeting of the official members of the church held in the second story of the Temple, for the purpose of arranging the business affairs of the church prior to our exit from this place.

We intend to finish the Temple and the Nauvoo House, as far as putting on the roof and putting in the windows are concerned.

76. History of the Church, Vol. 7:576-578; Brigham Young; Sunday to Saturday, 25-31 January 1846.

Sunday, 25---I attended to ordinances in the Temple.

Monday, 26---Nine a.m., I went to the Temple and commenced the ordinances in the different departments which were set apart for the purpose; the washing and anointing was suspended until tomorrow.

Tuesday, 27---One hundred and twenty-six persons received ordinances.

Elders Heber C. Kimball, Orson Hyde, Parley P. Pratt, Orson Pratt, Amasa Lyman, and I officiated in the higher ordinances.

I officiated at the altar until 10 p.m. and remained in the Temple all night.

Wednesday, 28---One hundred and seventy-two persons received ordinance in the Temple.

Thursday, 29---I continued giving endowments in the Temple in connection with my brethren of the Twelve and others. One hundred and thirty- three persons received ordinances.

Friday, 30---One hundred and seventy-two persons received the ordinances of endowment.

Nine a.m., the (wind) vane was put upon the tower of the Temple.

Saturday, 31---Two hundred and thirty-three persons received ordinances.

77. History of the Church, Vol. 7:578-581; Brigham Young; Sunday to Saturday, 1-7 February 1846.

Sunday, 1---Public meeting in the second story of the Temple.

Monday, 2---Two hundred and thirty-four persons received ordinances.

Ten a.m., the Twelve, Trustees and a few others met in council, to ascertain the feelings of the brethren that were expecting to start westward. We agreed that it was imperatively necessary to start as soon as possible.

. . . after returning to the office made inquiries of the Lord as to our circumstances and the circumstances of the saints and received satisfactory answers. Retired about 1 a.m.

Tuesday, 3---Notwithstanding that I had announced that we would not attend to the administration of the ordinances, the House of the Lord was thronged all day, the anxiety being so great to receive, as if the brethren would have us stay here and continue the endowments until our way would be hedged up, and our enemies would intercept us. But I informed the Brethren that this was not wise, and that we should build more Temples, and have further opportunities to receive the blessings of the Lord, as soon as the saints were prepared to receive them. Looking upon the multitude and knowing their anxiety, as they were thirsting and hungering for the word, we continued at work diligently in the House of the Lord.

Two hundred and ninety-five persons received ordinances.

Wednesday, 4---I continued loading up my wagons, preparatory to starting west.

Friday, 6---Five hundred and twelve persons received the first ordinances of endowment in the Temple.

Saturday, 7---According to G. A. Smith's Journal upwards of six hundred received the ordinances (i.e. of the Temple): One hundred and twenty-six of which were reported in the Seventies Record.

80. Journal of Discourses, Vol. 3:269; Heber C. Kimball; Salt Lake City; March 23, 1852; as quoted in Temples of the Most High, "When Endowments Prove a Curse", p. 387-388.

The most of those present have received their endowments, their washings and anointings and have made covenants to their God and their brethren, before witness, that they would be faithful, that they would be true, that they would listen to all the counsels of the Lord's servants, and cease to do evil. All who have done this have been pronounced clean, and will they then go and pollute themselves with the wicked? I am sorry to say that a few are unwise enough to do so.

Both men and women have also covenanted that they will have no unlawful intercourse with each other. After all this, do any of you make a practice of speaking evil one of another, of cheating one another, of lying and deceiving? Yes, some who are under the covenants just named actually indulge in those evil practices, and I say to all such that if they do not repent of their follies and sins, their washings and anointings will prove a curse instead of a blessing, and will expedite their condemnation.

If a man sins to that degree that he is cut off from the Church, he forfeits the blessings promised on condition of keeping his covenants. When a man loses his membership in this Church, he also loses his Priesthood, and of course the blessings of his endowments. Do not flatter yourself that you can retain the blessings of the Gospel, and at the same time pursue a wicked course, for you cannot do it.

Monday, Nov 8. The day was dull in G. S. L. City. Pres. Heber C. Kimball, Willard Richards, Thos. Bullock, Wm. C. Staines, James Ure, James W. Cummings, Samuel L. Sprague, Wm. W. Phelps, each with a wife met in the Temple room. The brethren annointed each other. The wives were annointed by Sister Whitney and Snow; afterwards all partook of cakes and wine. Some spoke in tongues, etc.

82. Journal of Discourses, Vol. 2:31-32; President Brigham Young; Delivered on the South-East Corner Stone of the Temple at Great Salt Lake City, after the First Presidency and the Patriarch had laid the Stone; April 6, 1853.

And those first Elders who helped to build it [the Kirtland Temple], received a portion of their first endowments, or we might say more clearly, some of the first, or introductory, or initiatory ordinances, preparatory to an endowment.

The preparatory ordinances there administered, though accompanied by the ministration of angels, and the presence of the Lord Jesus, were but a faint similitude of the ordinances of the House of the Lord in their fulness; yet many, through the instigation of the devil, thought they had received all, and knew as much as God; they have apostatized, and gone to hell. But be assured, brethren, there are but few, very few of the Elders of Israel, now on earth, who know the meaning of the word endowment. To know, they must experience; and to experience, a Temple must be built.

Let me give you the definition in brief. Your endowment is, to receive all those ordinances in the House of the Lord, which are necessary for you, after you have departed this life, to enable you to walk back to the presence of the Father, passing the angels who stand as sentinels, being enabled to give them the key words, the signs and tokens, pertaining to the Holy Priesthood, and gain your eternal exaltation in spite of earth and hell.

Who has received and understands such an endowment, in this assembly? You need not answer. Your voices would be few and far between, yet the keys to these endowments are among you, and thousands have received them, so that the devil, with all his aids, need not suppose he can again destroy the Holy Priesthood from the earth, by killing a few, for he cannot do it. God has set his hand, for the last time, to redeem His people, the honest in heart, and Lucifer cannot hinder him.

Before these endowments could be given at Kirtland, the Saints had to flee before mobocracy. . . .

At Nauvoo, Joseph dedicated another Temple, the third on record [the other two being Kirtland and Far West]. He knew what was wanting, for he had previously given most of the prominent individuals then before him their endowment. He needed no revelation, then, of a thing he had long experienced, any more than those now do, who have experienced the same things. It is only where experience fails, that revelation is needed.

But what of the Temple in Nauvoo? . . . many received a small portion of their endowment, but we know of no one who received it in its fulness.

President Young preached this afternoon & spoke upon the Law of Consecration & had an interesting conversation in our Prayer Circle. The subject of Elder Orson Pratt publishing The Seer & the doctrine it contained was brought up in conversation. President Young said he ought not to have published the marriage ceremony. It was sacred & one of the last ceremonies attended to in the Endowments & ought not to have been given to the world.

84. Remarks by President H. C. Kimball; CHO, Ms/d/627/Box 3; Tabernacle; Sunday Morning, Feb. 4, 1855.

If [I] want to court a man's daughter it is my duty first to ask the father's consent, when I get his permission I have to come and court her.

Well I will make a few remarks to the brethren in the priesthood upon the subject. For there is no greater responsibility than those out of the kingdom, they have to get the consent of parents and the woman, but have first to get leave from the man who holds the keys of the priesthood then of the father and mother before you can take a young woman to wife. If a woman comes to you and makes a proposal, say I have no authority to accept of your proposition but I will go and ask the person who hol[d]s the keys first and then I can tell you what I will do. And when a woman in this Church marries a man out of it, a woman that has received her endowments she violates her covenant. Do you know that? I want to to [sic] tell you of it. Although I had no idea of speaking upon these subjects but I am very glad that I have, are not you? (Congregation respond-ed yes.)

Then go on and build the Temples of the Lord, that you may receive the endowments in store for you, and possess the keys of the eternal Priesthood, that you may receive every word, sign, and token, and be made acquainted with the laws of angels, and of the kingdom of our Father and our God, and know how to pass from one degree to another, and enter fully into the joy of your Lord.

A great many of you have had your endowments, and you know what a vote with uplifted hands means. It is a sign which you make in token of your covenant with God and with one another, and it is for you to perform your vows. When you raise your hands to heaven and let them fall and then pass on with your covenants unfulfilled, you will be cursed.

I met with Presidents B. Young, H. C. Kimball & J. M. Grant at the House of the Lord at 6 O'clock P.M. for the purpose of Dedicating the Baptismal Font which has of Late been built on the east side of the House of the Lord there was also present besides the Presidency W Woodruff E Hunter Joseph Young D. H. Wells A Carrington L. W. Hardy J. C. Little & Gilbert Clements.

We went to the Font & knelt down around it & dedicated it unto God President B. Young called upon President Heber C Kimball to be mouth in the dedication Prayer. . . After the Font was dedicated President Brigham Young went down into the Font & Baptized Presidents Heber C. Kimball & J. M. Grant & he laid his hands upon them & confirmed them members in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints & blessed them in the name of the Lord He blessed Heber C. Kimball & Heber C. Kimball was mouth in blessing J. M. Grant President Young said unto Heber C. KImball Brother Heber Chase In the name of Jesus Christ I lay my hands upon your head and I confirm you to be a member in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints & I seal upon you the gift of the Holy Ghost & Eternal life and I ordain & seal upon your head to be a prophet, Seer & Revelator in the Church & Kingdom of God on the Earth that was ever sealed upon the head of any man & I seal these blessings upon you in the name of Jesus Christ Amen. . . President Brigham Young then Baptized me & all the Presidency laid hands upon me & J. M Grant was mouth in confirming me & said. . . President B. Young then baptized Bishop Edward Hunter & confirmed him he was mouth & said. . .

President Young then baptized the following persons, Joseph Young D. H. Wells, A. Carrington L. W. Hardy, J. C. Little & Gilbert Clements & was mouth in confirming them all except D. H. Wells. H. C. Kimball spoke upon his head. this made 10 persons which President Brigham Young Baptized & confirmed.

I remember what Joseph said a short time before he was slain in one of the last sermons I ever heard him preach. Said he: "Men are here today who are seeking my blood, and they are those who have held the Priesthood and have received their washings and anointings; men who have received their endowments." I saw the faces of those men at that time, and they had a hand in slaying the Prophet. There are men who now possess the same spirit and the same desire.

89. Journal of Discourses, Vol 4:192-3; Wilford Woodruff; Salt Lake City; January 25, 1857; as quoted in Temples of the Most High, "God Received His Endowments Millions of Years Ago"; p. 386.

Some of the people have looked upon the law of tithing as a kind of tax and burden laid upon them, but who is it for? Our tithing, our labor, and all that we do in the Kingdom of God, who is it all for? The tithing is not to exalt the Lord, or to feed or clothe Him. He has had His endowments long ago; it is thousands and millions of years since He received His blessings, and if He had not received them, we could not give them to Him, for He is far in advance of us. I want the brethren to understand this one thing, that our tithing, our labor, our works are not for the exaltation of the Almighty, but they are for us.

90. Journal of Discourses, Vol 4:231-2; Wilford Woodruff; Salt Lake City; February 22, 1857; as quoted in Temples of the Most High, "Ten Tribes to Receive Endowments Through Those Present"; p. 389-390.

Again, here are the ten tribes of Israel. We know nothing about them only what the Lord has said by His Prophets. There are Prophets among them, and by and by they will come along, and they will smite the rocks, and the mountains of ice will flow down at their presence, and a highway will be cast up before them, and they will come to Zion, receive their endowments, and be crowned under the hands of the children of Ephraim, and there are persons before me in this assembly today who will assist to give them their endowments. They will receive their blessings and endowments, from under the children of Ephraim, who are the first fruits of the Kingdom of God in this dispensation, and the men will have to be ordained and receive their Priesthood and endowments in the land of Zion, according to the revelations of God.

I attended the prayer circle The presidency & W.W. G.A.S. A Lyman & C C Rich of the Twelve were present there was much conversation upon various subjects President Young said I shall not seal the people as I have done Old Father Allred brough[t] three young girls 12 & 13 years old I would not seal them to them him They would not be equally yoked together. The devil can get as many recommends as he can back many get their endowments who are not worthy to & this is the way devils are made there will be some needed in the next world. J.C. Little & L.W. Hardy was sent out to obtain cattle to help pay a Church Debt in a few days they returned Little from the North & Hardy from the South there was cattle gotten so the presidency paid fifteen thousand Dollars debts with them The subject of Wm Smith was brought up it was said that Joseph Smith Prophes-ied that he would become a good man when he became an old man The brethren thought that he said if he ever did become good it would be when he was an old man President Young then said "whether Joseph said it or not I will say in the name of the Lord that if Wm Smith lives until He is 65 or 70 years old He will become a good humble man he will do the best he can he will have to answer for his sins" write this Brother Woodruff & put in into the Church History" When a man give[s] way to the power of the Devil he finds it hard to recover himself again.

92. Journal of Discourses, Vol 4:372-3; Brigham Young; Salt Lake City; June 28, 1857; as quoted in Temples of the Most High, "Giving Endowments to Some Proves Their Overthrow"; p. 388-389.

Giving endowments to a great many proves their overthrow through revealing things to them which they cannot keep. They are not worthy to receive them. Brother Heber takes the lead in giving endowments, and you may ask, "Why do you give such folks their endowments?" To qualify them to be devils, if they wish to be. The plan of salvation is calculated to make devils as well as Saints; for by and by we shall need some to serve as devils; and it takes almost as much knowledge to make a complete devil as it does to fit a man to go into the celestial kingdom of God, and become an heir to His kingdom. We want to complete the education of a number of such fellows; they are running to the States, to California, and elsewhere, and are trying to reveal this, that, and the other; but I defy any one of them to give any idea of what is taught them in their endowments, except a garbled mass of trash. God takes that knowledge from their minds.

94. Journal of Discourses 6:63; Heber C. Kimball; the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City; Sunday morning, November 22, 1857.

I do not believe that we can emerge right into the presence of God, although we may see him, not in the flesh, but we can in the Spirit, if He touches the eyes of our understanding; but we cannot see him with these bodies of flesh. Joseph always told us that we would have to pass by sentinels that are placed between us and our Father and God. Then, of course, we are conducted along from this probation to other probations, or from one dispensation to another, by those who conducted those dispensations.

95. Journal of Wilford Woodruff; November 26, 1857.

In company with G A Smith I called upon President Brigham Young and asked counsel about publishing the endowments or an outline of it telling the time when the Twelve received their 2d Anointing and about the organization of the Council of 50. He gave his consent for us to publish an account of it so that the Saints might understand it.

Well, brethren and sisters, let it be our happy lot and our ambition so to live before our God and our superiors that have gone before us, that they may take pleasure in saying to us. `Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things.' I tell you, Joseph holds the keys, and none of us can get into the celestial kingdom without passing by him. We have not got rid of him, but he stands there as the sentinel, holding the keys of the kingdom of God; and there are many of them beside him. I tell you, if we get past those who have mingled with us, and know us best, and have a right to know us best, probably we can pass all other sentinels as far as it is necessary, or as far as we may desire. But I tell you, the pinch will be with those that have mingled with us, stood next to us, weighed our spirits, tried us, and proven us: there will be a pinch, in my view, to get past them. The others, perhaps, will say, If brother Joseph is satisfied with you, you may pass. If it is all right with him, it is all right with me.

97. Journal History; Mss History of B. Young, p. 1085; Heber C. Kimball speaking; November 13, 1858.

We do not expect that for several days to come all the Saints will be Masons, but the principle is for every man to hold each other sacred, it is so with many of us, but it should be the case with us all, especially towards our President. The endowments are necessary to place men under obligations to God. The covenants you make in the house of the Lord were made with the Father, Son and the Holy Ghost, hence do you not see that we are only witnesses in all the endowments. I merely speak of this to remind you of your sacred obligations. We have the true Masonry. The Mason of the day is received from the apostasy which took place in the days of Solomon and David. They know now and then a thing that is correct but we know the real thing but how many comprehend it and see the propriety of being true to each other.

Those who are counted worthy to dwell with the Father and the Son have previously received an education fitting for that society; they have been made fully acquainted with every password, token and sign which has enabled them to pass by the porters through the doors into the celestial kingdom.

Let the Saints reflect upon these matters which I am laying before them. Think of your holy endowments and what you have been anointed to become, and reflect upon the blessings which have been placed upon you for they are the same in part that were placed upon Jesus; he was the one that inducted his Apostles into these ordinances; it was he who set up the kingdom of which we are subjects. This is the kingdom of which all the Prophets spake, and to which Daniel alluded when he said: "And in the days of these kings shall the God of Heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." It is a blessing to have the privilege of entering into the Kingdom of God and partaking of the privileges and blessings that are bestowed upon its members.

Most of you, my brethren, are Elders, Seventies, or High Priests; perhaps there is not a Priest or Teacher present. The reason of this is that when we give the brethren their endowments, we are obliged to confer upon them the Melchizedek Priesthood; but I expect to see the day, when we shall be so situated that we can say to a company of brethren, You can go and receive the ordinances pertaining to the Aaronic order of Priesthood, and then you can go into the world and preach the Gospel, or do something that will prove whether you will honor that Priesthood before you receive more. Now we pass them through the ordinances of both Priesthoods in one day, but this is not as it should be and would, if we had a temple wherein to administer these ordinances. But this is all right at present; we should not be satisfied in any other way, and consequently we do according to the circumstances we are placed in.

President Young said that when persons came to get their endowments should be clean and pure. A man should not touch a woman for 10 days before getting their endowments and the Twelve while travelling should hold meetings with the male members at priesthood meetings & teach these, but they have to be handled in wisdom or evil will grow out of it.

Brigham Young and counselors spoke; also Hiram B. Clawson, Bp. Edwin D. Woolley, Daniel Evans and Erastus Snow. Prests. Young, Kimball and Wells spoke on the impropriety of the youth of Zion marrying instead of getting sealed. He also spoke of cleanliness of person, before going to get their endowments; a woman should not go for a week after her menses were upon her, a man should not have intercourse with his wife for several days, but should be clean in body and exercised in spirit previous thereto; his clothing should be changed once or twice before going there.

It is absolutely necessary that the Saints should receive the further ordinances of the house of God before this short existence shall come to a close, that they may be prepared and fully able to pass all the sentinels leading into the celestial kingdom and into the presence.

106. Journal of Discourses, Vol 16:186-187; President Brigham Young; Franklin, Cache County; Thursday evening, September 4, 1873.

There are many of the ordinances of the house of God that must be performed in a Temple that is erected expressly for the purpose. There are other ordinances that we can administer without a Temple. You know that there are some which you have received--baptism, the laying on of hands, the gifts of the Holy Ghost, such as the speaking in and interpretation of tongues, prophesying, healing, discerning of spirits, etc., and many blessings bestowed upon the people, we have the privilege of receiving without a Temple. There are other blessings that will not be received, and ordinances that will not be performed according to the law that the Lord has revealed, without their being done in a Temple prepared for that purpose. We can, at the present time, go into the Endowment House and be baptized for the dead, receive our washings and anointing, etc., for there we have a font that has been erected dedicated expressly for baptizing people for the remission of sins, for their health and for their dead friends; in this the Saints have the privilege of being baptized for their friends. We also have the privilege of sealing women to men, without a Temple. This we can do in the Endowment House; but when we come to other sealing ordinances, ordinances pertaining to the holy Priesthood, to connect the chain of the Priesthood from father Adam until now, by sealing children to their parents, being sealed for our forefathers, etc., they cannot be done without a Temple. But we can seal women to men, but not men to men, without a Temple. When the ordinances are carried out in the Temples that will be erected, men will be sealed to their fathers, and those who have slept clear up to father Adam. This will have to be done, because of the chain of the Priesthood being broken upon the earth. The Priesthood has left the people, but in the first place the people left the Priesthood.

Pr. G.A. Smith had asked Brother Brigham Young, why he was in such a hurry to see the Temple in St. George completed. Prs. B. Young answered, "What will you do if I die before the Temple is completed, the candle is nearly burnt out, and can not last much longer; therefore I want to see this Temple completed before I die, that I can give the Keys to others."

Last Sunday George A. Smith was preaching about the persecutions that the Church had undergone in the past, and he said "if the Gentiles oppress us much more, & drive us from here, we will send 10 or 15,000 Elders through the States [p. 160] and we will take the Government from them whether they like it or not, So help me God." a loud and deep Amen! arose from the assembled congregation.

Remarks by President Brigham Young At the Temple, St. George, January 1, 1877.

"I cannot consent in my feelings to retire from this house without exercising my strength, the strength of my lungs, stomach and speaking organs, in speaking to this people. I hardly dare say what is in my heart to say to this people. Perhaps it would not be prudent, but I will say a few encouraging things to the Latter Day Saints, that is they ought to be encouraging. We that are here are enjoying a privilege that we have no knowledge of any other people enjoying since the days of Adam. that is, to have a Temple completed, wherein all the ordinances of the House of God, can be bestowed upon His people. Brethren and Sisters, do you understand this! it seems that a great many of the people knew nothing about it. It is true that Solomon built a Temple for the purpose of giving Endowments, but from what we can learn of the history of that time, they gave very few, if any Endowments, and one of the High Priests was murdered by wicked and corrupt men, who had already begun to Apostatize, because he would not reveal those things Appertaining to the Priesthood, that were forbidden him to reveal until he came to the proper place. I will not say, but what Enoch had Temples and officiated therein, but we have no account of it. We knew that he raised up a people so pure and holy that they were not permitted to remain with the wicked inhabitants of the earth, but were taken to another place. We as Latter Day Saints have been laboring for over forty years, and the revelations given us in the first, were to establish the Kingdom, by gathering the Saints, building Temples, and organizing the people as the family of heaven here on the earth, We reared up a Temple in Kirtland, but we had no basement in it, nor a font, nor preparation to give Endowments for the living or the dead. It was left by the saints before it was completed. they going to Missouri; Joseph located the site for the Temple Block, in Jackson County Missouri, and pointed out the southeast corner of the Temple in the year 1831. also laid the corner stone for a Temple in Far West, Caldwell County, Missouri. These Temples were not built. We built one in Nauvoo, I could pick out several before me now, that were there when it was built, and knew just how much was finished and what was done. It is true we left brethren there with instructions to finish it, and they got it nearly completed before it was burned, but the Saints did not enjoy it. Now we have a Temple which will be finished in a few days, and of which there is enough completed to commence work therein, which has not been done since the days of Adam, that we have any knowledge of. Now those that can see the Spiritual Atmosphere, can see that many of the Saints are still glued to this earth, and lusting and longing after the things of this world, in which there is no profit. It is true we should look after the things of this world and devote all to the building up of the Kingdom of God. According to the present feelings of many of our brethren, they would arrogate to themselves this world and all that pertains to it, and cease not day nor night to see that it was devoted to the building up of the Kingdom of the devil. and if they had the power, they would build a rail-road to carry it to Hell and establish themselves there! Where are the eyes and hearts of this people? Where is their interest in their own Salvation and that of their fore-- fathers? We enjoy privileges that are enjoyed by no one else on the face of the earth. suppose we were awake to this thing, namely the salvation of the human family, this house would be crowded - as we hope it will be - from Monday Morning until Saturday night. This house was built here in this place purposely, where it is warm and pleasant in the winter time, and comfortable to work, also for the Lamanites and all those coming from the South and other places to receive their Endowments and other blessings. What do you suppose the fathers would say if they could speak from the dead! Would they not say, We have lain here thousands of Years, here in this prison house, waiting for this dispensation to come. Here we are bound and fettered in the Association of those who are filthy" What would they whisper in our ears? Why! if they had the power the very thunders of heaven would be in our ears, if we could but realize the importance of the work we are engaged in. All the Angels of heaven are looking at this little handful of people, and stimulating them to the Salvation of the human family, so also are the devils in hell looking at this people too. and trying to overthrow us, and the people are still shaking hands with the servants of the devil. instead of sanctifying themselves and calling upon the Lord and doing the work which he has commanded us. and put into our hands to do. When I think upon this subject, I want the tongues of Seven thunders to wake up the people. Can the fathers be saved without us? No. Can we be saved without them? No. and if we do not wake up and cease to long after the things of this earth, we will find that we as individuals will go down to hell, although the Lord will preserve a people unto Himself.

"Now we are ready to give Endowments. Do you have any feelings for those who have died without having the Gospel? The Spirit was awakened in the people in the North. When we gave the word that we should do no more work in the Endowment House, they came to us crying and pleading to be baptized for their dead. What else could they do? They can come here and do the work for their dead. and put these poor prisoners on the ground where they will be free. Do we realize this? As long as we tarry here, we are subject to the world. But now go to, like men and women, and say, we will embrace the truth and enter into the covenants of God, and carry them out. Then the bonds are broken and the hearts of the people are united in the Father. Perhaps, brethren and sisters, you will not get my meaning, but now go to work and let these holes in the ground alone, and let the Gentiles alone, who would destroy us if they had the power. You are running after them, and some of our brethren are putting their wives and daughters into their society, and will go to the devil with them too, if they do not look out. I would not have a dollar on the earth if I had to get it there. It has been the Kingdom of God with me. What I have, I have got in this Kingdom. Well, now, some of the Elders are running after these holes in the ground, and I see men before me in this house, that have no right to be here, they are as corrupt in their hearts as they can be, and we take them by the hand and call them brother. You will go to hell [unreadable] [if you do not ?] repent. You may think this is plain talk, it is not as plain as you will find by and by. If you should ever go to the Gates of heaven, Jesus will say he never knew you, while you have been saying your prayers and going to your Meetings and are as corrupt in your hearts as men can be. You had better stop now and repent of your sins, and sin no more while there is yet time. and before the doors are Closed against you. I want to wake you up, and if I had the power to lift the Vail from your eyes, and let you see things as they are, you would be astonished. Not but what there are a great majority of the people as good as they know how to be. Now I will say, bless the people, that they may do better, but show some of the Elders of Israel according to their present conduct, a dollar on one side, and Eternal life on the other, and I fear they would choose the dollar.

"We are now prepared to attend to Baptizing and giving Endowments, and shall appoint Tuesdays and Wednesdays for baptisms, and Thursdays and Fridays for Endowments and Sealings, as a standing appointment for the present,

"God bless you. Amen.

"I do not know whether the people are satisfied with the services of the dedication of the Temple or not. We should be satisfied, but I do not mean to and never expect to be satisfied until the devil is whipped and driven from off the face of the Earth."

The Choir sang the Hymn, "Glorious things of thee are Spoken," and the Assembly was dismissed by prayer by Elder B. Young Jr.

The People passed out at the east door.

------

In January 1877, shortly after the lower portion of the St. George Temple was dedicated, President Brigham Young, in following up in the Endowments written, became convinced that it was necessary to have the formula of the Endowments written, and he gave directions to have the same put in writing. Shortly afterwards he explained what the Lecture at the Veil should portray, and for this purpose appointed a day when he would personally deliver the Lecture at the Veil. Elders J. D. T. McAllister and L. John Nuttall prepared writing material, and as the President spoke they took down his words. Elder Nuttall put the same into form and the writing was submitted to President Young on the same evening at his office in residence at St. George. He there made such changes as he deemed proper, and when he finally passed upon it said: This is the Lecture at the Veil to be observed in the Temple.

A copy of the Lecture is kept at the St. George Temple, in which President Young refers to Adam in his creation &c.

When we got our washings and anointings under the hands of the Prophet Joseph at Nauvoo, we had only one room to work in with the exception of a little side room or office where we were washed and anointed, had our garments placed upon us and received our New Name. After he had performed these ceremonies, he gave the key words, signs, tokens and penalties. Then after this we went into the large room over the store in Nauvoo. Joseph divided up the room the best that he could, hung up the veil, marked it, gave us our instructions as we passed along from one department to another, giving us signs, tokens, penalties with the key words pertaining to those signs. After we had got through, Brother Joseph turned to me and said: `Brother Brigham this is not arranged right, but we have done the best we could under the circumstances in which we are placed, and I wish you to take this matter in hand and organize and systematize all these ceremonies with the signs, tokens, penalties and key words.' I did so and each time I got something more; so that when we went through the Temple at Nauvoo, I understood and knew how to place them there.

Dear Brother, In reply to your questions: as you and your wife received your Endowments before being sealed as husband and wife there is no need of the children being sealed to you.

As to the New Name when you and your wife get to the Temple and to the proper place you can get it from your wife, but not till then.

Your Brother in the Gospel.

Prs. E. Snow said, when we can get time, we will give Endowment for Each Priesthood separate, and after a while when Temples is built we will give Endowment to each according to what Priesthood they hold; they we will give men the Endowment of the Aronic Priesthood and nothing else.

119. Journal of Discourses, Vol 19:229-230; Wilford Woodruff; New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Utah; Sunday afternoon, September 16, 1877.

I will say here, before closing, that two weeks before I left St. George, the spirits of the dead were gathered around me, wanting to know why we did not redeem them. Said they, "You have had the use of the Endowment House for a number of years, and yet nothing has ever been done for us. We laid the foundation of the government you now enjoy, and we never apostatized from it, but we remained true to it and were faithful to God." These were the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and they waited on me for two days and two nights. I thought it very singular, that notwithstanding so much work had been done, and yet nothing had been done for them. The thought never entered my heart, from the fact, I suppose, that heretofore our minds were reaching after our more immediate friends and relatives. I straightway went into the baptismal font and called upon Brother MacAllister to baptize me for the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and fifty other eminent men, making one hundred in all, including John Wesley, Columbus, and others; I then baptized him for every President of the United States, except three; and when their cause is just, somebody will do the work for them. * * *

I have felt to rejoice exceedingly in this work of redeeming the dead. I do not wonder at President Young saying he felt moved upon to call upon the Latter-day Saints to hurry up the building of these Temples. He felt the importance of the work; but now he has gone, it rests with us to continue it, and God will bless our labors and we will have joy therein. This is a preparation necessary for the second advent of the Savior; and when we shall have built the Temples now contemplated, we will then begin to see the necessity of building others, for in proportion to the diligence of our labors in this direction, will we comprehend the extent of the work to be done, and the present is only a beginning. When the Savior comes, a thousand years will be devoted to this work of redemption; and Temples will appear all over this land of Joseph,---North and South America---and also in Europe and elsewhere; and all the descendants of Shem, Ham, and Japheth who received not the Gospel in the flesh, must be officiated for in the Temples of God, before the Savior can present the kingdom to the Father, saying, "It is finished."

My Dear Nephew

. . . We have it in our mind, so soon as the addition to the Temple is roofed in, which will not be long, to place an alter therein and have sealings performed. As the need of a place where marriages can be legally performed according to the Holy order of the Priesthood, somewhere nearer to our Northern settlements than the St. George Temple is every day pressing itself more forcibly upon our notice. We realize that the avenues to lawful marriages should not be diminished amongst the Saints, but that it should be encouraged by every consistent means within our power, at the same time I am in my own feelings, very much opposed to these promiscuous marriages for time that are being celebrated here, there and everywhere by the Bishops and others. . . .

SEALINGS OUT OF THE TEMPLE
November 15, 1877

To all Stake Presidents

- Young people marry for time

- Deemed salutary to have the Priesthood discountenance wherever practicable the marriages of Latter-day Saints in any place not especially dedicated and set apart for the ordinances of the House of the Lord.

- To aid in the accomplishment of this object, it was unanimously resolved by the Council of the Apostles to re-open the Endowment House in this city for the performance of certain ordinances.

1. Sealing those married for time. 2. Sealing the living who could not go to St. George because of inconvenience.

3. To give endowments to those not having received.

4. Giving endowments to the aged, sick or infirm - if Bishops thought they would not live until the Salt Lake, Manti or Logan temples were completed and opened.

Must have recommend. (Had to be re-baptized to receive these blessings.)

It was a long time after the Prophet Joseph Smith had received the keys of the kingdom of God, and after Hyrum and others had received many blessings, that the Lord gave Joseph a revelation, to show him and others how they could ask for and receive certain blessings. We read in the [R]evelations of St. John, that the Saints are to receive a white stone, `and in the stone a new name, which no man knoweth save him that receiveth it.' Joseph tells us that this new name is a key-word, which can only be obtained through the endowments. This is one of the keys and blessings that will be bestowed upon the Saints in these last days, for which we shall be very thankful.

And I wish all Israel to understand that when we impart of our substance to build Temples that we do not do it to benefit the Lord at all, he had his endowments a long time before we were born, and also passed through his probation. We are his children, he wishes to exalt us back to his presence, and he knows very well we are obliged to walk in the same path and receive the same ordinances in order to inherit the same glory that surrounds him.

We are called to do this work before the Lord, act for him just as much as any man that was ever called. Aaron was not called any more of God, than we have been who labor in this House. I am glad of the unity, that we can live together and work together. . . * * * We will work towards perfecting ourselves and be guarded in our acts and Sayings, that God will accept of us and our labors. Those having charge of the Rooms will please to See that there is no loud talking or laughter in their rooms, avoid making a noise and Jar with the pipes in using the water &c. With regard to new Names. give easy names to be understood: Scripture names or names not in the Scripture, there are many good names of those who have lived upon the earth which are easy to understand, don't give any fanciful names, be Sure they get the New Name and that they understand it. Avoid all you can having a noise with the Steam or Engine during prayer: Every person called to work in this house Should Notice the time and be in their Seats at prayer time. Brethren notice the prayer Roll and try and be here when your time comes for prayer, even if you have to be excused afterwards: Door Keepers See that there is no loud talking or laughter at the door. 127. St. George Stake Historical Record; CHO, Number 97707; 20 November 1881.

Pres. Erastus Snow arose and read Par 12, 13, 14, & 15 of Section 128 of the D. & C. He said the general features of the St. George Temple are in conformity to those of the Kirtland Temple which was dedicated in April 1836.

That temple may be said to have been built to show forth the order of the priesthood, Aaronic and Melchizedek--the priesthood there received the ordinance of the washing of feet and the anointing of the head with oil. This was confirmed to those holding the priesthood. There was no baptismal font in the temple at Kirtland for that ordinance had not been revealed to the people.

By the time the Nauvoo Temple was being built the doctrine of the baptism for the dead was revealed and one of the first thing[s] attended to there was the preparation of the font for the Baptism of the Dead. It was revealed here in St. George to the prophet Brigham Young that there should be variations made in the temples to be built. This was given unto the Prophet Brigham in answer to his question, "Oh Lord show unto thy servants if we shall build all temples after the same pattern?" The answer came. "Do you all build your houses after the same pattern? Do you after increasing your families build after the same pattern used when your family is small? So shall the growth of the knowledge of the principles of the Gospel among my people cause diversity in the pattern of Temples."

128. History of the St. George Temple, Its Cost & Dedication and the Labor Thereon.; Church Archives, CR 343/19 (vault); March 26, 1883.

The corner stones were laid on the 10" day of March, 1873, and labor was continued thereon until/ Jan 1", 1877, when it was dedicated to God. (See W. Woodruff's Journal of Jan 1", 1877, which contains the dedicatory prayers of W. Woodruff, Erastus Snow, and B. Young Jr., also the speech of President Young.). I, Wilford Woodruff, bear testimony, that Prest. B. Young told me to go to work and prepare the Temple for giving Endowments, and I had made the preparations according to his acceptance; and on the 9" of Jan., 1877, we repaired to the Temple and for the first time the ordinance of baptism for the dead was performed in the Temple of St. George. Wilford Woodruff went into the font by the direction of Prest. Brigham Young and administered the ordinance of baptism for the first 140 persons, and confirmed the first person, // Prest. Young laying on hands at the same time. John L. Smith administered the ordinance of baptism for the next 83 persons, making 223 baptisms and confirmations during that day. Wilford Woodruff Confirmed one 1. J. D. T. McAllister confirmed 64, A. H. Raleigh 15, H. W. Bigler 123, and Erastus Snow 20. Susie Amelia Young Dunford was the first baptized and confirmed by W. Woodruff.

Prest. Brigham Young requested me to take charge of the Temple, which I did. He also requested me to write all the ordinances of the Church from the first baptism and confirmation through every ordinance of the Church. Geo. Q. Cannon assisted some in this writing, and when I had finished it to the satisfaction of the President, he said to me, "Now you have before you an ensample to carry on the endowments in all the temples until the coming of the Son of Man."

On the 8" of April, 1877, W. Woodruff was appointed in the public assembly to take charge of the Temple and preside over it, and in private conversation with the President, he said he wanted me to take the whole charge of the Temple and attend to all affairs connected with the endowments, sealings &c. I told him I was not able to go to the altar and do all the sealings as I had injured myself at that labor in the Salt Lake Endowment House. Prest. Young told me to go to work and ordain some men to help me to do the sealing. He told me to set apart J.D.T. McAllister and David H. Cannon for that purpose and, if I needed more, to set them apart. I set apart Br. McAllister to that work April 14", 1877. I set apart David H. Cannon for the same purpose on the 27th of April. I also set apart James G. Bleak to officiate at the altar some time afterward (I do not recollect the date). (2d March 1881.)

Prest. Young gave me power and authority to give second anointings and seal women to men as I might be led by the Spirit of God. I parted with Prest. Young for the last time in the flesh at 9:30 A.M. on April 16", 1877, when he started for Salt Lake City. Brigham Young Jr., was very sick at the time.

When I left St. George, I placed the presidency of the Temple in the hands of John David Thompson McAllister, who was to preside over it in my absence.

This is the testimony which I Wilford Woodruff bear to all whom it may concern. Salt lake City, March 26, 1883.

129. "The Higher Ordinances." Deseret News Semi-Weekly, 15 February 1884, p. 2. No doubt, Scovil's letter was dated February instead of January.

Springville, Jany. 2nd, 1884. [sic]

Editor Deseret News:

I noticed an article in the Deseret News of January 25th, 1884, in relation to Church Doctrines. I can testify that on the 3rd day of May, 1842, Joseph Smith the Prophet called upon five or six, viz: Shadrack [sic] Roundy, Noah Rogers, Dimick B. Huntington, Daniel Cairns [sic], and myself (I am not certain but that Hosea Stout was there also) to meet with him (the Prophet) in his business office (the upper part of his brick store). He told us that the object he had was for us to go to work and fit up that room preparatory to giving endowments to a few Elders that he might give unto them all the keys of power pertaining to the Aronic [sic] and Melchisedec [sic] Priest-hoods.

We therefore went to work making the necessary preparations, and everything was arranged representing the interior of a temple as much as the circumstances would permit, he being with us dictating everything. He gave us many items that were very interesting to us, which sank with deep weight upon my mind, especially after the temple was finished at Nauvoo, and I had received the ordinances in which I was among the first, as I had been called upon to work in the Temple as one of the hands during the winter. Some weeks previous to the dedication he told us that we should have the privilege of receiving the whole of the ordinances in due time. The history of Joseph Smith speaks for itself. But I can and do testify that I know of a surety that room was fitted up by his order which we finished in the forenoon of the said 4th of May, 1842. And he gave us to understand that he intended to have everything done by him that was in his power while he remained with us. He said his work was nearly done and he should roll the burden of the kingdom upon the shoulders of the Twelve. I am the only one living that I know of, who helped to fit up that room, except Hosea Stout, [who] was there.

I am, most respectfully, your brother in the Covenant.

June 7, 1922- REGARDING THE ROBES OF THE HOLY PRIESTHOOD IN THE ENDOWMENTS

CEREMONY: Taken from the minutes of a meeting at the office of the First Presidency. Presidents Grant, Penrose and Ivins being present. I represented having discussed with associates in the temple the advisability of instituting a change in the procedure of placing the Endowment Robes on the individuals receiving endowments the present method being to first place the robe on the right shoulder, subsequently change it to the left shoulder, and later again back to the right shoulder. The proposed change would be to place the robe first on the Left shoulder, and retain it there until after the Second Token of the Aaronic Priesthood has been given, then to change it to the Right shoulder, in conformity with the giving of the Tokens of the Melchizedek Priesthood, thus obviating one of the changes heretofore made, and more effectively indicating transition from the lower to the higher orders of the Priesthood.

After considering carefully the proposed change, the Presidency decided unanimously that from that time on the Robe should first be placed on the Left shoulder, and be changed to the Right shoulder at the time the Endowment candidates are going to enter the Terrestrial World room. The necessary changes in the text, to conform with this decision, are to be made in the new books of rules, etc. that are to be issued to the Temple Presidents.

(Announced to Temple workers in meeting held 14 Aug. 1922)

158. George F. Richards Journal; CHO/MS/f/600/#4; Wednesday, 30 August 1922.

From printed booklet, "Instructions to Temple Workers," by Geo. F. Richards, President, Salt Lake Temple, Approved by the First Presidency, 26 October, 1922.
"Brethren and sisters who have been set apart as regular temple workers may have access, while in the temple, to the books containing the ceremonies, but neither the books nor a transcript there from should be taken away from the Temple."

Thursday, 31 August 1922
. . . Attended the regular weekly Council of the Twelve and Presidency where the Temple ordinances and rulings were considered as a final consideration and the books were put into the hands of Bro. D.M. McAllister to be written up for all the temples. This is a great relief to me. I have been engaged on this work for months.

159. George F. Richards Journal; CHO/MS/f/600/#4; President, Salt Lake Temple, "Instructions to Temple Workers"; October 26, 1922.

Cleanliness is next to Godliness and in the House of the Lord that principle must be strictly observed. This applies alike to both person and apparel.
Workers may wear their shoes into the Temple but they should be kept polished and clean from dust and mud. In the ante-room to the Annex will be found materials which may be used for this purpose when necessary.
Those who come to the Temple for ordinance work should remove their shoes from their feet before entering the Temple.
A checking room has been provided where, without charge, shoes, wraps, and valuables should be checked to avoid losses through mistake or otherwise.
People coming to the Temple to witness sealings should be ushered into the reception room next to the sealing room where they may be comfortable while waiting. They should not enter the celestial room, except where it becomes necessary in order to sign their names as witnesses.
Persons going through for Endowments may wear white house-slippers instead of moccasins when desired, but where this is done, the slippers should be kept clean the same as the other part of the Temple clothing. Where moccasins are used, white house-slippers may be used over the moccasins if desired. * * *
Hats must not be worn in the Temple. Men should remove their hats before entering the Annex. We would be pleased if the sisters would observe the same rule.

April 1923.

I spent 1-1/2 hours with the Presidency where I read to them the ceremonies connected with the giving of the 1st and 2nd lectures of the Aaronic Priesthood as I had written them after hearing them repeated and after I had revised them. I asked if all the ceremonies could not be written, revised and approved and go into the Presidents' Book held only by the Temple Presidents. The Presidency were all present and thought favorably of by these. The matter is to be submitted to the Council of the First Presidency, the Twelve & Patriarch. This would give us a standard to go by that these ceremonies might be kept uniform.

The subject of the garment was again brought up and considered and certain changes thought favorably of. The permisibility [sic] of dispensing with the collar, using buttons instead of strings, using the closed crotch and flop, and for the women wearing elbow sleaves [sic] and leg length legs just below the knee.

I spent about seven hours at the temple--President E. J. Wood was given a full set of Temple books to take home with him to Cardston for the Temple. [illegible] change.

Monday, 16 April 1923

I spent at the temple writing what has heretofore been unwritten ceremonies of the temple. My son George assisted me all the afternoon.

Tuesday, 17 April 1923

I spent at the Temple busy at my desk and meeting callers, answering questions. Pres Jos F. Smith & Albert M. Cavis, my assistants read and approved the form of ceremonies which I have been preparing. Thursday, 19 April 1923

I was the speaker at the temple this morning, prayed at the altar in Council--Our Council meeting lasted from 10 am. to about 4 p.m. I read in the council meeting which is known as the unwritten ordinances of the temple prepared by me and it was decided to have copies made and one each entered inside the Presidents' Book of each Temple.

Friday, 20 April 1923

. . . I spent some time with the Presidency and Bishopric considering improvements to be made at the temple. It was left in the hands of the Bishopric & Presidency of the Temple.

I had the unwritten ordinances of the Endowments typed today by Bro. Jos. Anderson under the direction of Duncan M. McAllister. This is done by the authority of the First Presidency. A copy is to be kept in the Presidents' Book at each temple.

Saturday, 12 July 1924

. . . When pouring over the Temple Ceremonies alone and with a committee appointed to consider them with me I usually mention [in this journal] that I have been working at my desk or in the Temple, yet in time great changes have evolved which as a whole may not be mentioned by me in my journal. Of that character of work I can say that since I became the President of the Salt Lake Temple we have re-written those temple ceremonies and ordinances which have been heretofore written, first at the time of the Dedication of the St. George Temple, and have put them into leather back covers as loose leaves and provided each Temple President with a copy. Later those ceremonies known as unwritten ceremonies i.e. the covenants and the instructions given in forming the circle and at the veil, were written and copies furnished on loose leaf sheets for the Presidents of Temples Book. A list of 83 rules and decisions have been written also for the guidance of Temple Presidents supplanting all former rules not in full harmony. Each of the Temple Presidents has been supplied with copies, or rather, they were included in the Books when they first sent out to the Temple Presidents.

The Temple Committee have gone over the ceremonies of the Endowments with a view to more perfectly put them in proper form and we are still working on them and I am in hope that in due time these will be considered by the Presidency and as far as is right the suggestions will be approved and the ceremonies be re-written having all the written ceremonies appear in their most perfected form and regular order in the Presidents' Books and in the past books. I am delighted with what has been done thus far and am hopeful that the future will see the other changes made which are very much needed. As these things originated on my recommendations and I have had more to do with them than any body else. I feel that I have had [an] important part in the splendid accomplishment which the saints generally know not of. I have felt that since I have been called to preside here in the Temple that if I should live and labor here acceptably to the Lord, He would use me as an instrument in advancing the work in these lives and I believe he has thus blessed me, and used me. The First Presidency could not be expected to be in touch with all the details of Temple work & with the needed changes only as these things are brought to their attention and who should do this if not the Apostle in charge of the Salt Lake & Leading Temple of the church. The first committee appointed on this work consisted of in order of seniority, Geo. F. Richards, David O. McKay, Jos. Fielding Smith, Stephen L. Richards and John A. Widtsoe. Since David O. McKay is away, in Europe, Bro. James E. Talmage has been appointed a member of that committee.

Pres. A. W. Ivins has been appointed to go over the work with the Committee before it is presented to the Presidency. To date we have had two sittings with Pres. Ivins.

A small sheepskin binding book is kept in my desk which shows progress of the work at the Salt Lake Temple since I became President. This book gives valuable information but is not as complete as I could wish.

Thursday, 9 December 1926

Attended temple meeting at 8:15 am. and the Weekly Council meeting at 10:00 am. the latter continued until about 5 P.M. We had under consideration a revision of the Temple ordinances. The question of Retribution took considerable time. I had battery put in charge.

Thursday, 16 December 1926

Gospel Mysteries

Attended to my regular duties at the Temple as usual- Attended a meeting of the Twelve from 9 to 10 o'clock and a meeting of the Presidency and Twelve from 10:am. to about 3:PM. This was a very important meeting. At this meeting the Report of the Committee of Apostles on Temple Ordinances was accepted with a few minor changes. This necessitates the printing of the Ceremonies for all the Temples. It is helpful to have these ready for the beginning of the New Year.

Tuesday, 25 January 1927

I went to the Temple as usual. Pres. Grant called me over to his office and the First Presidency then decided several important points pertaining to the Temple ordinances making a finish of the work which has been under consideration of a committee of five of the Twelve for several years. These points today decided will be reported to the Council for their approval next Thursday.

Thursday, 27 January 1927

. . . At the Council meeting the last of the committees' recommendations concerning the endowment ceremonies was approved. There remains to have them written for all the temples.

Pres. St. George Temple
St. George, Utah

Dear Brother:

We have the Temple ordinances written into the books for the Presidents of Temples and are preparing the Part books and will get them to you in the near future, or at conference time.

At request of President Grant we have already adopted some of the changes decided upon, and it will be in order for you to do the same.

In sealing for the dead, whether one or both be dead, omit the kissing. Omit from the prayer in the circle all references to avenging the blood of the Prophets.

Omit from the ordinance and lecture all reference to retribution. This last change can be made with a day's notice to those taking parts that contain such reference.

This letter is written with the approval of the Presidency.

Sincerely your brother
/s/ Geo. F. Richards

I think I heard your spokesman say something about a temple, or was I mistaken? Well, when I see what you have accomplished since I was here thirty-four years ago, I am pretty sure that sometime in the near future somewhere in the South Seas, convenient to you, there may be a temple. And this much too, I will tell you, on this sacred occasion, the time has arrived in the history of the Church when temples will be taken to the people so that faithful members of the Church may receive all the blessings of the Church and remain in their own environment to complete family lives, to be associated with those whom they love and without sacrificing their life's savings to go to the House of the Lord and receive all the blessings that any other member of the Church may have.

162. Continuing the Quest, by Hugh B. Brown, p. 38; 1961 ed.

Now we meet in the temple that the activities of the seminar may be sealed by the Holy Spirit so that we more effectively carry on our work. Here we will not only lay aside the clothing of the street, but the thoughts of the street, and will try not only to clothe our bodies in clean white linen but our minds in purity of thought.

163. Temple Ceremonies -- Notes; Compiled by Lauritz G. Petersen; 17 February 1971.

Lectures given in the Nauvoo Temple were not given as part of the ceremony. After members had received their endowments, they were called together into an assembly room and lectures were given there. This may or may not have been the same day of receiving the endowment.

The endowment record kept by the First Council of Seventy deals only with those who have received their washings and anointings. The record gives the new name, the present name of the members, together with date and place of birth. In some instances there were ordinations to the Melchizedek Priesthood performed and they too are recorded. The Seventy did not record the other part of the endowment.

The record gives who were assigned to perform the washing and anointing. As mentioned above, the name of the person being washed is given, with his birthdate, the priesthood he held, his wife's name and her birthdate, time session began, to the minute, and the time session ended.

Time spent washing and anointing male 15 persons, one hour and 10 minutes.

Time spent washing and anointing female 12 persons, one hour and 50 minutes.

Another group spent 45 minutes washing and anointing 17 male, and one hour and 20 minutes with 24 female.

*Complete endowment, washing and anointing and endowment, 6 hours, 30 minutes. Time spent differs with the number of those doing the washing and anointing. For the male department, they had 2 washing and 3 anointing. Another interesting item is that members were called to come for their endowments. Also the men, Peter, presiding at the veils called the names of those present, when to come to the veil. This agrees with the sermon given the 28th of December 1845 in the temple.

*Everyone started with the washing and the anointing and went straight through to the complete endowment. There was no break for lunch.

The lectures gave a much better explanation of the meaning and use of the new name, etc.

An item of interest is that there were no garments given in the Kirtland Temple during the washing and anointings. Garments are not mentioned until in Nauvoo.

164. "Temples--The Gates to Heaven"; Elder Marion G. Romney, Council of the Twelve; the Ensign, pp. 12-16; March, 1971.

Pondering upon the subject of temples and the means there in provided to enable us to ascend into heaven brings to mind the lesson of Jacob's dream. You will recall that in the twenty-eighth chapter of Genesis there is an account of his return to the land of his father to seek a wife from among his own people. When Jacob traveled from Beersheba toward Haran, he had a dream in which he saw himself on the earth at the foot of a ladder that reached to heaven where the Lord stood above it. He beheld angels ascending and descending thereon, and Jacob realized that the covenants he made with the Lord there were the rungs on the ladder that he himself would have to climb in order to obtain the promised blessings--blessings that would entitle him to enter heaven and associate with the Lord.

Because he had met the Lord and entered into covenants with him there, Jacob considered the site so sacred that he named the place Bethel, a contraction of Beth-Elohim, which means literally "the house of the Lord." He said of it: "...this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." (Gen 28:17)

165. "House of Glory"; address by Truman G. Madsen, Ten Stake Fireside, p. 7; March 5, 1972. This statement was made by Pres. McKay at a meeting in Los Angeles to encourage contributions towards the L.A. Temple.

Brothers and sisters, I believe there are few, even temple workers, who comprehend the full meaning and power of the temple endowment. Seen for what it is, it is the step-by-step ascent into the eternal Presence. If our young people could but glimpse it, it would be the most powerful spiritual motivation of their lives.

166. October Conference, 1972; Spencer W. Kimball; the Ensign, p. 34; December 1972.

Joseph Smith bestowed upon the Twelve apostles all the keys and authority and power that he himself possessed and that he had received from the Lord. He gave unto them every endowment, every washing and anointing, and administered unto them the sealing ordinances.

167. Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, Vol 1:248-249; First Edition; Elder Bruce R. McConkie; 1973.

After people are converted and have the gift of the Holy Ghost to enlighten their minds it is time enough for them to learn the deeper things pertaining to exaltation in the eternal worlds. The sacred teachings revealed in temple ordinances, for instance, are mysteries reserved for selected and faithful members of the kingdom who have attained sufficient stability and background to understand them.

168. Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, Vol 1:400; First Edition; Elder Bruce R. McConkie; 1973.

It appears that Peter, James, and John received their own endowments while on the mountain. (Doctrines of Salvation, Vol 2:165) Peter says that while there, they "received from God the Father honour and glory," seemingly bearing out this conclusion. It also appears that it was while on the mount that they received the more sure word of prophecy, it then being revealed to them that they were sealed up unto eternal life. (2 Peter 1:16-19; D&C 131:5)

I promise you that all who faithfully attend to temple work will be blessed beyond measure. Your families will draw closer to the Lord, unseen Angels will watch over your loved ones when Satanic forces tempt them, the veil will be thin, and great spiritual experiences will distill upon this people.

"When did full Temple rites commence in Utah, especially in Salt Lake City?

"The first sealing ordinance was performed in the home of Franklin D. Richards, he having two wives sealed to him at that time. The date was the 13th of October, 1849. (Saturday by H. K.) The Endowment House was opened on the 20th of February 1851. Endowments for the living, baptism for the dead, sealings for the living and sealings for the dead couples were performed in the Endowment House. ENDOWMENTS FOR THE DEAD were not performed until in the St George Temple in 1877. President Brigham Young was in St George and took part in the introduction of the ordinances there. President Wilford Woodruff was made President of the Temple.

"Sealings for the living were done in the Nauvoo Temple as well as in the Endowment House; but Endowments for the dead were not done until the St. George Temple. There were a few children sealed to their parents in the Endowment House, but not many."

Another item of interest is mentioned by Joseph F. Smith

(His. Record 194). After the opening of the St. George Temple, the Endowment House in Salt Lake City was closed for ordinances. But after the death of President Young, when it was found necessary to again open it, I was placed in charge thereof, which position I filled until the summer of 1884, when the house was again closed." (This second closing presumably occurred after the dedication of the Logan Temple, May 17, 1884).

131. Journal of Discourses, Vol 25:183; President John Taylor; delivered at the dedication of the Temple, in the Tabernacle, Logan, Cache County; Sunday afternoon, May 18, 1884.

Joseph Smith, before his death, was much exercised about the completion of the Temple in Nauvoo, and the administering of ordinances therein. In his anxiety and for fear he should not live to see the Temple completed, he prepared a place over what was know as the brick-store--which many of you who lived in Nauvoo will recollect--where to a chosen few he administered those ordinances that we now have today associated with Endowments, so that if anything should happen to him--which he evidently contemplated--he would feel that he had then fulfilled his mission, that he had conferred upon others all the keys given to him by the manifestations of the power of God.

132. Letter from John Taylor to Elder Wm H. Folson; April 8th 1886.

April 8th 1886

Elder Wm H. Folsom,
Supt. Manti Temple,
Dear Brother:

We are in receipt of your letters of the 5th and 6th inst. and have persued with interest the condition of the work on the Temple.

Respecting the painting and other ornamentations of the Temple at St. George and Logan my recollection is not sufficiently distinct, it having been some tine since I saw them, to make any particular suggestions to you upon the subject. However, it is important that Brother Weggeland be impressed to so arrange the painting in the Garden that the Tree of Life will be convenient for the purpose for which it is used, and that the whole scenery be arranged so that the person at the Altar in giving his lecture can make convenient reference to the various objects. Complaint has been made respecting these points at Logan and before painting the Garden at Manti some one of experience who is familiar with the work and the giving of lectures in the Garden should be consulted as to the proper position for everything to be placed in with reference to the Altar and the Cherubim &c.

We have no objection to the employment of Bros Weggeland and Morris. Enclosed please find a permit for you to go to the Temple at Logan.

By applying to Bother James Jack he will give you an order for 2000 bushels of wheat on Bp's Agent George Farnsworth--for $500.00 on the Provo Factory--$500.00 on Z. C. M. I. and $1000.00 on Washington Factory on Manti Temple account.

With kind regards,
Your Brother,

133. Compilation by Alan H. Gerber; CHO, Film/298/#101/v. 39 p. 77-78; c. June 8, 1887.

In 1887, shortly before the death of President John Taylor, Wilford Woodruff, then the President of the Quorum of Twelve and next in seniority in the Priesthood calling, received a communication from Elder Samuel Roskelly, who was at the time in charge of the temple at Logan. From the inquiry of Elder Roskelly it seems some doubts had arisen as to the propriety of certain temple ordinances, and changes were suggested. "You say," said President Woodruff, in his reply "`We are told here,' so and so concerning Sealings and Adoptions. Who is it has told you these things and given these instructions? I don't think it can be President Taylor, for neither he, nor I, have ever received such teachings from either Joseph Smith or Brigham Young. But I have been taught right the reverse by President Young." Then on the unchangeableness of these ordinances, President Woodruff, in this letter to Elder Roskelly, dated St. George, Utah, June 8, 1887, said:

"Your letter of the 1st reached me last night. * * *

"Now, concerning endowments, in all its phases. My own views are these--that we ought to follow out, as far as we can, the pattern laid down by our leaders. I consider that if there ever was any man who thoroughly understood the principle of the Endowments it was Brigham Young. He has been with Joseph Smith from the beginning of the Endowments to the end, and he understood it if any man did. And before his death he required me to write in a Book every ordinance of the Church and Kingdom of God from the first to the last, beginning with baptism, to the last ordinance performed, through every department of the endowments. I was several weeks doing this writting, [sic] and President Young corrected it all, until he got through. Then he said to me, `Now, there you have a pattern of all the ordinances or endowments for every temple we shall build, until the coming of the Son of Man.'

"Now, if I ever have anything to do or say, in any Temple on the earth concerning the Endowment, I would say: Follow the pattern laid down by our leaders. Follow the pattern that President Young has set us, and not deviate from it one iota. And if we do that, we may have a hundred Temples at work, and all the work and ceremonies will be alike in every temple. While on the other hand, if every man who is called to preside over a temple has his own way, and introduces his own form of ceremonies, our Temple work would be as diverse as the sectarian world, and God would not approbate it.

"Brother Roskelly, I have given endowments in Salt Lake City for twenty years, and I received my endowment under the hand of the Prophet Joseph Smith. I directed the fixing up of the Temple at St. George for giving Endowments, under the direction of President Young; since the rules are written for our guidance in All future time, I feel very strenuous that in our giving Endowments we should all work alike, and not deviate from the written word."

134. Journal of Abraham H. Cannon; Friday, December 6, 1889.

In speaking of the recent examination before Judge Anderson, Father said that he understood when he had his endowment in Nauvoo that he took an oath against the murderers of the Prophet Joseph as well as other prophets, and if he had ever met any of those who had taken a hand in that massacre he would undoubtedly have attempted to avenge the blood of the martyrs. The Prophet charged Stephen Markham to avenge his blood should he be slain; after the Prophet's death, Bro. Markham attempted to tell this to an assembly of Saints, but Willard Richards pulled him down from the stand, as he feared the effect on the enraged people. Bro. Joseph F. Smith was traveling some years ago near Carthage, when he met a man who said he had arrived just five minutes too late to see the Smiths killed. Instantly a dark cloud seemed to overshadow Bro. Smith and he asked how this man looked upon the deed. Bro. Smith was oppressed by a most horrible feeling as he waited for a reply. After a brief pause the man answered, "Just as I have always looked upon it--that it was a d----d cold-blooded murder." The cloud immediately lifted from Bro. Smith and he found that he had his open pocket knife grasped in his hand in his pocket, and he believes that had this man given his approval to that murder of the prophets, he would have immediately struck him to the heart.

ELDER JOHN HENRY SMITH,
One of the Twelve Apostles.

Dear Brother:

The condition of many of the saints in Arizona in connection with their marriages has been brought to the attention of the First Presidency. We understand that there are many couples in that Territory who are prevented by poverty and other circumstances from going to the Temple to have their sealings, and that many of the children are being born out of the covenant because of this.

We feel to take some action upon this, as it is a great deprivation for Latter-day Saints to not have the privilege of marrying and bearing children in the covenant. In view of this, we have decided to authorize you, as one of the Apostles to dedicate rooms which are now used for prayer according to the holy order, and in those rooms solemnize marriages such as are properly recommended, and which are of the class referred to--that is, marriages of those who are unable, through poverty or some other serious impediment, to go to the Temple of the Lord to be sealed for time and for eternity. The authority is hereby conferred upon you during this present visit to Arizona to attend to cases of this kind, and perform the sealing ordinances for time and for eternity. In doing this, we desire you to be very careful and make a proper record of all such sealings, that every case may be reported here; and in order that this may be done, we furnish you a book in which you will have entry made of all these sealings.

Praying the Lord to bless you upon this mission and in the exercise of this authority,

I remain your brother,

/s/ Wilford Woodruff

At a meeting of the First Presidency, Twelve Apostles, Presiding Bishops, First Presidents of Seventies, Presidents of Stakes and Bishops, held at the 18th Ward Chapel, Salt Lake City, October 7, 1891. President Wilford Woodruff related the following:-

"Over fifty years ago, while in Boston, he (^I) dreamed that the Saints migrated to the Rocky Mountains, built a Temple and dedicated it; that at the dedicatory services Elders were set apart to go among the Gentile nations to bind the law and seal the testimony. That when after our arrival here, the question was discussed, as to what material should be used in the Temple building, some suggesting brick and others adobe, he (^I) made the remark that it never would be built of anything else than cut Granite. This, so far has come to pass as he (^I) saw it. Just before the death of Prest. Taylor, too, he (^I) dreamed that the Temple was finished; and he (^I) saw the grounds around filled with the Priesthood; and while wondering why the people did not go into the Temple, Prest. Young came up and he (^I, Prest. Woodruff.) asked why the brethren did not enter the building; with that Prest. Young took from his pocket the keys and handed them to him (^me) (Prest. Woodruff) telling him (^me) to open the Temple and let the people in. In thinking the matter over the following morning, he (^I) wondered why it was that Prest. Young handed the keys to him (^me), seeing that Prest. Taylor was alive and that they were not given to him. The following night, he (^I) received the same manifestation; and addressing himself (^myself) to Prest. Taylor, he (^I) asked him, why he did not come in (to the Temple); he answered that he could not walk. In the morning, Prest. Woodruff said, he (^I) felt that Prest. Taylor would not live to see the Temple finished. A short time before Prest. Taylor's death, Prest. Woodruff said he (^I) received a letter from Prest. Cannon informing him (^me) of the illness of Prest. Taylor; it also stated that Prest. Taylor's legs were swollen." As to this Prest. Woodruff remarked, it was of little consequence whether he lived or not to witness the completion of the Temple; those were things wholly in the hands of the Lord.

137. Abraham H. Cannon "Journal"; BYU Special Collections; Vol. V, p. 87. 7 October 1891.

--Pres. Woodruff told of manifestations he had received 50 years ago concerning the temple. Before the material for its construction had been selected, he knew it was to be constructed of cut granite. Before Pres Taylor's death he dreamed for two nights in succession that he received the keys to the Temple from Pres. Young, and at its dedication he beheld a large number of elders called and sent forth into the world to bind up the law and seal the testimony to the Gentiles.

In the evening I took Sarah with me to President Woodruff's farm to celebrate his birthday, and to be present at the dedication of his new house. * * *

Pres. Woodruff made some remarks at the close. * * * He hoped to live to dedicate the Temple in this city, for he dreamed on two occasions that he would be given the keys for this edifice by Presidents Young and Taylor who had preceded him. He believed that he would live to accomplish this labor.

Elder Lorenzo Snow,
Prest. Salt Lake Temple.
Dear Brother:-

As a result of the conference of the brethren engaged as ordinance workers in the several Temples, held at Salt Lake Temple, some time ago, the following slight corrections have been adopted by us, which you will please note:

In the creation on the fifth day a grammatical error occurs. The word "their" is used instead of "its"; the word their, therefore, is changes [sic] to its. In the lecture the words "next room" are used in the Terrestrial room when that same room is referred to; the words "the next" therefore have been changed to "this", as the appropriate form.

In the placing of the girdle, it should be placed on the outside of the apron strings.

In the ceremonies at the veil, the practice has been to use the words, "this man Adam," while in the Logan Temple the words, "this man, representing Adam", are used. It was decided to drop the words, "this man representing," and say "Adam, &c."

The word "christian," referred to in the lecture, in connection with name, is dropped and the word "given" is substituted.

The words "and some have to go away on business," which occur at the end of the lecture, were expunged.

The words, "new name," were substituted for the pronoun "it," to avoid ambiguity, where it reads in the lecture, "You must (p. 2) remember "it", that is, your new name.

The people, when being put under covenant, should signify their assent by bowing and saying, "yes".

It was left optional with the Temple President to use persons as witnesses who were receiving endowments or to use workers as such.

The words "that my tongue be torn from its roots in my mouth," were substituted for "from the roof of my mouth."

In giving the sign and token of the Aaronic priesthood that Salt Lake Temple use the word, "index", meaning the fore-finger. It was decided to use the words, "˜fore finger," instead of "index finger," the latter being more easily understood.

It has been the practice to mark the shirt, but we think this unnecessary as it is not strictly a part of the Temple clothing. The marking of the garment should be done in the washing room and not at the veil; and the greatest care should be taken to see that no person is permitted to leave that room wearing an unmarked garment.

In the Salt Lake Temple the practice in the Garden is for the couple at the altar to remain kneeling while the covenant relating to the first token of the Aaronic Priesthood is being administered, while the practice in the other Temples is for the couple to arise. The reason given by the Salt Lake Temple for not arising is that the couple would have to descend three steps, and as a matter of convenience they were permitted to remain on their knees. It was decided that the couples should rise.

Every father and mother has a great responsibility resting upon them, to redeem their dead. Do not neglect it. You will have sorrow if you do. Any man will who neglects the redemption of his dead that he has power to officiate for here. When you get to the other side of the veil, if you have entered into these Temples and redeemed you[r] progenitors by the ordinances of the House of God, you will hold the keys of their redemption from eternity to eternity. Do not neglect this!"

Gospel Mysteries

Weber Stake Reunion:
Joseph F. Smith speaking:

Aunt Bathsheba, widow of George A. Smith, who is with us today, is the last living witness, so far as I know, who received her endowments while Joseph Smith was living. Here is Aunt Bathsheba, who received her endowments in Nauvoo as they are now given in the Temples. She is a living witness and if necessary she will tell us that she received her endowments in Nauvoo as they are now given in the Temples. She is a living witness and if necessary she will tell us that she received these privileges under the direction of Joseph Smith. Opponents say that Brigham Young established the endowments and also plural marriage, out here is a witness who knows better. Brigham Young only sought to carry out the instruction he received from Joseph Smith, and Joseph Smith as he received it from God. So far as the principle of plural marriage is concerned, we are not teaching it, nor practising [sic] it. * * * Joseph Smith revealed plural marriage and the endowments, and here is a living witness to those facts. So am I, for I received it of those who received it from Joseph Smith. * * *

Aunt Bathsheba Smith was called upon and spoke briefly as follows: President Smith has told you the truth. I know that the endowments are given now the same as they were given by Joseph Smith the Prophet. He was present with us and lectured and talked with us after we had received our first ordinances, and I have met him many times at councils which were held and he told us many things and explained them to us, showed us how to pray, and how to detect them when true or false angels come to us, and many other true things he taught us, and he instituted the endowments through the Lord, and it was not Brigham Young or any one else. I know he was a true Prophet of God and this knowledge could not be stronger if angels were to come and talk to me. I know he never taught a thing that was wrong, and if we obey him we will receive celestial glory and without we will not. I bear this testimony and it is true, for I worked in the Nauvoo Temple and in the Endowment House and in the Salt Lake Temple. This is the first day I have left the Temple to go anywhere since Sister Zina's death. I was at the first meeting when the Relief Society was organized in Nauvoo and I enjoyed the teaching of the Prophet and tried to profit by it and to teach my sisters. Brother Smith, I guess this will do?.

President Smith: "Did Brigham Young reveal plural marriage?"

Sister Smith "He did not. God revealed it through the Prophet Joseph Smith. I have tried to be one with my husband and I was just as happy with him as any woman could be, for I loved him dearly and I knew why he practised [sic] the principle of plural marriage. He knew it was a principle of exaltation, and I wished him to receive as great an exaltation as any one, and I expected to share it with him. If I lived my life over again, I do not know that I could better it, though I have more experience now.

Sister Smith then related a dream she had concerning her husband and also some remarks made by the Prophet Joseph when she was a young girl. Continuing she said, "God bless us all and keep us in the line of our duty, that we may live our lives in earnest and receive the glory and exaltation we seek, Amen."

I attended and spoke at the 8 am. temple meeting. Attended regular council meeting from 10 am. to about 5 P.M. except the adjournment to lunch and while I was marrying a number of couples and sealing some couples. At our council meeting it was decided that the old form of ordaining be used in the Temple and elsewhere. It was also decided that we disorganize the temple choir at once. A decision was also made that the Twelve Disciples held the apostleship i.e. we so believe.
Friday, 8 April 1921
Attended the temple meeting as usual and after the meeting Elder Jos. F. Smith and I met with the temple choir members, thanked them for their faithful services of the past and released them with our blessing. Congregational singing will be engaged in exclusively. Bro [illegible] will continue to lead without [illegible] after this month and Sister Davis will continue to be the organist. By instructions from the First Presidency given yesterday while in Council meeting. I instructed the brethren of the temple to eliminate from the ceremony of ordination ("We confer upon you the holy Melchesidek [sic] Priesthood") insisted by order of Pres. Jos. F. Smith. The old form is to be made uniform.

Tuesday, 12 April 1921
We led our first temple without a choir this morning. Am working with Bro. D M McAllister on records trying to get uniformity of ordinances, decisions & with a view to having the Presidency pass on our suggestions and have them go out to all the temples.

Saturday, 10 December 1921
I went to the temple and worked at my desk until about 4

P.M. I have been for some time correlating rules and decisions by appointment of the First Presidency to be considered and approved for guidelines of all temple presidents.

Tuesday, 27 December 1921

. . . I went to my office and to the temple and did some work on compilations of decisions & rulings and have them ready to submit to Bro. McAllister for inspection before presenting to the Committee & then to the Presidency. They comprise 25 pages foolscap size pages.

Wednesday, 28 December 1921

I turned papers over to D.M. McAllister to go over decisions proposed by me for use in all the temples---

Saturday, 3 June 1922

I took 7:20 car for my work at the temple. This day I went before the Presidency and presented to them an important change in the endowment ceremony by which the robes should be placed on the left shoulder first and then changed to the right shoulder once only before entering the Terrestrial room; also that Aaronic and Melchizedek be used instead of lower order of the Melchizedek and higher order of the Aaronic. I am to come back with a definite recommend of the Presidency of the Temple. This or my own suggestion. Other members not accessible today.

Wednesday, 7 June 1922

I attended to my duties as usual at the Temple. I had 33 marriages solemnized. I filled an appointment made with the Presidency other brethren being present as follows: Jos. Fielding Smith, Albert W. Davis, Duncan M. McAllister, Willard Young, Israel Call & Patriarch Hyrum G. Smith.

I presented the suggestions of a change in the order of robing and in the wording of the ordinances and lecture which were by vote approved. This order is to place the robe on the left shoulder at that point in the Telestial room when formerly it was placed on the right shoulder, and change on to the right shoulder at that point in the ceremony in the Telestial room where at present it is changed on to the left shoulder--There will be no other changing of the robes. The ceremonies and Lecture will be changed to conform. Full explanation will be given in Temple Historical Record. This will clarify some matters which at present are obscure and will shorten the services.

APOCRYPHAL QUOTATIONS CONCERNING ASPECTS OF THE TEMPLE ORDINANCES

"Endowment" means "gift," and in temple work refers to the gift of God to those who covenant to obey His laws. It is learned orally and, because of its sanctity, is transmitted only in special places (Temples). George Sarton, in his The History of Science and the New Humanism (p. 189) has written, "If there be SANCTITY it will flourish best in SECRECY; nobody should ever know of it, except perhaps much later." The world makes light of that which is written, and hence the most sacred items have always been concealed. Judaism lays claim to oral traditions passed down from Moses and only later committed to writing. Islam has the same from Mohammed. In early Christianity, the Gnostics also had an oral tradition, given only to the initiated.

The Fathers of the Primative Church; Herbert A. Musurillo. [For information on Basilides, see quote 200, below. Marcion founded the Marcionites, who continued to practice baptism for the dead into the 4th century A.D., after the Catholic Church had forbidden it. Today, only the Latter-day Saints and the Copts of Egypt and Ethiopia continue this practice.]

About the middle of the second century, during the reign of Hadrian, the great Gnostic teachers flourished in Egypt, Syria, Pontus, and Rome. The more important writers were Basilides, Marcion, Valentinus, and Bardaisan, and their name is taken from the "secret doctrine" which they claimed to have directly from the Lord as an esoteric key to the Scriptures and tradition of the Church at large.

Contra Celsum, Origen. [Origen, a Christian bishop of the second century, in his Contra Celsum ("Against Celsus," refuting an attack of Christianity by a Greek physician-philosopher, Celsus, author of The True Discourse), alludes to secret Christian practices in his day (similar citations may be found in Hugh Nibley's Since Cumorah)]

Book I, Chapter I:
The first point which Celsus brings forward, in his desire to throw discredit upon Christianity, is that the Christians entered into secret associations with each other contrary to law, saying, that "of associations, some are public, and that these are in accordance with the laws; others, again, secret, and maintained in violation of the laws."

Book I, Chapter III: After this, Celsus proceeding to speak of the Christians teaching and practicing their favorite doctrines in secret, and saying that they do this to some purpose, seeing they escape the penalty of death which is eminent, he compares their dangers with those which were encountered by such men as Socrates for the sake of philosophy: and here he might have mentioned Pythagoras as well, and other philosophers. [Pythagoras, it is known, conducted a secret order, for only the initiate.]

Book I, Chapter XV:
It is said, moreover, that Hermippus has recorded in his first book, On Lawgivers, that it was from the Jewish people that Pythagoras derived the philosophy which he introduced among the Greeks.

Book I, Chapter VII:
Moreover, since he frequently calls the Christian doctrine a secret system [of belief], we must confute him on this point also, since almost the entire world is better acquainted with what the Christians teach than with the favorite opinions of philosophers. For who is ignorant of the statement that Jesus was born of a virgin, and that he was crucified, and that His resurrection is an article of faith among many, and that a general judgment is announced to come, in which the wicked are to be punished according to their deserts, and the righteous to be duly rewarded? And yet the mystery of the resurrection, not being understood, is made a subject of ridicule among unbelievers. In these circumstances, to speak of the Christian doctrine as a SECRET SYSTEM is altogether absurd. BUT that there should be CERTAIN DOCTRINES, not made known to the multitude, which are [revealed] after the exoteric ones have been taught, IS NOT A PECULIARITY OF CHRISTIANITY ALONE, but also of philosophic systems, in which certain truths are exoteric and others esoteric. Some of the hearers of Pythagoras were content with his ipse dixit; while others were taught in secret those doctrines which were not deemed fit to be communicated to profane and insufficiently prepared ears. Moreover, all the mysteries that are celebrated everywhere throughout Greece and barbarous countries, although held in secret, have no discredit thrown upon them, so that it is in vain that he endeavors to calumniate the secret doctrines of Christianity, seeing he does not correctly understand its nature.

Book I, Chapter IX:
For in the Christian system also it will be found that there is, not to speak at all arrogantly, at least as much of investigation into articles of belief, and of explanation of dark saying, occurred in the prophetical writings, and of the parables in the Gospels, and of countless other things, which either were narrated or enacted with a symbolic signification, [as is the case with other systems].

And this is the power of this oath, for it is powerful and strong, and he placed this oath Akae in the hand of Michael."

NOTE: The Jews refuse to pronounce the name YHWH - translated in our Bible as "Jehovah" - believing it to be too sacred. It is held that only the High Priest used to pronounce the name, and then only in the Holy of Holies on the Day of Atonement. One story has it that Jesus overheard the High Priest and used the name to perform miracles, including levitation. According to the Book of Enoch and to Jewish legend, angels and men may rise to heaven upon pronouncing the sacred name.

Similitude 9:140-142.

Whosoever therefore bear these names (Faith, Continuance, Power, Patience, Simplicity, Innocence, Chastity, Cheerfulness, Truth, Understanding, Concord, and Charity), and the names of the Son of God, shall enter into the kingdom of God.

Apocalypse of Paul 12.

And I looked into the height and beheld other angels whose faces shone like the sun, and their loins were girt with golden girdles, holding palms in their hands, and the sign of God, clad in raiment whereon was written the name of the Son of God, full of all gentleness and mercy.

NATURE OF THE ENDOWMENT

Book of Enoch 71:1-3.

And it came to pass after this that my spirit was translated and it ascended into the heavens: and I saw the holy sons of God. They were stepping on flames of fire: their Garments were white (and their raiment), and their faces shone like snow. And I saw two streams of fire, and the light of that fire shone like hyacinth, and I fell on my face before the Lord of spirits. And the angel Michael (One of the archangels) SEIZED ME BY MY RIGHT HAND, AND LIFTED ME UP AND LED ME FORTH INTO ALL THE SECRETS, AND HE SHOWED ME ALL THE SECRETS OF RIGHTEOUSNESS.

The Apocryphal New Testament; Montague Rhodes James; p. 13, on the "Gospel or Traditions of Matthias"

Hippolytus tells us that the heretics Basilides and Isidorus (his son) asserted that Matthias had spoken unto them certain SECRET WORDS, WHICH HE HAD LEARNED FROM THE SAVIOUR, being taught by him apart.

Acts of Thomas 47.

Jesu, the hidden mystery that hath been revealed unto us, thou art he that hast shown unto us many mysteries; thou that didst call me apart from all my fellows and spakest unto me three (one, Syr.) words wherewith I am inflamed, and am not able to speak them unto others...

Acts of Thomas 10.

Thou Lord art he that revealeth hidden mysteries and maketh manifest words that are secret.

Heresy XXXVI.13; Epiphanius; quoting from the Gospel of Philip.

The Lord revealed unto me WHAT THE SOUL MUST SAY AS IT GOETH UP INTO HEAVEN, AND HOW IT MUST ANSWER EACH OF THE POWERS ABOVE.

Koran, Surah II:37.

Then Adam received from his Lord WORDS OF REVELATION, and He relented toward him.

Ode of Solomon 4:7-9.

For who is there that shall put on grace, and be hurt? For thy SEAL is known: and thy creatures know it: and thy (heavenly) hosts possess: and the elect archangels are clad with it. Thou hast given us thy FELLOWSHIP: It was not that thou wast in need of us: but that we are in need of thee.

SANCTITY OF THE ENDOWMENT

Book of Enoch 65:11.

And these--they have no place of repentance for ever, because they have shown them WHAT WAS HIDDEN, and they are damned: but as for thee, my son, the Lord of Spirits knows that thou art pure, and guiltless of this reproach concerning the secrets.

Testament of Judah 2:29. [From apocryphal writings, we find that Judah, son of Jacob (Israel), twice broke his vow of secrecy, as a result of drunkenness. The first was in connection with his adultery with his own daughter-in-law, Tamar, whom he believed to be a harlot (Genesis 38: 13-26). When she was found to be pregnant, Judah was about to punish her when she presented to him certain of his belongings that he had left with the "harlot," and he recognized them. But she apparently gave him yet another sign:]

And when I called her, I heard also the SECRET WORDS which I spoke when lying with her in my drunkenness: and I could not slay her, because IT WAS FROM THE LORD.

Testament of Judah 3:28.

Moreover, wine revealeth the MYSTERIES OF GOD and man, even as I revealed the commandments of God and the mysteries of Jacob my father to the Canaanitish woman Bathshua, which GOD BADE ME NOT TO REVEAL.

Ode of Solomon 8:11.

Keep my secret, ye who are kept by it.

COVENANTS & THE TRUE ORDER OF PRAYER

Gospel Mysteries

Legends of the Jews, I:67; Lewis Ginzberg.

Woman covers her hair in token of Eve's having brought sin into the world.

Epistle of Barnabas 10:7-11.

And again he saith in another prophet: He that does these things; shall be like a tree, planted by the currents of water, which shall give its fruit in its season. [Quotation from Psalms 1.] Its leaf also shall not wither, and whatsoever he doeth it shall prosper. As for the wicked it is not so with them; but they are as the dust which the wind scattereth away from the face of the earth. Therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, neither the sinners in the council of the righteous. For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous and the way of the ungodly shall perish. Consider how he has joined both the cross and the water together. For thus he said: Blessed are they who put their trust in the cross, descend into the water; for they shall have their reward in due time; then saith he, will I give it to them.

Epistle of Barnabas 11:1-6.

In like manner he determines concerning the cross in another prophet, saying: "And when shall these things be fulfilled? [Quoting Exodus 5:4] The Lord answers: When the true that has fallen shall rise, and when blood shall drip down from the tree." Here you have again mention made, both of the cross, and of him that was to be crucified upon it. And yet farther he saith by Moses; [Quoting Exodus, Chap. 17.] (when Israel was fighting with, and beaten by, a strange people; to the end that God might put them in mind how that for their sins they were delivered unto death), yea, the holy spirit put it into the heart of Moses, to represent both the sign of the cross, and of him that was to suffer: that so they might know that if they did not believe in him, they should be overcome for ever. Moses therefore piled up armour upon armour in the middle of a rising ground, and standing up high above all of them, stretched forth his arms, and Israel again conquered. But no sooner did he let down his hands, but they were again slain. And why so?--To the end they might know, that except they trust in him they cannot be saved. And in another prophet, he saith, I have stretched out my hands all the day long to a people disobedient, and speaking against my righteous way. [Quoting Isa. 65:2.]

Ode of Solomon 27.

I stretched out my hands and sanctified my Lord; for the extension of my hands is His sign; and my expansion is the upright tree (or cross).

Ode of Solomon 28:7.

And he showed me His sign: forth and given me to drink, and from that life is the spirit within me, and it cannot die, for it lives.

Ode of Solomon 29:6-7.

For I believed in the Lord's Messiah: and it appeared to me that He is the Lord; and He showed him His sign; and He led me by His light, and gave me the rod of His power.

Ode of Solomon 42:1-3.

I stretched out my hands and approached my Lord: for the stretching of my hands is His sign: My expansion is the outspread tree which was set up on the way of the Righteous One.

NOTE also the shape of the Menorah or 7-branched candlestick of Judaism, the original of which was in the Tabernacle and the Temple. It represents the Tree of Life in the Garden of Eden - on a mount, as Moses stood on a mound - and its branches are the 7 dispensation leaders or archangels. See Exod. 25:31-40; Zech. 4:2, 10; Rev. 1:12-13.

1 Esdras 9:47-48.

So Esdras blessed the Lord God most High, the God of hosts, Almighty. And the people answered, Amen; and lifting up their hands they fell to the ground, and worshipped the Lord.

SCRIPTURAL QUOTATIONS CONCERNING ASPECTS OF THE TEMPLE ORDINANCES

Psalms 25:10-14.

All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth unto such as keep his covenant and his testimonies. For thy name's sake, O Lord, pardon mine iniquity; for it is great. What man is he that feareth the Lord? him shall he teach in the way that he shall choose. His soul shall dwell at ease; and his seed shall inherit the earth. The secret of the Lord is with them; and he will shew them his covenant.

Proverbs 3:32-35.

For the froward is an abomination to the Lord; but His secret is with the righteous. The curse of the Lord is in the house of the wicked; but he blesseth the Habitation of the Just. Surely he scorneth the scorners; but he giveth grace unto the lowly. The wise shall inherit glory: but shame shall be the promotion of fools.

WASHING AND ANOINTING

Ezekiel 36:25.

Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you.

Isaiah 1:16.

Wash you, make you clean. . .

Jeremiah 4:14.

O Jerusalem, wash thine heart from wickedness.

Leviticus 16:3-4.

Thus shall Aaron come into the holy place... He shall put on the holy linen coat, and he shall have the linen breeches upon his flesh, and shall be girded with a linen girdle, and with the linen mitre shall he be attired: these are Holy Garments; therefore shall he wash his flesh in water, and so put them on.

THE NEW NAME

Revelation 2:17.

He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches: to him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it.

Luke 10:20.

Notwithstanding in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven.

Genesis 17:5.

Neither shall thy name be any more called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee.

Genesis 32:28-29.

And he said, Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel: for as a prince hast thou power with God and with men, and hast prevailed. And Jacob asked him, and said, Tell me, I pray thee, thy name. And he said, Wherefore is it that thou dost ask after my name? And he blessed him there.

Judges 13:18.

And the angel of the Lord said unto him, Why asketh thou thus after my NAME, seeing it is SECRET?

Revelation 3:12; see also Revelation 14:1 and 22:4.

Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the TEMPLE of my God, and he shall go no more out: And I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from God: and I will write upon him my NEW NAME.

NATURE OF THE ENDOWMENT

John 17:8.

For I have given them the WORDS which thou gavest me; and they have received them, and HAVE KNOWN SURELY THAT I CAME OUT FROM THEE, and they have believed that thou didst send me.

COVENANTS & THE TRUE ORDER OF PRAYER

Psalms 54:2; see also Psalms 4:1; 5:1-2; 17:1; 19:14; 28:1-2; 39:12; 55:1; 64:1; 80:1; 86:1; 88:1-2; 102:1; 143:1, and others, including Deuteronomy 32:1 and 2 Kings 19:16. [These contain the two common elements, the Hebrew words peh - `mouth' - and 'el - `God.']

Hear my prayer, O God; give ear to the words of my mouth.

I Corinthians 11:4-7, 13-15.

Every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoureth his head. But every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonoureth her head: for that is even all one as if she were shaven. For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered. For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man... Judge in yourselves: is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered? Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him? But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a covering.

1 Kings 8:54; see also 2 Chron. 6:13. [This refers to the dedication of the Temple in Jerusalem.]

And it was so, that when Solomon had made an end of praying and all this prayer and supplication unto the Lord, he arose from before the altar of the Lord, from kneeling on his knees with his hands spread up to heaven.

Nehemiah 8:6.

And Ezra blessed the Lord, the great God. And all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with lifting up their hands; and they bowed their heads, and worshipped the Lord with their faces to the ground.

1 Timothy 2:8.

I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting.

Job 11:13.

If thou prepare thine heart and stretch out thine hands toward Him.

Daniel 12:7.

And I heard the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, when he held up his right hand and his left hand into heaven, and sware by him that liveth for ever that it shall be for a time, times, and an half. . .

Revelation 10:5-6.

And the angel which I saw standing upon the sea and upon the earth lifted up his hand to heaven, and sware by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and all the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein, that there should be time no longer.

Genesis 14:22-23.

And Abram said to the king of Sodom, I have lift up mine hand unto the Lord, the most high God, the possessor of heaven and earth, that I will not take from a thread even to a shoe-latchet, and that I will not take any thing that is thine, lest thou shouldst say, I have made Abram rich.

Psalms 134:12; Read also Matthew 27:3-5, comparing it with Acts 1:18 and Moses 5:29.

Behold, bless ye the Lord, all ye servants of the Lord, which by night stand in the house of the Lord. Lift up your hands in the Sanctuary, and bless the Lord.

Psalms 48:9.

We have thought of thy loving kindness, O God, in the midst of Thy Temple.

ENDOWMENT SYMBOLS IN FACSIMILE #2

1. Joseph Smith As A Translator, p. 164; by R. C. Webb; c. 1936 by Heber J. Grant, Trustee-In-Trust for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Hieroglyphic ideograms for "power" (wsr), "life" (ankh) and "stability" (tchad), combined in the symbolic scepter held by the central figure in most Hypocephali.

2. Notes On Ancient Temple Worship, pp. 2-3; Unp Mss abt 1980; Eugene Seaich.

[The numbers in ( ) refer to Nibley's "Egyptian Endowment" book.]

5-Several ancient texts describe in detail this last stage of the Egyptian Endowment (233). The mummy wrappings of the dead, for example, appear to have served as a burial garment which enfolded the deceased in a sort of life-giving "embrace" (238-40). The Pharaoh, on the other hand, was received during the Royal Coronation into the presence of God by an actual embrace through a veil which hid him from the candidate (242-50). This mysterious covering allowed the priest who enacted the role of God to stretch forth his hand to receive the Pharaoh with a ritual hand-clasp (249-50). During the embrace itself, the hand of the "deity" was placed along the neck or back of the candidate, executing "magnetic passes" along the spine, so as to impart the fluid of life and divine power into the body.
6-There was also an exchange of questions and answers, testing the initiate's worthiness to be received into the divine company (250-51). Spoken words included a request "to receive the embrace of the Glorious One", who replied: "Life belongs to thee, thou hast strength on earth. Mayest thou be exalted in thy posterity" (252). Then, three most sacred symbols were bestowed upon the candidate: the Ankh, Djed and Was tokens.
The Ankh ("Life") was a navel-binding, preserved throughout life with the newly born's placenta as a kind of amulet. It represented the gift of life and health, even beyond the grave (252).
The Djed was a spinal column of Osiris, representing strength in the bones, and eternal endurance (252-53).
The Was was a sceptre, denoting dominion, lordship and rule, especially divine rule.
All three signs together have been translated as "All Life, all Endurance, all Power", i.e. divine dominion and rebirth, enabling the candidate to pass eventually from this world into the next (253).

3. The Message of the Joseph Smith Papyri, pp. 250-253; ed. 1975; Hugh Nibley.

When the king enters the sanctuary for the first time,...he knocks three times on the door with his white mace [&] enters...
During the embrace, the "outstretched hand" of the embracer is placed "along the neck or back of the other party"....the hand is "executing magnetic passes the length of the neck and back, "with the idea of imparting "the fluid of life (sa ankh) and divine power". "The god who gave the sa (fluid) to the king took him in his arms and made his open hand pass along the neck and back of the Pharaoh".
...it must be a sort of "fluid of life" or "magnetic fluid" which the god imparted when he passed his hand over the back of the initiate; only by that act was it possible "to make of a man, a dead person, or a god, a living being endowed with the breath of life and with Sa (the fluid of life)," i.e., to impart physical and spiritual imperishability....the fluid itself being identified with spirit, light, and Ka. What is imparted in the embrace of Shu is thus both the breath and the fluid of life. It was "solar fluid...the life-power itself." (p. 250)
The ritual embrace does not take place in silence...they exchange short sentences. The words spoken are most commonly designated in the reliefs by three enigmatic symbols: the ankh, the djed-column, and the was-scepter, showing "the three virtues of the creative sun: life, durability, and power"....the word for ritual embrace was regularly followed by these three symbols in a set formula. (pp. 250-51)
Though sometimes appearing in combination with other things the three symbols, ankh, dd, and was, are the normal combination in this context. They express, according to Brunner, "all Life, all Endurance and all Power, and taken together represent the total fullness of divine gifts" thought to describe the Pharaoh in earlier times....The situation is depicted in a number of reliefs showing Ptah as the Most-High God, sitting or standing within a shrine but facing an open door, showing that in these Osiris-shrines the god really stands behind a partition; he is shown completely covered by the long white "Sokar"covering, from which, however, his hands protrude, holding the symbols of ankh, dd, and was....The words are not written out but are represented by the three symbols, which in this context may well have a special significance. First there is the ankh or life-sign, the best-known Egyptian symbol. The sa-symbol, which Moret identified with the giving of the "vital fluid," always implies a gift of life, and is in fact usually accompanied by the ankh-symbol. Moret... suggests that it is perhaps a knot in a sash, with ends hanging down, like the "blood-of-Isis" symbol which it closely resembles. A. Wiedemann decided that the "blood-of-Isis" symbol was, in fact, a derivation from the older ankh sign, both signifying simply "life." ...As soon as an Egyptian baby was born, the gods presented him first of all with the sign of "life" (the ankh) and "divine protection" (the sa), the former representing a knotted bellyband, the latter a bound-up mat.... this ankh-symbol was inseparable from a person throughout his lifetime and was always worn as an amulet. It was attached to or over the navel of both male and female babies as the sign of life. This would suggest that the mysterious ankh, by all accounts a knotted cord, was the navel-string.

The Djed-symbol of durability was commonly believed to represent the backbone of Osiris, yet it is so closely associated with the ankh- and "blood of Isis" amulets as to be identified with them as just another form of the ankh....As early as Pyr. 585 we read: "Horus has folded his arms around you, so that his bones expand (with life); Horus recognizes his Father in you," were the embrace puts life [marrow] in the bones.
The sign [Was] denotes "dominion, lordship..."the sign of the Power-Charisma of the King"--his divine power. Gardiner suggested this long ago when he wrote of the was-symbol that it seems probable that it signifies 'divine power,' and I propose the translation 'dominion.'...
Moret suggested that the was-scepter represented lightning transmitting life from heaven to earth while demonstrating that "the 'power' of Pharaoh is manifest in the light of the lightning-flash". (pp. 252-53)

Salt Lake Temple Records Office
June, 1924

This record is compiled from memorandums found with the Nauvoo Temple record books, and it is evident that the lists refer to Endowments given in that Temple, as most of the names thereon are the same as are entered in the Endowment Record. It is not known why these names were not included in that record; they are duly recorded herein, by instruction of the Presiding Authorities of the Temple.

This constitutes a Record that is supplementary to the Nauvoo Endowment Record.

FILE:#6 BEATITUDES–FULL TEMPLE ENDOWMENT

I. V. Matt. 5:10.
This promise is to be understood literally Every living soul who is pure in heart shall see God, literally and personally, in this life, to say nothing of the fact that he shall dwell with and see him frequently in the celestial world hereafter. (Ether 3:19–20, 26; D. & C. 67:10–14; Teachings, pp. 9, 149–151.) "Verily, thus saith the Lord: It shall come to pass that every soul who forsaketh his sins and cometh unto me, and calleth on my name, and obeyeth my voice, and keepeth my commandments, shall see my face and know that I am." (D. & C. 93:1.) (DNTC 1, p. 216.)

Hebrews 12:14
Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lors:

Jesus said: "Blessed are the prue in heart: for they shall see God" (Matt. 5:8), meaning that every person who perfects his life shall see God, here and now, while he yet dwells in the flesh, and that if he continues in grace, he shall also see and dwell with him everlastingly in the realms of immortal glory.

As revealed to Joseph Smith, the divine law enabling man to see Deity is couched in thes words: "Verily, thus saith the Lord: It shall come to pass that every soul who

[1] forsaketh his sins and

[2] cometh unto me, and

[3] calleth on my name, and

[4] obeyeth my voice [holy Ghost] [Greggs Disortation], and

[5] keepeth my commandments, [equalls]

[result]
[1] shall see may face and [act]

[2] know that I am [by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know truth of all things] [seal of knowledge, comfirmation, surity, by the Holy Ghost." (D. & C. 93:1) [D&C 132:19-24]
Through Joseph Smith the Lord also said to all those who hold his holy priesthood: "It is [1] your privilege, and [2] a promise I give unto you that have been ordained unto this ministry, that inasmuch as [1] you strip yourselves from jealousies and fears, and [2] humble yourselves before me, for ye are not suffeciently humble,
[the result]
[1] the veil shall be rent and
[2] you shall see me and [act]
[3] know that I am [know by the Holy Ghost-seal of holy Ghost]-not with the carnal neither the natural mind [the emperical sences], but with the spiritual [the power of the Holy Ghost]. For no man has seen God at any time in the flesh, excetp quichened by the Spirit of God." (D. & C. 67:10-11.) And the revelation on priesthood says that without "the power of godliness," which is righteousness, "no man can see the face of God, even the Father, adn live." (D. & C. 84:21-22) [I think this means righteousness and the ordiances of God-we can not be in God's and Christ's presence and live as the Father lives with eternal lives....]
The Prophet also taught: "It is the priviledge of every Elder to speak of the things of God; and could we all come together with one heart oand one mind in perfect faith the veil might as well be rent today as next week, or any other time, and if we will but cleanse ourselves and covenant befoer God, to serve him, it is our privilege to have an assurance that God will protect us at all times." (Teachings, p. 9.) (DNTC 3, p. 227.)

> Therefore, care not for the body, neither the life of the body; but care for the soul, and for life of the soul. And seek the face of the Lord always, that in patience ye may possess your souls, and ye shall have eternal life." (D. & C. 101:37-38)

A COMPILATION OF QUOTATIONS ON THE CITY OF ENOCH

1. History of the Organization of the Seventies, pp. 11-12; by Joseph Young. 1842.

Ten years subsequently, at Nauvoo, while naming historical incidents of antiquity, he [Joseph Smith] alluded to the Church, or Zion of Enoch, and discoursed some time upon the nature of its organization, order and progress. He spoke with a view of correcting the teachings of some of the elders who had maintained the doctrine that the people of that church had passed through the ordeals necessary to consummate the work of complete immortality, and that they would be prepared to enter into the presence of the Father and the Son. This idea the Prophet took up, and revealed it in a different light---in what may be styled a divine philosophy. He declared of the Church of Enoch "that they did not die; that they had not then gone through their last changes and greatest refinement; and that they had, nevertheless, triumphed over death. That the people, and the city, and the foundations of the earth on which it stood, had partaken of so much of the immortal elements, bestowed upon them by God through the teachings of Enoch, that it became philosophically impossible for them to remain any longer upon the earth; consequently, Enoch and his people, with the city which they occupied, and the foundations on which it stood, with a large piece of earth, immediately connected with the foundations and the city, had assumed an aerial position within the limits of our solar system; and this is consequence of their faith."
He further said, "that inasmuch as they did not pass through all the refinement which was necessary, as the Lord lives, they would return to the earth, when they and the city would pass through the same fiery ordeals that yet await the earth; when it shall be transformed into a sea of glass, mingled with fire, and their preparations for a celestial abode of the glorified Saints shall be perfected.
[Footnote:] Joseph Smith said, on another occasion, in the hearing of some of the saints still surviving, that the City of Enoch would again take its place in the identical spot from which it had been detached, now forming that chasm of the earth, filled with water, called the Gulf of Mexico.
